Monday - March 3, 1952

This is the news:

The Supreme Court today upheld a New York State law that is designed to keep subversives from working in the state's school system./It was a six to three decision./The state law requires the Board of Regents to draw up a list of subversive organizations; membership in any of these groups disqualifies one from working in the schools./Eight taxpayers claimed this was a violation of freedom of speech and assembly./Justice Minton, for the majority, said: school authorities have the right to screen all school employes for their fitness, to maintain the integrity of the schools. It is proper to consider one's associates, past and present, as well as one's conduct, in determining fitness and loyalty./The Justice knows of no rule that prevents a state from considering this./Justice Douglas, in a minority opinion, said this law will inevitably turn the school system into a spying project.. "teachers [redacted] under constant surveillance.. pasts are combed.. utterances watched for clues to dangerous thoughts -- A PALL [redacted] is cast over the classrooms. There can be no real economic freedom in this environment."/Justice Frankfurter, among the minority, said he thought the case should have been dismissed. And the other minority opinion, by Justice Black, said: "Public officials cannot be

Monday - March 3, 1952

This is the news:

The Supreme Court today upheld a New York State law that is designed to keep subversives from working in the state's school system./It was a six to three decision./The state law requires the Board of Regents to draw up a list of subversive organizations; membership in any of these groups disqualifies one from working in the schools./Eight taxpayers claimed this was a violation of freedom of speech and assembly./Justice Minton, for the majority, said: school authorities have the right to screen all school employes for their fitness, to maintain the integrity of the schools. It is proper to consider one's associates, past and present, as well as one's conduct, in determining fitness and loyalty./The Justice knows of no rule that prevents a state from considering this./Justice Douglas, in a minority opinion, said this law will inevitably turn the school system into a spying project.. "teachers [redacted] under constant surveillance.. pasts are combed.. utterances watched for clues to dangerous thoughts -- A PALL [redacted] is cast over the classrooms. There can be no real economic freedom in this environment."/Justice Frankfurter, among the minority, said he thought the case should have been dismissed. And the other minority opinion, by Justice Black, said: "Public officials cannot be vested with powers to select ideas people can think about.. censor the public views they express.. or chose the persons or group people can associate with. Public officials with such power--he said--are not public servants; they are public masters."

The court also ruled , six to three, to dismiss an attack on a New Jersey law which for more than 35 years has required daily Bible reading in public schools. The law also permits the recitation of the Lord Prayer. The court held that it has no authority to decide this particular case because the two persons who complained didn't show enough injury to raise a substantial federal question.

In another decision, 8 to one, the court upheld a Missouri law that requires employers to give four hours off , with pay, to their employes on election day. Twenty four states have somewhat similar laws... although they do not all require pay for workers who get time off.

~~The court refused to hear a direct case against the new gambling tax law.. and it dismissed an argument that Georgia's county unit election system is unconstitutional.~~

In Korea today, our Sabrejets shot down two Migs.. damaged five others. This took place in four seperate battles in which we used 105 of our planes and sighted 250 enemy planes. There was little action on the ground. And little progress at the truce talks.

~~At the truce talks, the Communists admitted that we have a legal night to reject their choice of Russia to serve on a team of neutral truce inspectors. But they insisted we give them legal reasons why we object to the Russians. Our spokesman~~

The Chinese Communist radio is telling us that the North Koreans are having REAL trouble with the bubonic plague. The country is almost in a state of emergency; the health officials, and special units, are being mobilized to fight the disease. The enemy radio has consistently charged that United Nations planes have dropped germs behind the Communist lines. Today the entire Iron curtain press is repeating this charge.. and Communist newspapers in Western Europe have joined the attack.

The French in Indo-China report that they have staged a series of ambushes on enemy columns south of Hanoi. And French land and air forces report new successes against two Vietminh divisions to the southeast.

In France , the hunt for a new premier and a new cabinet goes on. Today, Antoine Pinay, a 60-year-old Conservative agreed to try to form a cabinet. Former Premier Reynaud has failed.. former Premier Pleven refused to even try.

Secretary of State Acheson says he's confident the French "will straighten themselves out" in their current crisis. And Chairman Connally of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee says: "if France does not do her utmost in her own defense, she cannot justify large appropriations from the United States." He told reporters: "France must be told she cannot rely on the United States to defend her, and hand out large sums to aid her from the economic standpoint. France must do her duty."

The Senate today voted to turn its attention to a bill governing the administration of tidelands. This puts aside, for the time, a bill to grant statehood to Hawaii.

Administration leaders told the President today that the Universal Military Training bill faces a tough fight in the House. Voting may begin tomorrow. General Eisenhower has made it known that he believes this kind of service is "an obligation that every citizen owes the nation, and the provision of training opportunity is an obligation that the nation owes to the individual."

Chairman McClelland of a Senate Executive Expenditures Committee, today refused to allow movie cameras to take pictures of a hearing on the President's plan to reorganize the Internal Revenu Bureau. He said the photographers had not covered "the other side of the story."

And House Speaker Rayburn, who has banned television, radio and cameras from House committee hearings, says he likes radio and television.."in the right place.. but not in committee rooms, at present."

The Columbia Broadcasting System today demonstrated for the first time an all-electronic, color television receiver. The experimental receiver operated with the CBS color television system and used an RCA all-electronic tube. The Receiver contained no moving parts.

In Puerto Rico, government officials tonight claim that the island's new constiution has been overwhelmingly ratified.. a majority of 84 per cent are for it, with three-fifths of the votes counted. The new Constitution will enable Peurto Ricans to govern themselves for the first time under American control. It goes into effect when approved by Congress.

MURROW: During the last year some of the best radio and television reporting out of Korea, has been done by a yong man named Bob Pierpoint. He's home on a brief trip. Bob, what do you think of the day's news out of Korea?

PIERPOINT: Well Ed, it looks like more of the same. Nothing happened in Panmunjom today. If there is any significance to truce talk developments of the recent past, it lies in the communist admission that we do have a right to protest against Russia as a member of the neutral inspection team. This could be a hint that they're going to give in on that point.

MURROW: And if they do give in on that point, then what?

PIERPOINT: Perhaps I'm going out on a limb when I say this, Been there before but I personally feel that the talks have reached a stage where suddenly all the pieces could fall into place. There is still one big issue - the exchange of war prisoners on a voluntary basis. But even this could be solved rather quickly. Most other details of the Korean armistice have now been settled; and if both sides said the right word we could now have a peace almost immediately.

MURROW: Meanwhile the air war continues. I know you've been spending considerable time with an F-86 outfit; and the figures show that we are constantly outnumbered. How do the boys who are flying feel about it?

PIERPOINT: Very frankly, ~~XXXXXX~~ they're scared. They know that the Communists can throw about five times as many planes into the sky as we can on any one day. And they know that the communist ~~XXXXX~~ planes are better; they're faster and they have more fire power. Fortunately up till now we've had the better pilots and used better tactics. The Communists have been training and learning. But As one pilot told me a few weeks ago, someday the Commies are going to throw all of their first string at us. That's the day I hope I'm not flying. By the way, Ed, there's one thing a lot ~~XXXXXXX~~ of people in the States may not know: the MIG 15 carries two 37 millimeter cannons; that means shells that explode on contact. Our Sabre Jets are armed with six 50 caliber machine guns, and the shells pierce but don't explode. That in itself can make a terrific difference to the guy whose plane gets hit.

MURROW: Well Bob, can you tell us a little about the South Korean people. Their villages have been levelled, a lot of them have been killed, and they're being hammered constantly by communist propaganda. If we do get an armistice, will they still have the will to resist?

PIERPOINT: I suppose everybody who has been to Korea shared my first impression of the Koreans. Because of what's happened to them - not only in the past two years but all through history - the Koreans are about as miserable a people as any in the Far East - and that's pretty miserable. Like all orientals they're hard to get to know, but it's definitely worth the effort. Having been forced to overcome the first impression I've XXXXX become convinced that the Koreans are a good bet. They're proud and they're industrious, and although they may not always know what they're fighting for, they definitely know what they're fighting against. They've seen what communism has done to their countrymen in the North, and they want no part of it. Ed, I'd also like to add that there seems to be an impression in this country that the South Korean army is no good. I'd just like PIERPOINT: to point out that no army is any good without training and equipment. In the beginning the South Koreans had neither. But we've built them up. Today they're a darned good outfit. Our boys who are attached to divisions like the First Roks and the Capital will ~~XXXXXXXX~~ dispute anybody who says they aren't equal to any outfit in Korea.

MURROW: Bob, what about our own troops - ~~XXXXXXXXXXXXXXXX~~ how are they standing up to the winter and the relative inaction?

PIERPOINT: Well, I never heard any complaints about inaction. And fortunately this has been a fairly mild winter. Of course, it's all relative, and they still spend most of their energy trying to keep warm. Otherwise, they sweat out the patrols which usually come around to each platoon about once a week. And they're kept pretty busy strengthening our defenses. Their primary interest is the results of the peace talks at Panmunjom. They don't want to have to start fighting again; but if they do I think they'll acquit themselves well. The second big thing in life in Korea, next to the chance for peace and getting home that is, is the R and R trip to Japan. ~~XXXX~~ R and R means,

PIERPOINT: of course, rest and relaxation. To tell the truth it isn't really much of a rest. But it's a chance to get back to civilization for five whole wonderful days. It only happens once every three or four months, but at least it gives a guy something to look forward to. I'm not a great booster of military efficiency, but on this R and R program I think the Army and Air Force have done a terrific job. The boys leave from Korea, by plane, just as they come out of the line, that is with a toothbrush and a rifle. They're in Japan the same day. The Army gives them a complete new uniform, sews on the patches of their outfit; and tells them to come back in five days. ~~You'd be surprised how much living can be crowded into five days, after months in Korea.~~

Rest + Relaxation ~

New Uniform. ~

This was a busy day for the Justices of the Supreme Court. And while there were some differences of opinion in some of the decisions, we would do well to bear in mind these two bits of advice by Cicero and Sir Walter Raleigh: "We are all servants of the law to the end that it may be possible for us to be free. No wise man would ever inhabit a country where men have more authority than laws."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

MONDAY - MARCH 3, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Supreme Court today ypheld a NewYork State law that is designed to keep subversives from working in the state's school system. It was a six to three decision. The state law requires the Board of Regents to draw up a list of subversive organizations; membership in any of these groups disqualifies one from working in the schools. Eight taxpayers claimed this was a violation of freedom of speech and assembly. Justice Minton, for the majority, said: school authorities have the right to screen all school employees for their fitness to maintain the integrity of the schools. It is proper to consider one's associates, past and present, as well as one's conduct, in determining fitness and loyalty. The Justice knows of no rule that prevents a state from considering this. Justice Douglas, in a minority opinion, said this law will inevitably turn the school system into a spying project: "Teachers under constant surveillance....pasts are combed....utterances watched for clues to dangerous thoughts....a pall is cast over the classrooms. There can be no real economic freedom in this enviroment." Justice Frankfurter, among the minority, said he thought the case should have been dismissed. And the other minority opinion, by Justice Black, said: "Public officials cannot be vested with powers to select ideas people can think about, censor the public views they express, or choose the persons or group people can associate with. "Public officials with such power" he said, "are not public servants; they are public masters."

The Court also ruled, six to three, to dismiss an attack on a New Jersey law, which for more than 35 years has required daily Bible reading in public schools. The law also permits the recitation of the Lord Prayer. The Court held that it has no authority to decide this particular case, because the two persons who complained didn't show enough injury to raise a substantial federal question.

In another decision, 8 to one, the Court upheld a Missouri law that requires employers to give four hours off, with pay, to their employees on election day. Twenty four states have somewhat similar laws, although they do not all require pay for workers who get time off.

In Korea today, our Sabre Jets shot down two MIGs; damaged five others. This took place in four separate battles in which we used 105 of our planes and sighted 250 enemy planes. There was little action on the ground. And little progress at the truce talks.

The Chinese communist radio is telling us that the North Koreans are haveing real trouble with the bubonic plague. Thecountry is almost in a state of emergency; the health officials, and special units, are being mobilized to fight the disease. The enemy radio has consistently charged that United Nations planes have dropped germs behind the communist lines. Today the entire Iron Curtain press is repeating this charge, and communist newspapers in Western Europe have joined the attack.

The French in Indo-China report that they have staged a series of ambushes on enemy columns south of Hanoi. And French land and air forces report new successe against two Vietminh divisions to the southeast.

In France, the hunt for a new premier and a new cabinet goes on. Today, Antoine Pinay, a 60-year-old Conservative agreed to try to form a cabinet. Former Premier Reynaud has failed: former Premier Pleven refused to even try.

Secretary of State Acheson says he's confident the French "will straighten themselves out" in their current crisis. And Chairman Connally of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee says: "If France does not do her utmost in her own defense, she cannot justify large appropriations from the United States." He told reporters: "France must be told she cannot rely on the United States to defend her, and hand out large sums to aid her from the economic standpoint. France must do her duty."

The Senate today voted to turn its attention to a bill governing the administration of tiedlands. This puts aside, for the time, a bill to grant statehood to Hawaii.

Administration leaders told the President today that the Universal Military Training bill faces a tough fight in the House. Voting may begin tomorrow. General Eisenhower has made it known that he believes this kind of service is "an obligation that every citizen owes the nation, and the provision of training opportunity is an obligation that the nation owes to the individual."

Chairman McClelland of a Senate Executive Expenditures Committee, today refused to allow movie cameras to take pictures of ahearing on the President's plan to reorganize the Internal Revenue Bureau. He said the photographers had not covered "the other side of the story."

And House Speaker Rayburn, who has banned television, radio and cameras from House committee hearings, says he likes radio and television "in the right place, but not in a committee room at present."

The Columbia Broadcasting System today demonstrated for the first time an all-electronic, color television receiver. The experimental receiver operated with the CBS color television system and used an RCA all-electronic tube. The receiver contained no moving parts.

In Puerto Rico, government officials tonight claim the the island's new constitution has been overshelmingly ratified: a majority of 84 per cent are for it, with three-fifths of the votes counted. The new Constitution will enable Puerto Ricans to govern themselves for the fitst time under American control It goes into effect when approved by Congress.

During the last year some of the best radio and television reporting out of Korea has been done by a young man named Bob Pierpoint. He's home on a brief trip. Bob, what do you think of the day's news out of Korea?

PIERPOINT: Well Ed, it looks like more of the same. Nothing happened in Panmunjon today. If there is any significance to truce talk developments of the recent past, it lies in the communist admission that we do have a right to protest against Russia as a member of the neutral inspection team. This could be a hint that they'r going to give in on that point.

MURROW: And if they do give in on that point, then what?

PIERPOINT: Perhaps I'm going out on a limb when I say this, (been there before), but I personally feel that the talks have reached a stage where suddenly all the pieces could fall into place. There is still one big issue - the exchange of war prisoners on a voluntary basis. But even this could be solved rather quickly. Most other details of the Korean armistice have now been settled; and if both sides said the right word, we could now have a peace almost immediately.

MURROW: Meanwhile, the air war continues. I know you've been spending considerabl time with an F-86 outfit; and the figures show that we are constantly outnumbered. How do the boys who are flying feel about it?

PIERPOINT: Very frankly, they're scared. They know that the Communists can throw about five times as many planes into the sky as we can on any one day. And they know that the communist planes are better. They're faster and they have more fire power. Fortunately, up till now, we've had the better pilots and used better tactics. The Communists have been training - and learning. But as one pilot told me a few weeks ago, someday the Commies are going to throw all of their first string at us. That's the day I hope I'm not flying. By the way, Ed, there's one thing a lot of people in the States may not know: the MIG 15 carries two 37 millimeter cannon; that means shells that explode on contact. Our Sabre Jets are armed with six 50 caliber machine guns, and the shells pierce but don't explode. That in itself can make a terrific difference to the guy whose plane gets hit.

MURROW: Well Bob, can you tell us a little about the South Korean people. Their villages have been levelled, a lot of them have been killed, and they're being hammered constantly by communist propaganda. If we do get an armistice, will they still have the will to resist?

PIERPOINT: I suppose everybody who has been to Korea shared my first impression of the Koreans. Because of what's happened to them - not only in the past two years but all through history - the Koreans are about as miserable a people as any in the Far East - and that's pretty miserable. Like all orientals, they're hard to get to know, but it's definitely worth the effort. Having been forced to overcome the first impression, I've become convinced that the Koreans are a good bet. They're proud and they're industrious, andalthough they may not always know what they're fighting for, they definitely know what they're fighting against. They've seen what communism has done to their countrymen in the North, and they want no part of it. Ed, I'd also like to add that there seems to be an impression in this country that the South Korean army is no good. I'd just like to point out that no army is any good without training and equipment. In the beginning, the South Koreans had neither. But we've built them up. Today they're a darned good outfit. Our boys who are attached to divisions like the First Roks and the Capital will dispute anybody who says they aren't equal to any outfit in Korea.

MURROW: Bob, what about our own troops - how are they standing up to the winter and the relative inaction?

PIERPOINT: Well, I never heard any complaints about inaction. And fortunately, this has been a fairly mild winter. Of course, it's all relative, and they still spend most of their energy trying to keep warm. Otherwise, they sweat out the patrols which usually come around to each plattoon about once a week. And they're kept pretty busy strengthening our defenses. Their primary interest is the results of the peace talks at Panmunjom. They don't want to have to start fighting again; but if they do, I think they'll acquit themselves well. The second big thing in life in Korea, next to the chance for peace and getting home that is, is the R and R trip to Japan. R and R means, of course, rest and relaxation. To tell the truth, it isn't really much of a rest. But it's a chance to get back to civilization for five whole wonderfully days. It only happens once every three or four months, but at least it gives a guy something to look forward to. I'm not a great booster of military efficiency, but on this R and R program, I think the Army and Air Force have done a terrific job. The boys leave from Korea, by plane, just as they come out of the line, that is, with a toothbrush and a rifle.

They're in Japan the same day. The Army gives them a complete new uniform, sews on the patches of their outfit; and tells them to come back in five days.

MURROW: Thanks alot, Bob, We're glad to have had you with us this evening, and we hope that you get your share of R and R while back here in the States. You have just been listening to Bob Pierpoint - back from Tokyo. This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: This was a busy day for the Justices of the Supreme Court. And while there were some differences of opinion in some of the decisions, we would do well to bear in mind these two bits of advice by Cicero and Sir Walter Raleigh: "We are all servants of the law to the end that it may be possible for us to be free." "No wise man would ever inhabit a country where men have more authority than laws."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Tuesday - March 4, 1952

This is the news:

There will probably be no Universal Military Training program approved by Congress this year. The House today decided to send its bill back to committee. Chairman Vinson, of the Armed Service Committee, says that means the bill is dead for this session. And Senate Democratic Leader McFarland says this means the Senate probably won't even bother with the bill. [redacted] Not even a rare speech by Speaker Rayburn could save the Administration's bill in the House. Mr. Rayburn took the floor to ask his colleagues: "Do we have the [redacted] fortitude..do we have the courage, to meet this issue today? Now is the time to meet it, because we probably won't have another opportunity." The U.M.T. bill has been fought by educational, labor and farm leaders. It has been strongly supported by the PRESIDENT AND our military leaders. Last year Congress approved U.M.T. in principle. The present bill was to put into effect the plan requiring all 18-year-olds to take six months of training and then remain in the reserves for seven and a half years. The House vote that sent the bill back to committee was 236 to 162. Those voting to recommit the bill (send it to committee). included 155 Republicans and 81 Democrats. Those who wanted to vote on it now, included 30 Republicans and 131 Democrats.

In Korea today, our jet planes and fighter bombers, ranged over many enemy positions in North Korea. We hit one enemy Mig in an air fight. Our negotiators at Panmunjom have apologized for the flight of four allied planes over the truce area. There was no progress there today. One of our spokesman says we're back to where we were just about three months ago. The Communists radio in China says our artillery has fired diseased insects into enemy lines.. the latest in their campaign to try to pin ON US a plague in North Korea.

Today, Secretary of State Acheson challenged the enemy to permit an impartial investigation of These charges. We want an agency like the International Red Cross to make an inspection in North Korea. Mr. Acheson says: there seems to be a serious edpidemic of plague in North Korea. The Communists cannot handle it. We sympathize with the victims.

The President today broadcast to most nations of the world..particularly those behind the Iron Curtain, an appeal for peace. He said:"We are your friends. There are no differences between us that cannot be settled if your rulers will turn from their senseless policy of hate and terror, and follow the principles of peace." Mr. Truman spoke from the deck of the "Courier", a new Voice of America floating transmitter..a coast guard cutter, that has been turned into a powerful broadcasting station, capable of cruising near enough to Russia to send its message deep into the Soviet Union.

The President made another appeal today: to the Senate..asking for approval of his plan to re-organize the Internal Revenu Bureau. He said:"The millions of people now preparing their tax returns, are entitled to this progressive step."

Mobilization Chief Wilson asked the Senate today to approve a two-year extension of price and wage controls. He said we cannot hold back inflation, unless we hold down prices. We cannot hold down prices unless we hold the wage line.

~~The government says its going to allot to civilian industries another 30 million pounds of aluminum and up to 95 million more pounds of copper during April, May and June. This is because the military have returned some supplies and orders of some companies have not been as high as expected.~~

Owen Lattimore told a Senate committee today that in Moscow in 1936 he asked Soviet representatives whether there was "any special interest" in Russia about air bases in the Pacific. This occurred at a meeting of the Institute of Pacific Affairs. Mr. Lattimore said he wanted to know if there was interest in an article on the subject in a magazine he was editing. He also acknowledged that 15 years ago he visited Mao Tze Tung, now Communist China's President, in Yennan. Mr. Lattimore told the committee it was placing him in "double jeopardy" by re-opening an inquiry into his activities: he said he had hoped the Tydings Committee investigation in 1950 would end interest in him.

Here in New York today, James J. Moran, who rose as a city official with former Mayor O'Dwyer, was sentenced to 12 and a half to 28 years in prison. He had been found guilty of running a 500-thousand dollar a year fire department shakedown racket. He's also under a five-year sentence for lying to the Kefauver crime committee.

Senator Kefauver was in New Hampshire today.. campaigning for the Democratic Presidential nomination. He said we can do nothing about lowering taxes or raising our social position until we get peace in the world. Former Democratic Senator Lucas of Illinois and former Navy Secretary Sullivan both are in New Hampshire speaking for the President. Harold Stassen has started his [redacted] tour. Senator Saltonstall is speaking for General Eisenhower. Senator Taft arrives in the state on Thursday.

The Dominican Republican announced today that it will complain to the United Nations Security Council that Russian submarines have violated Dominican territorial waters. They say five Russian subs have been sighted.. they can tell they are Russians because they use a certain type of light. At the moment, our Atlantic fleet is conducting exercises in Caribbean waters. The Navy is investigating the Dominican claim.

In northern Japan, the army estimates that 31 persons were killed.. 200 injured in a severe earthquake. There were no American casualties.

In Britain, the Labor Party is reported to have rejected a challenge to Clement Atlee's leadership.. by roughly three to one.

And in Germany, the Allied Civil Aviation Board has given the West Germans permission to build their own airports. They can set-up airlines after a new peace contract is signed.

Edward R. Murrow: March 4, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

Tonight a relatively unknown French politician, Antoine Pinay, is trying to form new government and solve the French political crisis which is now five days old. The experts don't give him much chance. On top of their political difficulties the French are due to pay sixty million dollars to meet their deficit in West European trade. The Treasury doesn't have the money; may be able to borrow it from the Bank of France.

XXXX General Charles de Gaulle has returned to Paris and is participating in the behind-the-scenes negotiations.

The position appears to be this: the middle-of-the-road Parties in France must choose between de Gaulle and the Socialists. De Gaulle is against the Schumann Plan to merge the coal and steel of Western Europe; is against the European Army plan; and his rather vague political and economic program looks like a rather dim carbon copy of Mussolini's corporate state. The Communists are excluded from the government in France, so the center parties which cannot command a majority must in due course go with either de Gaulle or the Socialists and hope to act as a brake-~~brake~~ restraining influence upon whichever one they choose.

The instability of French governments, their economic crises, the hoarding of gold, inflation, their unbalanced budget are the result of two facts. The first is the refusal on the part of the center parties to make the choice between right and left - the result of that is that no French Government has had or can have the stable majority ~~required~~ Needed to take the unpopular steps ~~necessary~~ Required. The second reason is the terrible drain in terms of money and men of the war in Indo-China. The cost of that war this year will be almost one-and-a-half billion dollars, (much more than we are planning to give France in aid) That war in Indo-China has already cost the French more than all the Marshall Plan aid we have given them during the last four years. It would seem to be a fact that the French are unable to support a fighting war in Asia, and at the same time carry their share of the ~~XXXXXX~~ load in re-arming Western Europe. It would seem to follow that the French must either try to patch up a peace in Indo-China, and prepare to pull out, or fail to meet their commitments to the European Army, or receive more aid from us. None of these three alternatives represents a pleasing prospect. But I think they are in fact the alternatives, and we can't wish them away.

It is unlikely that shouting at the French by us will determine the course of French action. Facts are not changed by political speeches.

Without the French our whole European policy and strategy collapses. We may as well bring the boys home - our atom bomb bases in Morocco are in danger. On the other hand, if they pull out of Indo-China, there isn't much doubt that communism will sweep all of southeast Asia. Our problem is to decide how much it's worth to prevent these ~~XXX~~ things from happening; not just in terms of dollars, but in terms of men and leadership. Maybe we can't afford it. I don't know. But historically, great nations have managed to decide ~~what~~ they could afford whatever was required - when ~~it was~~ their survival ~~that~~ was at stake. they became convinced that

It is true that French governments are unstable (we knew that when we made the deal with them.) It is true, also, that the French are reluctant to pay taxes. But most of the evasion and fraud is practised by the wealthy, the merchants, professional people, middlemen and well-to-do farmers. The working classes, the white collar workers, the middle and lower income brackets pay more taxes than we do. That was the issue that brought down the last government - how to raise the money; whether by a general tax increase, or by an increase in the purchase tax, which of course would have hit hardest at the middle and lower income groups. The men who brought down that government were the right wing Conservative Independents, who opposed price controls as well as taxes. / What the middle-of-the-road parties in France must now decide, is whether they go right, all the way to General de Gaulle, or whether they go left all the way to the Socialists. There is no other way to add up a stable majority. / And what we must decide is how much France matters to us in Europe, Africa and Asia. This is not a matter of sentiment, of whether we like the French, or whether some of them are sabotaging their own country. / It is, or it should be a question of the self-interests of this nation. # We have spent a lot of time arguing about who was responsible for the loss of China to communism. # If the same thing happens in south-east Asia or in Europe, we probably won't have much time to argue.

Murrow: March 4, 1952. WORD FOR TODAY

We were speaking a moment ago about the French political crisis. The French do not want for critics in this country, and there are many Frenchmen who do not applaud our every action. As Thomas Kempis said: "How seldom we weigh our neighbor in the same balance with ourselves." Or, as James Huneker said: "A critic is a man who expects miracles." The trouble seems to be there is a shortage of miracles.

Goodnight and Good Luck!

Wednesday - March 5, 1952

This is the news:

Prime Minister Churchill's government won another vote of confidence today.. (on the way it handled Britains - defense program.) The Conservatives had a 95-vote majority..the biggest on a vote of confidence since its been in office. [Some 60 left-wing Laborites refused to vote.] Mr. Churchill told the House of Commons that the government's 13-billion-dollar arms program is running about a year behind schedule.. may take four years instead of three. And he suggested that some of the blame is America's. He said the United States promised 313-million dollars worth of machine tools..and deliveries are just beginning. We also allocated 300-million dollars to the British.. none of which has yet been received. Another British spokesman said the government has spent 23-millions developing British airfields for the American air force since 1948. We split the cost with the British. We pay all the maintenance costs.

In France today Antoine Pinnay is still trying to form a new government. And French troops in Indo-China report that enemy troops now appear to be moving into the area north of Saigon in increasing strength. Secretary of State Acheson says our military men have told him that the battle picture in Indo-China has improved as a result of recent actions by the French and Loyalist forces.

Mr. Acheson also issued a statement saying we are solidly behind the British in their determination to defeat Communist terrorism in Malaya. He says the British struggle there "is an integral part of the free world's effort to halt Communist aggression."

The Defense Department says we suffered another 306 casualties in Korea last week. The casualty list now totals 106,298. Today allied patrols moved into enemy-held hills..found the Communists had prepared very strong positions and withdrew in a half hour. Then the enemy sent his patrols into our lines in the same sector. They took 40 minutes of our mortar and artillery fire and withdrew.

Twenty-eight of our Sabrejets caught 70 enemy Migs coming over the Yalu from Manchuria. We shot down five of them, probably destroyed a sixth. There is no word on our losses, if any.

At Panmunjom we gave the Communists a list of 173 allied soldiers ..most of them Americans.. who we believe are prisoners of the Chinese. We want an accounting for these men. The Communists are studying the list. They admitted today that they hold other unreported prisoners.. said they'd give us these names "in due time."

In Washington today, the Senate Expenditures Committee voted against the President's plan to reorganize the Internal Revenue ~~Burea~~ Bureau. Administration leaders predict they will be able to get approval on the Senate floor.

A Senate subcommittee voted to ask the full Senate whether it should continue its examination of demands that Senator McCarthy be thrown out of the Senate.

The Justice Department refuses to turn over to a House [redacted] committee a great many records it demanded. The committee is investigating Attorney General Mc Grath's conduct of his office. It wanted the Department to produce records on all tax cases, and other prosecutions, which have been laid aside or quashed in the last six years. Assistant Attorney General Joseph C. Duggan, acting for Mr. Mc Grath, says the committee is exceeding its powers.. the executive branch of the government is "independent and equal" to Congress.. it is willing to produce records on any specific charges.

Senate investigators today heard from Houston H. Wasson, a law partner of Newbold Morris. He testified that their firm served as lawyers for a Chinese Nationalist shipping firm, which carried oil and other cargo to Red China before the Korean war started. After the war began, the Nationalist firm stopped oil shipments..continued to carry other cargo.

Owen Lattimore, in his 8th day before the McCarran committee, said TODAY that in June of 1945 he tried to influence the President against restricting OUR aid to the Chinese Nationalists alone; he felt that because the Chinese Communists were fighting the Japanese, they too should receive American aid. He wanted a united Chinese effort against the Japanese. Mr. Lattimore testified that his recommendations never had the slightest effect on American policy. Senator Ferguson said: "I am not willing to have you draw the conclusion that you had no influence whatever on American policy."

Secretary of State Acheson volunteered at a news conference today, that he cleared O. Edmund Clubb after the State Department's loyalty-security Board found Mr. Clubb to be a security risk. The secretary says he takes full responsibility for reversing the board. He acted after one of the Department's "most trusted and experienced foreign service officers" reviewed the case. Mr. Acheson pointed out that [redacted] the Board had found no reasonable doubt about Mr. Clubb's loyalty; but did find him to be a security risk. [redacted] Soon after the Acheson decision was announced Mr. Clubb resigned..on a 58-hundred dollar a year pension. [redacted]

Senator McCarran wants Congress to reverse the Acheson decision by cutting off Mr. Clubb's pension funds.

Edward R. Murrow: March 5, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

The great State of New Hampshire must be getting a little crowded, what with all the reporters, camera-men, candidates, spokesmen for candidates - all pursuing each other about the State, stepping in each other's footprints, and making speeches as long as a sled track in the snow. Most reporters appear to agree that the imprint left upon the mind of the voter is not ~~XXX~~ considerable; or if it is, they just aren't talking. The only two people who stand to lose anything in the Primary there on Tuesday are President Truman and General Eisenhower. Any delegates picked up by Messrs. Taft, Stassen or Kefauver will be regarded as a sort of mid-winter dividend.

It would seem that we proceed upon the assumption that if we can't have a big election for a few months yet, let's have a little one. By about Sunday New Hampshire will be the United States, and profound conclusions will be drawn from the voting on Tuesday. The results may have some sort of psychological impact upon the rest of the country, but they won't have anything to do with who gets the nomination when the delegates reach Chicago in July.

~~XXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXX~~ In New Hampshire Senator Kefauver of Tennessee is making speeches in what he calls "an uphill fight". Former Secretary of the Navy Sullivan and former Senate majority leader Scott Lucas from Illinois are beating the bushes for Mr. Truman. Mr. Stassen is up there too, and says he finds considerable indecision; and he figures himself to be a "realistic third" among the Republican candidates.

Tonight Paul Hoffman, former Marshall Plan administrator, will tell New Hampshire voters that if the Republicans don't nominate Eisenhower, they may end up as a "splinter party." The General is the only Republican who can win the Independent vote, and break the solid south. "He's the kind of man who makes you feel better when he comes into the room", says Mr. Hoffman. "If it is glamor, it's the kind of glamor Abraham Lincoln had." Mr. Stassen offered federal aid for the New England textile industry, while Senator Kefauver was sure that we are all tired of moving from crisis to crisis; all want to "see the light at the end of the tunnel."

Senator Taft, who is due in New Hampshire tomorrow, says the ballot violates the letter and spirit of the New Hampshire law because the names on all the ballots are in alphabetical order, which means Eisenhower's name will appear ahead of Taft's. But the Ohio Senator is not going to attempt legal action, despite what he regards as the unfairness of the ballot in its present form.

Mr. Paul Hoffman asserts that a man shouldn't seek the office as Taft is doing. The office ought to seek the man. Tonight there is some evidence that as of now the office - or rather, the voters - will have to seek General Eisenhower, if he is to be nominated. The General was asked today by a Turkish reporter in Ankara: "When are you returning to the United States?" He replied: "I have no plans to return to the United States." And today New Jersey State Senator Malcolm Forbes came back from a visit to General Eisenhower. Said he had gone over to persuade Ike to return as soon as possible, "feeling that otherwise he might lose the nomination." But after talking to the General he'd come home to "explain to the people why Eisenhower would not be serving their best interests, if he returned home to "backslap the nation for the Republican nomination." ~~[illegible]~~ (Mr. Forbes is going to explain it on the radio tomorrow night). But also today Harry Darby, Republican National committeeman from Kansas, one of the original Eisenhower boosters, said: "The General will be back in this country at the right time to speak for himself."

It is, of course, clear that state primaries will not determine who is to be nominated by either the Democrats or the Republicans. Only one-fourth of the states require that presidential primaries be held. In ~~XXX~~ only six states are the delegates pledged to vote for a specific candidate.

The presidential primary was the product of the split in the Republican Party early in this century, when the rank and file decided they wanted to exercise greater control over government. Right now there is a split between the liberal and conservative elements in both Parties, and this could produce a renewed demand that the voters participate more directly in choosing the candidates, one of whom will become President. Bills have been introduced in both Houses to provide for a national presidential primary, but they haven't gotten off the ground.

Probably the fairest thing that can be said about the presidential primaries, held in various states, and under varying rules, is that they may provide a scattered sampling of opinion not more inaccurate than the public opinion polls. But they don't provide - Republicans or Democrats - the voters in states where primaries are held, any real voice in choosing their Party's candidate.

Still, the Reporters, candidates & Spokesmen for Candidates, should be grateful for the opportunity to spend a little time in New Hampshire.

Everyone, it would seem, is trying to forecast the outcome of the New Hampshire Primary. There is no shortage of polls either. But it's still pretty much as Will Rogers once observed:"No mathematician has ever been able to figure out how many hundred straw votes it takes to equal one legitimate vote. More men have been elected by straw votes to office and fewer received salary than any other industry in America."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

WEDNESDAY - MARCH 5, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Prime Minister Churchill's government won another vote of confidence today on the way it handled Britain's defense program. The Conservatives had a 95-vote majority - the biggest on a vote of confidence since its been in office. Some 60 left-wing Laborites refused to vote. Mr. Churchill told the House of Commons that the government's 13-billion-dollar arms program is running about a year behind schedule: may take four years instead of three. And he suggested that some of the blame is America's. He said the United States promised 313-million dollars worth of machine tools, and deliveries are just beginning. We also allocated 300-million dollars to the British - none of which has yet been received. Another British spokesman said the government has spent 23-millions developing British airfields for the American Air Force since 1948. We split the cost with the British. We pay all the maintenance costs.

In France today, Antoine Pinnay is still trying to form a new government, And French troops in Indo-China report that enemy troops now appear to be moving into the area north of Saigon in increasing strength. Secretary of State Acheson says our military men have told him that the battle picture in Indo-China has improved as a result of recent actions by the French and Loyalist forces.

Mr. Acneson also issued a statement saying we are solidly behind the British in their determination to defeat communist terrorisum in Malaya. He says the British struggle there "is an integral part of the free world's effort to halt communist aggression."

The Defense Department says we suffered another 306 casualties in Korea last week. The casualty list now totals 106,298. Today allied patrols moved into enemy-held hills, found the Communists had prepared very strong positions, and withdrew in a half hour. Then the enemy sent his patrols into our lines in the same sector. They took 40 minutes of our mortar and artillery fire and withdrew.

Twenty-eight of our Sabre Jets caught 70 enemy MIGs coming over the Yalu from Manchuria. We shot down five of them, probably destroyed a sixth. There is no word on our losses, if any.

At Panmunjom we gave the Communists a list of 173 allied soldiers - most of them Americans who we believe are prisoners of the Chinese. We want an accounting for these men. The Communists are studying the list. They admitted today that they hold other unreported prisoners: said they'd give us these names "in due time."

In Washington today, the Senate Expenditures Committee voted against the President's plan to reorganize the Internal Revenue Bureau. Administration leaders predict they will be able to get approval on the Senate floor.

A Senate subcommittee voted to ask the full Senate whether it should continue its examination of demands that Senator McCarthy be thrown out of the Senate.

The Justice Department refuses to turn over to a House committee a great many records it demanded. The committee is investigating Attorney General McGrath's conduct of his office. It wanted the Department to produce records on all tax cases, and other prosecutions, which have been laid aside or quashed in the last six years. Assistant Attorney General Joseph C. Duggan, acting for Mr. McGrath, says the committee is exceeding its powers: the executive branch of the Government is "independent and equal" to Congress; it is willing to produce records on any specific charges.

Senate investigators today heard from Houston H. Wasson, a law partner of Newbold Morris. He testified that their firm served as lawyers for a Chinese Nationalist shipping firm, which carried oil and other cargo to Red China before the Korean war started. After the war began, the Nationalist firm stopped oil shipments; continued to carry other cargo.

Owen Lattimore, in his 8th day before the McCarran committee, said today that in June of 1945 he tried to influence the President against restricting our aid to the Chinese Nationalists alone; he felt that because the Chinese Communists were fighting the Japanese, they too should receive American aid. He wanted a united Chinese effort against the Japanese. Mr. Lattimore testified that his recommendations never had the slightest effect on American policy. Senator Ferguson said: "I am not willing to have you draw the conclusion that you had no influence whatever on American policy."

Secretary of State Acheson volunteered at a news conference today that he cleared O. Edmund Clubb after the State Department's Loyalty-Security Board found Mr. Clubb to be a security risk. The Secretary says he takes full responsibility for reversing the Board. He acted after one of the Department's "most trusted and experienced foreign service officers" reviewed the case. Mr. Acheson pointed out that the Board had found no resonable doubt about Mr. Clubb's loyalty; but did find him to be a security risk. Soon after the Acheson decision was announced, Mr. Clubb resigned - on a 58-hundred dollar a year pension.

Senator McCarran wants Congress to reverse the Acheson decision by cutting off Mr. Clubb's pension funds.

The great State of New Hampshire must be getting a little crowded - what with all the reporters, camera-men, candidates, spokesmen for candidates - all pursuing each other about the State, stepping in each other's footprints, and making speeches as long as a sled track in the snow. Most reporters appear to agree that the imprint left upon the mind of the voter is not considerable; or if it is, they just aren't talking. The only two people who stand to lose anything in the Primary there on Tuesday are President Truman and General Eisenhower. Any delegates picked up by Messrs. Taft, Stassen or Kefauver will be regarded as a sort of mid-winter dividend.

It would seem that we proceed upon the assumption that if we can't have a big election for a few months yet, let's have a little one. By about Sunday New Hampshire will be the United States, and profound conclusions will be drawn from the voting on Tuesday. The results may have some sort of psychological impact upon the rest of the country, but they won't have anything to do with who gets the nomination when the delegates reach Chicago in July.

In New Hampshire Senator Kefauver of Tennessee is making speeches in what he calls "an uphill fight." Former Secretary of the Navy Sullivan and Former Senate Majority Leader Scott Lucas from Illinois are beating the bushes for Mr. Truman. Mr. Stassen is up there too, and says he finds considerable indecision; and he figures himself to be a "realistic third" among the Republican candidates.

Tonight Paul Hoffman, former Marshall Plan administrator, will tell New Hampshire voters that if the Republicans don't nomiate Eisenhower, they may end up as a "splinter party." The General is the only Republican who can win the Independent vote, and break the solid South. "He's the kind of man who makes you feel better when he comes into the room," says Mr. Hoffman. "If it is glamor, it's the kind of glamor Abraham Lincoln had." Mr. Stassen offered federal aid for the New England textile industry, while Senator Kefauver was sure that we are all tired of moving from crisis to crisis; all want to "see the light at the end of the tunnel."

Senator Taft, who is due in New Hampshire tomorrow, says the ballot violates the letter and spirit of the New Hampshire law, because the names on all the ballots are in alphabetical order, which means Eisenhower's name will appear ahead of Taft's. But the Ohio Senator is not going to attempt legal action, despit what he regards as the unfairness of the ballot in its present form.

Mr. Paul Hoffman asserts that a man shouldn't seek the office as Taft is doing. The office ought to seek the man. Tonight there is some evidence that as of now, the office - or rather, the voters - will have to seek General Eisenhower if he is to be nominated. The General was asked today by a Turkish reporter in Ankara: "When are you returning to the United States?" He replied: "I have no plans to return to the United States." And today New Jersey State Senator Malcolm Forbes came back from a visit to General Eisenhower. Said he had gone over to persuade Ike to return as soon as possible, "feeling that otherwise he might lose the nomination." But after talking to the General, he'd come home to "explain to the people why Eisenhower would not be serving their best interests if he returned home to 'backslap' the nation for the Republican nomination." (Mr. Forbes is going to explain it on the radio tomorrow night.) But also today Harry Darby, Republican National committeeman from Kansas, one of the original Eisenhower boosters, said: "The General will be back in this country at the right time to speak for himself."

It is, of course, clear that state primaries will not determine who is to be nominated by either the Democrats or the Republicans. Only one-fourth of the states require that presidential primaries be held. In only six states are the delegates pledged to vote for a specific candidate.

The presidential primary was the product of the split in the Republican Party early in this century, when the rank and file decided they wanted to exercise greater control over government. Right now, there is a split between the liberal and conservative elements in both Parties, and this could produce a renewed demand that the voters participate more directly in choosing the candidates, one of whom will become President. Bills have been introduced in both Houses to provide for a national presidential primary, but they haven't gotten off the ground.

Probably the fairest thing that can be said about the presidential primaries, held in various states and under varying rules, is that they may provide a scattered sampling of opinion not more inaccurate, than the public opinion polls. But they don't provide the voters - Republicans or Democrats - in states where primaries are held, any real voice in choosing their Party's candidate.

Still, the reporters, candidates and spokesmen for candidates, should be grateful for the opportunity to spend a little time in New Hampshire.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Everyone, it would seem, is trying to forecast the outcome of the New Hampshire Primary. There is no shortage of polls either. But it's still pretty much as Will Rogers once observed: "No mathematician has ever been able to figure out how many hundred straw votes it takes, to equal one legitimate vote. More men have been elected by straw votes to office, and fewer received salary, than any other industry in America."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Thursday - March 6, 1952

This is the news:

The President today asked Congress for almost eight billion dollars for military and economic aid to our allies. In a message to the Congress Mr. Truman said: "I would not ask for one dollar more than is necessary to support our policy of peace. But there is no economy more false than that which is summed up in the tragic phrase 'too little and too late.' This money would be used to send arms to our allies... help Western Europe make her own arms and ammunition.. and raise the living standards of our allies in Africa and Asia. The President will explain his program to the nation tonight by radio. He will be heard over many of these stations at 10;30 p.m., eastern standard time." In Congress, leaders of both parties have told reporters that the President's request will probably be cut by at least one billion dollars.

Mr. Truman sent a message to the troops in Korea today through a group of actors who are about to leave for the front. The President asked them to tell our men: "There is one man in the United States who appreciates entirely what they are doing to keep the country out of World War Three."

There were several small but FIERCE patrol clashes on Korea's east and central fronts today. And our Sabrejet pilots say they shot down one enemy Mig and damaged another. There was no progress at the truce talks, where the Communists now insist that truce inspectors be permitted to examine secret allied weapons and equipment. (And they still want Russia on that neutral inspection team.)

The French National Assembly today approved Antoine Pinay as the new premier. He received eleven votes more than were necessary... because the De Gaullist supporters split. General De Gaulle had ordered his party members not to vote. But 27 of them did.. and for Pinnay. They later told reporters they placed their nation above their party. Pinay told the Assembly he would try to balance the French budget by cracking down on tax evaders.. and reforming the tax laws.

The Russians today made public their new military budget.. largest in Soviet history. They claim they will spend only 24 per cent of their over-all budget for military matters. BUT State Department experts say at least 50 per cent of the Russian budget will go for military purposes.. directly or indirectly.

The Army disclosed today that the secret diary of an American general, who was our military attache in Moscow, had been stolen and photographed. Major General Robert W. Grow was military attache in Moscow from July of 1950 to the middle of last January. Sometime last summer, while visiting in Frankfurt, a person the Army believes to be a Soviet agent, managed to have the pages of the diary photographed. The Russians have been using this material in their propaganda campaign to "prove" we are plotting a war against Russia. Published excerpts from the diary include these: "War..as soon as possible. Now." "It seems to me the time is ripe for a blow." "We must start by hitting below the belt." There is no comment from General Grow.

The National Production Authority today announced that auto manufacturers will be permitted to make one million and 50-thousand cars in April, May and June.. compared with an original quota of 930-thousand.

And New York city and seven other areas have been named as serious unemployment regions entitled to special treatment in the award of defense contracts. The other areas are: Grand Rapids, Flint and Iron Mountain in Michigan.... Fall River and Lowell in Massachusetts, Cumberland, Maryland, and Manchester, New Hampshire.

The Wage Stabilization Board has approved a four cents an hour pay increase for 320-thousand workers at General Electric, Westinghouse and Sylvania Electric companies.

The President has ordered the Board to try to head off a nation-wide oil strike that's scheduled to start at midnight Sunday. He says such a strike would cripple the defense effort.

Cyrus Eaton, a Cleveland industrialist, TODAY told Senate investigators he contributed 30-thousand dollars to the campaign to defeat Senator Taft in Ohio in 1951. He said: "I felt that my place was on the side of the laboring man..in my own interest as a capitalist."

Senator Taft was busy in New Hampshire today. In a series of speeches in various cities, he said the Eisenhower supporters now fear they will lose in next Tuesday's primary. He would be satisfied if he won four out of the 14 delegates in the presidential primary. Senator Taft says the [redacted] Republicans should not chose as their candidate someone who has never run for office in his life.

Senator Kefauver, campaigning for Democratic votes, said to vote for President Truman in the primary would be "like buying a pig in a poke..because no one knows if Mr. Truman is going to run for re-election.

Edward R. Murrow: March 6, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

We have received reliable information that the various organizations - official and unofficial - concerned with information and propaganda aimed at Eastern Europe have made a major decision. This involves Radio Free Europe - the various freedom movements, committees of exiles - the sum total of people trying to tell the West's story to people behind the Iron Curtain.

The decision is not to foster, encourage or even talk about underground resistance or guerilla movements in any of the communist-controlled countries of Eastern Europe. Henceforth our psychological warfare will be merely to propagandize, to provide news, to strengthen the habit of listening to the West, but to take no overt or direct action of any kind against these communist governments. In other words, we are going to lie low and urge our friends to lie low until the proper time comes. There is no hint of when that proper time may be, or how it will come about. But there is to be no direct mention of war or liberation, except in the "broadest and most philosophical sense."

This decision is being taken for two reasons. We tinkered around with a rudimentary underground apparatus in Czechoslovakia and Poland. Those Czechs and Poles involved in it were literally massacred. Not all of the trials and imprisonments in those two countries involving so-called Western agents, were fonies.

The second reason for deciding to lie low is that we are afraid of a horrible fiasco if we do encourage open revolt, and then when that revolt comes we do not assist it by active intervention but stand by and see it crushed. That sort of inaction would get us the same infamy the Russians got when they urged the people of Warsaw to rise, and then stood by and literally saw them slaughtered; the difference being that then the Russians could have done something about it, but now we could not.

It may or may not be statesmanship for our President to say, as he did yesterday, that he is doing everything he possibly can to free the Czech people from the iron hand of the tyrant. But the fact is that there is nothing we can do about that immediately; and so it has been decided not to urge the leaders of liberation to risk their necks in futile revolt.

This business of talking to people behind the Iron Curtain is both dangerous and delicate. Not long ago Radio Free Europe broadcast to Czechoslovakia a story that the currency was to be devalued. The effect was all that could have been hoped for: a great wave of panic-buying throughout the country, not only in the cities but in the countryside. The police had to be mustered, and even the army was called out in some places.

It proved that Radio Free Europe has a big audience; but it didn't further in the slightest resistance hopes inside Czechoslovakia, because the currency was not devalued and the story backfired. There is a tremendous danger in touching off forces, both physical and psychological, over which we have no control. There never has been and there isn't now any set policy or objective behind Western exhortations to rise, resist and revolt. So we have, in effect, called off any action programs in Eastern Europe.

We have lost practically everything we had in the way of men and equipment in the underground movements behind the Iron Curtain. These movements were principally in Poland and Czechoslovakia. There are still remnants, sporadic guerilla fighting, illicit radio transmitters, but the casualty rate has been too high.

One of the principal reasons for deciding not to urge active and open opposition by the underground is based upon an analysis of the difference between the efficiency and the effectiveness of the German Gestapo in Poland during the war, and the Russian Secret Police. In the German part of Poland the Poles organized a virtual underground state - an army of four hundred thousand. In the Russian part no underground was able to exist because its leaders were arrested in short order by the NKVD.

The German Gestapo adopted a policy of non-fraternization, a policy of terror, a system of hostages - when whole villages were wiped out as an act of reprisal, the Poles decided they had nothing to lose and flocked to the underground. By contrast the Russian Secret Police adopted the method of infiltration, the mass recruitment of informers. Persons arrested were often released if they promised to engage in spying. The Germans acted openly and usually in uniform - many of their executions were held in public. The Russians generally worked in civilian clothes, arrests were made discreetly, those arrested disappeared without a trace. The Russians, of course, now have their agents all over Poland, and are following their wartime practise. Instead of arresting and executing in public the first underground leader they find, they send their own agents into the partisan movements to infiltrate and discover the identity of other leaders and the pattern of operations. Then everybody involved quietly disappears.

So we have decided not to urge open and overt acts of rebellion or sabotage. And to mention liberation only in a broad, vague and philosophical sense. This will probably serve to prevent some good and brave men from being killed or sent to Siberia too soon. But it leaves unanswered the question of how long hope and determination will survive, even in the stoutest heart, under these conditions.

In this matter of psychological warfare - talking to people behind the Iron Curtain - there are as usual two views. Maybe as H.H. Brackenridge said: "Talk about a thing long enough and you will put it in the people's minds." Or it may be as Demosthenes contended: "Each man believes what he wishes to believe." Anyway, Oswald Dykes was probably right when he said: "Nothing happens from saying so."

Goodnight and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

THURSDAY - MARCH 6, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President today asked Congress for almost eight billion dollars for military and economic aid for our allies. In a message to the Congress Mr. Truman said: "I would not ask for one dollar more than is necessary to support our policy of peace. But there is no economy more false than that which is summed up in the tragic phrase ' too little and too late'." This money would be used to send arms to our allies, help Western Europe make her own arms and ammunition, and raise the living standards of our allies in Africa and Asia. The President will explain his program to the nation tonight by radio. He will be heard over many of these stations at 10:30 P.M., Easter Standard Time. In Congress leaders of both Parties have told reporters that the President's request will probably be cut by at least one billion dollars.

Mr. Truman sent a message to the troops in Korea today through a group of actors, who are about to leave for the front. The President asked them to tell our men: "There is one man in the United States who appreciates entirely what they are doing to keep the country out of World War Three."

There were several small but fierce patrol clashes on Korea's east and central fronts today. And our Sabre Jets pilots say they shot down one enemy MIG and damaged another. There was no progress at the truce talks where the Communists now insist that truce inspectors be permitted to examine secret allied weapons and equipment. (And they still want Russia on that neutral inspection team.)

The French National Assembly today approved Antoine Pinay as the new premier. He received eleven votes more than were necessary because the De Gaulle supporters split. General De Gaulle had ordered his party members not to vote. But 27 of them did - and for Pinnay. They later told reporters they placed their nation above their party. Pinay told the Assembly he would try to balance the French budget by cracking down on tax evaders and reforming the tax laws.

The Russians today made public their new military budget - largest in Soviet history. They claim they will spend only 24 per cent of their over-all budget for military matters. But Senate Department experts say at least 50 per cent of the Russian budget will go for military purposes - directly or indirectly.

The Army disclosed today that the secret diary of an American general, who was our military attache in Moscow, had been stolen and photographed. Major General Robert W. Grow was military attache in Moscow from July of 1950 to the middle of last January. Sometime last summer, while visiting in Frankfurt, a person of the Army believed to be a Soviet agent, managed to have the pages of the diary photographed. The Russians have been using this material in their propaganda campaign to "prove" we are plotting war against Russia. Published excerpts from the diary include these: "War....as soon as possible. Now!" "It seems to me the time is ripe for a blow." "We must start by hitting below the belt." There is no comment from General Grow.

The National Production Authority today announced that auto manufacturers will be permitted to make one million and 50-thousand cars in April, May and June - compared with an original quota of 930-thousand.

And New York City and seven other areas have been named as serious unemployment regions entitled to special treatment in the award of defense contracts. The other areas are: Grand Rapids, Flint, and Iron Mountain in Michigan; Fall River and Lowell in Massachusetts; Cumberland, Maryland; and Manchester, New Hampshire.

The Wage Stabilization Board has approved a four cents an hour pay increase for 320-thousand workers at General Electric, Westinghouse and Sylvania Electric companies.

The President has ordered the Board to try to head off a nation-wide oil strike scheduled to start at midnight Sunday. He says such a strike would cripple the defense effort.

Cyrus Eaton, a Cleveland industrialist, today told Senate investigators he contributed 30-thousand dollars to the campaign to defeat Senator Taft in Ohio in 1951. He said: "I felt that my place was on the side of the laboring man in my own interest as a capitalist."

Senator Taft was busy in New Hampshire today. In a series of speeches in various cities, he said the Eisenhower supporters now fear they will lose in next Tuesday's primary. He would be satisfied if he won four out of the 14 delegat in the presidential primary. Senator Taft says the Republicans should not chose as their candidate someone who has never run for office in his life.

Senator Kefauver, campaigning for Democratic votes, said to vote for President Truman in the primary would be "like buying a pig in a poke," because no one knows if Mr. Truman is going to run for re-election.

We have received reliable information that the various organizations - official and unofficial - concerned with information and propaganda aimed at Eastern Europe have made a major decision. This involves Radio Free Europe - the various freedom movements, committees of exiles - the sum total of people trying to tell the West's story to the people behind the Iron Curtain.

The decision is not to foster, encourage or even talk about underground resistance or guerilla movements in any of the communist-controlled countries of Eastern Europe. Henceforth, our psychological warfare will be merely to propagandi to provide news, to strengthen the habit of listening to the West, but to take no overt or direct action of any kind against these communist governments. In other words, we are going to lie low, and urge our friends to lie low until the proper time comes. There is no hint of when that proper time may be, or how it will come about. But there is to be no direct mention of war or liberation, except in the "broadest and most philosophical sense."

This decision is being taken for two reasons. We tinkered around with a rudimentary underground apparatus in Czechoslovakia and Poland. Those Czechs and Poles involved in it were literally massacred. Not all of the trials and imprisonments in those two countries involving so-called Western agents, were fonies

The second reason for deciding to lie low is that we are afraid of a horrible fiasco, if we do encourage open revolt, and then, when that revolt comes, we do not assist it by active intervention, but stand by and see it crushed. That sort of inaction would get us the same infamy the Russians got when they urged the people of Warsaw to rise, and then stood by and literally saw them slaughtered; the difference being that then, the Russians could have done something about it, but now we could not.

It may, or may not, be statesmanship for our President to say, as he did yesterday, that he is doing everything he possibly can to free the Czech people from the iron hand of the tyrant. But the fact is that there is nothing we can do about that immediately; and so it has been decided not to urge the leaders of liberation to risk their necks in futile revolt.

This business of talking to people behind the Iron Curtain is both dangerous and delicate. Not long ago, Radio Free Europe broadcast to Czechoslovaki a story that the currency was to be devalued. The effect was all that could have been hoped for: a great wave of panic-buying throughout the country, not only in the cities but in the countryside. The police had to be mustered, and even the army was called out in some places. It proved that Radio Free Europe has a big audience; but it didn't further in the slightest, resistance hopes inside Czechoslovakia, because the currency was not devalued and the story backfired. There is a tremendous danger in touching off forces, both physical and psychologic over which we have no control There never has been, and there isn't now, any set policy or objective behind Western exhortations to rise, resist and revolt. So we have, in effect, called off any action programs in Eastern Europe.

We have lost practically everything we had in the way of men and equipment in the underground movements behind the Iron Curtain. These movements were principally in Poland and Czechoslovakia. There are still remnants, sporadic guerilla fighting, illicit radio transmitters, but the casualty rate has been too high.

One of the principal reasons for deciding not to urge active and open opposition by the underground, is based upon an analysis of the difference between the efficiency and the effectiveness of the German Gestapo in Poland during the war, and the Russian Secret Police. In the German part of Poland, the Poles organized a virtual underground state - an army of four hundred thousand. In the Russian part no underground was able to exist because its leaders were arrested in short order by the NKVD. The German Gestapo adopted apolicy of non-fraternizati a policy of terror, a system of hostages: when whole villages were wiped out as an act of reprisal, the Poles decided they had nothing to lose, and flocked to the underground. By contrast the Russian Secret Police adopted the method of infiltration, the mass recruitment of informers. Persons arrested were often released, if they promised to engage in spying. The Germans acted openly and usually in uniform: many of their executions were held in public. The Russians generally worked in civilian clothes, arrests were made discreetly; those arrested disappeare without a trace. The Russians, of course, now have their agents all over Poland, and are following their wartime practice. Instead of arresting and executing in public the first underground leader they find, they send their own agents into the partisan movements to infiltrate and discover the identity of other leaders and the pattern of operations. Then everybody involved quietly disappears.

So we have decided not to urge open and overt acts of rebellion or sabotage. And to mention liberation only in a broad, vague and philosophical sense. This will probably serve to prevent some good and brave men from being killed, or sent to Siberia too soon. But it leaves unanswered the question of how long hope and determination will survive, even in the stoutest heart, under these conditions.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: In this matter of psychological warfare - talking to people behind the Iron Curtain - there are as usual, two views. Maybe as H. H. Brackenridge said: "Talk about a thing long enough and you will put it in the people's minds." Or it may be as Demosthenes contended: "Each man believes what he wishes to believe." Anyway, Oswald Dykes was probably right when he said: "Nothing happens from saying so."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Friday - March 7, 1952

This is the news:

Senator Taft suggested tonight that General Eisenhower might be "gagged" as a Republican presidential candidate, because of the "constant advancement" He received from the Roosevelt and Truman administrations. In a speech in New Hampshire, the Senator wondered if the General is prepared to call a spade a spade.. Is he prepared to make an all-out attack on the Administration's Far Eastern policy, if he disagrees with it? Will he attack corruption and immorality in the government ? In a 300-mile tour of the state, Senator TAFT also said: Eisenhower might be a political genius..nobody knows. And no one knows where Ike stands on labor, spending, OR a farm program.

Republican Senator Lodge, speaking for the general, said:"No task is more important, and no mission more American, than to prevent the tide of war from sweeping away your town halls, your churches and your homes. They ask where Eisenhower stands? He stands between that and you."

And Harold Stassen, running on his own, charged that Senator Taft has been wrong in vital matters affecting foreign policy for the last 12 years. Mr. Stassen says that 12 years ago Taft said Hitler and Stalin were not a menace to this country. Mr. Stassen says Taft voted against lend-lease.. against the Atlantic Pact..against Mutual aid. And, says Stassen, even after the Korean war started Senator Taft advocated a smaller defense program.

The battlefields of Korea were comparatively quiet today. Except on the eastern front where the Marines beat off five attacks..none in force. Bad weather kept most of our planes grounded. And at the truce talks the enemy came up with a new plan. They want to write into the Armistice agreement A ban against a possible naval blockade of the Chinese Communist coast.. and an invasion of the mainland. Our staff officers take this as another indication that the enemy wants to stall the talks.

In Tokyo today, the United States ordered a nine-nation split of three and a half million dollars we receovered from the loot the Japanese seized during the war. The biggest share goes to China..20 per cent. The rest goes to other countries whose territory was looted by the Japanese.. not us, and not the Russians.

In West Germany today, President Thodore Heuss attacked the racial hatred of the Nazis. He also attacked what he called the injustices of the post-war de-nazification program.. called the dismanlting of German plants "economic nonsense."

In France, Premier Pinay says if he doesn't get the support of all parties that voted for him yesterday, he will resign. The Popular Republicans agree to take part in his government if: Robert Schuman remains as foreign minister.. if the government tries to get a sliding wage scale bill passed.. if it continues [redacted] present benefits under the French social security program.

American army authorities in Frankfurt say the person who last year photographed the diary of General Grow may have had access to other top secrets. We are now told that General Grow came to Frankfort from Moscow to attend a secret [redacted] top-level intelligence meeting: it was attended by our military attaches from behind the iron curtain. These men met in a guest house outside Frankfurt. Someone managed to take pictures of the Grow diary. We don't know what other information they photographed.

The President arrived in Key West tonight. Before he left Washington he sent messages to the Senate and a House committee..messages which I'd like to review in a few minutes. And he made his third appeal in 24 hours for approval of the 8-billion dollar mutuaul security progam. He said that in western Europe, 1952 may well be the critical time in the defense build-up.

Senate investigators were told today by Houston Wasson that the Chinese Foundation he and Newbold Morris served as attorneys, could have halted a subsidiary comapny's oil trade with Communist China. Mr. Wasson said the Foundation controlled the tankers used for the trade. The committee will hear from Mr. Morris on Tuesday.

The Senate Rules Committee today voted to let the whole Senate decide whether a subcommittee should continue its inquiry into demands that Senator McCarthy be ousted from the Senate.

In Rhode Island today, two bandits, wearing Halowwee masks, robbed 100-thousand dollars from the credit union manager at the Naval air station at Quonset Point.

The F.B.I. says it has arrested an army sergeant and a relative and accused them of of 48-thousand dollar burglary of a Post Exchange safe at Fort Belvoir, Virginia in February.

In San Fransisco, a federal jury has indicted 23 persons and accused them of conspiring in a MULTI-million dollar nationwide heroin distributing agency. [redacted]

[redacted]

Another grand jury here in New York, has recommended a civil [redacted] anti-trust action to end restraints in the promotion and broadcasting of championship boxing bouts.

Edward R. Murrow: March 7, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

It rather looks as though some Senators are going to have to stand up and be counted, in the course of the next week. The President tried to "put the finger on them" before he left for vacation at Key West today. # The background of what might be called the Senators' dilemma is this. There have been substantial scandals in the Bureau of Internal Revenue - (that's the organization that collects your taxes.) In the last year one hundred and sixty-nine employees of the Bureau have been dismissed, or forced to resign. And seven out of the sixty-four collectors of internal revenue have been ousted.

It is important to remember that under the present political patronage system, tax collectors are appointed by the President, upon recommendation of the Secretary of the Treasury; that they are not appointed without the approval and the recommendation of the Senator in whose state they reside and work. # The cry went up that something ought to be done about this hanky-panky on the part of too many tax collectors. The President ought to do something about it. So he did. He proposed that the Bureau of Internal Revenue be taken out of politics; that appointments no longer be the plaything of political patronage; and that tax officials be put under Civil Service regulations. They would get their jobs on the basis of competitive examinations rather than political patronage.

Now there is no way of ensuring that Civil Servants will be more honest than political appointees, but most of the tax officials who have been caught were, in fact, the recipients of political patronage.

The House of Representatives agreed overwhelmingly with Mr. Truman's proposal. The Citizens' Committee for the Hoover Report likewise agreed. Then it came up to the Senate. And if the Senate doesn't vote it down by a simple majority by a week from midnight tonight, that's what's going to happen.

Today the President sent a letter to Vice President Barkley, saying the Republicans in the Senate had raised a great cry about graft and corruption in the government. The President wanted to know, whether they really want to do something to assure clean, efficient government, or whether all their talk is pure politics. Mr. Truman thought the taxpayers would be interested in the Senate vote, because it would show whether they're concerned about political patronage or good public service.

The Senate Expenditures Committee has voted seven to five to reject the plan. Senator George, Democrat of Georgia, says the President is trying to shift the blame for tax scandals from the Administration to Congress, and eliminate the corruption issue in the upcoming presidential election. Senator Mundt, Republican of South Dakota, says the tax reform plan is a sort of deathbed repentance in the twilight of Democratic rule. Two Democratic Senators, Humphrey of Minnesota and Moody of Michigan, say the President's letter is further evidence of his determination to close every loophole to favoritism and corruption. #

A House sub-committee had asked the Justice Department for a list of all the cases over the last six years which the Justice Department had failed to prosecute, or had returned to the agency which recommended the action. The President wrote another letter to the Chairman of that committee, saying "nothing doing." It would take the time of too many people, cost millions of dollars, and would be a "dragnet approach." This letter was sent to the chairman of the committee, Representative Chelf of Kentucky. He remarked: "Some have indicated that our committee is out on a fishing expedition." He thought the answer was supplied by an old Kentucky adage: "If you're gonna shoot ducks, you gotta go where the ducks is."

There will be a lot of shooting in the course of the next few months, mostly aimed at where the voters is.

But if you're seriously interested in this whole complex and unsavory business of corruption, influence-peddling, and how to make a fast buck while remaining within the law, I can suggest a book that is worth your time. It is well-documented and unsensational, except to the extent that facts can be sensational. Never having met the author, having no interest in the firm that published the book, I feel free to commend it. It was written by Blair Bowles. The title is: "How To Get Rich In Washington", and the sub-title is: "Rich Man's Division of the Welfare State". The opening sentences are these:

"When nations mature, they grow tolerant of evil. They accept as a simple fact of life the irresponsibility of public officials who condone corruption, and who play favorites as they administer the nation's laws. By this standard of maturity the United States has grown up." Mr. Bowles pretty well proves it, too.

The problem of patronage has been with us for a long time. Back in 1801 Jefferson said: "No duty the executive has to perform is so trying as to put the right man in the right place. Yet how are vacancies to be obtained when few die and none resign." Time hasn't changed Kin Hubbard's observation either. "Politics," he said, "make strange postmasters." He might have added tax collectors too.

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

FRIDAY - MARCH 7, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Senator Taft suggested tonight that General Eisenhower might be "gagged" as a Republican presidential candidate because of the "constant advancement" he received from the Roosevelt and Truman administrations. In a speech in New Hampshire, the Senator wondered if the General is prepared to call a spade a spade: "Is he prepared to make an all-out attack on the Administration's Far Eastern policy, if he disagrees with it? Will he attack corruption and immorality in the Government?" In a 300-mile tour of the state, Senator Taft also said: Eisenhower might be a political genius; nobody knows. And no one knows where Ike stands on labor, spending or a farm program.

Republican Senator Lodge, speaking for the General, said: "No task is more important, and no mission more American, than to prevent the tide of war from sweeping away your town halls, your churches and your homes. They ask where Eisenhower stands? He stands between that and you."

And Harold Stassen, running on his own, charged that Senator Taft has been wrong in vital matters affecting foreign policy for the last 12 years. Mr. Stassen says that 12 years ago Taft said Hitler and Stalin were not a menace to this country. Mr. Stassen says Taft voted against lend-lease - against the Atlantic Pact - against Mutual Aid. And, says Stassen, even after the Korean war started Senator Taft advocated a smaller defense program.

The battlefields of Korea were comparatively quiet today. Except on the eastern front where the Marines beat off five attacks - none in force. Bad weather kept most of our planes grounded. And at the truce talks the enemy came up with a new plan. They want to write into the Armistice agreement a ban against a possible naval blockade of the Chinese Communist coast, and an invasion of the mainland. Our staff officers take this as another indication that the enemy wants to stall the talks.

In Tokyo today, the United States ordered a nine-nation split, of three and a half million dollars, we recovered from the loot the Japanese seized during the war. The biggest share goes to China - 20 per cent. The rest goes to other countries whose territory was looted by the Japanese - not us, and not the Russians.

In West Germany today, President Thodore Heuss attacked the racial hatred of the Nazis. He also attacked what he called the injustices of the post-war de-nazification program: called the dismantling of German plants "economic nonsense

In France, Premier Pinay says if he doesn't get the support of all parties that voted for him yesterday, he will resign. The Popular Republicans agree to take part in his government if: Robert Schuman remains as foreign minister; if the government tries to get a sliding wage scale bill passed; if it continues present benefits under the French Social-Security program.

American army authorities in Frankfurt say the person who last year photographed the diary of General Grow may have had access to other top secrets. We are now told that General Grow came to Frankfort from Moscow to attend a secret top-level intelligence meeting: it was attended by our military attaches from behind the Iron Curtain. These men met in a guest house outside Frankfurt. Someone managed to take pictures of the Grow diary. We don't know what other information they photographed.

The President arrived in Key West tonight. Before he left Washington, he sent messages to the Senate and a House committee - messages which I'd like to review in a few minutes. And he made his third appeal in 24 hours for approval of the 8-billion dollar Mutual Security program. He said that in western Europe, 1952 may well be the critical time in the defense build-up.

Senate investigators were told today by Houston Wasson that the Chinese Foundation he and Newbold Morris served as attorneys, could have halted a subsidiary company's oil trade with Communist China. Mr. Wasson said the Foundation controlled the tankers used for the trade. The committee will hear from Mr. Morris on Tuesday.

The Senate Rules Committee today voted to let the whole Senate decide whether a subcommittee, should continue its inquiry into demands that Senator McCarthy be ousted from the Senate.

In Rhode Island today, two bandits, wearing Halloween masks, robbed 100-thousa dollars from the Credit Union manager at the naval air station at Quonset Point.

The F. B. I. says it has arrested an army sergeant and a relative and accused them of a 48-thousand dollar burglary of a Post Exchange safe at Fort Belvoir, Virginia, in February.

In San Francisco, a federal jury has indicted 23 persons and accused them of conspiring in a multi-million dollar nationwide heroin distributing agency.

Another grand jury, here in New York, has recommended a civil anti-trust action to end restraints in the promotion and broadcasting of championship boxing bouts.

It rather looks as though some Senators are going to have to stand up and be counted in the course of the next week. The President tried to "put the finger on them" before he left for vacation at Key West today. The background of what might be called the Senators' dilemma is this. There have been substantial scandals in the Bureau of Internal Revenue - (that's the organization that collects your taxes). In the last year one hundred and sixty-nine employees of the Bureau have been dismissed, or forced to resign. And seven out of the sixty-four collectors of internal revenue have been ousted.

It is important to remember that under the present political patronage system, tax collectors are appointed by the President, upon recommendation of the Secretary of the Treasury; that they are not appointed without the approval and the recommendation of the Senator in whose state they reside and work. The cry went up that something ought to be done about this hanky-panky on the part of too many tax collec ors. The President ought to do something about it. So he did. He proposed that the Bureau of Internal Revenue be taken out of politics; that appointments no longer be the plaything of political patronage; and that tax officials be put under Civil Service regulations. They would get their jobs on the basis of competitive examinations rather than political patronage.

Now, there is no way of ensuring that Civil Servants will be more honest than political appointees, but most of the tax officials who have been caught were, in fact, the recipients of political patronage.

The House of Representatives agreed overwhelmingly with Mr. Truman's proposal. The Citizens' Committee for the Hoover Report likewise agreed. Then it came up to the Senate. And if the Senate doesn't vote it down by a simple majority by a week from midnight tonight, that's what's going to happen.

Today the President sent a letter to Vice President Barkley, saying the Republicans in the Senate had raised a great cry about graft and corruption in the Government. The President wanted to know whether they really want to do something to assure clean, efficient government, or whether all their talk is pure politics. Mr. Truman thought the taxpayers would be interested in the Senate vote, because it would show whether they're concerned about political patronage or good public service.

The Senate Expenditures Committee has voted seven to five to reject the plan. Senator George, Democrat of Georgia, says the President is trying to shift the blame for tax scandals from the Administration to Congress, and eliminate the corruption issue in the upcoming presidential election. Senator Mundt, Republican of South Dakota, says the tax reform plan is a sort of deathbed repentance in the twilight of Democratic rule. Two Democratic Senators, Humphrey of Minnesota and Moody of Michigan, say the President's letter is further evidence of his determination to close every loophole to favoritism and corruption.

A House sub-committee had asked the Justice Department for a list of all the cases over the last six years which the Justice Department had failed to prosecute, or had returned to the agency which recommended the action. The President wrote another letter to the Chairman of that committee, saying "nothing doing." It would take the time of too many people, cost millions of dollars, and would be a "dragnet approach." This letter was sent to the chairman of the committee, Representative Chelf of Kentucky. He remarked: "Some have indicated that our committee is out on a fishing expedition." He thought the answer was supplied by an old Kentucky adage: "If you're gonna shoot ducks, you gotta go where the ducks is."

There will be a lot of shooting in the course of the next few months, mostly aimed at where the voters is.

But if you're seriously interested in this whole complex and unsavory business of corruption, influence-peddling, and how to make a fast buck while remaining within the law, I can suggest a book that is worth your time. It is well-documented and unsensational, except to the extent that facts can be sensational. Never having met the author, having no interest in the firm that published the book, I feel free to commend it. It was written by Blair Bowles. The title is: "How To Get Rich In Washington," and the sub-title is: "Rich Man's Division of the Welfare State". The opening sentences are these: "When nations mature, they grow tolerant of evil. They accept as a simple fact of life the irresponsibility of public officials who condone corruption and who play favorites as they administer the nation's laws. By this standard of maturity, the United States has grown up." Mr. Bowles pretty well proves it, too.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: The problem of patronage has been with us for a long time. Back in 1801 Jefferson said: "No duty the executive has to perform is so trying as to put the right man in the right place. Yet how are vacancies to be obtained when few die and none resign." Time hasn't changed Kin Hubbard's observation either. "Politics," he said, "make strange postmasters." He might have added tax collectors, too,

Good Night and Good Luck!

Monday - March 10 1952

This is the news:

The next move in Korea is up to the Communists. Our negotiators at Panmunjom have told the enemy: we want a showdown..their threats and intimidation will get them nowhere..they cannot succeed in their attempt to dictate the terms of an armistice. And we have had enough of their tactics; we demand that future negotiations be conducted on a dignified plane. There was no word from the Communist negotiators.

In today's air battles, our Sabrejet pilots shot down seven enemy Migs and damaged three others. There is no word of allied losses, if any.

And General Ridgeway's headquarters today released a report saying that the Soviet Union now furnishes nearly all of the arms used by the Chinese and North Korean communists. The report says these include modern weapons; not junk taken from Russian storehouses..but new guns, tanks and land mines. The report says nothing about who might be flying those Migs in North Korea.

The State Department today announced that we are RETALIATING [redacted] AGAINST [redacted] the restrictions placed upon our ~~ambassadors~~ Embassy officials in Moscow [redacted]. Beginning today, no Soviet diplomat can go more than 25 miles from New York or Washington without having first [redacted] received OFFICIAL [redacted] permission. (This does not affect Russian diplomats assigned to the United Nations.) Its estimated that today's order will affect 257 officials and their families, including Russian employes of Tass, the Soviet news agency, and the Amtorg Purchasing agency in New York. Other Atlantic pact countries are expected to take similar action. The French have restricted the Russians to within 25 miles of Paris..the British to within 25 miles of Hyde Park Corner.

The Supreme Court handed down some decisions today on Communist aliens and [redacted] lawyers for the convicted top leaders of the Communist party. In a 5 to 4 decision the court held that alien communist who are facing deportation, may be held without bail, if the Attorney General thinks they might imperil this country. The majority felt it is not an "arbitrary abuse of power" to refuse bail to such aliens. Justice Black, for the minority, calls the decision "a shocking disregard of the guarantees of the bill of rights."

The court also ruled--six to 2--THAT aliens may be deported on the grounds of past membership in the Communist party. The court said the due process clause of the Constiution does not shield the soldier drafted to fight the tide of Communism in foreign lands; it should not be used to protect aliens who have been Communists.

In a five to three decision the court upheld the contempt convictions of lawyers who served the top Communists in the Smith Act case. Judge Medina had sentenced them to terms of from one to six months. The lawyers claimed Judge Medina had no such power..because he waited until the trial was over. The Supreme Court majority disagreed. And the three minority decisions each criticized Judge Medina. [redacted] Justices Douglas and Frankfurter said that from the trial record one would have trouble deciding whether the lawyers conspired to drive the judge from the bench, or whether Judge Medina used his power to whipsaw the lawyers, tempt them, and create for himself the role of the persecuted. Justice Black said the record shows a constantly growing resentment against the lawyers by Judge Medina. He also feels that the majority decision may be "ominous for lawyers who are [redacted] obscure, and unpopular and defenders of unpopular persons or unorthodox cases."

[redacted]

Defense officials said tonight that the Army will seek an injunction in Cleveland tomorrow against striking engineers, firemen and conductors. They have snarled traffic on the New York Central railroad and in [redacted] the MIDWEST.

The White House says the President is going to interrupt his Key West vacation this week-end. He'll fly to Washington

Friday, spend the night there and then fly on to New York on Saturday to speak to 3-thousand teen-age school newspaper editors..the Columbia Scholastic Press Association. Reporters in Key West pressed for an explanation of why the President is going to speak to the young editors. They were told: Mr. Truman wants to speak to this "group of fine young people."

Today the President sent a letter to the Texas meeting of the National Farmers Union. He said: "the gains farmers have made could be lost if the next Administration were to follow the wrong agricultural policies." That's similar to what the President told farmers in the 1948 campaign.

In New York City today, one of the greatest manhunts in the city's history is underway: to find the person who murdered Arnold Shuster..the young man who first pointed out to the police Willie "The actor" Sutton. Mr. Shuster was buried today as his mother cried:"Why did they do this to him?" The City of New York is expected to post a 25-thousand dollar reward for the capture of the person who shot down Mr. Shuster on Saturday night..19 days after he gave the police the tip that caused Sutton's arrest.

In Cuba today, General Ful-jen--see-oh Batista is now in control of the government. He's appointed a provisional cabinet.. cancelled the June first presidential election, and announced that his only interest is to maintain law and order. He says he is a friend of the people and not of gangsters. Batista used to be Cuba's strong man; he was in control of the government from 1933 to 1943...overthrew three presidents, and made two others. Now he says he was "obliged to make a revolution" because of reports he received of President Prio planning what Batista calls "a phoney revolution." Reports from Havana says President Prio has fled to an unknwon destination.

In the state of New Hampshire the presidential primary campaigning has just about ended. Harold Stassen again charged that Senator Taft has been "wrong" on foreign policy for the past 12 years. And Mr. Stassen says he will carry his attack on Taft's foreign policy into the Wisconsin and Illinois primaries next month. My colleague Bill Downs has been following the New Hampshire campaign. On the eve of the nation's first primary, let's switch now to Bill Downs in Manchester, New Hampshire. Bill, what's going on up there tonight:

(4.30.. ending.. that's the way it looks here tonight, Ed.)

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Monday, March 10, 1952
7:45-8:00 p.m.

MURROW: ..... In the State of New Hampshire, the presidential primary campaigning has just about ended. Harold Stassen again charged that Senator Taft has been wrong on foreign policy for the past twelve years and Mr. Stassen says he will carry his attack on Taft's foreign policy into the Wisconsin and Illinois primaries next month.

My colleague, Bill Downs, has been following the New Hampshire campaign, on the eve of the nation's first primary. Let's switch now to Bill Downs in Manchester, New Hampshire.

Bill, what's going on up there tonight?

DOWNS: Well, what's going on up here in New Hampshire, Ed, is a little hard to explain, but to paraphrase the words of a master politician in England - never in recent history have so many ears been bent so far in so little time. For example, here at Station WFEA, in Manchester, every second of commercial time has been sold to one candidate or another and it's generally true of every radio station in the State. MacArthur backers have bought 45 minutes of radio time on a dozen New Hampshire stations to rebroadcast the General's farewell address to Congress. Senator Kefauver and the Eisenhower forces are holding last-minute rallies tonight. Political handbills have most post offices working a fourteen-hour day and, if they happen to miss you with the old handshake or the mails or on the radio, they chase you up and down the street with sound trucks extolling the virtues of the man who, - like hucksters selling watermelons. You want to know what's going on up here?

Well, we assembled some of the transcribed material that's been aimed at the eardrums of New Hampshire voters the past few days, and which is hitting them in an unprecedented barrage tonight. Harken to this, Ed, because they are the voices of the immediate futurefrom now until next November.

(Singing)

SPEAKER: A New Hampshire couple are reading the paper when he says:

VOICE: "Primary day's almost here."

WOMAN: "Made up your mind?"

VOICE: "Harold E. Stassen! He stands for honesty in government."

WOMAN: "Yes, that's one of his four planks."

VOICE: "Did you read this in the paper? It says under Truman there have been one murder, two suicides, nineteen convictions."

SPEAKER: This is your Eisenhower-for-President man-on-the-street and today we're talking to you from the parlor of one of Keene's leading citizens. She's Mrs. Emily Feather, on Ruxbury Street. Mrs. Feather is a past State President of the American Legion Auxiliary, and I'm sure you'd like to know why Mrs. Feather is for Eisenhower.

FEATHER: I believe that Mr. Eisenhower is a good leader as he has proven to us in our world affairs. His present job in Europe. I believe that the way .....

SPEAKER: The next voice you hear will be that of United States Senator Robert A. Taft.

TAFT: I've been asked to make a brief statement to the women of New Hampshire. I'm very happy to do this because I know the women have a great influence in the creation of a Republican community in this great State. The continually increasing part played by the women of America in our political and economic life cannot be ignored, even if one were foolishly inclined to do so. Indeed, the force and influeence of women .....

SPEAKER: The following is a paid political announcement. It's pretty hard to discount the fact that over sixty million people are gainfully employed in the United States today. This is the record of the Truman Administration. Harry S. Truman has given to the people of this country a courageous, realistic four years of service, not promises but facts. Retain competent leadership in Washington with your Democratic Party. This was a paid political announcement.

SPEAKER: Senator Kefauver, the people of New Hampshire would like to know your views on the future of our nation.

KEFAUVER: With all the discouraging developments daily in the news, I'm afraid many of us have a feeling of hopelessness about the future of America. I certainly do not! I don't think America is dying on the vine by any means.

DOWNS: Well, Granite Staters, Ed, agree that America isn't dying on the vine, but the presidential ambitions of a number of candidates may die on the vine according to the results of the primary voting here tomorrow. This is what makes this New Hampshire primary so deadly serious to the politicians for the New Hampshire voters who will attend town meetings in more than two hundred town halls up and down the State tomorrow there were other things, too, of a serious nature to be voted upon. Before they start marking the complicated primary ballot the town meetings will vote on the budget for the local school or like Nelson, New Hampshire, the big local issue is a hundred and fifty dollars for the fire department. The trees along Main Street are an issue in Anherst, whether or not to spend fife hundred dollars to preserve the community's ancient elms and Danville, New Hampshire, will vote to see how much of the parsonage funds the town will spend for preaching for the ensuing year.

How's it going to come out? Well, most of the voters ain't sayin' and if they ain't sayin' I ain't guessin'. That's the way it looks here in New Hampshire, Ed.

MURROW: Thank you, Bill Downs, for that light-hearted, but admirably impartial report from New Hampshire.

Ed.trans.-A.A.Cardiff (30)

Senator Taft,who was so recently in New Hampshire was in Texas today...He charged that Sec. Of State Acheson "with an assist from Senator Tom Connaly"..invited the communists into Korea.... When news of this attack reached Washinton Senator Connaly took the floor to belabour Senator Taft...said the Senator from Ohio was "willing to subordinate his integrity to grasp a few slimy votes"...his statement was outrageous,proposterous and untruthfull a frantic effort to capture the nomination.."...Senator Connely is of course trying to capture re election to the senate...this whole business of running for office seems to be getting fraticer and franticer....

~~Senator taft~~ in an article in US news and World report says he could whip up plenty of enthusiasm among the independent voters.. He thinks a poll of independent voters might show them interested in Eisenhower because he is a great general..or they might be for Robert Taylor beca se he is a great movie actor...~~He~~ Taft implies that Eisenhower if nominated would not conduct an effcetive campaign.....

Bill Downs report from New Hampshire reminded us of something said by Will Rogers about political campaigns...He said..I dont care how smart you are...If you say something you are liable to say something foolish..and the smarter you are and the longer you talk the more fool things you will say....Come to think of it he might not have been talking just about politicians...

good night and good luck....

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

MONDAY - MARCH 10, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The next move in Korea is up to the Communists. Our negotiators at Panmunjom have told the enemy: we want a showdown; their threats and intimidation will get them nowhere; they cannot succeed in their attempt to dictate the terms of an armistice. And we have had enough of their tactics; we demand that future negotiations be conducted on a dignified plane. There was no word from the Communist negotiators.

In today's air battles, our Sabrejet pilots shot down seven enemy MIGs and damaged three others. There is no word of allied losses, if any.

And General Ridgway's headquarters today released a report saying that the Soviet Union now furnishes nearly all of the arms used by the Chinese and North Korean communists. The report says these include modern weapons - not junk taken from Russian storehouses, but new guns, tanks and land mines. The report says nothing about who might be flying those MIGs in North Korea.

The State Department today announced that we are retaliating against the restrictions placed upon our Embassy officials in Moscow. Beginning today, no Soviet diplomat can go more than 25 miles from New York or Washington without having first received official permission. (This does not affect Russian diplomats assigne to the United Nations.) It's estimated that today's order will affect 257 officials and their families, including Russian employees of Tass, the Soviet news agency, and the Amtorg Purchasing agency in New York. Other Atlantic pact countries are expected to take similar action. The French have restricted the Russians to within 25 miles of Paris: the British to within 25 miles of Hyde Park Corner.

The Supreme Court handed down some decisions today on communist aliens, and lawyers for the convicted top leaders of the communist party. In a 5 to 4 decision the court held that alien communist who are facing deportation, may be held without bail, if the Attorney General thinks they might imperil this country.

The majority felt it is not an "arbitrary abuse of power" to refuse bail to such aliens. Justice Black, for the minority, calls the decision "a shocking disregard of the guarantees of the Bill of Rights."

The Court also ruled - six to two - that aliens may be deported on the grounds of past membership in the communist party. The Court said the due process clause of the Constitution does not shield the soldier drafted to fight the tide of communism in foreign lands; it should not be used to protect aliens who have been communists.

In a five to three decision, the Court upheld the contempt convictions of the top communists who served in the Smith Act case. Judge Medina had sentenced them to terms of from one to six months. The lawyers claimed Judge Medina had no such power because he waited until the trial was over. The Supreme Court majority disagreed. And the three minority decisions each criticized Judge Medina. Justices Douglas and Frankfurter said that from the trial record one would have trouble deciding whether the lawyers conspired to drive the judge from the bench, or whether Judge Medina used his power to whipsaw the lawyers, tempt them, and create for himself the role of the persecuted. Justice Black said the record shows a constantly growing resentment against the lawyers by Judge Medina. He also feels that the majority decision may be "ominous for lawyers who are obscure, and unpopular, and defenders of unpopular persons or unorthodox cases."

Defense officials said tonight that the Army will seek an injunction in Cleveland tomorrow against striking engineers, firemen and conductors. They have snarled traffic on the New York Central railroad and in the midwest.

The White House says the President is going to interrupt his Key West vacation this week-end. He'll fly to Washington, Friday, spend the night there and then fly on to New York on Saturday to speak to 3-thousand teen-age school newspaper editors: the Columbia Scholastic Press Association. Reporters in Key West pressed for an explanation of why the President is going to speak to the young editors. They were told: Mr. Truman wants to speak to this "group of fine young people."

Today the President sent a letter to the Texas meeting of the National Farmers Union. He said: "The gains farmers have made could be lost if the next Administration word to follow the wrong agricultural policies." That's similar to what the President told farmers in the 1948 campaign.

In New York City today, one of the greatest manhunts in the city's history is underway: to find the person who murdered Arnold Schuster - the young man who first pointed out to the police Willie "The Actor" Sutton. Mr. Schuster was buried today as his mother cried: "Why did they do this to him?" The City of New York is expected to post a 25-thousand dollar reward for the capture of the person who shot down Mr. Schuster on Saturday night - 19 days after he gave the police the tip that caused Sutton's arrest.

In Cuba today, General Fu-jen-see-oh Batista is now in control of the government. He's appointed a provisional cabinet, cancelled the June first presidential election, and announced that his only interest is to maintain law and order. He says he is a friend of the people, and not of gangsters. Batista used to be Cuba's strong man; he was in control of the government from 1933 to 1943 - overthrew three presidents, and made two others. Now he says he was "obliged to make a revolution" because of reports he received of President Prio planning what Batista calls "a phoney revolution." Reports from Havana says President Prio has fled to an unknown destination.

In the state of New Hampshire the presidential primary campaigning has just about ended. Harold Stassen again charged that Senator Taft has been "wrong" on foreign policy for the past 12 years. And Mr. Stassen says he will carry his attack on Taft's foreign policy into the Wisconsin and Illinois primaries next month. My colleague Bill Downs has been following the New Hampshire campaign. On the eve of the nation's first primary, let's switch now to Bill Downs in Manchester, New Hampshire. Bill, what's going on up there tonight:

DOWNS: Well, what's going on up here in New Hampshire, Ed, is a little hard to explain, but to paraphrase the words of a master politician in England - never in recent history have so many ears been bent so far in so little time. For example here at Station WFEA, in Manchester, every second of commercial time has been sold to one candidate or another and it's generally true of every radio station in the State. MacArthur backers have bought 45 minutes of radio time on a dozen New Hampshire stations to rebroadcast the General's farewell address to Congress. Senator Kefauver and the Eisenhower forces are holding last -minute rallies tonight. Political handbills have most post offices working a fourteen-hour day, and if they happen to miss you with the old handshake or the mails or on the radio, they chase you up and down the street with sound trucks extolling the virtues of the man who--; like hucksters selling watermelons. You want to know what's going on up here?

Well, we assembled some of the transcribed material that's been aimed at the eardrums of New Hampshire voters the past few days, and which is hitting them in an unprecedented barrage tonight. Harken to this, Ed, because they are the voice of the immediate future from now until next November.

SPEAKER: A New Hampshire couple are reading the paper when he says:

VOICE: "Primary day's almost here."

WOMAN: "Mad up your mind?"

VOICE: "Harold E. Stassen! He stands for honesty in government."

WOMAN: "Yes, that's one of his four planks."

VOICE: "Did you read this in the paper? It says under Truman, there have been one murder, two suicides, nineteen convictions."

SPEAKER: This is your Eisenhower-for-President man-on-the-street, and today we're talking to you from the parlor of one of Keen's leading citizens. She's Mrs. Emily Feather, on Ruxbury Street. Mrs. Feather is a past State President of the American Legion Auxiliary, and I'm sure you'd like to know why Mrs. Feather is for Eisenhower.

FEATHER: I believe that Mr. Eisenhower is a good leader as he has proven to us in our world affairs: his present job in Europe. I believe that the way.....

SPEAKER: The next voice you hear will be that of United States Senator Robert A. Taft.

TAFT: I've been asked to make a brief statement to the women of New Hampshire, I'm very happy to do this, because I know the women have a great influence in the creation of a Republican community in this great State. The continually increasing part played by the women of American in our political and economic life cannot be ignored, even if one were foolishly inclined to do so. Indeed, the force and influence of women.....

SPEAKER: The following is a paid political announcement. It's pretty hard to discount the fact that over sixty million people are gainfully employed in the United States today. This is the record of the Truman Administration. Harry S. Truman has given to the people of this country a courageous, realistic four years of service, not promises, but facts. Retain competent leadership in Washington with your Democratic Party. This was a paid political announcement.

SPEAKER: Senator Kefauver, the people of New Hampshire would like to know your views on the future of our nation.

KEFAUVER: With all the discouraging developments daily in the news, I'm afraid many of us have a feeling of hopelessness about the future of America. I certainly do not! I don't think America is dying on the vine by any means.

DOWNS: Well, Granite Staters, Ed, agree that American isn't "dying on the vine but the presidential ambitions of a number of candidates may die on the vine according to the results of the primary voting here tomorrow. This is what makes this New Hampshire primary so deadly serious to the politicians. For the New Hampshire voters who will attend town meetings in more than two hundred town halls up and down the State tomorrow, there were other things, too, of a serious nature to be voted upon. Before they start marking the complicated primary ballot, the town meetings will vote on the bidget for the local school or like Nelson, New Hampshire, the big local issue is a hundred and fifty dollars for the fire department. The trees along Main Street are an issue in Amherst, whether or not to spend five hundred dollars to preserve the community's ancient elms; and Danville, New Hampshire, will vote to see how much of the parsonage funds the town will spend for preaching for the ensuing year.

How's it going to come out? Well, most of the voters ain't sayin', and if they ain't sayin', I ain't guessin'. That's the way it looks here in New Hampshire, Ed.

MURROW: Thank you Bill Downs, for that light-hearted but admirably impartial report from New Hampshire.

Senator Taft, who was so recently in New Hampshire, was in Texas today. He charged that Secretary of State Acheson "with an assist from Senator Tom Connaly invited the communists into Korea. When news of this attack reached Washington, Senator Connaly took the floor to belabour Senator Taft: said the Senator from Ohio was "willing to subordinate his integrity to grasp a few slimy votes!..... ....His statement was outrageous, proposterous and untruthfull.....a frantic effort to capture the nomination." Senator Connaly is of course trying to capture re-elec to the Senate. This whole business of running for office seems to be getting franticer and franticer.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Bill Downs report from New Hampshire reminded us of something said by Will Rogers about political campaigns. He said: "I don't care how smart you are. If you say something, you are liable to say something foolish, and the smarter you are and the longer you talk, the more fool things you will say." Come to think of it, he might not have been talking just about politicians.

Good Night and Good Luck!

Tuesday March 11, 1952

This is the news:

We now have [redacted] SOME early returns from the presidential primary election in New Hampshire. In all some 100-thousand persons are believed to have voted in 297 voting districts.

We now have returns from 13 of those districts:

Among the Republicans the count at the moment, in the "popularity contest" show:

Eisenhower — 121

Taft — 90

Stassen — 22

MacArthur write-ins — 5

And in the Democratic race:

Truman — 14

Kefauver — 14

The political experts in New Hampshire do not expect any definite trend in the voting for another [redacted] FOUR hours.

In Washington today, Democratic Senator McMahon proposed formally that General Eisenhower be asked to return home to testify before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. The Senator made his request at a closed door meeting..it was not acted upon because not enough members were present. Reporters later asked Senator McMahon, a Truman supporter, if Ike's return might not open up political angles. The Senator said: "that might happen but I think the business of survival is more important than political matters." But Republican Senator Smith of New Jersey feels Ike's return would be a big political matter. He thinks it would put the general on the spot.. be politically embarrassing.. [redacted] have political overtones no matter how much denied. But in the House, Democratic Representative Mansfield of Montana says he will ask the House Foreign Affairs committee to call General Eisenhower home to testify on the MUTUAL [redacted] aid bill. He says: "We have a lot of questions to ask. And he can answer them." Some supporters of General Eisenhower for President have been anxious to have him return to this country.

The General is having some difficulties with his North Atlantic command. An Italian general, assigned to head the NATO land forces in southern Europe, is reported to have submitted his resignation. The Italian became involved in a row when the Greeks and Turks made it clear they did not relish having their troops serve under an Italian. The Greeks, especially, are bitter towards the Italians. A spokesman for Premier de Gasperi in Rome denies that the General has handed in his resignation. It is known that efforts are being made to make him change his mind..to have the Greek and Turkish forces serve under Admiral Carney, the American who commands southern Europe under NATO.

In France, Premier Pinay's new 17-man cabinet was approved today by the National Assembly. The Communists voted against the cabinet.. De Gaullists and Socialists did not vote. Premier Pinay has promised to suspend any move for a 15 per cent tax increase until he tries raising more money from tax dodgers.

The British Labor Party has decided on a compromise, rather than a showdown, between its two wings: the moderates under former Prime Minister Atlee and the left-wingers led by Aneurin Bevan. The Labor Party voted today to reimpose a standing order among its members which requires all 294 Laborites in the House of Commons to vote the way the majority of the members want to vote. Normally, failure to vote with the majority could mean expulsion from the party. Today's resolution leaves loopholes for Bevan.

The British people were told again today that they must pay higher prices..give up more imports..to help Britain out of her financial trouble. The government is going to reduce some of its subsidies. This will mean, among other things, that meat goes up five cents a pound..milk a penny a quart.. bread a penny and a half a loaf. The gasoline tax will be increased from 27 to 35 cents a gallon. The government has also decided to reduce its imports again and to impose a new 30 % excess profits tax. The chancellor of the excheqeuer, R.A. Butler, says Britain expects to have a billion dollar surplus, at the end of this fiscal year.. but her international trade position is still getting worse.

In London, Paris, and Washington, foreign office officials are studying the latest Moscow note that proposes a Big Four meeting to work out a settlement for all Germany.

In Korea today our fighter-bombers and jets carried out one of the most intensive attacks of the war. Melting snow had exposed a big camoflouged enemy supply base near Sinmak, 30 miles northwest of Panmunjom. As the snow melted our flyers could see that boxes of supplies had been stacked and covered with straw, to give the appearance of native huts. Today we sent our fighter-bombers over the area in an all-out attack. They hit the four-square mile area with 33-thousand gallons of jellied gasoline, and 300-thousand pounds of other explosives. The enemy called on his Migs from Manchuria to come down and attack our planes. Our sabrejets shot down three of them, probably a fourth and damaged five others. We are not told of any America losses. But dispatches mention an enemy "curtain of anti-aircraft fire."

There is no progress to report from the truce talks. General Ridegway, visiting in Korea, says we must have great patience.. the Communists see no relationship between facts and the words they use. The General also says that enemy charges that we are dropping germs over their cities is "completely, absolutely and categorically false." The Chinese radio at Peiping now says that a plague, previsously reported in North Korea, has spread to Northern Manchuria.

The striking railroad engineers, firemen and conductors have decided to go back to work on the New York Central. In Cleveland this afternoon, Federal Judge Freed issued a temporary injunction ordering the strikers back to work. A continuation or spread of the strike, he said, would "endanger national security and cause irreperable injury to the United States.

Also in Cleveland, William F. Donovan, district director for the C.I.O. steel workers, alerted some 35-thousand union members to prepare for a strike.. unless the union's wage dispute with the steel industry is settled by March 23.

In Washington, Newbold Morris, assigned by the President to seek out corruption in the government, testified before Senators inquiring into a surplus tanker deal. He said there was no "wrong-doing" in connection with his law firm's work on the negotiations. He says he may have received from 30 to 35-thousand dollars as his share of the firm's fees over a four year period. He denied that he had any White House aid in arranging the transactions. At one point Mr. Morris seemed to be losing his temper under persistent questioning by the Senators. He then glanced at a paper before him AND said: "I have a note here from my wife. It says: Keep your shirt on."

The House today voted to send a special committee abroad to continue its investigation of the Katyn Forest massacre.. in which thousands of Polish officers were killed in the last war. The committee was originally granted 20-thousand dollars for its work and now plans to ask for another 100-thousand.

F.B.I. Director J. Edgar Hoover today announced the arrest in Milwaukee of Andrew Robert Young. He is being held in connection with the million and a half dollar burglary of the home of L.V. Redfield in Reno.

And in Cuba, General Batista today proclaimed himself to be in charge of both the executive and legislative branches of the government. He said he is pledged to clean out "theiving and gangsterism in government."

Originating Hollywood —

MURROW: GOLDWYN REPRESENTS BEST HOLLYWOOD - UNDERSTAND MOVIE INDUSTRY IN TROUBLE. HOW ABOUT IT?

GOLDWYN: PEOPLE LINED UP AMERICAN IN PARIS -/ QUO VADIS -- GOOD PICTURES WILL DO GOOD BUSINESS, BAD ONES CAN BE SEEN ON TELEVISION FOR NOTHING.

MURROW: FUTURE RELATIONS BETWEEN MOVIES AND TELEVISION.

GOLDWYN: BASICALLY THE SAME MEDIUM - IN THE PUBLIC INTEREST FOR THEM TO WORK TOGETHER - WEDDING.

MURROW: ~~HOW LONG YOU BEEN IN HOLLYWOOD.~~

GOLDWYN: REMINISCES ~~ABOUT EARLY DAYS - HOLLYWOOD - ONE HOTEL - THREE PEOPLE, MOVIE THEATRE, ETC.~~

MURROW: NOW SHOOTING HANS CHRISTIAN ANDERSEN. 13 YEARS PREPARATION - FOUR MILLION INVESTMENT. - Your Money? DO YOU USUALLY STICK WITH A PROJECT SO LONG?

GOLDWYN: (NO REPLY INDICATED)

MURROW: DO YOU THINK IT WILL BE SUCCESSFUL?

GOLDWYN: ONLY THE PUBLIC WILL DECIDE.

MURROW: BEST YEARS - "UGLY DUCKLING" - "INCH WORM" - "THE KING'S NEW CLOTHES" - HOLLYWOOD PRESS AGENT ALL RIGHT.

Will Rogers once said this about the movies..I believe there is more real nerve and gameness,under the most discouraging ~~circumsta~~ circumstances in the picture business than any other place on earth..Its a heartbreaking racket, but they dont sit and tell you about it...Their heads are always up....I dont know about all the heads out here....but thats certainly true of Sam Goldwyn....

good night and good luck...

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Tuesday, March 11, 1952
7:45-8:00 P.M.

ANNC'R: (C O M M E R C I A L)

... And now, here is Edward R. Murrow.

MURROW: THIS IS THE NEWS:

We now have some early returns from the Presidential primary election in New Hampshire. In all, some 100,000 persons are believed to have voted in 297 voting districts. We now have returns from thirteen of those districts. Among the Republicans the count at the moment in the popularity contest shows General Eisenhower 121, Senator Taft 90, Stassen 22, MacArthur write-ins 5. And in the Democratic race, Truman 14, Senator Kefauver 14. Nothing very conclusive about any of that. The political experts in New Hampshire do not expect any definite trend in the voting for another four hours.

In Washington today Democratic Senator McMahon proposed formally that General Eisenhower be asked to return home to testify before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. The Senator made his request at a closed-door meeting. It was not acted upon, because not enough members were present. Reporters, later, asked Senator McMahon, a Truman supporter, if Ike's return might not open up political angles. The Senator said, "that might happen; but I think the business of survival is more important than political matters." But Republican Senator Smith of New Jersey feels Ike's return would be a big political matter. He thinks it would put the General on the spot, be politically embarrassing, have political overtones, no matter how much denied. But in the House, Democratic Representative Mansfield of Montana says he will ask the House Foreign Affairs Committee to call General Eisenhower home to testify on the Mutual Aid Bill. He says, "we have a lot of questions to ask - and he can answer them." Some supporters of General Eisenhower for President have been anxious to have him return to this country.

The General is having some difficulties with his North Atlantic Command. An Italian general assigned to head the NATO land forces in southern Europe is reported to have submitted his resignation. The Italian became involved in a row, when the Greeks and Turks made it clear they did not relish having their troops serve under an Italian. The Greeks especially, and for good reason, are bitter toward the Italians. A spokesman for Premier deGasperi in Rome denies that the general has handed in his resignation. It is known that efforts are being made to make him change his mind, to have the Greek and Turkish forces serve under Admiral Carney, the American who commands southern Europe under NATO.

In France, Premier Pinay's new 17-man cabinet was approved today by the National Assembly. The Communists voted against the cabinet. DeGaullists and Socialists did not vote. Premier Pinay has promised to suspend any move for a 15% tax increase until he tries raising more money from tax ~~ing~~ dodgers.

The British Labor Party has decided on a compromise, rather than a showdown between its two wings, the Moderates under former Prime Minister Attlee and the Left-Wingers led by Aneurin Bevan. The Labor Party voted today to reimpose a standing order among its members which requires all 297 Laborites in the House of Commons to vote the way the majority of the members want to vote. Normally, failure to vote with the majority could mean expulsion from the body. Today's resolution leaves loopholes for Aneurin Bevan.

The British people were told again today that they must pay higher prices, give up more imports, to help Britain out of her financial trouble. The Government is going to reduce some of its subsidies. This will mean, among other things, that meat goes up five cents a pound, milk a penny a quart, bread a penny and a half a loaf; the gasoline tax will be increased from 27 to ~~25~~ 35 cents a gallon. The Government has also decided to reduce its imports again and to impose a new 30% excess profits tax. The Chancellor of the Exchequer, R. A. Butler, says Britain expects to have a billion-dollar surplus at the end of this fiscal year. But her international trade position is still getting worse.

In London, Paris and Washington, Foreign Office officials are studying the latest Moscow note that proposes a Big Four meeting to work out a settlement for all Germany.

In Korea today our fighter bombers and jets carried out one of the most intensive attacks of the war. Melting snow had exposed a big camouflaged enemy supply base near Sinmak, thirty miles northwest of Panmunjom. As the snow melted, our fliers could see that boxes of supplies had been stacked and covered with straw, to give the appearance of native huts. Today we sent our fighter bombers over the area in an all-out attack. They hit the four-square-mile area with 33,000 gallons of jellied gasoline and 300,000 pounds of explosives. The enemy called on his MIGs from Manchuria to come down and attack our planes. Our Sabre jets shot down three of them, probably a fourth and damaged five others. We are not told of any American losses, but dispatches mention an enemy "curtain of anti-aircraft fire."

There is no progress to report from the truce talks. General Ridgway, visiting in Korea, says we must have great patience. The Communists see no relationship between facts and the words they use. The General also says that enemy charges that we are dropping germs over their cities is completely, absolutely and categorically false. The Chinese radio at Peiping now says that a plague, previously reported in North Korea, has spread to northern Manchuria.

The striking railroad engineers, firemen and conductors have decided to go back to work on the New York Central. In Cleveland this afternoon, Federal Judge Freed issued a temporary injunction, ordering the strikers back to work. A continuation or spread of the strike, he said, would endanger national security and cause irreparable injury to the United States.

Also in Cleveland, William F. Donovan, District Director for the CIO Steel Workers, alerted some 35,000 union members to prepare for a strike, unless the union's wage dispute with the steel industry is settled by March 23.

In Washington, Newbold Morris, assigned by the President to seek out corruption in the Government, testified before Senators inquiring into a surplus tanker deal. He said there was no wrongdoing in connection with his law firm's work on the negotiations. He says he may have received from thirty to thirty-five thousand dollars as his share of the firm's fees over a four-year period. He denied that he had any White House aid in arranging the transactions. At one point Mr. Morris seemed to be losing his temper under persistent questioning by the Senators. He then glanced at a paper before him and said, "I have a note here from my wife. It says, 'keep your shirt on'."

The House today voted to send a special committee abroad to continue its investigation of the Katyn Forest massacre, in which thousands of Polish officers were killed in the last war. The committee was originally granted $20,000 for its work and now plans to ask for another $100,000.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover today announced the arrest in Milwaukee of Andrew Robert Young. He is being held in connection with the million-and-a-half-dollar burglary of the home of L. V. Redfield in Reno.

And in Cuba, General Batista today proclaimed himself to be in charge of both the Executive and Legislative branches of the government. He said he is pledged to clean out thieving and gangsterism in the government.

This program is originating in Hollywood. And for many of us the name Sam Goldwyn is associated with some of the best pictures produced in Hollywood.

Sam, I understand, we hear in New York that the movie industry is in trouble. How about it?

GOLDWYN: Well, you live in New York. Have you been around at the Radio City lately? Saw the crowds are lining up to see "The American in Paris"?

Have you seen "The Greatest Show on Earth"? Have you seen "Streetcar Named Desire", "Viva Zipata", "Place in the Sun", or "Quo Vadis"? Does it look like the movie industry is going on its back?

MURROW: Well, Sam, you're saying that good pictures will do good business, is that right?

GOLDWYN: Good pictures never fail. They cure all evils in the picture business.

MURROW: What about bad pictures?

GOLDWYN: They just don't come and see it. They stay at home and see it on television.

MURROW: (laughs) Well, Mr. Goldwyn, how do you see the future between television and the movie industry?

GOLDWYN: I see a wedding of the two. For the good of the public they must get together.

MURROW: And basically you would contend that they're the same medium and one projects on a big screen and one on a small one?

GOLDWYN: And, furthermore, I believe that the time is coming very soon when they'll show good pictures on television, but they'll have to pay for it just ...

(M O R E)

and, furthermore, I believe that the time is coming very soon when they'll show good pictures on television, but they'll have to pay for it just the same as they do in the theatre by dropping a coin in the slot machine.

MURROW: Well, that's an interesting idea. How soon would you expect that to happen, Mr. Goldwyn?

GOLDWYN: I expect it's about two or three years off.

MURROW: Two or three years off when the television viewer can put a coin in a box and see a good picture rather than the bad ones, as you say, that he now sees?

GOLDWYN: That's right!

MURROW: Well, now, Mr. Goldwyn, you are now shooting "Hans Christian Andersen" and you've given me the privilege of watching the shooting and some of the rushes in the course of the last couple of days. I understand that that has been some thirteen years, on and off, that you have been working on "Hans Christian Andersen," and that it represents an investment of about four million dollars of your money. Tell me this. Do you usually stick with a project this long, thirteen years?

GOLDWYN: No! But I'm in love with the subject and the reason that it has taken me so many years to start this picture is because I really haven't had the right script as yet until recently.

MURROW: But now you think you have it?

GOLDWYN: I believe I have.

MURROW: You certainly have some wonderful music, too, written by Frank Lesser. Tell me, Mr. Goldwyn, do you think this ... you've had successes and a relatively small number of failures, I believe ... do you think this this one will be a success?

GOLDWYN: Oh, I've had my share of failures, all right. The public can ... will decide if this one is a success or not. It's up to them. They usually decide.

MURROW: When is the most worrying time in producing a picture? When ... when do you have the most tension and worry?

GOLDWYN: From the time I start until I finish and then keeps on for another six months till the public decides whether I have a success or a failure.

MURROW: It takes about six months, that is, this business of sneak previews giving you a precise measure means nothing?

GOLDWYN: They're all your friends. They see the picture for nothing and they all ... always like it.

MURROW: And if you decide that a picture is good, then sometimes the public doesn't agree with you, is that right?

GOLDWYN: Many, many cas ... times they have disagreed with ... only too often have they disagreed.

MURROW: Well, Mr. Goldwyn, what picture ... perhaps this is an indiscreet question ... what picture are you going to make next?

GOLDWYN: Well, let me see if we can get this one finished first. (laughter)

MURROW: I suppose that about this time in any picture you begin to feel that you may never want to make another one.

GOLDWYN: Well, I wouldn't say that. I love my business too much.

MURROW: Well, Mr. Goldwyn, I ... you gave me a chance today to look at the ugly duckling, and the inch worm, and the king's new clothes, to listen to some of this magnificent music, and to see some of the rushes of "Hans Christian Andersen." I am grateful for the opportunity. I know nothing about movies, but I am persuaded that here is one member of the public who will agree that you have got a success and, if that makes me a Hollywood press agent, all right!

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "word for today."

ANNOUNCER: (Commercial)

That's my word for today and here's Mr. Murrow with his "word for today."

MURROW: Will Rogers once said this about the movies. "I-believe that there is more real nerve and gameness under the most discouraging circumstances in the picture business than any other place on earth. It's a heart-breaking racket, but they don't sit around and tell you about it. Their heads are always up." I don't know about all the heads out here, but that's certainly true of Sam Goldwyn.

Good night ... and good luck!

ANNOUNCER: (Commercial)

Listen to Murrow tomorrow!

This is the CBS RADIO NETWORK

Ed.trans.-E.Scheiner
A.A.Cardiff

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

TUESDAY - MARCH 11, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

We now have some early returns from the Presidential primary election in New Hampshire. In all, some 100,000 persons are believed to have voted in 297 voting districts. We now have returns from thirteen of those districts. Among the Republicans the count at the moment in the popularity contest shows General Eisenhower 121, Senator Taft 90, Stassen 22, MacArthur write-ins 5. And in the Democratic race, Truman 14, Senator Kefauver 14. Nothing very conclusive about any of that. The political experts in New Hampshire do not expect any definite trend in the voting for another four hours.

In Washington today Democratic Senator McMahon proposed formally that General Eisenhower be asked to return home to testify before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. The Senator made his request at a closed-door meeting. It was not acted upon, because not enough members were present. Reporters, later, asked Senator McMahon, a Truman supporter, if Ike's return might not open up political angles. The Senator said: "That might happen; but I think the business of survival is more important than political matters." But Republican Senator Smith of New Jersey feels Ike's return would be a big political matter. He thinks it would put the General on the spot, be politically embarrassing, have political overtones, no matter how much denied. But in the House, Democratic Representative Mansfield of Montana says he will ask the House Foreign Affairs Committee to call General Eisenhower home to testify on the Mutual Aid Bill. He says: "We have a lot of questions to ask - and he can answer them." Some supporters of General Eisenhower for President have been anxious to have him return to this country.

The General is having some difficulties with his North Atlantic Command. An Italian general assigned to head the NATO land forces in southern Europe is reported to have submitted his resignation. The Italian became involved in a row, when the Greeks and Turks mad it clear they did not relish having their troops serve under an Italian. The Greeks especially, and for good reason, are bitter toward the Italians. A spokesman for Premier de Gasperi in Rome denies that the general has handed in his resignation. It is known that efforts are being made to make him change his mind, to have the Greek and Turkish forces serve under Admiral Carney, the American who commands southern Europe under NATO.

In France, Premier Pinay's new 17-man cabinet was approved today by the National Assembly. The Communists voted against the cabinet. De Gaullists and Socialists did not vote. Premier Pinay has promised to suspend any move for a 15 per cent tax increase until he tries raising more money from tax dodgers.

The British Labor Party has decided on a compromise, rather than a showdown between its two wings, the Moderates under former Prime Minister Attlee and the Left-Wingers led by Aneurin Bevan. The Labor Party voted today to reimpose a standing order among its members which requires all 297 Laborites in the House of Commons to vote the way the majority of the members want to vote. Normally, failure to vote with the majority could mean expulsion from the body. Today's resolution leaves loopholes for Aneurin Bevan.

The British people were told again today that they must pay higher prices, give up more imports, to help Britain out of her financial trouble. The Government is going to reduce some of its subsidies. This will mean, among other things, that meat goesup five cents a pound, milk a penny a quart, bread a penny and a half a loaf; the gasoline tax will be increased from 27 to 35 cents a gallon. The Government has also decided to reduce its imports again and to impose a new 30 per cent excess profits tax. The Chancellor of the Exchequer, R. A. Butler, says Britain expects to have a billion-dollar surplus at the end of this fiscal year. But her international trade position is still getting worse.

In London, Paris and Washington, Foreign Office officials are studying the latest Moscow note that proposes a Big Four meeting to work out a settlement for all Germany.

In Korea today our fighter bombers and jets carried out one of the most intensive attacks of the war. Melting snow had exposed a big camouflaged enemy supply base near Sinmak, thirty miles northwest of Panmunjom. As the snow melted, our fliers could see that boxes of supplies had been stacked and covered with straw, to give the appearance of native huts. Today we sent our fighter bombers over the area in an all-out attack. They hit the four-square-mile area with 33,000 gallons of jellied gasoline and 300,000 pounds of explosives. The enemy called on his MIGs from Manchuria to come down and attack our planes. Our Sabre Jets shot down three of them, probably a fourth and damaged five others. We are not told of any American losses, but dispatches mention an enemy "curtain of anti-aircraft fire."

There is no progress to report from the truce talks. General Ridgway, visiting in Korea, says we must have great patience. The Communists see no relationship between facts and the words they use. The General also says that enemy changes that we are dropping germs over their cities is completely, absolutely and categorically false. TheChinese radio at Peiping now says that a plague, previously reported in North Korea, has spread to northern Manchuria.

The striking railroad engineers, firemen and conductors have decided to go back to work on the New York Central. In Cleveland this afternoon, Federal Judge Freed issued a temporary injunction, ordering the strikers back to work. A continuation or spread of the strike, he said, would endanger national security and cause irreparable injury to the United States.

Also in Clevelnad, William F. Donovan, District Director for the CIO Steel Workers, alerted some 35,000 union members to prepare for a strike, unless the union's wage dispute with the steel industry is settled by March 23.

In Washington, Newbold Morris, assigned by the President to seek out corruption in the Government, testified before Senators inquiring into a surplus tanker deal. He said there was no wrongdoing in connection with his law firm's work on the negotiations. He says he may have received from thirty to thirty-five thousand dollars as his share of the firm's fees over a four-year period. He denied that he had any White House aid in arranging the transactions. At one point Mr. Morris seemed to be losing his temper under persistent questioning by the Senators.

He then glanced at a paper before him and said: "I have a note here from my wife. It says: 'Keep your shirt on'."

The House today voted to send a special committee abroad to continue its investigation of the Katyn Forest massacre, in which thousands of Polish officers were killed in the last war. The committee was originally granted 20,000 dollars for its work and now plans to ask for another 100,000 dollars.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover today announced the arrest in Milwaukee of Andrew Robert Young. He is being held in connection with the million-and-a-half-dollar burglary of the home of L. V. Redfield in Reno.

And in Cuba, General Batista today proclaimed himself to be in charge of both the Executive and Legislative branches of the government. He said he is pledged to clean out thieving and gangsterism in the government.

This program is originating in Hollywood. And for many of us, the name of Sam Goldwyn is associated with some of the best pictures produced in Hollywood. Sam, I understand we hear in New York that the movie industry is in trouble. How about it?

GOLDWYN: Well, you live in New York. Have you been around at the Radio City lately? Saw the crowds are lining up to see "The American in Paris"? Have you seen "The Greatest Show on Earth"? Have you seen "Streetcar Named Desire", "Viva Zipata", "Place in the Sun", or "Quo Vadis"? Does it look like the movie industry is goin on its back?

MURROW: Well, Sam, you're saying that good pictures will do good business: is that right?

GOLDWYN: Good pictures never fail. They cure all evils in the picture business.

MURROW: What about bad pictures?

GOLDWYN: They just don't come and see it. They stay at home and see it on televisic MURROW: Well, Mr. Goldwyn, how do you see the future between television and the movie industry?

GOLDWYN: I see a wedding of the two. For the good of the public, they must get together.

MURROW: And basically you would contend that they're the same medium and one projects on a big screen and one on a small one?

GOLDWYN: And, furthermore, I believe that the time is coming very soon when they'll show good pictures on television, but they 'll have to pay for it..... .....furthermore, I believe that the time is coming very soon when they'll show good pictures on television, but they'll have to pay for it just the same as they do in the theatre by dropping a coin in the slot machine.

MURROW: Well, that's an interesting idea. How soon would you expect that to happen, Mr. Goldwyn?

GOLDWYN: I expect it's about two or three years off.

MURROW: Two or three years off when the television viewer can put a coin in a box and see a good picture rather than the bad ones, as you say, that he now sees?

GOLDWYN: That's right.

MURROW: Well now, Mr. Goldwyn, you are now shooting "Hans Christian Andersen" and you've given me the privilege of watching the shooting and some of the rushes in the course of the last couple of days. I understand that that has been some thirteen years, on and off, that you have been working on "Hans Christian Andersen", and that it represents an investment of about four million dollars of your money. Tell me this. Do you usually stick with a project this long - thirteen years?

GOLDWYN: No! But I'm in love with the subject and the reason that it has taken me so many years to start this picutre is because I really haven't had the right script as yet until recently.

MURROW: But now you think you have it?

GOLDWYN: T believe I have.

MURROW: You certainly have some wonderful music, too, written by Frank Lesser. Tell me, Mr. Goldwyn, do you think this.....you've had successes and a relatively small number of failures, I believe.....do you think this one will be a success?

GOLDWYN: Oh, I've had my share of failures, all right. The public can...will decide if this one is a success or not. It's up to them. They usually decide.

MURROW: When is the most worrying time in producing a picture? When do you have the most tension and worry?

GOLDWYN: From the time I start until I finish and then keeps on for another six months till the public decides whether I have a success or a failure.

MURROW: It takes about six months, that is, this business of sneak previews giving you a precise measure means nothing?

GOLDWYN: They're all your friends. They see the picture for nothing and they all always like it.

MURROW: And if you decide that apicture is good, then sometimes the public doesn't agree with you, is that right?

GOLDWYN: Many, many times they have disagreed with us: only too often have they disagreed.

MURROW: Well, Mr. Goldwyn, what picture....perhaps this is an indiscreet question .....what picture are you going to make next?

GOLDWYN: Well, let me see if we can get this one finished first.

MURROW: I suppose that about this time in any picture you begin to feel that you may never want to make another one.

GOLDWYN: Well, I wouldn't say that. I love my business too much.

MURROW: Well, Mr. Goldwyn, I.....you gave me a chance today to look at the ugly duckling, and the inch worm, andthe king's new clothes, to listen to some of this magnificent music, and to see some of the rushes of "Hans Christian Andersen." I am grateful for the opportunity. I know nothing about movies, but I am persuaded that here is one member of the public who will agree that you have got a success and, if that makes me a Hollywood Press agent, all right!

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Will Rogers once said this about the movies. "I believe that there is more real nerve and gameness under the most discouraging circumstances in the picture business than any other place on earth. It's a heart-breaking racket, but they don't sit around and tell you about it. Their heads are always up." I don't know about all the heads out here, but that's certainly true of Sam Goldwyn.

Good Night and Good Luck!

Wednesday - March 12, 1952

This is the news:

General Eisenhower and Senator Kefauver scored a clean sweep of the New Hampshire Republican and Democratic delagtes to the political conventions in ~~June~~ July. General Eisenhower received 46-thousand votes to 36-thousand for Senator Taft. Harold Stassen received 66-hundred votes, and almost half that many voters wrote-in the name of General MacArthur. In the Democratic race, Senator Kefauver, in addition to winning all ~~nine~~ 12 convention delegates, got 20-thousand votes. President Truman received 16-thousand votes. Each of the candidates has his view on what this all means. I'd like to review their opinions, and some others, in a few moments.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee today postponed again a vote on the question of recalling General Eisenhower to testify on the President's request for almost 8-billions dollars for foreign aid. And the General, in Paris, made it clear he does not plan to return to Washington soon. He said when he is ready to make his report on Shape headquarters and the North Atlantic forces, he will do it from Paris./ And if any congressional committee wants personal testimony, General Eisenhower plans to send his chief of staff, General Gruenther to Washington.

Secretary of Agriculture Brannan charged today that Allan Kline, the president of the American Farm Bureau Federation "has promised to deliver the farm vote to Taft."/ The Secretary said Republican Senator Williams of Delaware has been attempting to destroy the farm program for several years.

In Korea today our Sabrejets fought enemy Migs for a third successive day. We destroyed four of them..bringing the total for the week to 15. There is no word on how our planes have made out in these battles./ The ground war was relatively quiet again today. And at the truce talks, the enemy negotiaors toned down their statements..there were no threats..and no progress./ The Defense Departments says we suffered another 160 casualties in Korea last week: 45 of them dead, two missing, the rest wounded. The total list now contains 106,458 names.

A veteran British armored commander.. Colonel Sir William Lowther..says the American tanks in Korea "are made for Hollywood, not for fighting." He told the men who make Britain's Centurian tank that the rate of exchange in Korea is two Patton tanks for one Centurian..."its time the people at home realized the truth..American tanks are no good." But a House armed services subcommittee says our medium tanks are superior to any in the world. The committee investigated our tank building program in the fall of 1950, soon after the Korean war started. Today it released some parts of its report. It ~~said it~~ The Committee had been so favorably impressed with the Patton tank that it recommended against an army plan to develop a new light tank.

Newbold Morris, the man selected to expose corruption in the government, told Senator McCarthy today:"You've knocked off a lot of characters, but you're not going to knock me off." Mr. Morris, in an outburst rarely seen in a Congressional hearing room, was being questioned on his law firms participation in an oil tanker deal. Senator McCarthy hadcharged that Mr. Morris was either the greatest dope or the greatest dupe of all time.. that he might have been the real operating head of an organization that made "profits soaked in blood".. a reference to the fact that the tankers had been used to carry oil to Communist China. Mr. Morris, very angry, said: he had never been a dummy for any organization. He said Senator Mc Crathy "went after me like a dog.. he is not a gentlemen. He said McCarthy's business is "character destruction. He charged that McCarthy and Senators Mundt and Nixon were unfair. He told all three that in the past three years in Washington they have created an atmospehere so vile that people have lost confidence in the government. He said: no man with red blood in his veins could take the insinuations and innuendoes that have come from what he called "the diseased minds" in the Senate chamber.

Later Senator Nixon issued a statement saying that Mr. Morris has been: flippant, rude, contemptuous, smart-aleck and both violent and childish. He said the Morris testimony revealed a basic emotional instability and a lack of mature judgment. Senator Nixon said he hopes the President will be able to find someone better qualified to take over the job of seeking out corruption in the government.

The Senate Internal Security Committee today heard Professor John Fairbank of Harvard swear that Louis Budenz, the former Communist editor, lied when he called Fairbank a Communist. Budenz had said he knew this from "official reports." Professor Fairbank said it is not true. Senator Smith said "some instrumentality may have to be found to tell which man is telling the truth."

The Defense Department announced today that the Boeing Boeing airplane Company of Seattle is working on an airplane that would be run on atomic energy. Presumably Boeing is just making the frame for the plane. Last December it was announced that Pratt and Whitney had been awarded a contract to develop an atomic aircraft engine. The Defense departments says Boeing and Pratt and Whitney are working in "close cooperation."

The magazine Aviation Age reports that the Soviet Union now has about 85 aircraft factories and more than 25 engine plants. The magazine says it received its information "from foreign sources." It reports that the Russians probably produced 22-thousand airplanes last year, half of them fighters.

Admiral John B. Moss said today he thought he was testifying in secret yesterday when he told a Congressional committee that the navy has an air-to-air guided missile that can destroy an enemy plane three miles away.

Secretary of State Acheson told reporters today that we will soon start negotiations with the Franco government for the use of military bases in Spain. Mr. Acheson said we want the use of both air and naval bases. The negotiations will involve these bases "and also the use of loo-million dollars already voted by Congress ~~to~~ for aid to Spain. Mr. Acheson refused to comment on Russia's new proposal for a Big Four conference on the unification of Germany. [redacted]

The allied commissioners in western Germany and Chancellor Adenauer said today that the peace settlement between the western powers and Germany is nearing completion.

The North Atlantic Treaty organization tonight has a new secretary general. He is General Lord Hastings Lionel Ismay.. one of Prime Minister Churchill's closest advisers. Lord Ismay, who has been a soldier for 41 of his 64 years, took the job after three others had turned it down. He agreed to it only after prodding from the Prime Minister. In this new position, Lord

Ismay will now be in charge of the political, economic and financial side of the NATO organization. He has been serving as Mr. Churchill's secretary of state for Commonwealth affairs since the Conservative government returned to power last October.

British Laborites today bitterly attacked the Conservative government for its decision to cut subsidies on foods. The Daily Herald, Labor paper, says the new budget is bad and unjust because it ends the Labor government's "fair shares for all program" in favor of incentives for increased production.

In Cuba today, the former president, Carolos Prio Socarras, sent a letter to newspapers saying he was sure that Batista, the man who threw him out, will not long remain in office. Prio wrote: "There is on you, Batista, the immense responsibility of your treason. He said he was confident the country would not "remain long with a military boot on its neck."

a

Throughout the nation tonight, and in many political and editorial offices overseas, people who are experts in such matters are trying to figure out the "significance".. of yesterday's New Hampshire race./The candidates, winners and losers, have made their statements. General Eisenhower, returning to Paris from a quick trip to Germany, told reporters:"This has been a good day. I'm very deeply touched and more than that deeply moved."He refused to say whether he plans to return to this country at this time. Senator Taft, campaigning again in Texas, told reporters he was "a little disappointed" in his showing; he looks forward to a different result in the Wisconsin primary on April first, the Illinois primary on April 8th./Harold Stassen says he's pleased by the size of his vote;(it was bigger than he expected.) In the democratic field, Senator Kefauver interprets his New Hampzhire victory to mean, that the people want new ideas.. new faces.. and aggressive action on the Fair Deal program..which he supports.

At the White House, Secretary Joe Short says the New Hampshire returns will not affect the President's eventual decision on whether he should or should not run again. So much for the candidates. Now to the experts and supporters, each with his own angle.

Senator Duff, a major Eisenhower supporter, thinks New Hampshire is a "magnificent victory" for the general. But Taft headquarters says: no.. the Eisenhower backers have little to cheer about.

Senator Duff says it proves that the General enjoys "fabulous popularity with the people." But Carroll Reece, in the Taft camp, says the same figures show that Ike does not have the pulling-power attributed to him by his backers.

Governor Dewey, an Eisenhower supporter, calls it a great victory for America. But Senator Brewster, a Taft supporter, says the election was "a stand-off."

Dave Ingalls, the Taft campaign manager, blames the Senator's defeat on the fact that he didn spend enough time campaigning in New Hampshire. And Senator Connally, who objects to the way the Taft has been campaigning in Texas, says the results mean that Taft's statements on foreign policy have been repudiated.

Governor Adams of New Hampshire says : its a clear cut call to duty for Eisenhower. But Senator Brewster says: its was just a "party machine" victory. Brewster says Taft will do much better in the state's west of the Alleghenies where the "organizations" are largely with Taft. And Taft headquarters says that in New Hampshire, the Eisenhower supporters had the "machine.." had every natural political advtange.

Senator Duff thinks Ike's victory "was far beyond what was thought possible." But in Paris the newspaper Franc Soir.. making its contribution..says the General's margin was much less than foreseen by his partisans.

Republican Senator Carlson, in the Eisenhower camp, says New Hampshire proves that the voters want a man like Ike. Taft headquarters says Senator Taft showed remarkable strength by carrying Manchester, the state's biggest city, by one thousand votes.

d

Senator Duff says only the old guard and professional political manipulators stand between Eisenhower and a Republican victory in November. Taft headquarters says New Hampshire was General Ike's strongest state.

The comments on the Democratic result are equally partisan. Senator Russell, himself a candidate for the Democratic nomination, believes the President lost many votes when he referred to the primary as "eyewash." Alf Landon, himself once a Republican presidential candidate, thinks it was a "kick in the pants" for Truman. But Senator Kefauver, the winner, says it was not a repudiation of Truman policies..which he supports. On the other hand Republican Senator Martin of Pennsylvania says:"it was a complete repudiation of Trumanism."

e

Democratic National Chairman McKinney is happy because of the big Democratic vote in New Hampshire and because it was a clean campaign, in the Democratic field. And one Democrat mentioned as a possible presidential candidate refused to give reporters his views on what the New Hampshire primary proved. Governor Stevenson of Illinois said "I cannot comment because I do not understand the implications of the vote."

Well, these reactions, conclusions and contradictions make the confusion almost complete. Seldom have so few votes produced so many opinions. This reporter is unable to draw any conclusions, profound or otherwise, from the New Hampshire voting. The whole thing will probably be forgotten long before the convention meets in July.

We were unable to reach any conclusions about the results in New Hampshire...Most of the interpretations you have seen are based upon partisanship...Some say..with Henderson...A little stone can overturn a great cart,a mouse can put the finishing touches to a castle wall...and others with Cervantes...Dont lose heart.. Whats lost today, may be won tomorrow..

good night and good luck

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

WEDNESDAY - MARCH 12, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

General Eisenhower and Senator Kefauver scored a clean sweep of the New Hampshire Republican and Democratic delegates to the political conventions in July. General Eisenhower received forty-six thousand votes to thirty-six thousand for Senator Taft. Harold Stassen received sixty-six hundred votes and almost half that many voters wrote in the name of General MacArthur.

In the Democratic race, Senator Kefauver, in addition to winning all twelve convention delegates, got twenty thousand votes. President Truman received sixteen thousand votes. Each of the candidates has his view on what this all means I'd like to review their opinions and some others in a few moments.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee today postponed again a vote on the question of recalling General Eisenhower to testify on the President's request for almost eight billion dollars for foreign aid and the General, in Paris, made it clear he does not plan to return to Washington soon. He said when he is ready to make his report on SHAPE Headquarters and the North Atlantic forces, he will do it from Paris and, if any congressional testimony wants personal testimony, General Eisenhower plans to send his chief-of-staff, General Gruenther, to Washington.

Secretary of Agriculture Brannan charged today the Allen Klein, the President of the American Farm Bureau Federation, has promised to deliver the farm vote to Taft. The Secretary said Republican Senator Williams of Delaware has been attempting to destroy the farm program for several years.

In Korea today, our Sabre Jets fought enemy MIGs for a third successive day. We destroyed four of them, bringing the total for the week to fifteen. There is no word on how our planes have made out in these battles.

The ground war was relatively quiet again today and at the truce talks the enemy negotiators toned down their statements. There were no threats and no progress.

The Defense Department says we suffered another one hundred and sixty casualties in Korea last week; forty-five of them dead, two missing, the rest wounded. The total list now contains one hundred and six thousand, four hundred and fifty-eight names.

A veteran British Armored Commander, Colonel Sir William Lowther, says the American tanks in Korea are made for Hollywood, not for fighting. He told the men who make Britain's Centurian Tank that the rate of exchange in Korea is two Patton Tanks for one Centurian. It's the time the people at home realized the truth - American tanks are no good; but a House Armed Services sub-Committee says our medium tanks are superior to any in the world. The Committee investigated our tank-building program in the fall of 1950, soon after the Korean war started. Today, it released some part of its report. The Committee had been so favorably impressed with the Patton Tank that it recommended against an Army plan to develop a new light tank.

Newbold Morris, the man selected to expose corruption in the Government, told Senator McCarthy today: "You've knocked off alot of characters, but you're not going to knock me off." Mr. Morris, in an outburst rarely seen in a congressional hearing room, was being questioned on his law firm's participation in an oil tanker deal. Senator McCarthy had charged that Mr. Morris was either the greatest dope or the greatest dupe of all time. He said that he might have been the real operating head of an organization that made profits soaked in blood,(a reference to the fact that the tankers had been used to carry oil to Communist China. Mr. Morris, very angry, said he had never been a dummy for any organization. He said: "Senator McCarthy went after me like a dog. He is not a gentleman." He said McCarthy's business is character destruction. He charged that McCarthy and Senators Mundt and Nixon, were unfair. He told all three that in the past years in Washington they have created an atmosphere so vile that people have lost confidence in the Government. He said: "No man with red blood in his veins could take the insinuations and innuendoes that have come from what he called "the diseased minds" in the Senate Chamber. Later, Senator Nixon issued a statement saying that Mr. Morris has been flippant, rude, contemptuous, smart-alec, and both violent and childish. He said the Morris testimony revealed a basic emotional instability and a lack of mature judgment. Senator Nixon said he hopes the Preside will be able to find someone better qualified to take over the job of seeking out corruption in the Government.

The Senate Internal Security Committee today heard Professor John Fairbank, of Harvard, swear that Louis Budenz, the former Communist editor, lied when he called Fairbank a Communist. Budenz had said he knew this from official reports. Professor Fairbank said it is not true. Senator Smith said some instrumentality may have to be found to tell which man is telling the truth.

The Defense Department announced today that the Boeing Airplane Company, of Seattle, is working on an airplane that will be run on atomic energy. Presumably, Boeing is just making the frame for the plane. Last December, it was announced that Pratt & Whitney had been awarded a contract to develop an atomic aircraft engine. The Defense Department says Boeing and Pratt & Whitney are working in close cooperation.

The magazine, "Aviation Age", reports that the Soviet Union how has about eithty-five aircraft factories and more than twenty-five engine plants. The magazi says it received its information from "foreign sources." It reports that the Russi probably produced twenty-two thousand airplanes last year, half of them fighters.

Admiral John B. Morse said today he thought he was testifying in secret yesterday when he told a congressional committee that the Navy has an air-to-air guided missile that can destroy an enemy plane three miles away.

Secretary of State Acheson told reporters today that we will soon start negotiations with the Franco Government for the use of military bases in Spain. Mr. Acheson said we want the use of both air and naval bases. The negotiations will involve these bases and also the use of one hundred million dollars, already voted by Congress, for aid to Spain. Mr. Acheson refused to comment on Russia's new proposal for a Big Four conference on the unification of Germany.

The Allied Commissioners in western Germany and Chancellor Adenauer said today that the peace settlement between the western powers in Germany is nearing completion.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization tonight has a new Secretary General. He is General Lord Hastings Lionel Ismay, one of Prime Minister Churchill closest advisors. Lord Ismay, who has been a soldier for forty-one of his sixty-four years, took the job after three others had turned it down. He agreed to it only after prodding from Prime Minister Churchill. In this new position, Lord Ismay will now be in charge of the political, economic and financial side of the NATO organization. He has been serving as Mr. Churchill's Secretary of State for Commonwealth affairs since the Conservative Government returned to power last October.

British Laborites today bitterly attacked the Conservative Government for itsdecision to cut subsidies on foods. The "Daily Herald", the Labor newspaper, says the new budget is bad and unjust because it ends the Labor Government's fair-shares-for-all program in favor of incentives for increased production.

In Cuba today, the former President, Carlos Prio Socarras, sent a letter to newspapers saying he was sure that Batista, the man who threw him out, will not long remain in office. Prio wrote: "There is on you, Batista, the immense responsibility of your treason." He said he was confident the country would not remain long with a military boot on its neck.

Throughout the nation tonight, and in many political an editorial offices overseas, people who are experts in such matters are trying to figure out the significance of yesterday's New Hampshire race. The candidates, winners and losers, have made their statements. General Eisenhower, returning to Paris from a quick trip to Germany, told reporters: "This has been a good day. I'm very deeply touched and more than deeply moved." He refused to say whether he plans to return to this country at this time. Senator Taft, campaigning again in Texas, told reporters he was a little disappointed in his showing. He looksforward to a different result in the Wisconsin primary on April 1, the Illinois primary on April 8. Harold Stassen says he's pleased by the size of his vote. It was bigger than he expected,

In the Democratic field, Senator Kefauver interprets his New Hampshire victory to mean that the people want new ideas, new faces, and aggressive action on the Fair Deal program, which he supports. At the White House, Secretary Joe Short says the New Hampshire returns will not affect the President's eventual decision on whether he should or should not run again. So much for the candidates. Now, to the experts and supporters - each with his own angle.

Senator Duff, a major Eisenhower supporter, thinks New Hampshire is a magnificent victory for the General, but Taft Headquarters says "no"; the Eisenhow backers have little to cheer about. Senator Duff says it proves that the General enjoys fabulous popularity with the people, but Carroll Reece, in the Taft camp, says the same figures show that Ike does not have the pulling power attributed to him by his backers. Governor Dewey, an Eisenhower supporter, calls it a great victory for America; but Senator Brewster, a Taft supporter, says the election was a stand off. Dave Engels, the Taft campaign manager, blames the Senator's defeat on the fact that he didn't spend enough time campaigning in Texas: says the results mean that Taft's statements on foreign policy have been repudiated. Governor Adams, of New Hampshire, says it's a clear-cut call to duty for Eisenhower but Senator Brewster days it was just a party machine victory. Brewster says Taft will do much better in the states west of the Alleghenies where the organizations are largely with Taft and Taft headquarters says that in New Hampshire the Eisenhow supporters have the machine. Senator Duff thinks Ike's victory was far beyond what was thought possible, but in Paris, the newspaper "Francois", making its contribution says the General's margin was much less than had been foreseen by his partisans. Republican Senator Carlsen, in the Eisenhower camp, says New Hampshire proves that the voters want a man like Ike. Taft headquarters says Senator Taft showed remarkable strength by carrying Manchester, the State's biggest city, by one thousand votes. Senator Duff says only the old guard and professional political manipulators stand between Eisenhower and a Republican victory in November.

The comments on the Democratic result are equally partisan. Senator Russell, himself a candidate for the Democratic nomination, believes the President lost many votes when he referred to the primaries as "eye-wash". Alf Landon, himself a Republican presidential candidate, thinks it was a kick-in-the-pants for Truman.

Well, those are the reactions, conclusions, and contradictions, and they make the confusion almost complete. Seldom have so few votes produced so many opinions.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: We were unable to reach any conclusions about the results in New Hampshire. Most of the interpretations are based upon partisanship. Some politicians say with Henderson: "A little stone can overturn a great cart. A mouse can put the finishing touches to a castle wall." And others hold with Cervantes: "Don't lose heart. What's lost today may be won tomorrow."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Thursday - March 13, 1952

This is the news:

Secretary of State Acheson says any cut in the proposed foreign aid bill would have the "immediate and destructive effect, of undermining the whole economy of the North Atlantic treaty organization." Mr. Acheson was one of a number of [redacted]n government officials, who explained to a joint congressional committee, why they want almost 8-billion dollars for aiding our allies. The Secretary said: since 1949 the Nato members. (not counting Turkey and Greece). have doubled their defense expenditures. Their rate of military production has increased nearly four times in the same period. They have made more than 500-thousand men available to General Eisenhower's forces. And the general's "organized divisions available" HAVE more than doubled since he took command of Shape last spring. Mr. Acheson said he believes that what the NATO countries are doing now, plus "certain new committments" approach the limit of their capacities. For them to do more would create such a strain, that it might endanger their security and ours..it might wreck everything we are trying to accomplish.

Mutual Aid Administrator Harriman said: any program can be cut..but to cut this program now, would be a decision to cut the strength being built for the common defense against threats from the Kremlin. He said a substantial cut would gravely impair our own security.

Another witness, General Bradley, told the committee that during the last war our military expenses averaged a little more than seven billion dollars a month. The new mutual aid program for one whole year would cost a little more than that. The general also pointed out that the military portion of the aid bill--just over five billions--is considerably less than what it cost to run one month of war in the 40's..although prices have increased considerably.

Defense Secretary Lovett told the committees: we must substantially increase our military aid to Indo-China..

If we can clear up the situation there then: southeastern Asia will be stabilized and the French position in Europe..and therefore the entire defense program in Europe..would be measurably improved. Mr. Lovett also said we want to continue to build up Chinese Nationalist forces on Formosa.. so far only a little more than a foundation has been built.

The President today approved the seperation of the Philippine-Formosa area from General Ridgeway's far eastern command. The new command goes under Admiral RADFORD, commander in chief of the Pacific fleet. The Defense Department says this "involves no change in United States policy in the Far East."

In Korea today there was very little action on the ground. Allied planes again attacked supply lines and vehicles in North Korea. At the truce talks, the enemy negotiators revived their proposal to get us to agree--in effect-- not to set-up a naval blockade against Communist China. And the Chinese radio, which for days has been talking about epidemics in North Korea and northern Manchuria, now says this just isn't so. [redacted]

[redacted]

Trygve Lie, the United Nations secretary general, returned to his New York office today and told reporters he is less optomistic about an armistice in Korea. He said: "The U.N. wants to end the fighting and is trying for an armistice. But do the North Koreans and their Chinese allies equally desire an armistice? There are new doubts."

The United States, Britain and France have made another effort to restore Austria's indpendence. We have proposed to Moscow a short eight-article treaty. The Russians already have agreed to seven of the points. The eighth calls for both the western powers and Russia to give up [redacted] all the property they claim in AUSTRIA as Nazi assets, and war booty. Russia holds a great deal of such property in eastern Austria. Its doubtful if she would be willing to give it up.

The Senate today approved the President's plan to re-roganize the Bureau of Internal Revenue. The House has approved it in the past..so it goes into effect at midnight tomorrow. It will take some time for the government to replace the 64 existing Internal Revenue collectors with 25 civil service appointees . The vote in favor of the plan was 53 to 37. In the final debate, many Senators opposed to the plan made known their [redacted] objections to the President's recent statement that the vote would show "who it is, that is just talking about corruption, and who it is that really wants to do something about it." Republican Senator Dworshak of Idaho said there is [redacted] "convincing evidence" that the Truman administration "will win the distinction for being the most corrupt and venal in the political history of our country." And Republican Senator Milliken said the proper treatment for the President's letter "would be to refuse to accept it; to hurl it into the teeth of its author." But Democratic Senator Moddy asked:"Isn't the Nub of the whole thing whether the collectors are to be appointed on a political basis or a civil service basis?" Then the Senators voted for the civil service basis.

The President today accused the private power industry of running what he called "one of the most viscious propaganda barrages in history"..in an attempt to ruin the federal power program. In a letter to the National Rural Electric Co-Operative Association, the President said: "The industry's drive has for its main purpose, restoring the unlimited right of private monopoly to exploit this nation's water power resources."

William Green, the president of the A.F. of L., told Senators today that any attempt to "scuttle" price controls, will put the wage stabilization program in danger. Allan B. Kline, head of the American Farm Bureau Federation, called for an end to wage and price controls, said they are "an economic narcotic." [redacted] And representatives of retail and wholesale grocers asked for a "suspension" of price controls on food products.

The Wage Stabilization Board ruled today that the [redacted] pay rates of some three to four million construction workers may be raised by 15 cents an hour this year.

Three former members of the old U.S. Maritime Commission told a Senate committee today that if there had been "a full disclosure of the facts" they would not have approved the surplus ship deals engineered by former Representative Joseph E. Casey. Mr. Casey and two friends made 450-thousand dollars on a one thousand dollar investment.

A House subcommittee today killed a bill that would have forced the army to restore white crosses on the graves of 13-thousand war dead in Honolulu's National Memorial Cemetery. The action was unanimous. Until last fall the army used wooden crosses as grave markers; then they were replaced with permanent flat markers of stone. This brought a number of protests..and the legislation that was tabled today.

In Wisconsin, Harold Stassen says that judging by what he saw in New Hampshire, Senator Taft can be expected to make a "terrific drive" for votes in the Wisconsin primary; it will be a heavily financed and thoroughly organized Taft campaign.

Today a veteran revenue agent, Albert Cohen, told tax ~~xxxxxxxxxxx~~ investigators he just plain forgot twelve thousand dollars he had in a safe deposit box.//.For thirty two years Mr Cohen had been quizzing citizens about their tax returns,..but last year, when a comitte had him before it,..his mind sort of went blank,..He discovered it was a different business when he had to answer the questions;..he'd never gone thru anything like that before;..he was nervous..highly nervous. The comitteee wants to know how and why he spent more money than he reported as income during a five year period.//..//.Between now and Monday, some of us are going to wonder how and why we spent so much money; we cant find any to pay the income tax,..Monday is the day!.. It should be accompanied by soft music with the sound of wailing multitudes in the background,..for on Monday, we must lay it on the line for Uncle Sam,..For those of us who havent made a capitol gains deal, or turned ourselves into a corporation, its going to be pretty rugged,.. Enter balance of tax due here..enter the overpayment here; enter amount of item eight you refunded or credited..(at least they leave slight room for hope or optomism.),....After ruining several forms,entering total wages,salary,bonuses.(if any)comissions and other compensations,..we can total up..if there be any to total;.. dividends and interest received;..likewise, depreciation, obsolescence and depletion;..deduct losses from fire, theft, & storm, and you arrive at something called your ajusted gross income..

"~~YOUR ADJUSTED GROSS INCOME~~", THEN ON FORM 1040-/NOT TO BE CONFUSED WITH 1040A/ YOU ENTER ONE HALF OF THE AMOUNT ON LINE FIVE- ASSUMING OF COURSE THERE IS ANYTHING ON LINE FIVE-THEN YOU MULTIPLY THE AMOUNT ON LINE TWELVE BY TWO, SWEAR THAT YOU HAVENT KNOWINGLY COMMITTED PERJURY SUBTRACT SOME MORE LINES FROM OTHER LINES /WHICHEVER IS APPLICABLE/ AND DISCOVER THAT AT THE BOTTOM OF THE PAGE THERE IS A BLANK SPACE AND THE LEGEND, "THIS IS YOUR TAX".

NOW, IT HAS LONG BEEN ACCEPTED BY CIVILIZED TRIBES THAT DEFENCE OF THE REALM AND PAYMENT OF TAXES REPRESENT TWO MAJOR OBLIGATIONS OF THE INDIVIDUAL. BUT I WOULD SUBMIT THAT THIS FORM OF TAXATION SHOULD NOT BE PERMITTED IN A WELL-ORDERED SOCIETY. MY COMPLAINT IS NOT THAT THE FORMS ARE UNDULY,UNNECESSARILY, COMPLICATED AND CONFUSING. MY CONTENTION IS THAT THEY ARE INCOMPLETE. THERE OUGHT TO BE AFTER THAT FINAL PHRASE AND FIGURE, "THIS IS YOUR TAX", ANOTHER PAGE - ALL CLEAN, BLANK AND UNMARKED- UPON WHICH THE TAXPAYER COULD SET FORTH HOW HE WOULD LIKE HIS MONEY SPENT. IMAGINE THE IMPASSIONED PROSE THAT MIGHT BE PRODUCED AS A RESULT OF SUCH AN OPPORTUNITY. IMAGINE, TOO, WHAT WOULD HAPPEN IF THE TAX REVENUE WERE TO BE ALLOCATED IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE DIRECT WISHES OF THE TAXPAYER. UNCLE SAM MIGHT RECEIVE LETTERS LIKE THIS," DEAR KINDLY BUT AVARICIOUS AND UNMERCIFUL UNCLE, HERE IT IS , MY OWN TAX RETURN. BE GOOD ENOUGH TO DISPENSE THIS MAJOR PORTION OF MY EARNINGS IN THE FOLLOWING FASION. P~~ART OF IT I SHOULD LIKE EXPENDED~~

A fair part of it will go for military preparedness...including our allies,..We need weapons and we need allies,...but spend a little of this money trying to persude our allies that we are not agressive and arent going to land them in a war they dont want,..This money is sent gladly, Uncle Sam,..Some of it will probably be wasted, but its a big show you are running, and your sucess or failure merely mean our liberties, and maybe our lives.. I remember that Montesquieu wrote,..In constitutional states, Liberty is compensation for the heavy taxation. In despotic states, the equivalent of liberty is light taxes,...

.." ALSO, UNCLE, IT WOULD BE AGREEABLE TO ME IF YOU WERE TO SPEND A FEW OF MY HARD-EARNED DOLLARS TO PURCHASE PENS FOR YOUR POST OFFICES- PENS THAT WILL WRITE INSTEAD OF SPLUTTER, / AND NOT NECESSARILY UNDER WATER/.

IF IN YOUR WISDOM YOU WANT TO SEND SOME SENATORS AND CONGRESSMEN ABROAD TO SEE FOR THEMSELVES, THATLL BE ALRIGHT; WE OUGHT TO BE ABLE TO AFFORD THAT, AND IT HAS PAID DIVIDENDS IN THE PAST.

" I ALMOST FORGOT THE POSTMEN- THE LETTER CARRIERS, THEY OUGHT TO GET MORE PAY IF WE CAN DO IT WITHOUT INCREASING THE POST OFFICE DEFICIT. A[redacted] POSTCARD BE RETAI[redacted] THE SAME SINCE 192[redacted]

"AND ABOUT THE MATTER OF MORE MIMEOGRAPH MACHINES FOR GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENTS, UNCLE, NOT ONE DIME OF MY MONEY GOES FOR THAT, AND THATS FLAT-THEVE GOT TOO MANY ALREADY. AND WHILE IM WRITING ABOUT SMALL ECONOMIES, WHY NOT STOP EDITING THE CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. IF THE SENTENCES WONT PARSE WHEN THERE SPOKEN, WHY SHOULD THEY BE CLEANED UP AND CORRECTED FOR PRING.

"AND ANOTHER THING, WHY CANT WE GET RID OF SOME OF THOSE PRESS AGENTS AND PUBLIC RELATIONS OFFICERS WHO SEEM TO THINK THEIR MAIN JOB IS TO GET FAVORABLE PUBLICITY FOR THEIR BOSSES.

"ANOTHER IDEA OCCURRED TO ME, UNCLE, WHILE I WAS MAKING OUT THIS INCOME TAX RETURN. WHY DONT YOU ARRANGE TO PRINT THE FIVE, TEN AND TWENTY DOLLAR BILLS IN DIFFERENT COLORS SO WE WONT GET THEM MIXED UP. ON SECOND THOUGHT, THATS A SILLY IDEA BECAUSE AFTER TODAYS LITTLE OPERATION I WONT BE BOTHERED WITH FOLDING MONEY.

"BUT SERIOUSLY, UNCLE SAM, LETS SPEND SOME MONEY ON FLOOD CONTROL. DO SOMETHING ABOUT MAINTAINING OUR NATIONAL PARKS AND PRESERVES, AND TRY TO FIGURE OUT SOME WAY SO THAT KIDS, WHO WERE BORN IN POOR STATES, GET A CHANCE AT A DECENT EDUCATION.

Well,thats it Uncle...just a few suggestions as to how Id like my tax money spent..(other ideas will undoutedly occur to you).xxxxxxxx pretendxtexknowxhowxhigxtaxexranxgoxxxbecausexanxxxxxxknowxhowx muchxwillxbexneededxforxthexjobxahead.xxx

More about taxes..the first from EB White..It annoys me to discover that the state assumes that we are a race of book keepers, and that every citizen has at his fingertips the myriad items of his costly little existence...and this from H V Wade ..Youth today must be strong,unafraid,and a better taxpayer than its father.. and Frank Sullivan....The tax,contrary to general opinion is ~~simpzzxzxxxxx~~ quite simple..It is you and I who are complex....

good night and good luck....

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

THURSDAY - MARCH 13, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Secretary of State Acheson says any cut in the proposed foreign aid bill would have the "immediate and destructive effect of undermining the whole economy of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization." Mr. Acheson was one of a number of government officials, who explained to a joint congressional committee, why they want almost 8-billion dollars for aiding our allies. The Secretary said: since 1949 the NATO members, (not counting Turkey and Greece), have doubled their defense expenditures. Their rate of military production has increased nearly four times in the same period. They have made more than 500-thousand men available to General Eisenhower's forces. And the General's "orgainized divisions available" have more than doubled since he took command of SHAPE last spring. Mr. Acheson said he believes that what the NATO countries are doing now, plus "certain new committments" approach the limit of their capacities. For them to do more would create such a strain, that it might endanger their security and ours: it might wreck everything we are trying to accomplish.

Mutual Aid Administrator Harriman said: Any program can be cut, but to cut this program now, would be a decision to cut the strength being built for the common defense against threats from the Kremlin. He said a substantial cut would gravely impair our own security.

Another witness, General Bradley, told the committee that during the last war, our military expenses averaged a little more than seven billion dollars a month. The new mutual aid program for one whole year would cost a little more than that. The General also pointed out that the military portion of the aid bill - just over five billions - is considerably less than what it cost to run one month of war in the 40's - although prices have increased considerably.

Defense Secretary Lovett told the committees: we must substantially increase our military aid to Indo-China; if we can clear up the situation there, then southeastern Asia will be stabilized and the French position in Europe - and therefore the entire defense program in Europe - would be measurably improved. Mr. Lovett also said we want to continue to build up Chinese Nationalist forces on Formosa: so far only a little more than a foundation has been built.

The President today approved the seperation of the Philippine-Formosa area from General Ridgway's far-eastern command. The new command goes under Admiral Radford, Commander in Chief of the Pacific Fleet. The Defense Department says this "involves no change in United States policy in the Far East."

In Korea today there was very little action on the ground. Allied planes again attacked supply lines and vehicles in North Korea. At the truce talks, the enemy negotiators revived their proposal to get us to agree - in effect - not to set-up a naval blockade against Communist China. And the Chinese radio, which for days has been talking about epidemics in North Korea and northern Manchuria, now says this just isn't so.

Trygve Lie, the United Nations Secretary General, returned to his New York office today and told reporters he is less optimistic about an armistice in Korea. He said: "The U.N. wants to end the fighting and is trying for an armistice. But do the North Koreans and their Chinese allies equally desire an armistice? There are new doubts."

The United States, Britain, and France have made another effort to restore Austria's independence. We have proposed to Moscow a short eight-article treaty. The Russians already have agreed to seven of the points. The eighth calls for both the Wester Powers and Russia to give up all the property they claim in Austria as Nazi assets, and war booty. Russia holds a great deal of such property in eastern Austria. It's doubtful if she would be willing to give it up.

The Senate today approved the President's plan to re-organize the Bureau of Internal Revenue. The House has approved it in the past, so it goes into effect at midnight tomorrow. It will take some time for the Government to replace the 64 existing Internal Revenue collectors with 25 Civil Service appointees. The vote in favor of the plan was 53 to 37. In the final debate, many Senators opposed to the plan made known their objections to the President's recent statement that the vote would show "who it is that is just talking about corruption, and who it is that really wants to do something about it." Republican Senator Dworshak of Idaho said there is "convincing evidence" that the Truman administration "will win the distinction for being the most corrupt and venal in the political history of our country." And Republican Senator Milliken said the proper treatment for the President's letter "would be to refuse to accept it; to hurl it into the teeth of its author." But Democratic Senator Moody asked: "Isn't the hub of the whole thing whether the collectors are to be appointed on a political basis or a Civil Service basis?" Then the Senators voted for the Civil Service basis.

The President today accused the private power industry of running what he called "one of the most viscious propaganda barrages in history" in an attempt to ruin the federal power program. In a letter to the National Rural Electric Co-operative Association, the President said: "The industry's drive has for its main purpose, restoring the unlimited right of private monopoly to exploit this nation's water power resources."

William Green, the president of the A.F. of L., told Senators today that any attempt to "scuttle" price controls, will put the Wage Stabilization program in danger. Allan B. Kline, head of the American Farm Bureau Federation, calle for an end to wage and prize controls, said they are "an economic narcotic." And representatives of retail and wholesale grocers asked for a "suspension" of price controls on food products.

The Wage Stabilization Board ruled today that the pay rates of some three to four million construction workers may be raised by 15 cents an hour this year.

Three former members of the old U.S. Maritime Commission told a Senate committee today that if there had been "a full disclosure of the facts," they would not have approved the surplus ship deals engineered by former Representative Joseph E. Casey. Mr. Casey and two friends made 450-thousand dollars on a one thousand dollar investment.

A House subcommittee today killed a bill that would have forced the Army to restore white crosses on the graves of 13-thousand war dead in Honolulu's National Memorial Cemetery. The action was unanimous. Until last fall the Army used wooden crosses as grave markers; then they were replaced with permanent flat markers of stone. This brought a number of protests, and the legislation that was tabled today.

In Wisconsin, Harold Stassen says that judging by what he saw in New Hampshire, Senator Taft can be expected to make a "terrific drive" for votes in the Wisconsin primary; it will be a heavily financed and thoroughly organized Taft campaign.

Today a veteran revenue agent, Albert Cohen, told tax investigators he just plain forgot twelve thousand dollars he had in a safe deposit box. For thirty two years, Mr. Cohen had been quizzing citizens about their tax returns, but last year, when a committee had him before it, his mind sort of went blank. He discovered it was a different business when he had to answer the questions: he'd never gone through anything like that before: he was nervous - highly nervous: the committee wants to know how and why he spent more money than he reported as income during a five year period.

Between now and Monday, some of us are going to wonder how and why we spent so much money: we can't find any to pay the income tax. Monday is the day! It should be accompanied by soft music with the sound of wailing multitudes in the background, for on Monday, we must lay it on the line for Uncle Sam. For those of us who haven't made a capitol-gains deal, or turned ourselves into a corporation, it's going to be pretty rugged. Enter balance of tax due here - enter the overpayment here: enter amount of item eight you refunded or credited - (atleast they leave slight room for hope or optimism). After ruining several forms, entering total wages, salary, bonuses (if any), commissions and other compensations, we can total up - if there be any to total: dividends and interest received; likewise depreciation, obsolescence and depletion; deduct losses from fire, theft and storm, and you arrive at something called your ajusted gross income. You enter one half of the amount on line five, assuming, of course, there is anything on line five: then you multiply the amount on line twelve by two, swear that you haven't knowingl committed perjury, subtract some more lines from other lines, (whichever is applicable), and discover that at the bottom of the page, there is a blank space and the legend: "This is your tax."

Now, it has long been accepted, by civilized tribes, that defense of the realm and payment of taxes represent two major obligations of the individual. But I would submit that this form of taxation should not be permitted in a well-ordered society. My complaint is not that the forms are unduly, unnecessarily, complicated and confusing. My contention is that they are incomplete. There ought to be after that final phrase and figure, "This is your tax", another page - all clean and blank and unmarked - upon which the taxpayer could set forth how he would like his money spent. Imagine the impassioned prose that might be produced as a result of such an opportunity. Imagine, too, what would happen if the tax revenue were to be allocated in accordance with the direct wishes of the taxpayer. Uncle Sam might receive letters like this: "Dear, kindly, but avaricious and unmerciful uncle here it is: my own tax return. Be good enough to dispense this major portion of my earnings in the following fashion.

"A fair part of it will go for military preparedness - including our allies. We need weapons and we need allies, but spend a little of this money trying to persuade our allies that we are not aggressive and aren't going to land them in a war they don't want. This money is sent gladly, Uncle Sam. Some of it will probably be wasted, but it's a big show you are running, and your success or failure merely mean our liberties, and maybe our lives. I remember that Montesquieu wrote: 'In constitutional states, Liberty is compensation for the heavy taxation. In despotic states, the equivalent of liberty is light taxes.'

"Also, Uncle, it would be agreeable to me if you were to spend a few of my hard-earned dollars to purchase pens for your Post Offices - pens that will write instead of splutter, (and not necessarily under water).

"If, in your wisdom you want to send some Senators and Congressmen abroad to see for themselves, that'll br alright; we ought to be able to afford that, and it has paid dividends in the past.

"I almost forgot the postmen - the letter carriers; they ought to get more pay, if we can do it without increasing the Post Office deficit.

"And about the matter of more mimeograph machines for government departments, Uncle: not one dime of my money goes for that, and that's flat - they've got too many already. And while I'm writing about small economies, why not stop editing the Congressional Record? If the sentences won't parse when they're spoken, why should they be cleaned up and corrected for print?

"And another thing: why can't we get rid of some of those press agents and public relations officers who seem to think their main job is to get favorable publicity for their bosses?

"Another idea occurred to me, Uncle, while I was making out this Income Tax Return. Why don't you arrange to print the five, ten and twenty dollar bills in different colors so we won't get them mixed up? On second thought, that's a silly idea because after today's little operation, I won't be bothered with folding money.

"But seriously, Uncle Sam, let's spend some money on flood control; do something about maintaining our National Parks and preserves; and try to figure out some way so that kids who were born in poor states get a chance at a decent education.

"Well, that's it Uncle - just a few suggestions as to how I'd like my tax money spent: (other ideas will undoutedly occur to you).

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: More about taxes - the first from E. B. White: "It annoys me to discover that the state assumes that we are a race of bookkeepers, and that every citizen has at his fingertips the myriad items of his costly little existence." And this from H. V. Wade: "Youth today must be strong, unafraid, and a better taxpayer that its father." And Frank Sullivan: "The tax, contrary to general opinion is quite simple; it is you and I who are comples."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Friday - March 14, 1952

This is the news:

The Russians have now formally charged that we are using germ warfare in Korea. Again, we say this is false, and challenge them to let neutral inspectors determine the truth. (I'd like to [redacted] discuss this latest Soviet propaganda campaign in a few minutes.)

In Korea today, the truce negotiations are practically at a standstill. Rear Admiral Libbey has suggested turning the remaining issues over to [redacted] staff officers. The enemy is considering this. Bad weather kept ground action to a minimum today. And our planes hit battle front targets after heavy clouds prevented new attacks on the Communist transportation system.

General Ridgeway has given the Japanese the right to manufacture "implements of war"..from bullets to planes to warships. The Japanese still do not have the right to fly military aircraft.

In the Senate today, Senators Connally and Wiley called on their colleagues for quick action on ratifying the Japanese peace treaty. Senator Connally said this would be the best means of stopping Russian communism in the Pacific.

And the Senator, who is chairman of the foreign relations committee, made it clear today that he questions the amount of money the Administration is requesting for foreign aid. Averall Harriman, the mutual aid administrator, was the witness. Senator Connally told him that "as a general proposition " we cannot forever appropriate large sums of money to aid our allies.. we are under no such obligation. The Senator asked how much money we plan to give the Europeans for "defense support" (to help them build up their defense production) Mr. Harriman said one point eight billions..most of it for Britain and France. Senator Connaly said that the Administration had promised that economic aid to Europe would end this year. Instead, he said, we are using a new "device" to continue it. Mr. Harriman said the whole program was on "the low side" as far as the final figures go. Senator Connally said: "Then why don't you add to it, and give them four or five more billions." The Senator also attacked the grant to Britain. He said that in January Winston Churchill told Congress he was not asking for financial assistance. He asked:"Did you run after Churchill and give it to him?" Mr. Harriman said:"It is a wise decision." The Senator said: if Britain and France cannot do something for themselves..it is not our responsibility."

Secretary of State Acheson warned today that the international economic conference the Russians are going to hold in Moscow, is a fake set-up..designed to "weaken and confuse the west." He said its a "Soviet creation".. designed to "lure unsuspecting men of good reputation to participate in it, in order to misuse their names, and their public standing."

The House committee investigating the internal revenue bureau came up with some new cases today. The committee was told that Robert Selden, a suspended New York tax agent, had invested more than 41-thousand dollars in the stock market in three years. Mr. Selden's salary from the government was just under 4-thousand a year. Mr. Selden could not explain satisfactorily how he got the money..why he paid some 23-thousand dollars in insurance of furs, jewelry and Chinese art. The committee also heard Paul Hofrichter, a 35-hundred-dollar a year clerk, explain how he managed to spend 18-thousand 500-dollars last year. He said he won much of it gambling. A former deputy collector in New York, Charles Vesca, refused to say whether or not he had ever accepted a bribe from a taxpayer. He said an answer might tend to incriminate him.

A special federal grand jury here in New York today indicted 19 persons on charges of evading more than one million 600-thousand dollars in taxes. The persons indicted included: a bookmaker, a Park Avenue surgeon, and a number of people engaged in the manufacture of clothing and dealers in fabrics.

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder said today that the Internal Revenue Collectors here in New York and in Chicago would be replaced next month.. as the first step in putting All collectors under civil service.

A Senate committee was told today that the Justice Department is considering an attempt to recover 47 tankers, and other ships, bought from the government's surplus pool after the last war. Thomas Staken, an official of the Maritime Administration, says he doubts the ships were purchased legally.

A Wage Stabilization Board panel reported today, that under the rules of the Wage Board, the wages of steel workers might be raised as little as eight cents an hour, or as much as 23 and a half cents. The panel made no recommendation..but outlined the various ways the board could apply its own rules.

Leon Keyserling, the head of the President's economic advisers, says the greatest error the government has made in its fight against inflation, is that "we have been too easy on cuts in civilian consumption."

The President flew to Washington from Key West today. He comes to New York tomorrow to address 3-thousand teen-age school newspaper editors on "Citizenship."

Here in New York, Federal Judge Medina, and County Judge Samuel Liebowitz, are under police guard. Both men have received letters telling them they'll" get the same as Shuster"..the young man who was shot to death last week, after he had tipped off police on the whereabouts of Willie Sutton, the bank robber.

Paul Hoffman, the former Marshal plan administrator, flies to Paris tonight to confer with General Eisenhower. Mr. Hoffman is advisor to the "Citizens for Eisenhower" committee. General Lucius Clay, is also on his way to Paris..says he "is going to try to talk politics with Ike as much as possible." And General Eisenhower, in a letter to an unidentified friend, has assured the rank and file workers in the various Ike-for-President organizations that "if given the opportunity" he will not "ignore organization and local workers in order to be a wild maverick."

Edward R. Murrow: March 14, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

Today Mr. Malik of Russia formally laid before the U.N. Disarmament Commission the charge that American troops have used germ warfare against North Korean and Chinese forces. He said world opinion was indignant at our use of germ warfare, and that was the first ~~thing~~ weapon that ought to be prohibited.

The American delegate, Benjamin Cohen, called the Russian charges false, unwarranted and uncorroborated. ~~XXXXXXXX~~ An investigation by the International Red Cross would prove the charges false. He hoped Mr. Malik would use his influence to get Communist agreement for such an inspection. They have not yet agreed to it.

A considerable number of demonstrations, protesting our alleged use of germ warfare, are reported both from Russia and the satellite countries.

The Communists are obviously having difficulty in dovetailing their stories. For weeks the Russian press and radio have said there is a plague in North Korea. Yesterday the Peiping Radio in Communist China denied that there was any plague. Today Mr. Malik says, we have been using germ warfare in Korea.

In the absence of any proof ~~of~~ or any credible evidence, and in the face of the Russian refusal to permit the International Red Cross to investigate, it is reasonable to conclude that we are not engaging in bacteriological warfare of any kind. Our official denials have been most emphatic. But this leaves unanswered the question why the Russians choose to bring forward, in this official fashion, the charge that we are. They have accused us in the past of murder, rape, arson and aggression in the shadow of the atomic bomb. They now add the charge that we are using germs. They must have a purpose for doing so. Perhaps their people have grown tired of the repetitious charges against us, and something new had to be added. But it seems to me more likely that they have undertaken this line of attack because they expect a substantial number of persons behind the Iron Curtain to believe it. They are running what is often called a controlled society, in which the press, radio and public officials, all tell the same story, in order that the citizen's mind may become completely dominated by the machinery of the State. Their people have been fed a steady diet of Western imperialism and atomic threat. There is now added to that the formal charge that we are using germs. It is not easy to see how the communists can proceed beyond this point. In the light of past experience it is to be assumed that their story will have wide currency and considerable acceptance in the communist world. But that still leaves unanswered the question of why they advance it. Presumably they do so without much hope of convincing the free world that we are doing what the Russians say we are doing; so the story must be put out primarily for consumption in areas where the communists control all means of communication.

This charge that we are employing bacteriological warfare must be part of the conditioning process, designed to increase hatred of this country, and to prepare public opinion for the acceptance of ultimate collision and conflict between the communist world and the West.

If your imagination is sufficiently flexible, try to measure your own reaction, if every newspaper you read, every radio station you listened to, every official pronouncement, kept telling you the Russians were using bacteriological warfare against our troops. Imagine mass meetings of protest, the constant and unanimous pounding of propaganda, with no dissenting voice, save an occasional shortwave broadcast that trickled in from the Soviet Union saying it was not true - they were not using germs against us. That's the position in reverse in Russia and throughout the communist world. Our voice, our denials reach them but faintly, if at all. They are busily preparing a climate of opinion that will support action - any action including war - against what they label "these power-mad imperialists who stop at nothing, not even the use of germs". It may be that Russian dogma and doctrine carries them from one excess to another in the field of propaganda. It may be that the narcotic of untruth if it is to be effective must be administered in ever larger doses if the people are to remain pliable instruments of the State. But it would seem that through desperation or design the Russians, with their formal and official charge of germ warfare, have reached the bottom of the barrel. They must either become terribly repetitious, or they must resort to action.

It would seem that Mr. Malik borrowed a page from the English poet Dryden, who once remarked:"I never saw any good that came of telling the truth." For our part, we would do well to follow the advice of William Channing who said:"The fewer the voices on the side of truth, the more distinct and strong must be your own." But in the end it will probably be as Le Roux de Lincy said: "Deeds will show themselves and words will pass away."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

FRIDAY - MARCH 14, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Russians have now formally charged that we are using germ warfare in Korea. Again, we say this is false, and challenge them to let neutral inspectors determine the truth. (I'd like to discuss this latest Soviet propaganda campaign in a few minutes.)

In Korea today, the truce negotiations are practically at a standstill. Rear Admiral Libbey has suggested turning the remaining issues over to staff officer The enemy is considering this. Bad weather kept ground action to a minimum today. And our planes hit battle-front targets after heavy clouds prevented new attacks on the communist transportation system.

General Ridgway has given the Japanese the right to manufacture "implements of war" from bullets to planes to warships. The Japanese still do not have the right to fly military aircraft.

In the Senate today, Senators Connally and Wiley called on their colleague for quick action in ratifying the Japanese peace treaty. Senator Connally said this would be the best means of stopping Russian communism in the Pacific. And the Senator, who is chairman of the foreign relations committee, amde it clear today tha he questions the amount of money the Administration is requesting for foreign aid. Averall Harriman, the Mutual Aid administrator, was the witness. Senator Connally told him that "as a general proposition" we cannot forever appropriate large sums of money to aid our allies: we are under no such obligation. The Senator asked how much money we plan to give the Europeans for "defense support" (to help them build up their defense production). Mr. Harriman said one point eight billions - most of it for Britain and France. Senator Connally said that the Administration had promis that economic aid to Europe would end this year. Instead, he said, we are using a new "device" to continue it. Mr. Harriman said the whole program was on "the low side" as far as the final figures go. Senator Connally said: "Then why don't you add to it, and give them four or five more billions." The Senator also attacked the grant to Britain. He said that in January Winston Churchill told Congress he was not asking for financial assistance. He asked: "Did you run after Churchil and give it to him?" Mr. Harriman said: "It is a wise decision." The Senator said "If Britain and France cannot do something for themselves, it is not our responsibil ity."

Secretary of State Acheson warned today that the International Economic Conference the Russians are going to hold in Moscow, is a fake set-up designed to "weaken and confuse the West." He said it's a "Soviet creation" designed to "lure unsuspecting men of good reputation to participate in it, in order to misuse their names and their public standing."

The House commmittee investigating the Internal Revenue Bureau came up wit some new cases today. The committee was told that Robert Selden, a suspended New Yo tax agent, had invested more than 41-thousand dollars in the Stock Market in three years. Mr. Selden's salary from the Government was just under 4-thousand a year. Mr. Selden could not explain satisfactorily how he got the money - why he paid some 23-thousand dollars in insurance of furs, jewelry and Chinese art. The committee also heard Paul Hofrichter, a 35-hundred-dollar a year clerk, explain how he managed to spend 18-thousand 500-dollars last year. He said he won much of it gambling. A former deputy collector in New York, Charles Vesca, refused to say whether or not he had ever accepted a bribe from a taxpayer. He said an answer might tend to incriminate him.

A special Federal Grand Jury here in New York today indicted 19 persons on charges of evading more than one million 600-thousand dollars in taxes. The persons indicted included: a bookmaker, a Park Avenue surgeon, and a number of people engaged in the manufacture of clothing and dealers in fabrics.

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder said today that the Internal Revenue Collectors here in New York and in Chicago would be replaced next month....as the first step in putting all collectors under Civil Service.

A Senate committee was told today that the Justice Department is considering an attempt to recover 47 tankers, and other ships, bought from the government's surplus pool after the last war. Thomas Staken, an official of the Maritime Admini stration, says he doubts the ships were purchesed legally.

A Wage Stabilization Board panel reported today that under the rules of the Wage Board, the wages of steel workers might be raised as little as eight cents an hour, or as much as 23 and a half cents. The panel made no recommendation, but outlined the various ways the board could apply its own rules.

Leon Keyserling, the head of the President's economic advisers, says the greatest error the Government has made in its fight against inflation, is that "we have been too easy on cuts in civilian consumption."

The President flew to Washington from Key West today. He comes to New York tomorrow to address 3-thousand teen-age school newspaper editors on "Citizensh

Here in New York, Federal Judge Medina, and Country Judge Samuel Liebowit are under police guard. Both men have received letters telling them they'll "get the same as Schuster" - the young man who was shot to death last week after he had tipped off police on the whereabouts of Willie Sutton, the bank robber.

Paul Hoffman, the former Marshal Plan administrator, flies to Paris tonig to confer with General Eisenhower. Mr. Hoffman is advisor to the "Citizens for Eisenhower" committee. General Lucius Clay, is also on his way to Paris: says he "is going to try to talk politics with Ike as much as possible." And General Eisen in a letter to an unidentified friend, has assured the rank and file workers in the various Ike-for-President organizations that "if given the opportunity", he will no "ignore organization and local workers in order to be a wild maverick."

Today Mr. Malik of Russia formally laid before the U.N. Disarmament Commission, the charge that American troops have used germ warfare against North Korean and Chinese forces. He said world opinion was indignant at our use of germ warfare, and that was the first weapon that ought to prohibited.

The American delegate, Benjamin Cohen, called the Russian charges false, unwarranted and uncorroborated. An investigation by the International Red Cross would prove the charges false. He hoped Mr. Malik would use his influence to get Communist agreement for such an inspection. They have not yet agreed to it.

A considerable number of demonstrations, protesting our alleged use of germ warfare, are reported both from Russian and the satellite countries.

The Communists are obviously having difficulty in dovetailing their storie For weeks the Russian press and radio have said there is a plague in North Korea. Yesterday, the Peiping Radio in Communist China denied that there was any plague. Today Mr. Malik says we have been using germ warfare in Korea.

In the absence of any proof or any credible evidence, and in the face of the Russian refusal to permit the International Red Cross to investigate, it is reasonable to conclude that we are not engaging in bacteriological warfare of any kind. Our official denials have been most emphatic. But this leaves unanswered the question why the Russians choose to bring forward, in thisofficial fashion, the charge that we are. They have accused us in the past of murder, rape, arson and aggression in the shadow of the atomic bomb. They now add the charge that we are using germs. They must have a purpose for doing so. Perhaps their people have grov tired of the repetitious charges against us, and something new had to be added. But it seems to me more likely that they have undertaken this line of attack because they expect a substantial number of persons behind the Iron Curtain to believe it. They are running what is often called a controlled society, in which the press, radio and public officials all tell the same story in order that the citizen's mind may become completely dominated by the machinery of the State. Their people have been fed a steady diet of Western imperialism and atomic threat. There is now added to that the formal charge that we are using germs. It is not easy to see how the communists can proceed beyond this point. In the light of past experience it is to be assumed that their story will have wide currency and considerable acceptance in the communist world. But that still leaves unanswered the question of why they advance it. Presumably they do so without much hope of convincing the free world that we are doing what the Russians say we are doing: so the story must be put out primarily for consumption in areas where the communists controll all means of communication.

This charge that we are employing bacteriological warfare must be part of the conditioning process, designed to increase hatred of this country, and to prepare public opinion for the acceptance of ultimate collision and conflict betwee the communist world and the West.

If your imagination is sufficiently flexible, try to measure your own reaction, if every newspaper you read, every radio station you listened to, every official pronouncement, kept telling you the Russians were using bacteriological warfare against our troops. Imagine mass meetings of protest, the constant and unanimous pounding of propaganda, with no dissenting voice, save an occasional shor wave broadcast that trickled in from the Soviet Union saying it was not true - they were not using germs against.us. That's the position in reverse in Russia and throughout the communist world. Our voice, our denials reach them but faintly, if at all. They are busily preparing a climate of opinion that will support action - any action including war - against what they label "these power-mad imperialists who stop at nothing, not even the use of germs." It may be that Russian dogma and doctrine carries them from one excess to another in the field of propaganda. It may be that the narcotic of untruth, if it is to be effective, must be administe in ever larger doses if the people are to remain pliable instruments of the State. But it would seem that through desperation or design, the Russians, with their form and official charge of germ warfare, have reached the bottom of the barrel. They must either become terribly repetitious, or they must resort to action.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: It would seem that Mr. Malik borrowed a page from the English poet Dryden, who once remarked: "I never saw any good that came of telling the truth." For our part, we would do well to follow the advice of William Channing who said: "The fewer the voices on the side of truth, the more distinct and strong must be your own." But in the end it will probably be as Le Roux de Lincy said: "Deeds will show themselves and words will pass away."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Monday - March 17, 1952

This is the news:

The Army is going to hurry the release from service of some veterans of the Korean war, who are now in this country. Secretary Pace says that reserve officers and enlisted men, who were called up involuntarily, will be released after 14 months of service..instead of 17 months. This applies only to Korean veterans who have been rotated home. The only other catch is that these reservists must have served one year on active duty in the last war. Some of these men may be released within 72 hours. And draftees, back from Korea, will be released beginning in June. At that time, the first men drafted in September of 1950, will have served 21 months..they were supposed to serve 24 months. There is no indication of how many men will be affected by these orders.

Today the Defense Department announced a May draft call for 19-thousand men: 15-thousand for the army, four thousand for the Marines.

In Korea, there was little ground action. But our planes again attacked enemy railroad lines and battlefront positions. Our Sabrejets exchanged fire with enemy Migs but reported no hits. At the truce talks, we told the Communists we want Seoul..the South Korean Capital.. and Pyongyang, the North Korean capital, both to be open to inspection by the neutral truce teams the negotiaors are talking about. There was no direct reply from the Communists.

In Tokyo today, Premier Yoshida said it's only right for American troops defending Japan to come under the jurisdiction of American military courts.. and not Japanese courts. A number of Japanese have protested that after the peace treaty goes into effect American troops should be tried by Japanese courts for their misdeeds.

The Defense Production Administration says that because of a decrease in demand for certain raw materials in our defense plants, it will soon be possible to release steel, copper and aluminum for commercial building. We now have "substantial" steel, copper and aluminum stocks on hand. The government wants building contractors to start using them: WITH PRIORITY FOR highways, schools and hospitals..and for homes. Manly Fleischman, the production administrator, says almost all current applications for material to build industrial and commercial structures will be approved. There's a big "if".. if there is no steel strike. The C.I.O. steelworkers have threatened to strike at midnight Sunday. The government has asked for another delay in the dispute over a new contract.

Mr. Fleischman, explaining the release of the building materials, told reporters:"If there is a steel strike, everyone will understand that we will have to delay the handling of construction applications until the strike emergency is settled."

Democratic Representative Brooks of Louisiana said today we're doing a generally good job on defense production. But he feels we have "failed dismally" in producing warplanes. He says we are probably turning out less than one thousand jet planes a year. Representative Brooks is a member of the House Armed Services Committee. He believes our failure to produce more combat planes is due to: last minute changes in military planning and failure to allot critically short materials for plane production.

By midnight tonight more than 53-million Americans will have filed their 1951 income tax returns. The government expects to collect 61-billion dollars.. on personal and corporate incomes....compared to 48-billion last year.

A few hours ago the Internal Revenue Bureau announced that Monroe D. Dowling, the tax collector for the nation's biggest tax-paying district, here in New York, has been fired. The Bureau says

"an irregularity has been found" in one of Mr. Dowling's own tax returns. He has served in the job for seven months. Dowling is the 8th of the nation's 64 collectors to be removed or resign since the current investigation started.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee today again put off a decision on whether General Eisenhower should be asked to come home to testify on the foreign aid program. And in Paris, the general and one of his close friends had something to say about the business of coming home to campaign. (I'd like to summarize these developments in a few minutes.)

Senator Taft today began a seven-day tour of Wisconsin...for next Tuesday's Republican primary. The voters of Minnesota make their presidential choices tomorrow: with Harold Stassen expected to be a sure winner . The President, in Key West, conferred today with Democratic Chairman McKinney.

And a new book called "Mr. President" was published today. It was written and edited by William Hillman and contains some of the President's personal and official papers, letters and diary excerpts. At one point the book says that in 1946 the President telephoned to the ~~fmnman~~ then Secretary of State Byrnes a bawling out for the way Byrnes had assumed too much authority in DEALING with the Russians.. for the way he made final decisions without consulting the President. Mr. Byrnes, now governor of South Carolina, says this is absolutely untrue.. he never heard about the letter until now.. the President never read it to him. The book also quotes the President as suggesting that the terms of Senators and Representatives be limited to 12 years to cure "senility and seniority..both terrible legislative diseases." (There's almost unanimous opposition to this plan in Congress.)

The F.B.I. revealed today that it did not run the usual check on Newbold Morris ..the man assigned to cleanup corruption in the government. The F.B.I. says the check was not made because Mr. Morris' record, as generally available, indicated he was eligible for the Presidential appointment. In addition, Mr. Morris was not a job "applicant" in the usual sense..he was invited to take the job.

Here in New York, in a number of other American cities, big parades were held today to celebrate St. Patrick's Day. Dublin had one of its biggest parades..lasting two hours.

Edward R. Murrow: March 17, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

It looks as though General Eisenhower isn't coming home (at least not yet.) He has written a letter to 19 members of the House of Representatives, who ~~XXXX~~ wrote urging him to come home and actively seek the nomination. # In the "absence of a compelling call, or relief by higher authority", he says he's going to remain where he is, for the next few months. # The General does not regard himself as indispensible to the success of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization; but he believes the job in which he is engaged, is more important than anything else on the immediate horizon. | He said again that he would, "answer a clearcut call to another, and higher duty - the voice of the American people, speaking through a National Convention. General Eisenhower wrote: "It is an entirely different thing to leave a critical assignment, for the purpose of increasing the possibility, or probability, of such a summons. "My friends, I know, will not expect me to act against my conscience." | But the General assured the 19 Congressmen that he would "regularly re-examine his position."

Mr. Paul Hoffman, former Marshall Plan administrator, spent much of the week end urging the General to reconsider; told him there is concern among Eisenhower supporters that his nomination might be put in jeopardy, unless he returns before the Convention. / Hoffman told the General that supporters of other candidates said his nomination would be almost a certainty, if he did come home. / Mr. Hoffman believes ~~XXXXXXXXXX~~ it is possible for the General to get the nomination without coming back; but it would make it a great deal easier, if he'd come home as soon as he felt he could do it with a clear conscience. / The General says he can't do it with a clear conscience. / Mr. Hoffman contends that, whether he likes it or not, General Eisenhower is a very active participant in the presidential campaign.

Mr. Hoffman reported that after he had advanced these arguments the General offered "no comment" upon them.

General Eisenhower will obviously be subjected to increasing pressure from his supporters. / His position, and that of President Truman, are both unique. It is useful to keep the record straight. General Eisenhower has said that in the absence of a compelling call - by which he appears to mean nomination - or relief by a higher authority - by which he certainly means President Truman- he ~~XXXX~~ isn't coming home, (and he will not engage in any pre-Convention a~~ctivities~~ campaigning -) / The President, on the other hand, has said he would not ever relieve General Eisenhower, except at his request. Mr. Truman has also said that he wouldn't stand in the General's way, because he thinks very highly of him, and if he wants to go out and have all the mud and rotten eggs and rotten tomatoes thrown at him, that's his business. And the President wouldn't stop him. If the General were to be nominated he would, of course, have to be relieved.

Here is a nice and delicate problem. The General won't come home unless the President relieves him. The President says he won't relieve him. Many of the General's supporters are clamoring for his return. Others contend that he could come back and make a few high level, general speeches about the state of the world even while remaining in uniform. While still other Eisenhower supporters think he's doing all right as it is, and he can win with silence.

The General has promised to "regularly re-examine" his position. But if the "come home" contingent of his supporters persuade him that that's where his duty lies; and if his conscience permits him to make the break, it will still require great skill for him to extricate himself from the position he now occupies. If the General asks to be relieved, and comes home out of uniform, he can scarcely avoid the rough and tumble or the hog trough of American politics. If he remains abroad he may jeopardize his chances for the nomination. Some will contend that he would jeopardize them equally by coming home. I do not know. But it is clear that the General is keeping his own counsel. Paul Hoffman, his close friend and advisor, presented him with some powerful arguments. And Mr. Hoffman can be very persuasive. But he said at the end, the General made no comment.

It would appear from this distance that General Eisenhower is following the advice frequently given to lowly privates in the Army: "Keep your mouth shut, your ears open, and never volunteer."

There are those who feel that General Eisenhower has an obligation to speak up, ~~to make his position clear~~. But it may be that the General agrees with Montaigne that "all actions, beyond ordinary limits, are subject to sinister interpertation" and with M.F. Tupper who said:"Well timed silence, hath more eloquence than speech." But some ~~who support the General~~ will think John of Salisbury may have been right when he observed :"He who will not when he may, may not when he will."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

MONDAY - MARCH 17, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Army is going to hurry the release from service of some veterans of the Korean war who are now in this country. Secretary Pace says that reserve officers and enlisted men who were called up involuntarily will be released after 14 months of service - instead of 17 months. This applies only to Korean veterans who have been rotated home. The only other catch, is that these reservists must have served one year on active duty in the last war. Some of these men may be released within 72 hours. And draftees, back from Korea, will be released beginning in June. At that time, the first men drafted in September of 1950, will have served 21 months: they were supposed to serve 24 months. There is no indication of how many men will be affected by these orders.

Today the Defense Department announced a May draft call for 19-thousand men: 15-thousand for the Army, four thousand for the Marines.

In Korea, there was little ground action. But our planes again attacked enemy railroad lines and battlefront positions. Our Sabrejets exchanged fire with enemy MIGs but reported no hits. At the truce talks, we told the communists we want Seoul, the South Korean capital, and Pyongyang, the North Korean capital, both to be open to inspection by the neutral truce teams the negotiators are talking about. There was no direct reply from the communists.

In Tokyo today, Premier Yoshida said it's only right for American troops defending Japan to come under jurisdiction of American military courts.... and not Japanese courts. A number of Japanese have protested that after the peace treaty goes into effect, American troops should be tried by Japanese courts for their misdeeds.

The Defense Production Administration says that because of a decrease in demand for certain raw materials in our defense plants, it will soon be possible to release steel, copper and aluminum for commercial building. We now have "substantial" steel, copper and aluminum stocks on hand. The Government wants building contractors to start using them - with priority for highways, schools, and hospitals - and for homes. Manly Fleischman, the production administrator, says almost all current applications for material to build industrial and commercial structures, will be approved. There's a big "if" ---- if there is no steel strike. The C.I.O. steelworkers have threatened to strike at midnight Sunday. The Government has asked for another delay in the dispute over a new contract. Mr. Fleischman, explaining the release of the building materials, told reporters: "If there is a steel strike, everyone will understand that we will have to delay the handling of construction applications until the strike emergency is settled."

Democratic Representative Brooks of Louisiana said today we're doing a generally good job on defense production. But he feels we have "failed dismally" in producing warplanes. He says we are probably turning out lessthan one thousand jet planes a year. Representative Brooks isa member of the House Armed Services Committee. He believes our failure to produce more combat planes is due to: 1) last minute changesin military planning, 2)and failure to allot critically short materials for plane production.

By midnight tonight more than 53-million Americans will have filed their 1951 income-tax returns. The Government expects to collect 61-billion dollars - on personal and corporate incomes - compared to 48-billion last year.

A few hours ago the Internal Revenue Bureau announced that Monroe D. Dowling, the tax collector for the nation's biggest tax-paying district, here in New York, has been fired. The Bureau says "an irregularity has been found" in one of Mr. Dowling's own tax returns. He has served in the job for seven months. Dowling isthe 8th of the nation's 64 collectors to be removed or resign, since the current investigation started.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee today again put off a decision on whether General Eisenhower should be asked to come home to testify on the Foreign Aid Program. And in Paris, the General and one of his close friends had something to say about the business of coming home to campaign. (I'd like to to summarize these developments in a few minutes.)

Senator Taft today began a seven-day tour of Wisconsin - for Tuesday's Republican primary. The voters of Minnesota make their presidential choices tomorrow - with Harold Stassen expected to be a sure winner. The President, in Key West, conferred today with Democratic Chairman McKinney.

And a new book called "Mr. President" was published today. It was written and edited by William Hillman and contains some of the President's personal and official papers, letters and diary excerpts. At one point the book says that in 1946 the President telephoned to the then Secretary of State Byrnes a bawling out for the way Byrnes had assumed too much authority in dealing with the Russians; for the way he made final decisions without consulting the President. Mr. Byrnes, now governor of South Carolina, saysthis is absolutely untrue: he never heard about the letter until now; the President never read it to him. The book also quotes the President as suggesting that the terms of Senators and Representatives be limited to 12 years to cure "senility and seniority - both terrible legislative diseases." (There's almost unanimous opposition to this plan in Congress

The F.B.I. revealed today that it did not run the usual check of federal employees on Newbold Morris - the man assigned to cleanup corruption in the Government. The F.B.I. says the check was not made because Mr. Morris' record, as generally available, indicated he was eligible for the presidential appointment. In addition, Mr. Morris was not a job "applicant" in the usual sense: he was invited to take the job.

Here in New York and in a number of other American cities, big parades were held today to celebrate St. Patrick's Day. Dublin had one of its biggest parades - lasting two hours.

It looks as though General Eisenhower isn't coming home - at least not yet. He has written a letter to 19 members of the House of Representatives, who wrote urging him to come home and actively seek the nomination. In the "absence of a compelling call, or relief by higher authority," he says he's going to remain where he is for the next few months. The General doesnot regard himself as indispensible to the success of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization; but he believes the job in which he is engaged. is more important than anything else on the immediate horizon. He said again that he would "answer a clearcut call to another and higher duty - the voice of the American people, speaking through a National Convention." General Eisenhower wrote: "It is an entirely different thing to leave a critical assignment, for the purpose of increasing the possibility, or probability, of such a summons. My friends, I know, will not expect me to act against my conscience." But the General assured the 19 Congressmen that he would "regularly re-examine his position."

Mr. Paul Hoffman, former Marshall Plan administrator, spent much of the week end urging the General to reconsider; told him there is concern among Eisenhower supporters that his nomination might be put in jeopardy unless he returns before the Convention. Hoffman told the General that supporters of other candidates said his nomination would be almost a certainty - if he did come home. Mr. Hoffman believes it is possible for the General to get the nomination without coming back; but it would make it a great deal easier, if he'd come home as soon as he felt he could do it with a clear conscience. The General says he can't do it with a clear conscience. Mr. Hoffman contends that, whether he likes it or not, General Eisenhower is a very active participant in the presidential campaign.

Mr. Hoffman reported that after he had advanced these arguments, the General offered "no comment" upon them.

General Eisenhower will obviously be subjected to increasing pressure from his supporters. His position, and that of President Truman, are both unique. It is useful to keep the record straight. General Eisenhower has said that in the absence of a compelling call - by which he appears to mean nomination - or relief by a higher authority - by which he certainly means President Truman - he isn't coming home, (and he will not engage in any pre-Convention campaigning). The President, on the other hand, has said he would not eve relieve General Eisenhower except at his request. Mr. Truman has also said that he wouldn't stand in the General's way, because he thinks very highly of him, and if he wants to go out and have all the mud and rotten eggs and rotten tomatoes thrown at him, that's his business. And the President wouldn't stop him. If the General were to be nominated he would, of course, have to be relieved.

Here is a nice and delicate problem. The General won't come home unless the President relieves him. The President says he won't relieve him. Many of the General's supporters are clamoring for his return. Others contend that he could come back and make a few high level, general speeches about the state of the world, even while remaining in uniform. While still other Eisenhower supporters think he's doing all right as it is, and he can win win with silence.

The General has promised to "regularly re-examine" his position. But if the "come home" contingent of his supporters persuade him that that's where his duty lies, and if his conscience permits him to make the break, it will still require great skill for him to extricate himself from the position he now occupies. If theGeneral asks to be relieved, and comes home out of uniform, he can scarcely avoid the rough and tumble or the hog trough of American politics. If he remains abroad he may jeopardize his chances for the nomination. Some will contend that he would jeopardize them equally by coming home. I do not know. But it is clear that the General is keeping his own counsel. Paul Hoffman, his close friend and advisor, presented him with some powerful arguments. And Mr. Hoffman can be very persuasive. But he said at the end, the General made no comment.

It would appear from this distance that General Eisenhower is following the advice frequently given to lowly privates in the Army: "Keep your mouth shut, your ears open, and never volunteer."

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: There are those who feel that General Eisenhower has an obligation to speak up. But it may be that the General agrees with Montaigne that "All actions, beyond ordinary limits, are subject to sinister interpretations." And with M. F. Tupper who said: "Well timed silence hath more eloquence than speech." But some will think John of Salisbury may have been right when he observed: "He who will not when he may, may not when he will."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Tuesday - March 18, 1952

This is the news:

Secretary of State Acheson believes the truce talks in Korea will be successful. But he cautions us [redacted] against either optomism or pessimism. He told Congress [redacted] he is continually working to get our allies to send more troops to Korea.. (so far without success.) In Korea today: there was no progress at the truce talks.. allied guns stopped a Chinese attack on a four-mile front, and generally bad weather hampered air operations.

In his testimony today, Secretary Acheson said that the foreign aid bill, of almost eight billion dollars, has been trimmed "to the limit of safety." He advised Congress "to look elsewhere" for possible cuts in the President's over-all budget. He said there's no telling how much it will cost to strengthen Western Europe. The most anyone can say with certainty, is that it will be necessary to continue the program for at least one more year.. (and at about the same rate as this year's program.) Mr. Acheson described the situation in Indo-China as "very serious".. said it will remain so until the French can put a large, trained, native force, into the field. And he said he's confident the French will carry out their committments to the North Atlantic pact organization.

The Senate Judiciary Committee today voted against giving Newbold Morris the power to subpena witnesses or documents. The committee [redacted] proposed INSTEAD that the President name an independent corruption investigator, and five deputies. They would be subject to confirmation by the Senate, and would have supbena powers. Chairman McCarran makes it clear that Mr. Morris would have great difficulty getting Senate confirmation. Morris has said in the past that if he didn't get subpena powers he "might as well go home." Today, he told reporters the people expect him to stay on the job, and do his part. [redacted] Morris TODAY mailed out his first questionaiires to 596 [redacted] Justice Dept. officials. [redacted] IT asks such questions as : net worth.. jewlery or furs owned.. a list of all brokerage accounts. The only top Justice Department officials who will not get the questionnaire will be certain F.B.I. employes. Mr. Morris says that's because in 30 years there hasn't been a breath of [redacted] scandal TOUCHING [redacted] the F.B.I.

A House committee today asked the President to make available the income tax returns of Attorney General McGrath for the past ten years. The committee also wants the returns of 19 other Justice Department officials. Harold Stassen has charged that McGrath became a millionaire since he entered the public service.

Mr. Stassen was expected to win an easy victory in today's Minnesota primary.. [redacted]

Senator Taft said in Wisconsin today that Stassen seems to be defending the Truman foreign policy. And Mr. Stassen, also campaigning in Wisconsin, said both the Taft and Truman blunders of the past seven years are responsible for our present "dangerous position."

New Jersey's Governor Driscoll has come out for Eisenhower. And Paul Hoffman, the head of the Ford Foundation, says he's taking a leave without pay to work for Ike's nomination. Hoffman, in Paris, says he feels that the General was thoroughly persuaded by the New Hampshire results that there is "a call to duty" for him. He says the General is going to be subjected to such political pressures that he will not be able to meet his operational duties to Shape..therefore he should come [redacted] home and work for the nomination.

Democratic Chairman McKinney today asked California Democrats to withdraw the President's name from their June third presidential primary.

[redacted].

AND Democratic Presidential Candidate Russell is going to open campaign headquarters in Washington tomorrow.. says he'll devote as much time to his "national campaign" as his senatorial duties will permit.

[redacted] Illinois's Governor Stevenson, mentioned as a possible Democratic candidate, writes in the magazine Foreign Affairs, that the big issue [redacted] is: whether we go it alone, or go forward with our allies. The governor attacks the Taft argument that Korea is a "useless war" and a Truman war. And he offers these [redacted] reasons why its "foolish and misleading" to say we stand exactly where we stood when Korea started. [redacted] Korea put our rearmament effort into high gear.. our leadership there saved [redacted] the moral and psychological defenses of western Europe.. the Russians now know that their path of conquest is mortally dangerous.. and resistance in Korea contributed to the negotiation of a Japanese peace treaty.

~~Paul M. Herzog, the chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, told a Senate committee today that leading labor organizations have done "a vigorous job" in throwing out Communists from their unions.~~

Democratic Senator Benton of Connecticut today offered to waive his senatorial immunity, and take his chances on a libel action resulting from the 30-thousand words of testimony he's offered in his drive to have the Senate expel Senator McCrathy. Senator McCarthy then asked for a meeting of Benton and McCarthy lawyers, to arrange for Benton to wave his immunity. Benton called this "a grand stand gesture" and wrote McCarthy "if you want my signature legally to attest to my statement on the floor, you have it on this letter."

A federal court in Washington has held parts of the federal lobbying act to be unconstiutional; the parts that require lobbyists to report contributions they make to influence legislation, and the criminal penalty section of the law.

In Britain, Undersecretary for Air Ward says the Royal Air Force is now "far from adequate either to defend our country or to play its part in the defense of Europe."

And the Egyptian government has arrested two former members of the cabinet. Political informants say both had been questioned in relation to their parts in the Cairo riots of last January.

Edward R. Murrow: March 18, 1945. 7.45 p.m.

Tomorrow in Paris the representatives of the United States, Britain, France and West Germany, will attempt to lay hold of a very difficult problem. The Russians created it a week ago, and it hasn't received much attention. But it's so tough, that none of the four governments ~~have~~ has said an official word about it, for the whole of the last week. This is one that can't be ignored or brushed off. What the Russians did was to propose that a conference on a German Peace Treaty be held immediately - the creation of a Central German Government; Germany to become a united, independent, democratic and peace-loving state; Germany to have national air, land and sea forces, essential for the defense of the country; be permitted to produce war materials and equipment; domestic civil rights for all Germans; all former members of the Nazi Party, including officers and generals to be granted civil and political rights. The Russians proposed that Germany be subject to no economic limitations - she could trade where she wants to. Armies of occupation would be withdrawn.

Some of these Russian proposals are old, but others are sensationally new, and have never been offered before. This is an appeal to German national pride; the offer of a national army, navy and air force is meant to counter the West's proposal of German divisions embedded in a European Army. This is an effort to confuse and undermine Western solidarity; slow down German association with the West; and there is even a hint that Germany's eastern frontiers might be revised.

The Germans want national unity, a revival of their national pride; they want equality, and they want markets. The Russians offer them all these things, and most of them - particularly markets and unity - they can get only from the Russians. This appears to be a major change in Moscow policy; and its timing, from their point of view, is diabolically clever. It plays upon French political confusion, appears to solve the German problem for the French, and at the same time would explode the European Army. Russia presents a picture of sweet reasonableness, to a Britain which has bitten off more of an arms program than she can chew. It comes when the Administration has submitted its eight-billion-dollar Mutual Aid bill to Congress. It would appear that the men in the Kremlin this year, are taking pains not to provide the Administration with proof of a clear and present danger, which has put every major defense appropriation through Congress since 1947.

The Russian proposal comes at a moment when the Germans are reluctant to re-arm, and when West Germany's Chancellor Adenauer is wrestling with the Western allies step by step, for equality and sovereignty. The Russians offer it all in one bundle, plus a national army, freedom of trade, and removal of the occupation forces. The Russian proposal is of course full of holes. They say nothing about free elections. Their suggestions of a peace conference will sound pretty hollow to us, after the interminable delays over the Austrian treaty, and the standstill tactics at Panmunjom. It would seem that the Russians have decided they can catch more flies with honey than vinegar, and their appeal will have considerable response in Western Europe and in Germany. Their proposal about the withdrawal of occupation forces is of course a fony: theirs would merely pull back into Poland, while ours would come back over three thousand miles of ocean. But if your country is occupied, you just like to get the occupiers out, without caring particularly where they go. That's the way a lot of Germans will feel.

The Western Powers have now been considering this proposal for a week. It is regarded most seriously in London, Paris and Bonn - part of the West's reply will be a renewed demand that the United Nations Commission, that is supposed to investigate the possibility of free elections, be admitted into the eastern zone of Germany, from which it has been barred. But that isn't likely to be regarded as an adequate answer.

There is nothing in the record to indicate that Russian policy has changed fundamentally. Germany remains the great problem of Europe, and the great prize to be won. Many writers and politicians in the West have assumed that the only way the Russians can win it is to communize the western zone. That may remain the ultimate objective. But this latest Russian proposal indicates that they think they can do it another way, at least in the first phase, by appealing to German national pride and self-interest. And anyone who believes that this is utterly impossible must have forgotten the Hitler-Stalin deal of 1939.

Russian propaganda - certainly in the case of Germany - seems to fit a neat pattern, set down by others before. Napoleon said: "If you want to get on in this world, make many promises but don't keep them." H.H. Brackenridge argued: "Talk much about a thing, and you will put it in the people's minds." And E.D. Martin concluded: "It is often easier to believe, than to doubt."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

TUESDAY - MARCH 18, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Secretary of State Acheson believes the truce talks in Korea will be successful. But he cautions us against either optimism or pessimism. He told Congress he is continually working to get our allies to send more troops to Korea - so far without success. In Korea today - there was no progress at the truce talks. Allied guns stopped a Chinese attack on a four-mile front and generally bad weather hampered air operations.

In his testimony today, Secretary Acheson said that the Foreign Aid Bill of almost eight billion dollars has been trimmed "to the limit of safety." He advised Congress "to look elsewhere" for possibl cuts in the President's over-all budget. He said there's no telling how much it will cost to strengthen Western Europe. The most anyone can say with certainty is that it will be necessary to continue the program for at least one more year, (and at about the same rate as this year's program). Mr. Acheson described the situation in Indo-China as "very serious": said it will remain so until the French can put a large, trained native force into the field. And he said he's confident the French will carry out their committments to the North Atlantic pact organization.

The Senate Judiciary Committee today voted against giving Newbol Morris the power to subpena witnesses or documents. The committee proposed, instead, that the President name an independent corruption investigator and five deputies. They would be subject to confirmation by the Senate and would have subpena powers. Chairman McCarran makes it clear that Mr. Morris would have great difficulty getting Senate confirmation. Morris has said in the past that if he didn't get subpena powers he "might as well go home." Today, he told reporters the people expect him to stay on the job and do his part. He also mailed out his first questionaires to 596 Justice Department officials It asks such questions as - net worth, jewelry or furs owned, a list of all brokerage accounts. The only top Justice Department officials who will not get the questionnaire will be certain F.B.I. employees. Mr. Morris says that's because in 30 years there hasn't been a breath of scandal touching the F.B.I.

A House committee today asked the President to make available the income tax returns of Attorney General McGrath, for the past ten years. The committee also wants the returns of 19 other Justice Department officials. Harold Stassen has charged that McGrath became a millionaire since he entered the public service.

Mr. Stassen was expected to win an easy victory in today's Minnesota primary.

Senator Taft said in Wisconsin today, that Stassen seems to be defending the Truman foreign policy. And Mr. Stassen, also campaigning in Wisconsin, said both the Taft and Truman blunders of the past seven years, are responsible for our present "dangerous position."

New Jersey's Governor Dirscoll has come out for Eisenhower. And Paul Hoffman, the head of the Ford Foundation, says he's taking a leave, without pay, to work for Ike's nomination. Hoffman, in Paris, says he feels that the General was thoroughly persuaded by the New Hampshire results that there is "a call to duty" for him. He says the General is going to be subjected to such political pressures, that he will not be able to meet his operational duties to SHAPE: therefor he should come home and work for the nomination.

Democratic Chairman McKinney today asked California Democrats to withdraw the President's name from their June third presidential primary.

And Democratic presidential candidate Russell is going to open campaign headquarters in Washington tomorrow: says he'll devote as much time to his "national campaign" as his senatorial duties will permit.

Illinois' Governor Stevenson, mentioned as a possible Democrati candidate, writes in the magazine Foreign Affairs, that the big issue is whether we go it alone, or go forward with our allies. The Governor attacks the Taft argument that Korea is a "useless war" and a Truman war. And he offers these reasons why it's "foolish and misleading" to say we stand exactly where we stood when Korea started: Korea put our rearmament effort into high gear - our leadership there saved the moral and psychological defenses of Western Europe - the Russians now know that their path of conquest is mortally dangerous - and resistance in Korea contributed to the negotiation of a Japanese peace treaty.

Democratic Senator Benton of Conneticut today offered to waive his senatorial immunity, and take his chances on a libel action resulting from the 30-thousand words of testimony he's offered in his drive to have the Senate expel Senator McCarthy. Senator McCarthy then asked for a meeting of Benton and McCarthy lawyers to arrange for Benton to wave his immunity. Benton called this "a grand stand gesture" and wrote McCarthy: "If you want my signature legally to attest to my statement on the floor, you have it on this letter."

A federal court in Washington has held parts of the federal lobbying act to be unconstitutional; the parts that require lobbyists to report contributions they make to influence legislation, and the criminal penalty section of the law.

In Britain, Undersecretary for Air War says the Royal Air Force is now "far from adequate either to defend our country or to play its part in the defense of Europe."

And the Egyptian Government has arrested two former members of the cabinet. Political informants say both had been questioned in relation to their parts in the Cairo riots of last January.

Tomorrow in Paris the representatives of the United States, Britain, France and West Germany will attempt to lay hold of a very difficult problem. The Russians created it a week ago, and it hasn't received much attention. But it's so tough, that nono of the four governments has said an official word about it for the whole of the last week. This is one that can't be ignored or brushed off. What the Russians did was to propose that a conference on a German Peace Treaty be held immediately - the creation of a Central German Government; Germany to become a united, independent, democratic and peace-loving state; Germany to have national air, land and sea forces, essential for the defense of the country; be permitted to produce war materials and equipment; domestic civil rights for all Germans; all former members of the Nazi Party, including officers and generals to be granted civil and political rights. The Russians proposed the Germany be subject to no economic limitations - she could trade where she wants to. Armies of occupation would be withdrawn.

Some of these Russian proposals are old, but others are sensationally new and have never been offered before. This is an appeal to German national pride; the offer of a national army, navy and air force is meant to counter the West's proposal of German divisions embedded in a European Army. This is an effort to confuse and undermine Western solidarity; slow down German association with the West; and there is even a hint that Germany's eastern frontiers might be revised.

The Germans want national unity, a revival of their national pride; they want equality and they want markets. The Russians offer them all these things, and most of tham - particularly markets and unity - they can get only from the Russians. This appears to be a major change in Moscow policy; and its timing, from their point of view, is diabolically clever. It plays upon French political confusion, appears to solve the German problem for the French, and at the same time would explode the European Army. Russia presents a picture of sweet reasonableness to a Britain which has bitten off more of an arms program than she can chew. It comes when the Administration has submitted its eight-billion-dollar Mutual Aid bill to Congress. It would appear that the men in the Kremlin this year are taking pains not to provide the Administration with proof of a clear and present danger, which has put every major defense appropriation through Congress since 1947.

The Russian proposal comes at a moment when the Germans are reluctant to re-arm, and when West Germany's Chancellor Adenauer is wrestling with the Western allies step by step, for equality and sovereignty. The Russians offor it all in one bundle, plus a national army, freedom of trade, and removal of the occupation forces. The Russian proposal is of course full of holes. They say nothing about free elections. Their suggestions of a peace conference will sound pretty hollow to us after the interminable delays over the Austrian treaty, and the standstill tactics at Panmunjom. It would seem that the Russians have decided they can catch more flies with honey than vinegar, and their appeal will have considerable response in Western Europe and in Germany. Their proposal about the withdrqwal of occupation forces is of course a fony; theirs would merely pull back into Poland, while ours would come back over three thousand miles of ocean. But if your country is occupied, you just like to get the occupiers out, without caring particularly where they go. That's the way a lot of Germans will feel.

The Western Powers have now been considering this proposal for a week. It is regarded most seriously in London, Paris, and Bonn. Part of the West's reply will be a renewed demand that the United Nations Commission that is supposed to investigate the possibility of free elections be admitted into the eastern zone of Germany, from which it has been barred. But that isn't likely to be regarded as an adequate answer.

There is nothing in the record to indicate that Russian policy has changed fundamentally. Germany remains the great problem of Europe, and the great prize to be won. Many writers and politicians in the West have assumed that the only way the Russians can win it, is to communize the Western zone. That may remain the ultimate objective. But this latest Russian proposal indicates that they think they can do it another way, at least in the first phase, by appealing to German national pride and self-interest. And anyone who believes that this is utterly impossible, must have forgotten the Hitler-Stalin deal of 1939.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCAIL

MURROW: Russian propaganda - certainly in the case of Germany - seems to fit a neat pattern set down by others before. Napoleon said: "If you want to get on in this world, make many promises but don't keep them." H. H. Brackenridge argued: "Talk much about a thing, and you will put it in the people's minds." And E. D. Martin concluded "It is often easier to believe than to doubt."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Wednesday - March 19, 1952

This is the news:

We now have almost all the returns from the Minnesota presidential primary. They show that more than 107-thousand persons ~~took the trouble to write~~ wrote-in the name of General Eisenhower. Harold Stassen, the winning Republican candidate, received 128-thousand votes. His name was printed on the ballot. Among the other names written-in by the voters: Senator Taft received almost 24-thousand votes... Governor Warren received 55-hundred. In the Democratic primary, Senator Humphrey, a native son, pledged to support the President, received 100-thousand votes. And Senator Kefauver received almost 20-thousand, write-in votes. As was the case after the New Hampshire primary, different politicians, read different meanings, into the Minnesota results. In a few minutes we'll hear a direct report from Minneapolis, and I'd like to summarize some of the "conclusions" the politicians are drawing from the surprisingly large write-in vote for General Eisenhower

In Washington today, the Senate Watchdog Committee issued a report sharply criticial of the rearmament program. The Senators say it has "produced a small number of guns...and a great amount of butter, with a considerable number of lollipops thrown in." The report says there is much apathy among government agencies... the slogan seems to be 'Don't disturb the civilian eceonomy.' The Senators feel that those responsible for the defense program "lack a sense of urgency." They say deliveries on defense hard goods.. planes, tanks, ammunition and guns..have fallen dangerously behind schedule. The annual report also notes the committee's efforts to eliminate waste in the defense effort. It says:"Americans must realize, that in total conflict, the margin of waste could easily be the margin between defeat and victory."

And Chairman Johnson of Texas, in another move, demanded today that the Air Force halt the construction of air bases in North Africa "until conditions can be cleaned up." The committee has heard a number of witnesses testify to waste on this project. Senator Johnson wants the secretary of defense to look into this. He says:" A 455-million dollar program, is not something that can be laughed off."

A House investigating committee charges that the air force took advantage of the Korean war to grab more funds than it needs or can use. The committee says the air force has been making " a mad rush" to spend money and has been guilty of "shameful waste" in its five and three-quarter billion dollar building program.

[redacted]

A House committee investigating the income tax scandals was told today that Adrian Aash, a suspended New York city agent, spent or saved almost 37-thousand dollars more than he reported as income from 1946 to 1950. The committee also was told that Ash accepted hotel and travel expenses when he went to Hollywood to consider a claim by Universal Pictures for a 20-million-dollar tax refund. Representative Kean of New Jersey, said he feels that businessmen who corrupt tax agents by travel pay, entertainment or any other means are engaged in conduct just as reprehensible as the agent who accepts these favors. He wishes there WAS a law to put such businessmen in jail.

The Wage Stabilization Board tonight is considering what recommendations to make in the steel dispute. Public members of the board are reported to have agreed that the C.I.O. steelworkers should be given benefits amounting to 18 to 20 cents an hour.

At the United Nations today, the United States challenged

Russia to permit the International Red Cross to investigate Communist charges that we are using germ warfare in North Korea and China. There was no direct reply from Mr. Malik of Russia.

The truce negotiators in Korea made some slight progress today on which ports of entry should be open to inspection by a neutral inspection team.. after an armistice is signed. Our Sabrejets damaged two enemy planes. General Van Fleet, celebrating his 60th birthday, told reporters that the Communists could break through our lines if they wanted to pay the price in casualties. But he's certain we could stop them and counter-attack. Today, the Pentagon added another 213 names to our casualty list in Korea. It now numbers 106,671 names.

The British government has protested to Spain against an attack on a British Protestant church in Seville.

Isreal's Premier Ben Gurion charges that: "Russia is the only country in the world today where Jews are denied the right to live as Jews."

An old friend, Stewart MacPherson has kept a close watch on the Minnesota primary. He's in our WCCO newsroom in Minnespolis. Stew, how do you size up the results?

(2 mins ending:

That's pretty much the picture from here, Ed)

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Wednesday, March 19, 1952
7:45-8:00 P.M.

MURROW: ... An old friend, Stewart MacPhearson, has kept a close watch on the Minnesota primary. He's in our WCCO Newsroom in Minneapolis.

Stu, how do you size up the results?

MAC PHEARSON: Well, the real meaning of the primary election results in Minnesota are just as bewildering to us in the Twin Cities, Ed, as they seem to be in New York. For instance, the Minneapolis man-on-the-street is asking the same question you've heard there: Was there a political deal between the Stassen forces and the Eisenhower organization? Well, we've tried to nail down the answer to that one, but we found no one who can or will speak with authority. This, we do know: Stassen campaigned intensively in this his home-state but he avoided criticizing Ike. His chief target was Taft. Stassen stated publicly he would support General Eisenhower, if he finds he cannot win the nomination himself. His campaign workers say x Ike would be their second choice also. Today many of them are saying that Stassen, at 44, would make a fine Vice President, that the Eisenhower-Stassen team would be unbeatable in November. But whether or not there was an undercover deal to stage a surprise demonstration of Eisenhower popularity in Minnesota - the impressive write-in vote for Ike was too spontaneous to have been staged that way. The political observers we've talked to say this insurgent swing to Ike is just another expression of the political independence of the typical voter in Minnesota.

In this state, the Right and the Left Wing groups are the fringe elements in both parties. The average Minnesota voter, of German or Scandinavian stock, lives conservatively and he votes independently. This liberalism is rooted in the old non-partisan league which sprang up in North Dakota back in the '20s, and then it spread its political influence thrucut the Northwest area. The Minnesota farmer is an independent voter who puts his mark in both columns of the ballot. For instance, Minnesota elected a Republican Governor in 1940, but went heavily Democratic in the Presidential campaign. The same thing happened in 1944, and they gave Truman a 210,000-vote margin over Dewey, while reelecting Republican Governor Youngdahl by a margin of 123,000 votes. Traditionally, there has been this swing of more than 300,000 independent votes which go for the candidates rather than for the party. It's not surprising, in view of this free wheeling at the polls, that Mr. Average Voter was willing and even eager yesterday to write in the names of candidates that were not on the ballot. There were more than a quarter of a million write-ins, about half of all the votes that were cast in both parties.

If General Ike was still waiting, as he said, for that clear call to duty in the White House, then he should have heard clearly the clamor that went up for him at the Minnesota polls yesterday. The Call of the North, you might say, borrowing a line from Stewart Edward White. That's pretty much the picture from here, Ed.

MURROW: Thank you, Stewart MacPhearson!

-30-

Ediphone trans./E. Scheiner

Edward R. Murrow: March 19, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

The Minnesota Primary could be regarded as something of a miracle, although a most minor one. This is so not only because of General Eisenhower's showing, which his headquarters terms "magnificent, astounding and almost incredible"; not alone because a General on Eisenhower's staff reported that the supreme commander got "more jovial by the hour as the bulletins came in." Paul Hoffman, who emerges as the real spokesman for Eisenhower says: "The results show America wants Ike"; says Ike is now thinking "as a candidate." None of these reactions, of course, warrants the phrase minor miracle; and Mr. Hoffman's statement about Eisenhower's "thinking" isn't even news. He's been "thinking" that way for many months.

The unusual aspect of this primary is that everybody involved seems able to find grounds for pleasure and satisfaction. Mr. Stassen is surprised and gratified at the low write-in vote for Senator Taft; Senator Taft regards the result as a definite rebuff for Mr. Stassen, (and that of course causes the Senator no pain.) The results convince the MacArthur supporters that only he can save America from the pro-Soviet forces behind both Truman and Eisenhower. So everyone is somewhat gratified at the result, even though those aside from the Eisenhower ~~rependers~~ supporters must gain their comfort in a sort of negative fashion. The General's supporters are convinced that in a matter of a couple of weeks the whole position has been changed; the question before New Hampshire was how to stop Taft; the question they think now is, how to stop Eisenhower.

This could be the beginning of a great groundswell that would give the General the nomination; but there have been only two primaries out of sixteen; and Stassen, not Eisenhower, won the Minnesota delegation, and historically it is delegates and not the wishes of the voters who determine the name of the Party's nominee. Also, speaking from a purely historical point of view, President Truman was right when he said "State primaries are eyewash." The next one comes in Wisconsin on April 1st. There they don't count write-ins. Taft and Stassen are campaigning there now. Stassen invites Eisenhower supporters to vote for him; says his views are closest to the General's. But the supporters of Governor Earl Warren, who is also entered in Wisconsin, say the Governor reflects more truly the General's views. If this sort of thing goes on, the Republican candidates - except for Senator Taft - are in some danger of beginning to sound as though they wish to be prominently mentioned as Vice Presidential candidates with General Eisenhower.

The Democrats made some news today,too. National Chairman McKinney emerged from two days of conferences with Mr. Truman at Key West; said the President might not run for re-election if there is a satisfactory truce in Korea. His basic decision to run or not to run will rest on the success or failure in resolving the Korean situation satisfactorily. Chairman McKinney thinks that if the President doesn't run, he will not attempt to dictate the Democratic nominee but will favor an open Convention. The failure of a retiring President to influence the choice of his successor would be as unusual as a Primary in which everyone was pleased with the result. President Truman's emphasis, through Chairman McKinney, upon the importance of a Korean settlement may be regarded by the Eisenhower supporters as giving the General all the latitude and opportunity he may want if he decides to come home. For the emphasis was upon Korea, with nothing said about Europe. # And Senator Dick Russell of Georgia thinks he has a better chance of winning the nomination than any Democrat in the field; doesn't think Mr. Truman will be a candidate.

All the day's political news, very interesting and inconclusive.

Those involved in the Minnesota Primary are not exactly tossing bouquets at one another, now that the results are known. It reminds me of something George Barr Baker once wrote:"If I was as bad as they say I am, and you were as good as you look; I wonder which one would feel the worse, if each for the other was took." As for the result itself, Demosthenes summed it up when he said:"Each man believes, what he wishes to believe."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

WEDNESDAY - MARCH 19, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

We now have almost all the returns from the Minnesota presidential primary. They show that more than 107-thousand persons wrote-in the name of General Eisenhower. Harold Stassen, the winning Republican candidate, received 128-thousand votes. His name was printed on the ballot. Among the other names written-in by the voters, Senator Taft received almost 24-thousand votes - Governor Warren recieved 55-hundred. In the Democratic primary, Senator Humphrey, a native son, pledged to support the President, received 100-thousand votes. And Senator Kefauver received almost 20-thousand write-in votes. As was the case after the New Hampshire primary, different politicains read different meanings into the Minnesota results. In a few minutes we'll hear a direct report from Minneapolis and I'd like to summarize some of the "conclusions" the politicians are drawing from the surprisingly large write-in vote for General Eisenhower.

In Washington today, the Senate Watchdog Committee issued a report sharply critical of the rearmament program. The Senators say it has "produced a small number of guns - and a great amount of butter, with a considerable number of lollipops thrown in." The report says there is much apathy among government agencies: the slogan seems to be 'Don't disturb the civilian economy.' The Senators feel that those responsible for the defense program "lack a sense of urgency." They say deliveries on defense hard goods - planes, tanks, guns and ammunition - have fallen dangerously behind schedule. The annual report also notes the committee's efforts to elininate waste in the defense effort. It says: "Americans must realize that in total conflict, the margin of waste could easily be the margin between defeat and victory."

And Chairman Johnson of Texas, in another move, demanded today that the Air Force halt the construction of air bases in North Africa "until conditions can be cleaned up." The committee has heard a number of witnesses testify to waste on this project. Senator Johnson wants the Secretary of Defense to look into this. He says: "A 455-million-dollar program is not something that can be laughed off."

A House investigating committee charges that the Air Force took advanta of the Korean war to grab more funds than it needs or can use. The committee says the Air Force has been making "a mad rush" to spend money and has been guilty of "shameful waste" in its five and three-quarter-billion-dollar building program.

A House committee investigating the income tax scandals was told today that Adrian Aash, a suspended New York City agent spent, or saved, almost 37-thousand dollars more than he reported as income from 1946 to 1950. The committee also was told that Ash accepted hotel and travel expenses when he went to Hollywoo to consider a claim by Universal Pictures for a 20-million-dollar tax refund. Representative Kean of New Jersey, said he feels that businessmen, who corrupt tax agents by travel pay, entertainment or any other means, are engaged in conduct just as reprehensible as the agent who accepts these favors. He wishes there was a law to put such businessmen in jail.

The Wage Stabilization Board tonight is considering what recommendations to make in the steel dispute. Public members of the board are reported to have agreed that the C.I.O. steelworkers should be given benefits amounting to 18 to 20 cents an hour.

At the United Nations today, the United States challenged Russia to permit the International Red Cross to investigate communist charges, that we are using germ warfare in North Korea and China. There was no direct reply from Mr. Malik of Russia.

The truce negotiators in Korea made some slight progress today on which ports of entry should be open to inspection by a neutral inspection team - after an armistice is signed. Our Sabrejets damaged two enemy planes. General Van Fleet, celebrating his 60th birthday, told reporters that the Communists could break through our lines, if they wanted to pay the price in casualties. But he's certain we could stop them and counter-attack. Today, the Pentagon added another 213 names to our casualty list in Korea. It now numbers 106,671 names.

The British Government has protested to Spain against an attack on a British Protestant church in Seville.

Israel's Premier Ben Gurion charges that: "Russia is the only country in the world today where Jews are denied the right to live as Jews."

An old friend, Stewart MacPherson has kept a close watch on the Minnesota primary. He's in our WCCO newsroom in Minneapolis. Stew, how do you size up the results?

MACPHERSON: Well, the real meaning of the primary election results in Minnesota are just as bewildering to us in the Twin Cities, Ed, as they seem to be in New York. For instance, the Minneapolis man-on-the-street is asking the same question you've heard there: Was there a political deal between the Stassen forces and the Eisenhower organization? Well, we've tried to nail down the answer to that one, but we found no one who can or will speak with authority. This, we do know: Stassen campaigned intensively in this, his home-state but he avoided criticizing Ike. His chief target was Taft. Stassen stated publicly he would support General Eisenhower, if he finds he cannot win the nomination himself. His campaign workers say Ike would be their second choice also. Today many of them are saying that Stassen, at 44, would make a fine Vice President; that the Eisenhower-Stassen team would be unbeatable in November. But whether or not there was an undercover deal to stage a surprise demonstration of Eisenhowe popularity in Minnesota - the impressive write-in vote for Ike was too spontaneous to have been staged that way. The political observers we've talked to say this insurgent swing to Ike is just another expression of the political independence of the typical voter in Minnesota.

In this state, the Right and the Left Wing groups are the fringe elements in both parties. The average Minnesota voter, of German or Scandinavian stock, lives conservatively and he votes independently. This liberalism is rooted in the old non-partisan league which sprang up in North Dakota back in the '20s, and then it spread its political influence thruout the Northwest area. The Minnesota farmer is an independent voter who puts his mark in both columns of the ballot. For instance, Minnesota elected a Republican Governor in 1940, but went heavily Democratic in the Presidential campaign. The same thing happened in 1944, and they gave Truman a 210,000-vote margin over Dewey, while reelecting Republican Governor Youngdahl by a margin of 123,000 votes. Traditionally, there has been this swing of more than 300,000 independent votes which go for the candidates rather than for the party. It's not surprising, in view of this free wheeling at the polls, that Mr. Average Voter was willing and even eager yesterday to write-in the names of candidates that were not on the ballot. There were more than a quarter of a million write-ins, about half of all the votes that were cast in both parties.

If General Ike was still waiting, as he said, for that clear call to duty in the White House, then he should have heard clearly the clamor that went up for him at the Minnesota polls yesterday. The "Call of the North" you might say, borrowing a line from Stewart Edward White. That's pretty much the picture from here, Ed.

MURROW: Thank you, Stewart MacPherson..

The Minnesota Primary could be regarded as something of a miracle - although a most minor one. This is so, not only because of General Eisenhower's showing, which his headquarters terms "magnificent, astounding and almost incredible"; not alone because a General on Eisenhower's staff reported that the supreme commander got "more jovial by the hour as the bulletins came in." Paul Hoffman, who emerges as the real spokesman for Eisenhower says: "The results show America wants Ike"; says Ike is now thinking "as a candidate." None of these reactions, of course, warrants the phrase minor miracle; and Mr. Hoffman's statement about Eisenhower's "thinking" isn't even news. He's been "thinking" that way for many months.

The unusual aspect of this primary is that everybody involved seems able to find grounds for pleasure and satisfaction. Mr. Stassen is surprised and gratified at the low write-in vote for Senator Taft; Senator Taft regards the result as a definite rebuff for Mr. Stassen, (and that of course causes the Senator no pain). The results convince the MacArthur supporters that only he can save America from the pro-Soviet forces behind both Truman and Eisenhower. So everyone is somewhat gratified at the result, even though those aside from the Eisenhower supporters must gain their comfort in a sort of negative fashion. The General's supporters are convinced that in a matter of a couple of weeks, the whole position has been changed; the question before New Hampshire was how to stop Taft; the question they think now is, how to stop Eisenhower.

This could be the beginning of a great groundswell that would give the General the nomination; but there have been only two primaries out of sixteen, and Stassen, not Eisenhower, won the Minnesota delegation - and historically it is delegates and not the wishes of the voters who determine the name of the Party's nominee. Also, speaking from a purely historical point of view, President Truman was right when he said "State primaries are eyewash." The next one comes in Wisconsin on April 1st. There they don't write-ins. Taft and Stassen are campaigning there now. Stassen invites Eisenhower supporters to vote for him; says his views are closest to the General's. But the supporters of Governor Earl Warren, who is also entered in Wisconsin, say the Governor reflects more truly the General's views. (If this sort of thing goes on, the Republican candidates - except for Senator Taft - are in some danger of beginning to sound as though they wish to be prominently mentioned as Vice Presidential candidates with General Eisenhower.)

The Democrats made some news today, too. National Chairman McKinney emerged from two days of conferences with Mr. Truman at Key West; said the President might not run for re-election if there is a satisfactory truce in Korea. His basic decision to run, or not to run, will rest on the success or failure in resolving the Korean situation satisfactorily. Chairman McKinney thinks that if the President doesn't run, he will not attempt to dictate the Democratic nominee, but will favor an open Convention. The failure of a returing President to influence the choice of his successor, would be as unusual as a primary in which everyone was pleased with the result. President Truman's emphasis, through Chairman McKinney, upon the importance of a Korean settlement, may be regarded by the Eisenhower supporters as giving the General all the latitude and opportunti he may want, if he decides to come home. For the emphasis was upon Korea, with nothing said about Europe. And Senator Dick Russell of Georgia thinks he has a better chance of winning the nomination than any Democrat in the field; doesn't think Mr. Truman will be a candidate.

All the day's political news, very interesting and inconclusive.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Those involved in the Minnesota Primary are not exactly tossing bouquets at one another, now that the results are known. It reminds me of something George Barr Baker once wrote: "If I was as bad as they say I am, and you were as good as you look, I wonder which one would feel the worse, if each for the other was took." As for the result itself - Demosthenes summed it up when he said: "Each man believes what he wishes to believe."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Thursday - March 29, 1952

This is the news:

General Eisenhower is "astonished" by the large write-in vote he received in Minnesota. He says the "mounting number of his fellow citizens, who are voting to make him the Republican presidential nominee, are forcing him to re-examine his personal position, and past decision." This means he is now thinking of actively seeking the nomination, campaigning a little harder, perhaps coming home sooner than he may have planned. The General issued a statement at his headquarters in Paris, within hours of two other important political developments. Senator Taft, angry at New Jersey's Governor Driscoll, withdrew from the New Jersey primary, where both his name, and General Eisenhower's are on the ballot. And the President, in Key West, contradicted and calirified the statement Democratic Chairman McKinney made yesterday, after talking to the President for two days.

First, the Eisenhower story: The General issued his statement in response to requests by correspondents, who wanted him to say something about the write-in vote in Minnesota. My colleague, David Schoenbrun tonight recorded from Paris his informed views, on some of the reasons

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Thursday, March 20, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 P.M.

MURROW: ... First, theEisenhower story. The general issued his statement in response to requests by correspondents, who wanted him to say something about the write-in vote in Minnesota. My colleague, David Schoenbrun, tonight recorded from Paris his informed view on some of the reasons why the general is being forced to take another look at his January statement; the statement that he would stick to his military job in the absence of a clear cut call to political duty. Here is Dave Schoenbrun's report.

SCHOENBRUN: There appeared no less than five compelling reasons behind Eisenhower's decision tonight to 're-examine' his future. First, a call to duty in two successive primaries; secondly, he's no longer indispensable over here; thirdly, the need to keep politics out of the Army; fourth, the Atlantic alliance would no longer raise grave objections, and fifth, a great opportunity to serve his country in its highest post and perhaps a chance to re-unite the nations.

These reasons would seem to ~~mkxx up~~ add up to an inescapable conclusion, that the re-examination would lead Ike to resign very soon and go home as an active candidate for the presidency. It doesn't necessarily mean a barnstorming tour by Eisenhower, but it could mean that Ike would explain himself on broad policy issues to the American people and then wait and see what happens in Chicago in July. If he makes this decision and the weight of logic points to it then he must move soon. It will take several weeks to get clearance from the 14-NATO nations on his resignation and on his replacement.

Therefore if he wants to be out of here before the conventions in July, he must leave early in June. To leave early in June, he must inform his superiors very soon. It would appear then that his hour of decision must sound in the next 3-wks. And it seems that Eisenhower will be coming home between May 15th and June 1st. This is David Schoenbrun reporting from Paris. I return you now to Ed. R. Murrow in New York.

(30)

why the General is being forced to take another look at his January statement.. that he would stick to his military job in the "absence of a clear cut call to political duty." Here's Dave Schoenbrun's report:

(1;30 ending ~~may 15 and January 1~~ NOW BACK TO ERM IN NEW YORK)

Schoenbrun's information that the General ~~may~~ will come home after the middle of May, ties in with the desire of Paul Hoffman, a leading Eisenhower supporter, just back from a visit to the General. The last presidential primary in this country occurs in Oregon on May 16. Mr. Hoffman does not want Ike to return before then, fears this would put him in "a difficult position, because of the tremendous insistence of various states to hear the General make speeches." So MUCH for today's Eisenhower story.

The Taft story found the Senator from Ohio angrily withdrawing from the New Jersey primary on April 15. The Senator accuses New Jersey's Governor Driscoll of a lack of good faith...political trickey.. repudiating a position of neautrality.. and taking steps to "corrupt the intent" of the state's preferential primary. Senator Taft is angry, because after the date passed for any candidate to withdraw from the primary, Governor Driscoll announced his support of General Eisenhower. Taft says this means the whole Republican state organization will work for Ike..it means pressure on party members.. it means an atmospehere where there cannot be a "fair" contest. Therefore he has ordered a halt to all efforts on his behalf.. ordered the closing of Taft headquarters in New Jersey.

Governor Driscoll says he cannot understand Senator Taft's position of today. Because only yesterday Taft said he knew all along that Driscoll was for Eisenhower. Governor Driscoll interpretes the Taft decision to mean: Taft is a poor loser..he has withdrawn from New Jersey because of the unmistakable fact that the New Hampshire and Minnesota primaries have proven that "the Taft drive has collapsed."

AND Harold Stassen..who is campaigning against Taft in the Wisconsin primary..took another opportunity to attack Taft. Stassen says: Senator Taft's withdrawal from New Jersey is a confession of weakness of his candidacy, when it is submitted to the will of the people...undoubtedly influenced by his very weak showing in the Minnesota primary.

So much for the Republicans. The Democratic party leadership, in the person of the President, the leader of the party, and the party chairman, Frank McKinney, are having difficulties of their own. Yesterday, after two days of talk about politics, Chairman McKinney told reporters: he believed that the President's decision on whether to run for re-election is hinged to the Korean truce talks. McKinney said he felt that if there were a successful settlement in Korea, the President would bow out. He also said he expects definite word from the President by May 15.. when party leaders meet to plan their convention. And he said he felt that if Mr. Truman did not run it would be an "open" convention.. that is, the party leaders would not attempt to dictate candidates.

Mr. Truman, at a news conference in Key West, today knocked down all of these McKinney impressions. For one thing, he said, Korea has no relation to his political plans. Korea does not enter into politics in this country at all. He never comments on Korea at a news conference.. it might upset the apple cart ..(the negotiations.) For another thing..said the President--he will announce his future plans only when he is good and ready.. not before. And finally, he never heard of an "open" convention. There never is an open convention if the President wants to be re-elected. And, further, he has never seen an open convention..where party leaders are not committed in advance to a definite slate.

When reporters asked the President about General Eisenhower, he was equally emphatic. Here's what he said: The General is at liberty to come home from Shape whenever he deems its safe and proper. He can use his own judgmenet. He has a perfect right to quit whenever he wants to.. the President has told that to the General personally. Mr. Truman believes Ike is doing a good job. He's not interested in him as a politician. He is interested in Eisenhower's job in Europe. When one reporter suggested it might be the President's "duty" to call Ike home, the President said: its his duty to see that we attain our objective in Europe. And Eisenhower is the key man there.

The General's chief of staff at Shape--General Alfred Gruenther--is coming home tomorrow to testify before Congress on the foreign aid bill. Some Senators want to hear General Grunther before deciding whether they want to call General Ike home to testify.

Today, Defense Secretary Lovett testified that the Administration request for just under 8-billions is "very close to an imprudent figure, on the low side." He pleaded with Senators not to cut it.. said if they did, he hoped it would be a general cut with the Joint Chiefs of Staff permitted to apply the reductions to individual items.

Undersecretary of Air Gilpatrick said today that a new F-86 Sabrejet.. expected to have more speed and power than the enemy's Mig...will start coming off the production lines next month. He said he doesn't know when it will reach our airmen in Korea.

Over North Korea today, our flyers shot down five Migs, and dmaaged five others. One of those damaged was a new type enemy plane. There is no report yet on our losses, if any. The ground fighting was again comparatively quiet. And at Panmunjom, the United Nations spokesman announced that we might agree to secret talks with the enemy on the prisoner of war exchange. Communist reporters have suggested secret talks to allied newsmen. Today, General Nuckols, the U.N. spokesman, said we would agree, if the Communists indicate a desire to stop making daily reports on the meetings.. to wait until some definite result, or lack of result, is available, before telling newsmen what it is. The United Nations view is that we will overlook nothing in an attempt to speed negotiations.

At the United Nations meeting here in New York today, Nationalist China's delegate charged that epidemics are sweeping the Chinese mainland because the Communists cannot handle them. The Nationalist delegate said the enemy has purged, DOCTORS -- terrorized and driven them abroad.. or reserved them for a "privileged few."

The Senate today ratified the Japanese peace treaty. The vote was 66 to 10.. Democratic Senator McCarran and nine Republicans voting against it. This formally ends the war against Japan, and recognizes Japan's full soverignty over her home islands. The Senate also approved a security treaty, whereby Japan grants us the right to keep military forces in and around Japan to maintain peace anywhere in the Far East.

The House committee investigating tax SCANDALS was told today that Henry Grunewald had more than 233-thousand dollars in "unexplainable income" in 1949 and 1950. Mr. Grunewald is the so-called mystery man who has refused to appear before the committee. In the Grunewald files there was a check made out by Senator Owen Brewster, Maine Republican. Senator Brewster hurriedly took the stand and told the Congressmen this story: in 1950 he was chairman of the Senate Republican campaign committee. Two candidates.. Nixon in California and Young in North Dakota.. "besieged" him for funds. He was not supposed to help any candidates in primary races. But he went to his bank, borrowed ten thousand dollars, turned it over to Grunewald, and Grunweald sent five thousand each to Nixon and Young. Both won.. and later returned the money to Brewster. The Senator testified that Grunewald was not exactly a mystery man to him; he met him through Vice President Barkley.. understands he's a Democrat.. AND is apparently well known by both Republicans and Democrqts..

The Wage Stabilization Board is in session tonight trying to reach a settlement in the steel dispute. Chairman Feinsinger, who collapsed BECAUSE OF fatigue early this morning, now says the Board will soon come up with a "darn good settlement." The C.I.O. steelworkers have called a strike for midnight Sunday. And United States Steel has started to bank some of its furnaces in the Chicago area.

The highest court in South Africa, by a unanimous decision, [redacted] TODAY declared unconstiutional the government's law restricting the voting rights of the few non-whites who now have the ballot. The decision brought a demand for the resignation of Prime Minister Daniel F. Malan's government. It poses the most important constiutional issues in the 42-year history of South Africa which has but two million white persons in its 12 million population.

The State Department today denied that we have tried to use pressure on Iran to settle its oil dispute with Great Britain. Premier Mossadegh has charged that President Truman refused to help him get an American loan unless Iran accepted British proposals to settle the dispute. The State Department says we cannot lend large sums to Iran when that country has "the immediate means of helping herself"... the disputed oil [redacted]s and [redacted] refineries.

And Secretary of State Acheson revealed TODAY THAT we have not spent any of the [redacted]n 100-million dollars provided by Congress to attract refugees from behind the Iron Curtain into the North Atlantic army. Mr. Acheson gave no explanation at an open House hearing. Last January the Russians charged this act of Congress was an "aggressive act" against the Soviet Union.

General Eisenhower is "re-examining" an earlier decision not to return home before convention time. Apparently he is following a bit of advice Andrew Jackson once gave: "Take time to deliberate. But when the time for action arrives, stop thinking and go in." If Ike changes his mind and does come back, he might turn to these lines by Wendell Phillips: "I will utter what I believe today, even if it should contradict all I said yesterday."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

THURSDAY - MARCH 20, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

General Eisenhower is "astonished" by the large write-in vote he received in Minnesota. He says the "mounting number of his fellow citizens who are voting to make him the Republican presidential nominee, are forcing him to re-examine his personal position and past decision." This means he is now thinking of actively seeking the nomination, campaigning a little harder, perhaps coming home sooner than he may have planned. The General issued a statement at his headquarters in Paris within hours of two other important political developments. Senator Taft, angry at New Jersey's Governor Driscoll, withdrew from the New Jersey primary, where both his name and General Eisenhower's are on the ballot. And the President, in Key West, contradicted and clarified the statement Democratic Chairman McKinney made yesterday after talking to the President for two days.

First, the Eisenhower story: The General issued his statement in response to requests by correspondents, who wanted him to say something about the write-in vote in Minnesota. My colleague, David Schoenbrun tonight recorded from Paris his informed views on some of the reasons why General Eisenhower is being forced to take another look at his January statement that he would stick to his military job in the "absence of a clear cut call to political duty." Here's Dave Schoenbrun's report:

SCHOENBRUN: There appeared no less than five compelling reasons behind Eisenhower' decision tonight to 're-examine' his future. First, a call to duty in two successi primaries; secondly, he's no longer indispensable over here; thirdly, the need to keep politics out of the Army; fourth, the Atlantic alliance would no longer raise grave objections; and fifth, a great opportunity to serve his country in its highest post and perhaps a chance to re-unite the nations.

These reasons would seem to add up to an inescapable conclusion, that the re-examination would lead Ike to resign very soon and go home as an active candidate for the presidency. It doesn't necessarily mean a barnstorming tour by Eisenhower, but it could mean that Ike would explain himself on broad policy issues to the American people and then wait and see what happens in Chicago in July. If he makes this decision and the weight of logic points to it then he must move soon. It will take several weeks to get clearance from the 14-NATO nations on his resignation and on his replacement.

Therefore, if he wants to be out of here before the conventions in July, he must leave early in June. To leave early in June, he must inform his superiors very soon. It would appear then that his hour of decision must sound in the next three weeks. And it seems that Eisenhower will be coming home between May 15th and June 1st.

This is David Schoenbrun reporting from Paris. I return you now to Edward R. Murrow in New York.

MURROW: Schoenbrun's information that the General will come home after the middle of May ties in with the desire of Paul Hoffman, a leading Eisenhower supporter, just back from a visit to the General. The last presidential primary in this country occurs in Oregon on May 16. Mr. Hoffman does not want Ike to return before then; fears this would put him in "a difficult position because of the tremendous insistence of various states to hear the General make speeches." So much for today's Eisenhower story.

The Taft story found the Senator from Ohio angrily withdrawing from the New Jersey primary on April 15. The Senator accuses New Jersey's Governor Driscoll of a lack of good faith - political trickey - repudiating a position of neutrality - and taking steps to "corrupt the intent" of the state's preferential primary. Senator Taft is angry, because after the date passed for any candidate to withdraw from the primary, Governor Driscoll announced his support of General Eisenhow Taft says this means the whole Republican state organization will work for Ike: it means pressure on party members; it means an atmosphere where there cannot be a "fair" contest. Therefor he has ordered a halt to all efforts on his behalf; ordered the closing of Taft headquarters in New Jersey.

Governor Driscoll says he cannot understand Senator Taft's position of today. Because only yesterday Taft said he knew all along that Driscoll was for Eisenhower. Governor Driscoll interpretes the Taft decision to mean: Taft is a poor loser; he has withdrawn from New Jersey because of the unmistakable fact that the New Hampshire and Minnesota primaries have proven that "the Taft drive has collapsed."

And Harold Stassen - who is campaigning against Taft in the Wisconsin primary - took another opportunity to attack Taft. Stassen says: Senator Taft's withdrawal from New Jersey is a confession of weakness of his candidacy, when it is submitted to the will of the people - undoubtedly influenced by his very weak showing in the Minnesota primary.

So much for the Republicans. The Democratic party leadership, in the person of the President, the leader of the party, and the party chairman, Frank McKinney, are having difficulties of their own. Yesterday, after two days of talk about politics, Chairman McKinney told reporters: he believed that the President's decision on whether to run for re-election is hinged to the Korean truce talks. McKinney said he felt that if there were a successful settlement in Korea, the President would bow out. He also said he expects definite word from the President by May 15, when party leaders meet to plan their convention. And he said he felt that if Mr. Truman did not run it would be an "open" convention that is, the party leaders would not attempt to dictate candidates.

Mr. Truman, at a news conference in Key West, today knocked down all of these McKinney impressions. For one thing, he said, Korea has no relation to his political plans. Korea does not enter into politics in this country at all. He never comments on Korea at a news conference: it night upset the apple cart - (the negotiations). For another thing, said the President, he will announce his future plans only when he is good and ready - not before. And finally, he never heard of an "open" convention. There never is an open convention, if the President wants to be re-elected. And, further, he has never seen an open convention where party leaders are not committed in advance to a definite slate.

When reporters asked the President about General Eisenhower, he was equally emphatic. Here's what he said: The General is at liberty to come home from SHAPE whenever he deems it's safe and proper. He can use his own judgment. He has a perfect right to quit whenever he wants to - the President has told that to the General personally. Mr. Truman believes Ike is doing a good job. He's not interested in him as a politician. He is interested in Eisenhower's job in Europe. When one reporter suggested it might be the President's duty to call Ike home, the President said: It's his duty to see that we attain our objective in Europe. And Eisenhower is the key man there.

The General's Chief of Staff at SHAPE, General Alfred Grunther, is coming home tomorrow to testify before Congress on the Foreign Aid Bill. Some Senator want to hear General Grunther before deciding whether they want to call General Ike home to testify.

Today, Defense Secretary Lovett testified that the Administration request for just under 8-billions is "very close to an imprudent figure on the low side." He pleaded with Senators not to cut it: said if they did, he hoped it would be a general cut with the Joint Chiefs of Staff permitted to apply the reductions to individual items.

Undersecretary of Air Gilpatrick said today that a new F-86 Sabrejet - expected to have more speed and power than the enemy's MIG - will start coming off the production lines next month. He said he doesn't know when it will reach our airmen in Korea.

Over North Korea today, our flyers shot down five MIGs - damaged five others. One of those damaged was a new type enemy plane. There is no report yet on our losses, if any. The ground fighting was again comparatively quiet. And at Panmunjon, the United Nations spokesman announced that we might agree to secret talks with the enemy on the prisoner-of-war exchange. Communist reporters have suggested secret talks to allied newsmen. Today, General Muckols, the U.N. spokesman, said we would agree, if the communists indicate a desire to stop making daily reports on the meetings - to wait until some definite result, or lack of result, is available before telling newsmen what it is. The United Nations view is that we will overlook nothing in an attempt to speed negotiations.

At the United Nations meeting here in New York today, Nationalist China's delegate charged that epidemics are sweeping the Chinese mainland because the Communists cannot handle them. The Nationalist delegate said the enemy has purged doctors, terrorized and driven them abroad, or reserved them for a "privileged few."

The Senate today ratified the Japanese peace treaty. The vote was 66 to 10: Democratic Senator McCarran and nine Republicans voting against it. This formally eands the war against Japan, and recognizes Japan's full soverignty over her home islands. The Senate also approved a security treaty whereby Japan grants us the right to keep military forces in and around Japan to maintain peace anywhere in the Far East.

The House committee investigating tax scandals was told today that Henry Grunewald had more than 233-thousand dollars in "unexplainable income" in 1949 and 1950. Mr. Grunewald is the so-called mystery man who has refused to appear before the committee. In the Grunewald files there was a check made out by Senator Owen Brewster, Maine Republican. Senator Brewster hurriedly took the stand and told the Congressmen this story: In 1950, he was chairman of the Senate Republican campaign committee. Two candidates, Nixon in California and Young in North Dakota, "besieged" him for funds. He was not supposed to help any candidates in primary races. But he went to his bank, borrowed ten thousand dollars, turned it over to Grunewald, and Grunewald sent five thousand each to Nixon and Young. Both men won, and later returned the money to Brewster. The Senator testified that Grunewald was not exactly a mystery man to him: he met him through Vice President Barkely; understands he's a Democrat and is apparently well known by both Republicans and Democrats.

The Wage Stabilization Board is in session tonight trying to reach a settlement in the steel dispute. Chairman Feinsinger, who collapsed because of fatigue early this morning, now says the Board will soon come up with a "darn good settlement." The C.I.O. steelworkers have called a strike for midnight Sunday. And United States Steel has started to bank some of its furnaces in the Chicago area.

The highest court in South Africa, by a unanimous decision, today declared unconstitutional the government's law restricting the voting rights of the few non-whites who now have the ballot. The decision brought a demand for the resignation of Prime Minister Daniel F. Malan's government. It poses the most important constitutional issues in the 42-year history of South Africa which has but two million white persons in its 12-million population.

The State Department today denied that we have tried to use pressure on Iran to settle its oil dispute with Great Britain. Premier Mossadegh has charged that President Truman refused to help him get an American loan unless Iran accepted British proposals to settle the dispute. The State Department says we cannot lend large sums to Iran, when that country has "the immediate means of helping herself" - the disputed oil and refineries.

And Secretary of State Acheson revealed today that we have not spent any of the 100-million dollars provided by Congress to attract refugees from behind the Iron Curtain into the North Atlantic army. Mr. Acheson gave no explanation at an open House hearing. Last January the Russians charged this act of Congress was an "aggressive act" against the Soviet Union.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: General Eisenhower is "re-examining" an earlier decision not to return home before convention time. Apparently he is following a bit of advice Andrew Jackson once gave: "Take time to deliberate. But when the time for action arrives, stop thinking and go in." If Ike changes his mind and does come back, he might turn to these lines by Wendell Phillips: "I will utter what I believe today, even if it should contradict all I said yesterday."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Friday - March 21, 1952

This is the news:

The steel industry says the proposed settlement of its dispute with the C.I.O. steelworkers is "unfair and unreasonable." / An industry statement says the Wage Stabilization Board "could not have conceivably made recommendations less in the public interest, or more disruptive of our economy." / The Board recommended a 17, and a half cents an hour pay increase, with an additional five cents an hour in other benefits. / The industry says the terms would actually cost almost 30 cents per hour per employe, in direct costs; and 60 cents per hour in total costs. / The industry says this would come to one billion dollars a year...could add more than 12-dollars to the price of a ton of steel. / The Board recommended the union shop. The industry says its solidly opposed to what it calls this "long step backward, in the age old struggle for individual freedom." But the steel industry has agreed to meet next week, to renew talks with the union, which has accepted the Wage Board's proposal. And postponed the threatened Sunday strike until April eighth, pending the industry's acceptance of the Board's recommendations.

The government's cost of living index dropped six-tenths of a per cent in February. That's the sharpest drop since December of 1949. It was due largely to a drop in retail food prices.. two point one per cent. The new lower index will mean a one cent an hour pay cut for more than a million railroad employes whose contracts are tied to the cost of living index. [redacted]

Secretary of Defense Lovett told Senators today: there are now "some" Chinese Communists fighting against the French in Indo-China. They crossed the border some time ago. He has no figures indicating that there is any "substantial amount" of Chinese fighting there now. He does know that the Chinese have supplied "a substantial amount " of equipment to aid the Communist guerrillas in Indo-China. Mr. Lovett said he received his information from "military authorities there." But in Paris, the French Ministry for the Associated States of Indo-China says: "We have received no information allowing us to suppose that Chinese troops have crossed the Indo-Chinese border."

The United Nations today offered to help the enemy it is fighting in Korea. Trygvie Lie, the secretary general, offers North Korea and Communist China aid from the World Health Organization, to combat the epidemics the enemy has been reporting. Mr. Lie requested a reply as soon as possible. ~~At today's Disarmament Commission meeting, Sir Gladwyn Jebb of Great Britain said that the Soviet Union admits that its charges that we dropped germs from planes are false, but it by failing to accept an inquiry by an impartial International Red Cross commission, Sir Gladwyn said the Russians spread this lie in a propaganda campaign in order to absolve the North Korean and Chinese Communists government of any blame for the epidemics, to pin it on "the misled foreigners" and to direct a great deal of hate to the Western nations.~~

In Korea today: ground fighting was limited.. our fighter-bombers attacked freight cars in North Korea.. and our negotiators turned down an enemy "compromise" on exchanging war prisoners: they still want to swap the eleven and a half thousand MEN they hold for the 132-thousand we hold.. and insist we send back men who might not want to go back to Communist land.

General Ridgeway today told Japanese newspaper editors: the Russians have a great many planes in Siberia and Sakhalin..could ATTACK Japan's northernmost island in 20 minutes.. are using [redacted] Communists inside Japan, to seize control of labor unions and publications. General Ridgeway says our troops are remaining in Japan for the sole purpose of opposing the [redacted] threat of Soviet military power.

Army Secretary Pace today acted to clean up [redacted] the waste exposed by a Senate committee in the construction of North African air bases. The two top army engineers were have been relieved.. he's going to try to [redacted] recover some of the funds spent improperly..improve the audit and procurement systems and make an impartial survey of what's been going on.

A House committee today voted to ask the Justice Department to examine the testimony of William Power Maloney for possible perjury. He's the attorney for Henry Grunewald, the so-called mystery man. The committee claims that it has evidence to disprove Mr. Maloney's testimony that he never [redacted] borrowed money from Grunewald, never interfered in an alcolohol tax unit case involving Grunewald. Mr. Maloney testified today that three years ago he asked Republican Senator Bridges of

New Hampshire to intercede with the Bureau of Internal Revenu in a five million dollar TAX case. It involved Hyman Harvey KLEIN, A Baltimore liquor dealer, and has not been settled yet. Mr. Maloney said he talked to Bridges about it two or three times.. believed the case was unjust to Mr. Klein.

Chairman McCarran of the Senate Internal Security Committee charged today that Owen Lattimore, A WITNESS for 12 days, testified to "many flagrant and significant untruths." AND was contemptuous of the committee. The committee has not yet decided whether to take legal action. Mr. Lattimore opened his hearing with a statement saying he knew in advance he could not get a fair hearing.

Senator Taft said today he would take steps to remove his name from the New Jersey ballot, as soon as he IS told how to go about it. And friends of the Senator have opened a write-in campaign for him in the Nebraska primary. In Wisconsin, backers of General MacArthur say his statement of last night, indicates he will accept the nomination if its offered to him; they are going ahead with their campaign.

In Washington, Secretary of State Acheson has ordered the Polish embassy to stop issuing [redacted] press releases that criticize the United States government or Congress. The embassy recently put out a press release attacking a House committee investigating the Katyn Forest massacre. Secretary Acheson calls the release "outrageous and improper."

Edward R. Murrow: March 21, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

I should like to talk for a few minutes about the subject of spies and spying. We have spies, the Russians have spies, the French, the British - nearly everybody has spies. Time was when it was a glamorous, exciting and mysterious profession, much written about and little understood. Communist spies have scored some notable successes in recent years, particularly in the case of Dr. Klaus Fuchs, who walked off with most of the secrets of the atom bomb. I get the impression, from what I read and hear, that many of us have concluded that the Communists have nothing but master spies, working in close co-ordination, to a careful timetable, employing great cunning and skill. But spies are people, and some people are stupid, therefore some spies are stupid, also some of the people who hire them.

Today our Army Headquarters in Austria issued strict orders to all military and civilian personnel, not to talk about any military subject, no matter how trivial. The information might be picked up by enemies and potential enemies. The order describes Vienna as "The spy capital of the world, teeming with hundreds of enemy agents". And it says that the enemy is "busy trying to plant spies as waiters in American hotels, hostesses in American G.I. clubs, maids and furnace men in American homes, and drivers of American cars. All this is probably true. The order apparently was stimulated by two American-conducted spy trials in Salzburg, Austria, last week. I am indebted to Alexander Kendrick for the details.

An Austrian man and woman were sentenced to six and seven years in prison, for selling information to the Czechoslovakian Intelligence Service. Apparently the Czechs thought the information valuable, (although nobody else in his right mind would;) but each of the two spies received about twelve thousand dollars. This valuable information included copies of the American Army's newspaper "Stars and Stripes", which has a circulation of a hundred thousand, and sells for five cents a copy. (The Czechs paid their spies two dollars a copy.) They bought ordinary tourist maps of Salzburg, showing Mozart's XXXX birthplace. The man spy - Kendrick says the woman was no Mata Hari - readily gave details of his method of operation. He sold the Czechs American telephone books for 120 dollars each. He sold them details about Salzburg, copied from a Baedeker travel book. This man, XXXXXX Hans Siloman, was a busy little spy. He ~~clipped~~ copied items about the Korean war from American papers, and sold them to the Czechs as top secret. He re-wrote old United States Army training manuals and sold them too. He even re-wrote some old German military handbooks, which he'd bought in second-hand bookstores. But best of all he invented in his own fertile mind numerous American troop movements, gave full details of maneuvers that never occurred, manufactured colonels and generals and new units and XXXX moved them all over the place. He rooted in trash barrels outside our Camp McCaulay, near Salzburg, and found discarded documents of great value recounting the loss of PX cards, offers to exchange a refrigerator for a baby buggy, and announcing changes in regulations governing the sale of gasoline.

Spy Siloman printed his own letterhead and typed out these secret orders of his own manufacture. The Czechs paid him handsomely, and according to his testimony patted him on the back when he made twenty-five illegal crossings of the Austrian-Czech border to the town of Budweis, where the good beer comes from.

Siloman's enterprise and imagination got him six years in jail. There must have been some debate among our C.I.C. people before deciding to pick him up. Just as there must be debate among our XXXXXXXX Intelligence officers when they buy information from behind the Iron Curtain, on the possibility that they may be dealing with another Siloman.

This whole incident, which would have delighted Gilbert and Sullivan but disgusted Phillips Oppenheim, has its serious side. Spying, or the gathering and evaluating of intelligence, becomes increasingly difficult, and important, when the normal channels of information are blocked. It is necessary to put together little bits and pieces of information in an effort to arrive at a conclusion regarding enemy intentions and capabilities. If the Russians make a mistake in this area, or if we do, the result could be catastophic. It would seem to follow that the one government agency requiring ample and indeed lavish support is our Central Intelligence Agency, even though we don't know what they do with it.

I shall be away from this microphone for a couple of weeks, in search of the agreeable combination of sunshine and silence. My old friend and colleague Larry Lesueur will report the news for you.

Murrow: March 21, 1952. WORD FOR TODAY

There is an almost endless area for doubt and uncertainty regarding the next Russian move - and regarding ours too, for that matter. But this is not necessarily a bad thing. For Roger Bacon said: "If a man begins with certainties, he will end with doubts. But if he will be content to begin with doubts, he shall end with certainties." "The way to be safe is never to feel secure".

Goodnight and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

FRIDAY - MARCH 21, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The steel industry says the proposed settlement of its dispute with the C.I.O. steelworkers is "unfair and unreasonable." An industry statement says the Wage Stabilization Board "could not have conceivably made recommendations less in the public interest or more disruptive of our economy." The Board recommended a seventeen and a half cents an hor pay increase, with an additional five cents an hour in other benefits. The industry says the terms would actually cost almost 30 cents per hour per employee in direct costs, and 60 cents per hour in total costs. The industry says this would come to one billion dollars a year; could add more than 12-dollars to the price of a ton of steel. The Board recommended the union shop. The industry says it's solidly opposed to what it calls this "long step backward in the age old struggle for individual freedom." But the steel industry has agreed to meet next week to renew talks with the union which has accepted the Wage Board's proposal, and postponed the threatened Sunday strike until April eighth, pending the industry's acceptance of the Board's recommendations.

The government's cost of living index dropped six-tenths of a per cent in February. That's the sharpest drop since December of 1949. It was due largely to a drop in retail food prices - two point one per cent. The new lower index will mean a one cent an hour pay cut for more than a million railroad employees whose contracts are tied to the cost of living index.

Secretary of Defense Lovett told Senators today: there are now "some" Chinese Communists fighting against the French in Indo-China. They crossed the border some time ago. He has no figures indicating that there is any "substantial amount" of Chinese fighting there now. He does know that the Chinese have supplied "a substantial amount" of equipment to aid the communist guerrillas in Indo-China. Mr. Lovett said he received his information from "military authorities there."

But in Paris, the French Ministry for the Associated States of Indo-China says: "We have received no information allowing us to suppose that Chinese troops have crossed the Indo-Chinese border."

The United Nations today offered to help the enemy it is fighting in Korea. Trygvie Lie, the Secretary General, offers North Korea and Communist China aid from the World Health Organization to combat the epidemics the enemy has been reporting. Mr. Lie requested a reply as soon as possible.

In Korea today, ground fighting was limited: our fighter-bombers attacked freight cars in North Korea, and our negotiators turned down an enemy "compromise" on exchanging war prisoners: they still want to swap the eleven and a half thousand men they hold for the 132-thousand we hold and insist we send back men who might not want to go back to communist land.

General Ridgway today told Japanese newspaper editors: the Russians have a great many planes in Siberia and Sakhalin; could attack Japan's northernmost island in 20 minutes; are using Communists inside Japan to seize control of labor unions and publications. General Ridgway says our troops are remaining in Japan for the sole purpose of opposing the threat of Soviet military power.

Army Secretary Pace today acted to clean up the waste exposed by a Senate committee in the construction of North African air bases. The two top army engineers there have been relieved: he's going to try to recover some of the funds spent improperly, improve the audit and procurement systems and make an impartial survey of what's been going on.

A House committee today voted to ask the Justice Department to examine the testimony of William Power Maloney for possible perjury. He's the attorney for Henry Grunewald, the so-called mystery man. The committee claims that it has evidence to disprove Mr. Maloney's testimony that he never borrowed money from Grunewald, never interfered in an alcolohol tax unit case involving Grunewald. Mr. Maloney testified today that three years ago he asked Republican Senator Bridges of New Hampshire to intercede with the Bureau of Internal Revenue in a five million dollar tax case. It involved Hyman Harvey Klein, a Baltimore liquor dealer, and has not been settled yet. Mr. Maloney said he talked to Bridges about it two or three times; believed the case was unjust to Mr. Klein.

Chairman McCarran of the Senate Internal Security Committee charged today that Own Lattimore, a witness for 12 days, testified to "many flagrant and significant untruths" and was contemptuous of the committee. The committee has not yet decided whether to take legal action. Mr. Lattimore opened his hearing with a statement saying he knew in advance he could not get a fair hearing.

Senator Taft said today he would take steps to remove his name from the New Jersey ballot, as soon as he is told how to go about it. And friends of the Senator have opened a write-in campaign for him in the Nebraska primary. In Wisconsin, backers of General MacArthur say his statement of last night, indicates he will accept the nomination if it's offered to him; they are going ahead with their campaign.

In Washington, Secretary of State Acheson has ordered the Polish embassy to stop issuing press releases that criticize the United States Government or Congress. The embassy recently put out a press release attacking a House committee investigating the Katyn Forest massacre. Secretary Acheson calls the release "outrageous and improper."

I should like to talk for a few minutes about the subject of spies and spying. We have spies, the Russians have spies, the French, the British - nearly everybody has spies. Time was when it was a glamorous, exciting and mysterious profession, much written about and little understood. Communist spies have scored some notable successes in recent years, particularly in the case of Dr. Klaus Fuchs, who walked off with most of the secrets of the atom bomb. I get the impression, from what I read and hear, that many of us have concluded that the Communists have nothing but master spies, working in close co-ordination, to a careful timetable, employing great cunning and skill. But spies are people, and some people are stupid; therefore some spies are stupid; also, some of the people who hire them.

Today our Army Headquarters in Austria issued strict orders to all military and civilian personnel, not to talk about any military subject, no matter how trivial. The information might be picked up by enemies and potential enemies. The order describes Vienna as "The spy capital of the world, teeming with hundreds of enemy agents." And it says that the enemy is "busy trying to plant spies as waiters in American hotels, hostesses in American G.I. clubs, maids and furnace men in American homes, and drivers of American cars. All this is probably true. The order apparently was stimulated by two American-conducted spy trials in Salzburg, Austria, last week. I am indebted to Alexander Kendrick for the details.

An Austrian man and woman were sentenced to six and seven years in prison, for selling information to the Czechoslovakian Intelliagence Service. Apparently the Czechs thought the information valuable, (although nobody else in his right mind would); but each of the two spies received about twelve thousand dollars. This valuable information included copies of the American Army's newspaper "Stars and Stripes", which has a circulation of a hundred thousand, and sells for five cents a copy. (The Czechs paid their spies two dollars a copy.) They bought ordinary tourist maps of Salzburg, showing Mozart's birthplace. The man spy - Kendrick says the woman was no Mata Hari - readily gave details of his method of operation. He sold the Czechs American telephone books for 120 dollars each. He sold them details about Salzburg, copied from a Baedeker travel book. This man, Hans Siloman, was a busy little spy. He copied items about the Korean war from American papers, and sold them to the Czechs as top secret. He re-wrote old United States Army training manuals and sold them too. He even re-wrote some old German military handbooks, which he'd bought in second-hand book-stores. But best of all, he invented, in his own fertile mind, numerous American troop movements, gave full details of maneuvers that never occurred, manufactured colonels, and generals, and new units and moved them all over the place. He rooted in trash barrels outside our Camp McCaulay, near Salzburg, and found discarded documents of great value, recounting the loss of PX cards, offers to exchange a refrigerator for a baby buggy, and announcing changes in regulations governing the sale of gasoline.

Spy Siloman printed his own letterhead and typed out these secret orders of his own manufacture. The Czechs paid him handsomely, and according to his testimony, patted him on the back when he made twenty-five illegal crossings of the Austrian-Czech border to the town of Budweis, where the good beer comes from.

Siloman's enterprise and imagination got him six years in jail. There must have been some debate among our C.I.C. people before deciding to pick him up. Just as there must be debate among our Intelligence officers when they buy information from behind the Iron Curtain, on the possibility that they may be dealing with another Siloman.

This whole incident, which would have delighted Gilbert and Sullivan but disgusted Phillips Oppenheim, has its serious side. Spying, or the gathering and evaluating of intelligence, becomes increasingly difficult, and important, when the normal channels of information are blocked. It is necessary to put together little bits and pieces of information in an effort to arrive at a conclusion regarding enemy intentions and capabilities. If the Russians make a mistake in this area, or if we do, the result could be catastophic. It would seem to follow that the one government agency requiring ample and indeed lavish support is our Central Intelligence Agency, even though we don't know what they do with it.

I shall be away from this microphone for a couple of weeks, in search of the agreeable combination of sunshine and silence. My old friend and colleague Larry Lesueur will report the news for you.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: There is an almost endless area for doubt and uncertainty regarding the next Russian move - and regarding ours too, for that matter. But this is not necessarily a bad thing. For Roger Bacon said: "If a man begins with certainties, he will end with doubts. But if he will be content to begin with doubts, he shall end with certainties." "The way to be safe is never to feel secure."

Good Night and Good Luck!

CUL

Monday — March 24, 1952

— Good Evening - Here's what happened today.

Defense Mobilization Director Wilson, says the fight against inflation would be seriously threatened if the C.I.O. steelworkers are granted the wage increases recommended by a government board. The Wage Stabilization Board has suggested an increase of 17 and a-half cents-an-hour, plus other benefits worth five cents an hour to settle the union's dispute with the steel industry. Mr. Wilson spent last night and today at Key West discussing the whole thing with the President. When he left, [redacted] he told reporters he had a plan to avoid a steel strike. The Union has said it will accept the Wage Board's recommendations...would not strike if the industry agreed to them. When Mr. Wilson arrived in Washington he told reporters he couldn't say anything about his plans. But he did say this: "There is no question in my mind that if the wage increases contemplated under the Board's recommendations are put into effect, it will be a serious threat in our year-old effort to stabilize the economy. Of that, said Mr Wilson, I am sure." [redacted]. He was asked if he expected the union to settle for less than the Board recommendations. He answered: "No comment."

The Defense Production Administration today released more metals for [redacted] consumer goods starting July first. Production Administrator Fleishman says that because the military building program has been stretched-out the shortage of critical materials for consumer goods has been eased. Therefore, in the months of July, August and September, the auto industry will be permitted to turn out one million 150-thousand cars... the matter of lifting all ceilings on auto production "is under review." There will also be additional materials [redacted] for the production of radio and television sets, refrigerators, washers and other consumer goods. It was only five days ago that a Senate committee criticized the Defense program and mobilization officials too for neglecting defense production to give more "butter" to civilians.

[redacted]

General Eisenhower believes that west[redacted] Europe can be defended only if the members of the North Atlantic pact "do their utmost, to help themselves." The general's chief of staff at Shape--General Alfred Grunther--told a Senate committee [redacted] that General Eisenhower feels that basically the defense of western Europe "must come from within." There is much the United States can do, in the way of supplying military equipment. But the NATO organization can be a success only if the west[redacted] European nations make "a maximum effort in terms of their own resources." General Greunther was testifying on the Administration's request for almost eight billion dollars for foreign aid. He told the Senators, [redacted] the European nations are doing their part. They have extended their periods of military conscription. They have increased their defense budgets. They are making an effort to expand their defense production. [redacted] General Grunether also had an optimistic report on the conditions of the Shape headquarters [redacted]. He says the combat-ready ground forces nearly doubled in the last year. The air forces have increased significantly. The International Command is a functioning organization. And, he said, the military potential of western Europe is being converted into real military power. Committee members were impressed with General Gruenther's testimony. Chairman Connaly called it: "a full, complete, comprehensive statement."

When reporters asked General Gruenther to comment on the political potentialities of his boss, General Eisenhower, Greunther replied: "The boss told me several months ago that I would be of very much more value to him if I stayed out of political matters."

Today a leading Democrat called on General Ike himself to get out of unfirom..give up his position as commander at Shape.. and campaign in civilian clothes. Representative McCormack of Massachusetts, the Democratic leader in the House, says its "unfortunate, inconsistent and indefensible "for General Ike to occupy a dual position as NATO commander and presidential candidate. He says the General is campaigning in the uniform of our country which should not be the clothing of politics."

As soon as this statement was released, Republican Senator Lodge, manager of the Eisenhower campaign, told reporters:"The Administration's long-awaited attack has begun." There was no comment from the President.

A little more light on General Eisenhower's views came today from David Lawrence, the editor of U. S. News and World Report. Two years ago Mr. Lawrence interviewed General Ike. Then, a few days after the New Hampshire primary, the General gave Lawrence permission to print the interview. Here are some of the things General Eisenhower believes: He thinks the key to a successful president is his ability to select and handle men. He thinks we have drifted too far to the "so-called left." General Eisenhower says: "America is not the kind of country that needs socialism." AND He has the distinct feeling that we have been lacking "on the moral side." [redacted]

In Korea today there was very little fighting on the ground. But our jet planes, in four battles with enemy Migs, shot down three of them.. probably destroyed two more.. [redacted] damaged nine others. There is no word on any losses we may have suffered.

Our truce negotiators are trying to work out an agreement with the Communists for secret talks on the difficult problem of how to exchange prisoners of war. We suggested first that the talks be secret. Then we spent three hours talking it over. One of our spokesmen says: "We almost came to an agreement." [redacted]

[redacted]

The President today asked Congress to admit 300-thousand Europeans to this country, during the next three years. These people would include many "escaped victims of Communist tyranny". And we would be continuing to help the international effort to resettle people from the over-populated areas of Western Europe. The President has also allocated more than four million dollars from Mutual Security Funds to permit the formation under General Eisenhower's forces of some of the men who escape from Iron Curtain countries.

In Washington today, Hyman Harvey Klein, a Baltimore liquor dealer, told a House committee that he made five million dollars on an investment of one thousand dollars. He and some friends sold canadian whiskey to Central and South America. The committee has heard testimony that ~~that~~ both Republican Senator Bridges of New Hampshire, and Henry Grunewald, the so-called "mystery man," had tried to help Mr. Klein with a tax case. The government has filed a seven million dollar claim against him. Mr. Klein said today he never met either Bridges or Grunewald..has no idea why they tried to help him out of his tax troubles.

In St. Louis, a federal judge sentenced James P. Finnegan, former internal revenue collector in St. Louis, to two years in prison. Finnegan was also fined 10-thousand dollars on charges of "misconduct." Judge Hulen said Finnegan sold the influence of the government for "a dirty mess of dollars."

The Supreme Court today cleared the way for a second trial of William Remington, one-time ~~a~~ government economist, accused of being a former Communist.

J. Edgar Hoover has told a House committee that Communism today is "as much, if not a greater threat" to ~~the United States~~ this country than the German fifth column of the last war. //

American Red Cross headquarters in Washington says 223 persons were killed in the weekend tornadoes that hit six states.

Senator Taft has formally requested that his name be stricken from the ballot in the New Jersey presidential primary.

The State Department says that Czechoslovakia has released ~~a Nebraskan~~ a Nebraska farmer it held for two months. The farmer, Joseph Hradec, entered Czechoslovakia last September, illegally. He wanted to visit relatives. The Czechs still hold American Reporter William Otis and two other American citizens.

LeSueur 24 March cbs 7:45p

A cloud no bigger than a man's hand drifted over the sun today, in a paragraph from Germany...Seems our efforts to secure a new agreement with West Germany, have bogged down in a thousand petty details...This agreement or convention, would be a working contract to serve in place of a peace treaty...Becuz legally we don't want to be put in the position of signing a separate peace with Germany, nor would the Germans want it otherwise, ...We haven't been pushing this convention, since we already have other agreements with the Germans, particularly on the North Atlantic pact...But now we find the Germans are haggling over things like the price to be paid by american soldiers for cigarets in the PX...

Is it possible that the Germans are listening more closely than WE think, to the siren call of Moscow? And the recent Soviet proposal for a 4 power conference on a German peace treaty.??? One that would unify Germany and give it, its own national army...Instead of the minor role projected by the Western plan for European Defense?

Lets face it, this Soviet proposal has a great emotional ~~px~~ appeal to the Germans... It would not only give Germany unity and independence ~~sovereignty~~ but two other things that we can't give the Germans...One is Free Trade in ~~with~~ her old commerical stamping grounds, ~~the~~ The communist East, and the NOW ~~communized~~ Balkans, not to mention the markets of China.. The pther ~~is~~ the Hint, that Russia might even consider revision of Germany's Eastern frontiers...And that is something every German would like, from Chancellor Adenaur, right down through his rivals, the Socialists and the Neo-Nazis..

The more the Western allies look at this Russian proposal, (and they've spent two weeks consulting about it,) the more it looks like a change in Russian policy toward Germany...Not a fundamental change, of course, becuz Soviet policy seems basically unchanging, but a decided change in tactics...It's just too big to be ~~a~~ just another propaganda stunt...It may even be more than just a tactical move ~~move~~ to delay German integration into West Europe...It may be ~~a~~ a strategic plan in favor of Russia's long-Term interests...

In fact, instead of rejecting the Russian proposal in its prewent form, a form which would, of course, torpedo our plans to integrate Europe...We're being a little more CHARY..

The Western powers are going to do a little exploring first, avoid an immediate negative reply, ~~by asking~~ ask some positive questions.. We're told that three identical notes from Paris, London and Washington, will be sent to Moscow tomorrow...Will ask just what form of German government, Russia has in mind, if Germany is once again ~~unified~~ United... We've had some experience BEFORE with the Kremlin's ideas about "friendly" governments... We also want to know what the powers of a central german government would be, until a german peace treaty were signed... Furthermore, we want to know, for a starter, whether german rearmament would be limited under such a set-up, and just what kind of guarantees there'd be for such limitation...

In other words, the Western allies realize, that this is a proposal that just can't be ~~bumped off~~ laughed off, and if we have any questions about it, we'd better ask them NOW...

It's also possible that before the question period is over, we'll want to know just what the Russians mean about their hint of revising Germany's Eastern frontiers..

We'd like to get the Russians pinned down on that NOW, try to keep them from getting into a position where they can reward Germany later...And thus swing a unified germany ~~to~~ over their side..

of course

The Russians never give away their plans in advance, and they play their cards, one-by-one..

Now Western diplomats recognize that this is a time for caution, and not for impulsiveness...There's still time to postpone a decision on Germany, by asking the Russians to demonstrate their good Faith, by signing a peace treaty with Austria, by agreeing to free elections throughout Germany... But these, of course, are only delaying actions. What the Russians are proposing is the Germany that existed in the days of Bismarck...And that's something that appeals to Germans' pride.. Altho it would certainly set the clock back to our dreams of a united Western Europe...they Russian proposal would perpetuate the power struggle in Europe, with Germany the decisive weight.. If it were just a move to strengthen communism in Germany, we wouldn't have to worry too much, for the Germans have shown themselves allergic to communism...But there are plenty of instances in history, to show that ideological differences have never been a barrier to German-Russian collaboration...We have only to look back to 1939, and the Hitler-Stalin non-agression pact...

[redacted]

But the Big Difference between 1939 and 1952, is that NOW the Russians apparently feel they're in the saddle...Are big enough, to hold the whip hand over an independent, re-armed Germany---

Seven years after the end of world war two, and with scalps of other nations hanging from Stalin's belt, The Kremlin appears to feel strong enough to take its chances with a united Germany...

This is Larry LeSueur...I'll be back in a moment with the word for today...(CUE) But First, Bob Dixon..

The Russians are making a concerted effort to win over the German people. But they would do well to keep in mind this bit of advice from Arthur Henderson:"Promises may make friends but 'tis performances that keep them." As for the Germans, these words by George Washington would seem appropriate:"It is a maxim founded on the universal experience of mankind that no nation is to be trusted farther than it is bound by its interests."

Goodnite!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
LARRY LESUEUR REPORTING
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

MONDAY - MARCH 24, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

Good evening: Here's what happened today.

Defense Mobilization Director Wilson says the fight against inflation would be seriously threatened if the C.I.O. steelworkers are granted the wage increases recommended by a government board. The Wage Stabilization Board has suggested an increase of 17 and a half cents an hour plus other benefits worth five cents an hour to settle the union's dispute with the steel industry. Mr. Wilson spent last night and today at Key West discussing the whole thing with the President. When he left, he told reporters he had a plan to avoid a steel strike. The union has said it will accept the Wage Board's recommendations - would not strike if the industry agreed to them. When Mr. Wilson arrived in Washington he told reporters he couldn't say anything about his plans. But he did say this: "There is no question in my mind that if the wage increases contimplated under the Board's recommendations are put into effect, it will be a serious threat in our year-old effort to stabilize the economy. Of that, said Mr. Wilson, "I am sure." He was asked if he expected the union to settle for less than the Board recommendations. He answered: "No comment!"

The Defense Production Administration today released more metals for consumer goods starting July first. Production Administrator Fleishman says that because the military building program has been stretched out, the shortage of critical materials for consumer goods has been eased. Therefore, in the months of July, August, and September, the auto industry will be permitted to turn out one million 150-thousand cars: (the matter of lifting all ceilings on auto production "is under review.") There will also be additional materials for the production of radio and television sets, refrigerators, washers and other consumer goods. It was only five days ago that a Senate committee criticized the Defense program, and mobilization officials, too, for neglecting defense production to give more "butter" to civilians.

General Eisenhower believes that West Europe can be defended only if the members of the North Atlantic Pact "do their utmost to help themselves." The General's Chief of Staff at SHAPE, General Alfred Gruenther, today told a Senate committee that General Eisenhower feels that basically the defense of Western Europe "must come from within." There is much the United States can do in the way of supplying military equipment. But the NATO organization can be a success only if the West European nations make "a maximum effort in terms of their own resources." General Gruenther was testifying on the Administration's request for almost eight billion dollars for foreign aid. He told the Senators the European nations are doing their part. They have extended their periods of military conscription. They have increased their defense budgets. They are making an effort to expand their defense production. General Gruenther also had an optimistic report on the conditions of the SHAPE headquarters. He says the combat-ready ground forces nearly doubled in the last year. The Air Forces have increased significantly. The International Command is a functioning organization. And, he said, the military potential of Western Europe is being converted into real military power. Committee members were inpressed with General Gruenther's testimony. Chairman Connally called it: "....a full, complete, comprehensive statement."

When reporters asked General Gruenther to comment on the political potentialities of his boss, General Eisenhower, Gruenther replied: "The boss told me several months ago, that I would be of very much more value to him if I stayed out of political matters."

Today a leading Democrat called on General Ike himself to get out of uniform, give up his position as Commander of SHAPE, and to campaign in civilian clothes. Representative McCormack of Massachusetts, the Democratic leader in the House, says it's "unfortunate, inconsistent and indefensible" for General Ike to occupy a dual position as NATO Commander and presidential candidate. He says the General is campaigning in the uniform of our country "which should not be the clothing of politics."

As soon as this statement was released, Republican Senator Lodge, manager of the Eisenhower campaign, told reporters: "The Administration's long-awaited attack has begun." There was no comment from the President.

A little more light on General Eisenhower's views came today from David Lawrence, the editor of U.S. News and World Report. Two years ago Mr. Lawrence interviewed General Ike. Then, a few days after the New Hampshire primary, the General gave Lawrence permission to print the interview. Here are some of the things General Eisenhower believes: He thinks the key to a successful president is his ability to select and handle men. He thinks we have drifted too far to the "so-called left." General Eisenhower says: "America is not the kind of country that needs socialism" He has the distinct feeling that we have been lacking "on the moral side."

In Korea today there was very little fighting on the ground. But our jet planes, in four battles with enemy MIGs, shot down three of them - probably destroyed two more - damaged nine others. There is no word on any losses we may have suffered. Our truce negotiators are trying to work out an agreement with the Communists for secret talks on the difficult problem of how to exchange prisoners of war. We suggested first that the talks be secret. Then we spent three hours talking it over. One of our spokesmen says: "We almost came to an agreement."

The President today asked Congress to admit 300-thousand Europeans to this country during the next three years. These people would include many "escaped victims of Communist tyranny." And we would be continuing over-populated areas of Western Europe. The President has also allocated more than four million dollars from Mutual Security Funds to permit the formation under General Eisenhower's forces of some of the men who escape from Iron Curtain countries.

In Washington today, Hyman Harvey Klein, a Baltimore liquor dealer, told a House committee that he made five million dollars on an investment of one thousand dollars. He and some friends sold Canadian whiskey to Central and South America. The committee has heard testimony that both Republican Senator Bridges of New Hampshire, andHenry Grunewald, the so-called "mystery man", had tried to help Mr. Klein with a tax case. The Government has filed a seven million dollar claim against him. Mr. Klein said today he never met either Bridges or Grunewald; has no idea why they tried to help him out of his tax troubles.

In St. Louis, a federal judge sentenced James P. Finnegan, former Internal Revenue collector in St. Louis, to two years in prison. Finnegan was also fined 10-thousand dollars on charges of "misconduct." Judge Hulen said Finnegan sold the influence of the Government for "a dirty mess of dollars."

The Supreme Court today cleared the way for a second trial of William Remington, one-time government economist, accused of being a former Communist.

J. Edgar Hoover has told a House committee that Communism today is "as much, if not a greater threat" to this country then the Gorman fifth column of the last war.

American Red Cross headquarters in Washington says 223 persons were killed in the weekend tornadoes that hit six states.

Senator Taft has formally requested that his name be stricken from the ballot in the New Jersey presidential primary.

The State Department says the Czechoslovakia has released a Nebraska farmer it held for two months. The farmer, Joseph Hradec, entered Czechoslovakia last September illegally. He wanted to visit relatives. The Czechs still hold American Reporter William Otis and two other American citizens.

A cloud no bigger than a man's hand drifted over the sun today, in a paragraph from Germany. Seems our efforts to secure a new agreement with West Germany, have bogged down in a thousand petty details. This agreement or convention would be a working contract to serve in place of a peace treaty, because legally, we don't want to be put in the position of signing a separate peace with Germany, nor would the Germans want it otherwise. We haven't been pushing this convention since we already have other agreements with the Germans, particularly on the North Atlantic Pact. But now we find the Germans are haggling over things like the price to be paid by American soldiers for cigarettes in the PX.

Is it possible that the Germans are listening more closely than we think, to the siren call of Moscow: and the recent Soviet proposal for a four power conference on a German peace treaty; one that would unify Germany and give it its own national army, instead of the minor role projected by the Western plan for European Defense?

Lets face it: this Soviet proposal has a great emotional appeal to the Germans. It would not only give Germany unity and independence, but two other things that we can't give the Germans: 1) free trade in her old commercial stamping grounds, the communist East and the now communized Balkans - not to mention the markets of China; 2) the hint that Russia might even consider revision of Germany's Eastern frontiers - and that is something every German would like, from Chancellor Adenauer right down through his rivals, the Socialists and the Neo-Nazis.

The more the Western allies look at this Russian proposal, (and they've spent two weeks consulting about it), the more it looks like a change in Russian policy toward Germany. Not a fundamental change, of course, because Soviet policy seems basically unchanging, but a decided change in tactics. It's just too big to be just another propaganda stunt. It may even be more than just a tactical move to delay German integration into West Europe. It may be a strategic plan in favor of Russia's long-term interests.

In fact, instead of rejecting the Russian proposal in its present form,(a form which would, of course, torpedo our plans to integrate Europe), we're being a little more chary. The Western Powers are going to do a little exploring first; avoid an immediate negative reply; ask some positive questions. We're told that three identical notes from Paris, London and Washington will be sent to Moscow tomorrow; will ask just what form of German Government Russia has in mind, if Germany is once again united. We've had some experience before with the Kremlin's ideas about "friendly" governments. We also want to know what the powers of a Central German Government would be until a German peace treaty were signed. Furthermore, we want to know, for a starter, whether German rearmament would be limited under such a set-up, and just what kind of guarantees there'd be for such limitation.

In other words, the Western Allies realize that this is a proposal that just can't be laughed off, and if we have any questions about it, we'd better ask them now.

It's also possible that before the question period is over, we'll want to know just what the Russians mean about their hint of revising Germany's Eastern frontiers.

We'd like to get the Russians pinned down on that now; try to keep them from getting into a position where they can reward Germany later, and thus swing a unified Germany over to their side. Of course, the Russians never give away their plans in advance, and they play their cards one-by-one.

Now Western diplomats recognize that this is a time for caution, and not for impulsiveness. There's still time to postpone a decision on Germany by asking the Russians to demonstrate their good faith by signing a peace treaty with Austria, by agreeing to free elections throughout Germany. But these, of course, are only delaying actions. What the Russians are proposing is the Germany that existed in the days of Bismarck, and that's something that appeals to every German's pride. Although it would certainly set the clock back to our dreams of a united Western Europe, this Russian proposal would perpetuate the power struggle in Europe, with Germany the decisive weight. If it were just a move to strengthen communism in Germany, we wouldn't have to worry too much, for the Germans have shown themselves allergic to communism. But there are plenty of instances in history to show that ideological differences have never been a barrier to German-Russian collaboration. We have only to look back to 1939, and the Hitler-Stalin non-aggression pact. But the big difference between 1939 and 1952, is that now, the Russians apparently feel they're in the saddle; are big enough to hold the whip hand over an independent, re-armed Germany.

Seven years after the end of World War Two, and with scalps of nine other nations hanging from Stalin's belt, the Kremlin appears to feel strong enough to take its chances with a united Germany.

This is Larry LeSueur. I'll back in a moment with the "Word For Today." But first, Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

LESUEUR: The Russians are making a concerted effort to win over the German people. But they would do well to keep in mind this bit of advice from Arthur Henderson: "Promises may make friends but 'tis performances that keep them." As for the Germans, these words by George Washington would seem appropriate: "It is a maxim founded on the universal experience of mankind, that no nation is to be trusted farther than it is bound by its interests."

Good Night!

Tuesday - March 25, 1952

Good Evening - Here's what happened today

~~This is what happens~~:

Defense Mobilizer Wilson says he's willing to use Wage Stabilization Board recommendations as a basis for trying to settle the steel dispute. All day today, the private and government officials most directly concerned ~~with the [illegible]~~ have been telling us what they think about it. Last night Mr. Wilson said the Wage Board recommendations--granting a raise to the steelworkers--were a serious threat to the stabilization program. Phil Murray, the union president, called Mr. Wilson a "biased, uninformed self proclaimed big businessman" who was attempting to get a better break for the steel industry. Then Mr. Wilson said, today, the Wage Board's recommendations should be a basis for union-industry negotiations. The industry members of the board suggested the board be disbanded. They say: "its causing inflation, defeating its own major purpose." The labor members of the Board say: "Mr. Wilson has struck the heaviest blow against the stabilization program so far. The White House says that Mr. Wilson's views are his own personal views. And the House Rules Committee has voted to investigate the Wage Stabilization Board.. to determine if it has violated the Taft-Hartley law.. or the intent of Congress.

General Alfred Gruenther, chief of staff to General Eisenhower at Shape, told a Senate committee today: "It is in our power to prevent a war from ever taking place." In his second day of testimony, General Gruenther said: The Russians have great capabilities, if they decide to attack.. they have the finest army, an effective air force, 300 submarines... (that's more than the Germans had at the start of the last war.) But, says the General, the North Atlantic powers have made progress. General Ike and his staff are "very definitely convinced" that aid for Europe will deter Soviet aggression. We have made progress in the last year.. we will make more this year. General Gruenther says the only element in which the Soviet machine exceeds us is "unity".. they enforce their "unity" with distasteful totalitarian methods. The General also said there is no question in his mind that the Europeans are doing their best in the defense effort..no question, but that they will fight.

The Senators also heard from David K. Bruce, the former ambassador to France who will soon become undersecretary of state. He said that France has undertaken military programs that are beyond her capacity to support. He said the war in Indo-China "aggravated a situation that was intrinsically extremely difficult."

And Admiral McCormick, the commander of NATO naval forces in the Atlantic, told reporters in Washington: he has not been given enough sea power to control the Atlantic in case of Russian attack. He says he particularly needs modern anti-submarine vessels: patrol craft, destroyer escorts and mine sweepers.

In Korea today the truce negotiators discussed the problem of exchanging prisoners of war. (in PRIVATE.) They have agreed not to report to the correspondents (what goes on at the daily meetings.) until a decision has been made, one way or the other.

The ground fighting was comparatively quiet again. And our Sabrejets destroyed one enemy Mig and probably shot down two others.

The French report from Indo-China that enemy Viet-Minh regulars, in the south, have suffered so many casualties, that they have been ordered to re-organize as guerrilla units.

John Foster Dulles has resigned as a special adviser to the State Department. He wants to be free to express his views on foreign policy in the current campaign. Mr. Dulles says he believes the Republicans can provide the leadership the country will want to follow. He thanked the President and Secretary of State Acheson for the "courageous decisions on many perplexing matters" they made to help agreement on a Japanese peace treaty. And the President praised Mr. Dulles for his "devotion and outstanding skill."

The House tax investigators today heard Hyman Harvey Klein repeat his insistence that he does not know either Republican Senator Bridges of New Hampshire or Henry W. Grunewald.. the so-called mystery man about Washington. Both men took an interest in Mr. Klein's troubles with the Bureau of Internal Revenue. Republican Representatibe Byrnes, of Wisconsin, suggested that Senator Bridges should "clear up" his role in the situation. Chairman King said it was "most irregular" for Senator Bridges and others, to intervene in the tax case. And tonight the committee investigators made public secret tax records showing that on at least six occassions Senator Bridges inquired about the Klein tax case. One memmoradum says, that in March of 1949 the Senator asked high tax officials "not to do anything less than was necessary but to do something so that Klein could operate." # more than the average family income in 1949. Prices were almost stable in 1950. So the Bureau concludes that the income boost "probably represented a signifacnt increase in purchasing power for the average family."

The Census Bureau reports that the average American family had an income of thirty-three hundred dollars in 1950. That was 200-dollars

In Wisconsin today Harold Stassen announced that 15 of the thirty delegates supporting him in the presidential primary have agreed to vote for General Eisenhower on the first ballot in Chicago. (Mr. Stassen assumes that all 30 of his delegates will be chosen.) Says: "It would be unfortunate for America if the powerful Taft slate won in Wisconsin."

In Massachusetts today, three robbers opened an unguarded armored car took an estimated 600-thousand dollars. The driver of the U.S. Trucking Corporation armored van and two guards were sipping coffee in a drugstore in Danvers, Massachusetts.

Here in New York, John de Venuta told a jury how he Willie "the actor" Sutton and Thomas Kling robbed a Queens bank of 64-thousand dollars in 1950.

In Washington, a convicted narcotics peddler told a Senate committee he bought heroin from a policeman at Washington police headquarters.

In Rome, thousands of students battled police when a demonstration over Trieste turned into an anti-American brawl.

In London, a British court awarded an average increase of 14-hundred dollars a year to more than 19-thousand family doctors. The doctors had threatened to strike against the government's socialized medicine program. The new average wage for general practioners will be fifty-six hundred dollars a year.

And the Laborites in Parliemnt today gave a unanimous vote of confidence to former Prime Minister Atlee. Followers of left-wing leader Aneurin Bevan did not vote in the party caucus.

LeSueur cbs 25 March 1952 7:45p

Back in 1946, Joseph Stalin predicted that three successive 5- year plans, would bring Soviet steel production up to a point where Russia would be practically invulnerable to attack...

But now, he seems to be hinting broadly, that despite Russian advances in steel production, he doesn't feel that either he or Russia can afford to wait that long...There are signs in the Soviet proposals for a unified, independent Germany, that the aging-Russian premier hopes to get access to the Ruhr's vast potential before he dies..

Those Russian proposals for German independence were not really directed at us, (to Paris, London or Washington,) altho they were addressed there...They were aimed at the Germans, on both sides of the partition line. And The very nature of our answers today, demonstrates our recognition of this fact...Much as we might have like to, we couldn't flatly reject the Kremlin proposals. The re-born force of German public opinion is now too strong for that...Even tho any settlement along the lines of the Soviet proposal would tear a big hole in the planned fabric of the West European steel combine, known as the Schuman plan..

Not to mention our hopes for an integrated West European army, including German soldiers--The program on which Gen. Eisenhower has staked his prestige..

The prospect of a Germany united and free from foreign TROOPS, able to make the best deals it can in foreign commerce, may well appeal to the Germans, in preference to a Germany bound to the West by the Schuman plan and an international European Army...

But while the Russians may have scored a propaganda stroke in Germany by making the initial offer, their proposal didn't go unchallenged today, although we were hardly in a position to brush it off..

The Western powers PROMPTLY took advantage of one of the Ironies implicit in the German situation...

The Russians (you know) are proposing that Germany re-arm itself, HAVE its own national armed forces, and we, in-the-past, have proposed that Germany and this country share the cost of German rearmament... But the Germans, themselves, or a considerable portion of them, haven't any appetite for re-arming at all. SO...We hit hard at this pschological twist...

[redacted] asserted that the Western powers oppose any effort to recreate National German land, air, and sea forces... Said to Moscow [redacted] that this would be a step backward, might jeopardize a new era in Europe, one in which international relations would be based on cooperation, and not on rivalry and distrust... This, of course, was largely addressed to those Germans, [redacted] reluctant to re-arm...

But the rest of Western reply was stated in more positive terms... Attempted to clarify the Russian motives, [redacted] try to establish their sincerity...To find out whether Russia intends to make [redacted] the proposed central German government into another communist puppet...We stated at the outset [redacted]g that we agree to the principle of a peace treaty [redacted] to unify Germany... But we demand that Russia lift the iron curtain around East Germany, if it's really sincere...The three western powers demand, not just free elections, but free elections conducted by the United Nations...With United Nations inspection of East Germany first, to see if conditions would make free elections possible. [redacted] in the Soviet designs... Since it's on this question of free UN inspection that all efforts to reach an atomic agreement with Russia have bogged down...And on which the Korean armistice discussions have hung fire for many months...

This may be throwing a monkey-wrench of no small order

If Russia is sincere about creating an independent Germany, one on which she'll have to take her chances, too she may agree...But if she seeks to forge another Soviet satellite, she will not... to

Now These who have been in communist Russia know that the principle of The Soviet power over the people, is so dominant, that they resist any attempt to allow independent investigators within their borders... feel it would be striking a vital blow against the State, if its people were to be pointedly made aware of the fact that there are independent forces in the world, completely FREE of the power of the Kremlin. The Kremlin would Regard it as a heavy blow against the power of the dictatorship. Now The Russians might agree to 4-power control of elections... But they are unlikely to agree to UN inspection of East Germany,...UNLESS they sincerely [redacted] desire to see the freedom of the Eastern Zone...

The Western reply to Moscow, declines to read anything in the Soviet proposal hinting at a revision of Germany's Eastern frontiers...We choose to interpret it to mean that the Russians want to leave Germany [redacted] at the highwater mark of their conquest in 1945.. [redacted]...With the polish frontier pushed west to the Oder-Neisse line. So We demand a new settlement [redacted] if a peace treaty is to be signed. [redacted] And this, we're told, has rung the emotional bell in West Germany...All the [redacted] West German political parties [redacted] agree that the 40 thousand square miles of Eastern territories must be returned...

Russia's is playing for big stakes, with this surprise appeal for [redacted] a german peace treaty...But she'll have to sweeten the pot, before we agree to play [redacted] the game...

This is Larry LeSueur. I'll be back in a moment with the word for today....[redacted] (CUE)..... But first, Bob Dixon...

There is every evidence of a long siege of power politics in Europe - on one side the western nations, on the other side the Russians and between them the common enemy of the last war: Germany. This situation brings to mind what Carl Von Clausewitz once said:"Even the final decision of a war is not to be regarded as absolute. The conquered nation often sees it as only a passing evil, to be repaired in after times by political combinations."

Goodnite!

good nite

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
LARRY LESUEUR REPORTING
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

TUESDAY - MARCH 25, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

Good evening: Here's what happened today:

Defense Mobilizer Wilson says he's willing to use Wage Stabilization Board recommendations as a basis for trying to settle the steel dispute. All day today, the private and government officials most directly concerned have been telling us what they think about it. Last night Mr. Wilson said the Wage Board recommendations granting a raise to the steelworkers, were a serious threat to the stabilization program. Phil Murray, the union president, called Mr. Wilson a "biased, uninformed self-proclaimed big businessman" who was attempting to get a better break for the steel industry. Then Mr. Wilson said, today, the Wage Board's recommendations should be a basis for union-industry negotiations. The industry members of the board suggest the board be disbanded. They say: "It's causing inflation, defeating its own major purpose." The labor members of the Board say: "Mr. Wilson has struck the heaviest blow against the stabilization program so far. The White House says that Mr. Wilson's views are his own personal views. And the House Rules Committee has voted to investigate the Wage Stabilization Board to determine if it has violated the Taft-Hartley law, or the intent of Congress.

General Alfred Gruenther, Chief of Staff to General Eisenhower at SHAPE, told a Senate committee today: "It is in our power to prevent a war from ever taking place." In his second day of testimony, General Gruenther said: The Russians have great capabilities if they decide to attack: they have the finest army, an effective air force, 300 submarines: (that's more than the Germans had at the start of the last war.) But, says the General, the North Atlantic powers have made progress. General Ike and his staff are "very definitely convinced" that aid for Europe will deter Soviet aggression. We have made progress in the last year: we will make more this year. General Gruenther says the only element in which the Soviet machine exceeds us is "unity": they enforce their "unity" with distasteful totalitarian methods. The General also said there is no question in his mind that the Europeans are doing their best in the defense effort: no question but that they will fight.

The Senators also heard from David Bruce, former ambassador to France who will soon become Undersecretary of State. He said that France has undertaken military programs that are beyond her capacity to support. He said the war in Indo-China "aggravated a situation that was intrinsically extremely difficult."

And Admiral McCormick, the Commander of NATO naval forces in the Atlantic, told reporters in Washington: he has not been given enough sea power to control the Atlantic in case of Russian attack: says he particularly needs modern anti-submarine vessels, patrol craft, destroyer escorts and mine sweepers.

In Korea today the truce negotiators discussed the problem of exchanging prisoners of war - in private. They have agreed not to report to the correspondents what goes on at the daily meetings, until a decision has been made, one way or the other.

The ground fighting was comparatively quiet again. And our Sabre jets destroyed one enemy MIG and probably shot down two others.

The French report from Indo-China that enemy Viet-Min regulars, in the south, have suffered so many casualties that they have been ordered to re-organize as guerrilla units.

John Foster Dulles has resigned as a special adviser to the State Department. He wants to be free to express his views on foreign policy in the current campaign. Mr. Dulles says he believes the Republicans can provide the leadership the country will want to follow. He thanked the President and Secretary of State Acheson for the "courageous decisions on many perplexing matters" they made to help agreement on a Japanese peace treaty. And the President praised Mr. Dulles for his "devotion and outstanding skill."

The House tax investigators today heard Hyman Harvey Klein repeat his insistence that he does not know either Republican Senator Bridges of New Hampshire or Henry W. Grunewald, the so-called mystery man about Washington. Both men took an interest in Mr. Klein's troubles with the Bureau of Internal Revenue. Republican Representative Byrnes of Wisconsin suggested that Senator Bridges should "clear up" his role in the situation. Chairman King said it was "most irregular" for Senator Bridges and others to intervene in the tax case. And tonight the committee investigators made public secret tax records showing that on at least six occasions Senator Bridges inquired about the Klein tax case. One memorandum says, that in March of 1949, the Senator asked high tax officials "not to do anything less than was necessary, but to do something so that Klein could operate."

The Census Bureau reports that the average American family had an income of thirty-three hundred dollars in 1950. That was 200-dollars more than the average family income in 1949. Prices were almost stable in 1950. So the Bureau concludes that the income boost "probably represented a significant increase in purchasing power for the average family."

In Wisconsin today, Harold Stassen announced that 15 of the thirty delegates supporting him in the presidential primary have agreed to vote for General Eisenhower on the first ballot in Chicago. (Mr. Stassen assumes that all 30 of his delegates will be chosen.) He says: "It would be unfortunate for America if the powerful Taft slate won in Wisconsin."

In Massachusetts today, three robbers opened an unguarded armored car - took an estimated 600-thousand dollars. The driver of the U.S. Trucking Corporation armored van and two guards were sipping coffee in a drugstore in Danvers, Massachusetts.

Here in New York, John de Venuta told a jury how he, Willie "the Actor" Sutton, and Thomas Kling robbed a Queen's bank of 64-thousand dollars in 1950.

In Washington, a convicted narcotics peddler, told a Senate committee he bought heroin from a policeman at Washington police headquarters.

In Rome, thousands of students battled police when a demonstration over Trieste turned into an anti-American brawl.

In London, a British court awarded an average increase of 14-hundred dollars a year to more than 19-thousand family doctors, The doctors had threatened to strike against the government's socialized medicine program. The new average wage for general practioners will be fifty-six hundred dollars a year.

And the Laborites in Parliament today gave a unanimous vote of confidence to former Prime Minister Attlee. Followers of left-wing leader Aneurin Bevan did not vote in the party caucus.

Back in 1946, Joseph Stalin predicted that three successive five-year plans would bring Soviet steel production up to a point where Russia would be practically invulnerable to attack. But now, he seems to be hinting broadly, that despite Russian advances in steel production, he doesn't feel that either he nor Russia can afford to wait that long. There are signs in the Soviet proposal for a unified, independent Germany; that the aging-Russian premier hopes to get access to the Ruhr's vast potential before he dies.

Those Russian proposals for German independence were not really directed at us, (to Paris, London, or Washington), although they were addressed there. They were aimed at the Germans, on both sides of the partition line, and the very nature of our answers today, demonstrates our recognition of this fact. Much as we might have liked to, we couldn't flatly reject the Kremlin proposals. The re-born force of German public opinion is too strong for that, even though any settlement along the lines of the Soviet proposal would tear a big hole in the planned fabric of the West European steel combine, know as the Schuman plan - not to mention our hopes for an integrated West European Army, including German soldiers. The program on which General Eisenhower has staked his prestige.

The prospect of a Germany united and free from foreign troops able to make the best deals it can in foreign commerce, may well appeal to the Germans, in preferance to a Germany bound to the West by the Schuman Plan and an International European Army.

But while the Russians may have scored a propaganda stroke in Germany by making the initial offer, their proposal didn't go unchallenged today, (although we were hardly in a position to brush it off).

The Wester powers promptly took advantage of one of the ironies implici in the German situation. The Russians, you know, are proposing that Germany re-arm itself; have its own national armed forces. We, in the past, have proposed that Germany and this country share the cost of German rearmament. But the German, themselves, or a considerable portion of them, haven't any appetite for re-arming at all: so, we hit hard at this pschological twist. Asserted the Western powers - oppose any effort to recreate national German land, air, and sea forces: said to Moscow that this would be a step backward; might jeopardize a new era in Europe, one in which international relations would be based on co-operation, and not on revalry and distrust. This, of course, was largely addressed to those Germans reluctant to re-arm.

But the rest of Western reply was stated in more positive terms. It attempted to clarify the Russian motives; tried to establish their sincerity; to find out whether Russia intends to make the proposed central German government into another communist puppet. We stated at the outset, that we agree to the principle of a peace treaty to unify Germany. But we demand that Russia lift the Iron Curtain around East Germanu, if it's really sincere. The three Wester Powers demand not just free elections, but free elections conducted by the United Nations - with United Nations inspection of East Germany first to see if conditions would make free elections possible.

This may be throwing a monkey-wrench of no small order in the Soviet designs, since it's on this question of free UN inspection that all efforts to reach an atomic agreement with Russia have bogged down, and on which the Korean armistice discussions have hung fire for many months.

If Russia is sincere about creating an independent Germany, one on which she'll have to take her chances, too, she may agree. But if she seeks to forge another Soviet satellite, she will not.

Now those who have been in communist Russia know that the principle of the Soviet power over the people is so dominant, that they resist any attempt to allow independent investigators within their borders; feel it would be striking a vital blow against the State, if its people were to be pointedly made aware of the fact that there are independent forces in the world, completely free of the power of the Kremlin. The Kremlin would regard it as a heavy blow against the power of the dictatorship. Now, the Russians might agree to 4-power control of elections, but they are unlikely to agree to UN inspection of East Germany - unless they sincerely desire to see the freedom of the Eastern Zone.

The Western reply to Moscow. declines to read anything in the Soviet proposal hinting at a revision of Germany's Eastern frontiers. We choose to interpret it to mean that the Russians want to leave Germany at the highwater mark of their conquest in 1945, with the Polish frontier pushed west to the Oder-Neisse line. So, we demand a new settlement if a peace treaty is to be signed. This, we're told, has rung the emotional bell in West Germany: all the West German political parties agree that the 40 thousand square miles of Eastern territories must be returned.

Russia is playing for big stakes with this surprise appeal for a German peace treaty, but she'll have to sweeten the pot before we agree to play the game.

This is Larry LeSueur. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." But first, Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

LESUEUR: There is every evidence of a long siege of power politics in Europe - on one side the Western nations, on the other side the Russians, and between them, the common enemy of the last war - Germany. This situation brings to mind what Carl Von Clausewitz once said: "Even the final decision of a war is not to be regarded as absolute. The conquered nation often sees it as only a passing evil to be repaired in after times by political combinations."

Good Night!

i

Wednesday - March 26, 1952

Good Evening - Here's what happened today

The United States ~~today~~ called upon ~~on~~ Russia "to put up or shut up" on its charges that we are using germ warfare in China and Korea ~~[redacted]~~. The demand came after Jacob Malik of Russia rejected an impartial investigation by the International Red Cross. He said the Red Cross is nothing but a Swiss organization.. did nothing to defend the victims of Hitler in the last war. Then Benjamin Cohen, the American delegate, said: "The Soviet government brought grave charges against United Nations forces in Korea. But the Soviet government refuses to allow an impartial investigation. Last week"--said Mr. Cohen"--I asked Mr. Malik, in effect to put up or shut up..to agree to an investigation or confess that his charges are baseless. The answer is now clear. His government will not put up. The world can now judge"--said Mr. Cohen--"whether this being the ~~the~~ case he should not be silenced."

In Korea today, the North Korean delegate at the truce Talks ~~talks~~ gave back to us a letter from Trygvie Lie, the secretary-general of the U.N., offering help from the World Health organization to curb the ~~[illegible]~~ epidemics the Koreans have been reporting ~~[illegible]~~. The North Korean said:

"The document has nothing to do with the armistice agreement." In todday's talks on exchanging prisoners of war "some slight progress " was made. A United Nations spokesman says that as a result of secret sessions an enemy proposal for exchanging prisoners is "becoming clearer."

Allied raiders today over-ran an enemy position in the eastern mountains.. and then withdrew.

And the Pentagon reports that we suffered 123 casualties in Korea last week, the smallest figure for one week since the war started. The total casulty list is now one hundred and 6 thousand, 794.

The government of Burma says its troops have started an attack to drive an estimated 13-thousand Chinese nationalists out of Burma. The Nationalists, are said to be based in the area opposite China's Yunan province.. preparing to attack across the border. These Chinese troops are described in some dispatches as well-armed, with a fully equipped airfield in Burmese territory. Other dispatches describe them as ill-equipped and hungry irregulars.

In Washington today Defense Mobilizer Wilson called his top mobilization officials to meet early tomorrow--to make [redacted] plans to avoid a threatened steel strike. C.M. White, president of Republic Steel, says the Wage Stabilization Board's recommendations for settling the dispute would cost his company 31 cents an hour. Phil Murray, president of the C.I.O. steelworkers, says the cost would be 18 cents an hour. He figures the industry would need a two dollar a ton increase to meet it..whereas the industry wants 12-dollars a ton. Mr. Murray says the industry must either accept the Wage Board's recommendations or take responsibility for a nation-wide strike.

Chairman Maybank of the Senate Finance Committee said today that any sizeable wage-and-price-increases in the steel industry would make it harder to get a bill through Congress extending economic controls. Today the committee voted in favor of continuing wage, price, rent and material controls for one year; the Administration wants a two-year extention.

Attorney General McGrath has told a House committee he doesn't feel the Justice Department needs investigating any more than any other federal agency. But he'll be glad to have the department's operations examined. The Attorney General defended the right of department lawyers to practise law on the side..under certain conditions. He said if Congress should ban this private law practise, it would lose, overnight, a majority of the United States attorneys.. "and they would be the best we have." Mr. McGrath also suggested that if his department lawyers are banned from practising law on the side, the same ban should apply to Congressmen.

The Senate Agriculture Committee was told today that V.M. Harris of Kansas said in a "confidential report" that he made a pay-off agreement with two federal employes who handled part of his government grain storage contract. Mr. Harris said in the report that he agreed to pay 35 per cent of his profits on the deal to the two government men. The report was made public by Republican Senator Mundt of South Dakota. Committee Chairman Ellender said: "The report should not have been mentioned at this time. It contains unsubstantiated charges that have not been thoroughly checked by the committee staff."

The House committee investigating tax scandals will hear tomorrow from Republican Senator Bridges of New Hampshire about his efforts to settle a seven million dollar tax case.

And the United States Chamber of Commerce says that federal taxes last week hit American consumers so hard that "retailers in almost every line of business are reporting sharply dropping sales."

The Chamber also announced that it opposes any additional foreign aid this year; feels the Senate Foreign Relations Committee is trying to "stifle public opinion by rushing an additional and unnecessary foreign aid bill through Congress."

Senator McCarthy of Wisconsin today filed a two million dollar suit against Senator Benton of Connecticut. Mc Carthy accuses Benton of "libel, slander and conspiracy" in trying to get McCarthy thrown out of the Senate. The suit is based on Benton's 30-thousand-word statement accusing McCarthy of perjury, fraud and "calculated deceit" of the American people. Senator Benton was not available for comment.

In New Jersey today a superior court judge ruled that Senator Taft's name should not be removed from the New Jersey primary ballot. The judge said the name should be kept on the ballot "in view of the over-riding public interest and public sentiment for Taft's name to remain on the ballot." The Senator had requested that his name be withdrawn..charging a double-cross by Jersey's Governor DRISCOLL,

In Wisconsin, the campaigning Senator Taft said he doesn't see how any Wisconsin voter can possibly decide what principles or policies "the hybrid tickets" stand for. The Senator was refereing to Harold Stassens's statement that half of the delegates he wins in Wisconsin will vote for General Eisenhower on the first ballot at the Chicago convention. The situation in Wisconsin now is this: Stassen promises half of his delegates to Eisenhower.. and the General's supporters are backing Governor Warren of California. Tom Coleman, the head of the Taft organization in Wisconsin, says:"Stassen isn't running for Stassen anymore and Warren delegates ~~aren't~~ arent running for Warren."

~~Senator Kefauver said today that he favors presiedential primaries in every state instead of horse trading in smoke filled rooms." And Senator Smathers, Florida Democrat, wants a constitutional amendment for national presidential primaries.~~

~~The St. Louis Post Dispatch says the President has requested Governor Stevenson of Illinois to become the Democratic candidate for President. The governor has no comment. Says he wants to be re-elected Governor of Illinois.~~

In Tunisia today, the French clamped martial law on the whole country and its three and a half million Moslem residents. The French have arrested Premier Mohammed Chenik and three of his nationalist ministers. They are accused of encouraging recent attacks and sabotage against French troops.

In Italy, more than 40-thousand students rioted in Rome, Milan and Naples..demanding the return of Trieste to Italy. It was the third straight day of such riots which, we're told, are being led by Communists and neo-fascists.

Prime Minister Churchill today WAS INFORMED THAT some of his Conservative members IN the House of Commons object to a proposed increase in charges under the socialized medical plan. And the British Trade Unions Congress says the new Conservative budget has dropped the policies of maintaining economic stability." This could be notice of demands for a new round of wage increases in Britain

LeSueur cbs 26 March 1952 7:45p

When a man bites a dog, that's news....but when a military man comes out in favour of a war of ideas, that's practically revolutionary ...Yet that's just what the army chief of staff, General Lawton Collins, told Congress today...Reccommended a total propaganda offensive.. Said "we can't do the job half-way, it's the only way to convince aggressors that another war cannot pay.."

The Army chief of staff was lending his weight to a state department request for 170 million dollars for its overseas "Truth Campaign"... That's more than twice as much as the 85 million dollars Congress approved last year... And its a sum which brought sharp criticism from appropriations-committee-members Representative Clevenger, of Ohio, accused the administration of carrying on " a scare campaign" based on the threat of Soviet aggression..

We must concede that the Administration has in the past seemed to favour"Shock-tactics" in order to move Congress... But in this instance it looks as tho we might be getting a bargain for expending 170 million dollars...

This reporter bases his evaluation both on General Collin's testimony and upon experience...For there was a time when the General was not so whole-heartedly in favour of the military use of ideas...and this is a tribute to his growth both in office and in stature, since he won the nickname of "lightning Joe" as divisional commander in the Pacific and Corps Commander in Europe..

General Collins found out by hard, bloody, experience that the tempo of his ground-gaining tactics could be speeded-up by pyschological warfare...

When the psychological warfare teams made their first appearance in Normandie, they were treated like orphans...Divisional commanders hard-pressed to fight Battles with the limited forces at thir command, resented the presence of civilians with sound trucks at the front, and the need to detach men from the line to protect them. But when the word started to spread about the almost miraculous success of these "hog-calling" contests...the demand for sound trucks was far in excess of what pyschological warfare could provide..

That's not to say that the civilian experts didn't need military experience...Their first efforts were not nearly so successful as their later ones, after they found out what it means to live like a combat infantryman.. I remember how the addition of a single phrase made the difference between the success and failure of a broadcast appeal to the enemy. At first nothing happened when they addressed to the enemy with threats of what would happen if he didn't surrender. But when they added the single line: "And bring your mess-kits with you", enemy strong-points surrendered in droves..

And few outfits made more requests for pyschological warfare units than General Collin's famed 7th Corps. They helped him take Cherbourg and stop Von Rundstedt in the Ardennes..

But what General Collins is talking about today, is pyscholbgical warfare on the grand scale...He said: "This country must enter the struggle for men's minds, with every resource at our command.." As a military man, General Collins thinks first about his troops.. He pin-pointed the necessity to combat the "Yankee go home" campaign in countries where american troops are stationed...

This is the kind of propaganda which the communists do on the Cheap, by crude paint-brush work at night...But it remains to stare at foreign civilians and american soldiers alike, until weathered away, or covered up by a pro-american poster..

It's a paradox, but the communists seem to attach more value to american counter-propaganda, than we do...They certainly spend a lot more than, just to jam our"voice of truth" from reaching the Russian people..

But as one Russian expert pointed out to Congress today, the Kremlin no longer aims its propaganda against governements and so-called "ruling circles" but since the beginning of last year, is teaching every individual russian to hate americans...are using their idea-weapons to create 5th columns among our allies..

But perhaps nothing has so underscored the need to combat Soviet propaganda as the russian charge that germ warfare has become a hideous reality in China and Korea.. Their rejection today of an international red cross investigation indicates the "Depth" of their sincerity...So is their disregard of The World Health Organization's offer to look into it.

[redacted]....

They say [redacted] we're trying to prevent the UN from taking action...

Now its almost unneccessary [redacted] for us to deny [redacted] such horrible charges among ourselves and our allies...Russian propaganda has, of course, long since reached [redacted] The point [redacted] of diminishing returns in [redacted] in this country...

But they're [redacted] planting their poison in more fertile ground, all the way from [redacted] communist-controlled [redacted] East Europe to the China Sea...

Where there is no-one to deny them...Unless and until we can penetrate these regions with a positive anti-dote to the Communist hate-campaign..

In ideas, as in war, its the initiative That [redacted] counts...

simply [redacted] denying the Russian charges will not be enough...

We not only need to spend [redacted] money, we need some new ideas to [redacted] fight the battle for men's minds..

[redacted] This is Larry LeSueur speaking...

I'll be back in a moment with the word for today..(CUE)

But first, BOB DIXON..

We have learned from experience the value of propaganda when it effectively hits home. The power of the spoken word should never be underestimated. Victor Hugo once observed:"No army can withstand the strength of an idea that has materialized." This may be a bit optimistic, but even skeptics would have to agree with Henry Miller when he says:"The buzz of a mosquito can sometimes drown out the ocean's roar."

Goodnite!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
LARRY LESUEUR REPORTING
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

WEDNESDAY - MARCH 26, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

Good evening: Here's what happened today!

The Untied States called upon Russia "to put up or shut up" on its charges that we are using germ warfare in China and Korea. The demand came after Jacob Malik of Russia rejected an impartial investigation by the Internationa Red Cross. He said the Red Cross is nothing but a Swiss organization; did nothing to defend the victims of Hitler in the last war. Then Benjamin Cohen, the American delegate, said: "The Soviet Government brought grave charges against United Nations forces in Korea. But the Soviet Government refuses to allow an impartial investigation. "Last week" said Mr. Cohen, "I asked Mr. Malik, in effect, to put up or shut up; to agree to an investigation or confess that his charges are baseless. The answer is now clear. His government will not put up. The world can now judge" said Mr. Cohen, "whether this being the case, he should not be silenced."

In Korea today, the North Korean delegate at the truce talks gave back to us a letter from Trygvie Lie, the Secretary-General of the U.N., offering help from the World Health organization to curb the epidemics the Koreans have been reporting. The North Korean said: "The document has nothing to do with the armistice agreement." In today's talks on exchanging prisoners of war, "some slight progress" was made. A United Nations spokesman says that as a result of secret sessions an enemy proposal for exchanging prisoners is "becoming clearer."

Allied raiders today over-ran an enemy position in the eastern mountains, then withdrew.

And the Pentagon reports that we suffered 123 casualties in Korea last week: the smallest figure for one week since the war started. The total casualty list is now one hundred and 6 thousand, 794.

The government of Burma says its troops have started an attack to drive an estimated 13-thousand Chinese nationalists out of Burma. The Nationalists are said to be based in the area opposite China's Yunan province, preparing to attack across the border. Thses Chinese troops are described in some dispatches as well-armed, with a fully equipped airfield in Burmese territory. Other dispatches describe them as ill-equipped and hungry irregulars.

In Washington today Defense Mobilizer Wilson called his top mobilizati officials to meet early tomorrow to make plans to avoid a threatened steel strike. C. M. White, president of Republic Steel, says the Wage Stabilization Board's recommendations for settling the dispute would cost his company 31 cents an hour. Phil Murray, president of the C.I.O. steelworkers, says the cost would be 18 cents an hour. He figures the industry would need a two dollar a ton increase to meet it, whereas the industry wants 12-dollars a ton. Mr. Murray says the industry must either accept the Wage Board's recommendations or take responsibility for a nation-wide strike.

Chairman Maybank of the Senate Finance Committee said today that any sizeable wage-and-price increases in the steel industry would make it harder to get a bill through Congress extending economic controls. Today, the committee voted in favor of continuing wage, price, rent and material controls for one year: the Administration wants a two-year extention.

Attorney General McGrath has told a House committee he doesn't feel the Justice Department needs investigating any more than any other federal agency. But he'll be glad to have the department's operations examined. The Attorney General defended the right of department lawyers to practice law on the side - under certain conditions. He said if Congressshould ban this private law practice it would lose, overnight, a majority of the United States attorneys: "and they would be the best we have." McGrath also suggested that if his department lawyers are banned from practicing law on the side, the same ban should apply to Congressmen

The Senate Agriculture Committee was told today that V. M. Harris of Kansas said in a "confidential report" that he made a pay-off agreement with two federal employees who handled part of his government grain storage contract. Mr. Harris said in the report that he agreed to pay 35 per cent of his profits on the deal to the two government men. The report was made public by Republican Senator Mundt of South Dakota. Committee Chairman Ellender said: "The report should not have been mentioned at this time. It contains unsubstantiated charges that have not been thoroughly checked by the committee staff."

The House committee investigating tax scandals will hear tomorrow from Republican Senator Bridges of NewHampshire about his efforts to settle a seven-million-dollar tax case.

And the United States Chamber of Commerce says that federal taxes last week hit American consumers so hard, that "retailers in almost every line of business are reporting sharply dropping sales."

The Chamber also announced that it opposes any additional foreign aid this year; feels the Senate Foreign Relations Committee is trying to "stifle public opinion by rushing an additional and unnecessary foreign aid bill through Congress."

Senator McCarthy of Wisconsin today filed a two million dollar suit against Senator Benton of Connecticut. McCarthy accuses Benton of "libel, slander and conspiracy" in trying to get McCarthy thrown out of the Senate. The suit is based on Benton's 30-thousand word statement accusing McCarthy of perjury, fraud and "calculated deceit" of the American people. Senator Benton was not available for comment.

In New Jersey today, a superior court judge ruled that Senator Taft's name should not be removed from the New Jersey primary ballot. The judge said the name should be kept on the ballot "in view of the over-riding public interest and public sentiment for Taft's name to remain on the ballot." The Senator had requested that his name be withdrawn, charging a double-cross by Jersey's Governor Dirscoll.

In Wisconsin, the campaigning Senator Taft said he doesn't see how any Wisconsin voter can possibly decide what principles or policies "the hybrid tickets" stand for. The Senator was refering to Harold Stassen's statement, that half of the delegates he wins in Wisconsin will vote for General Eisenhower on the first ballot at the Chicago convention. The situation in Wisconsin now is this: Stassen promises half of his delegates to Eisenhower, and the General's supporters are backing Governor Warren of California. Tom Coleman, head of the Taft organizat in Wisconsin, says: "Stassen isn't running for Stassen anymore and Warren delegate aren't running for Warren."

In Tunisia today, the French clamped martial law on the whole country and its three and a half million Moslem residents. The French have arrested Premie Mohammed Chenik and three of his nationalist ministers. They are accused of encouraging recent attacks and sabotage against French troops.

In Italy, more than 40-thousand students rioted in Rome, Milan and Naples, demanding the return of Trieste to Italy. It was the third straight day of such riots which, we're told, are being led by Communists and neo-fascists.

Prime Minister Churchill today was informed that some of his Conservative mem ers in the House of Commons object to a proposed increase in charges under the socialized medical plan. And the British Trade Unions Congress says the new Conservative budget has dropped "the policies of maintaining economic stability." This could be notice of demands for a new round of wage increases in Britain.

When a man bites a dog, that's news: but when a military man comes out in favour of a war of ideas, that's practically revolutionary. Yet, that's what the Army chief of staff, General Lawton Collins, told Congress today: recommended a total propaganda offensive; said "we can't do the job half-way. It's the only way to convince aggressors that another war cannot pay."

The Army chief of staff was lending his weight to a State Department request for 170-million dollars for its overseas "Truth Campaign". That's more than twice as much as the 85-million dollars Congress approved last year. And it's a sum which brought sharp criticism from appropriations-committee-members. Representative Clevenger, of Ohio, accused the administration of carrying on "a scare campaign" based on the threat of Soviet aggression.

We must concede that the Administration has in the past seemed to favor "shock tactics" in order to move Congress. But in this instance, it looks as though we might be getting a bargain for expending 170 million dollars. This reporter bases his evaluation both on General Collin's testimony and upon experienc for there was a time when the General was not so whole-heartedly in favor of the military use of ideas - and this is a tribute to his growth both in office and in stature, since he won the nickname of "Lightening Joe" as divisional commander in the Pacific and Corps Commander in Europe.

General Collins found out by hard, bloody experience that the tempo of his ground-gaining tactics could be speeded-up by psychological warfare. When the psychological warfare teams made their first appearance in Normandie, they were treated like orphans. Divisional commanders hard-pressed to fight battles with limited forces at their command, resented the presence of civilians with sound trucks at the front, and the need to detach men from the line to protect them. But when the word started to spread about the almost miraculous success of these "hop-calling" contests, the demand for sound trucks was far in excess of what psychological warfare could provide. That's not to say that the civilian experts didn't need military experience. Their first efforts were not nearly so successful as their later ones after they found out what it means to live like a combat infantryman. I remember how the addition of a single phrase made the difference between the success and failure of a broadcast appeal to the enemy. At first, nothing happened when they addressed the enemy with threats of what would happen if he didn't surrender. But when they added the single line, "And bring your mess-kits with you", enemy strong-points surrendered in droves.

A few outfits made more requests for psychological warfare units than General Collin's famed 7th Corps. They helped him take Cherbourg and stop Von Rundstedt in the Ardennes.

But what General Collins is talking about today, is psychological warfare on the grand scale. He said: "This country must enter the struggle for men's minds with every resource at our command." As a military man, General Collins thinks first about his troops. He pin-pointed the necessity to combat the "Yanked go home" campaign in countries where American troops are stationed. This is the kind of propaganda which the communists do on the cheap, by crude paint-brush work at night. But it remains to stare at foreign civilians and American soldiers alike, until weathered away, or covered up by a pro-American poster.

It's a paradox, but the communists seem to attach more value to American counter-propaganda, than we do. They certainly spend a lot more just to jam our "voice of truth" from reaching the Russian people.

But as one Russian expert pointed out to Congress today, the Kremlin no longer aims its propaganda against governments and so-called "ruling circles". Since the beginning of last year, it is teaching every individual Russian to hate Americans: are using their idea-weapons to create 5th columns among our allies.

But perhaps nothing has so underscored the need to combat Soviet propaganda as the Russian charge that germ warfare has become a hideous reality in China and Korea. Their rejection today of an international Red Cross investigation indicates the "depth" of their sincerity. So is their disregard of the World Health Organization's offer to look into it. They say we're trying to prevent the U.N. from taking action. Now, it is almost unnecessary for us to deny such horrible charges among ourselves and our allies. Russian propaganda, of course, has long since reached the point of diminishing returns in this country. But they're planting their poison in more fertile ground, all the way from Communist-controlled East Europe to the China Sea, where there is no-one to deny them unless, and until, we can penetrate these regions with a positive anti-dote to the communist hate-campaign.

In ideas, as in war, it's the initiative that counts: simply denying the Russian charges will not be enough. We not only need to spend money; we need some new ideas to fight the battle for men's minds.

This is Larry LeSueur. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." But, first, Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

LESUEUR: We have learned from experience the value of propaganda when it effectively hits home. The power of the spoken word should never be underestimated. Victor Hugo once observed: "No army can withstand the strength of an idea that has materialized." This may be a bit optimistic, but even skeptics would have to agree with Henry Miller when he says: "The buzz of a mosquito can sometimes drown out the ocean's roar."

Good Night!

Thursday - March 27, 1952

Good Evening - Here's what happened today.

~~This is the news:~~

Defense Secretary Lovett says that if the truce talks in Korea collapse, the armed forces will have to ask for more money from Congress. In secret testimony before a House committee released today, Mr. Lovett said we will soon be spending 167-million dollars a day for military security. And, he says, it will cost this much until the end of 1954. And Assistant Defense Secretary McNeil says the Defense department will soon ask Congress for one and a half billions to cover the cost of the Korean war..not all the costs..but those that could not be absorbed within the department's present funds.

In Korea today bad weather kept our air activity to a minimum. On the ground, patrol skirmishes broke out at scattered points.

At Panmunjom, we exchanged detailed statements with the enemy, on the prisoner of war issue. In another tent, where the negotiators are discussing how to supervise a truce, the Communists questioned the right of the U.N. negotiators to represent the South Korean people. An allied spokesman said later: "This strikes a new mark so far as the picayune nature of an issue is concerned."

Undersecretary of the air force [redacted] Gilpatrick said today, that it will take nearly four more years for the air force to build up to 126 modern combat wings. Under the new "stretch-out" program, the air force has again cut its peak production estimates. Originally, after the Korean war started, the air force aimed at a top production of 2-thousand planes a month. Now it plans to reach a peak production of 900 planes a month, sometime in 1953.

Defense Mobilizer Wilson conferred with his top aides today on how to avoid a steel strike. No statements were issued. And in Pittsburgh, David McDonald, secretary treasurer of the Steelworkers union, told a C.I.O. state convention:" the union is in a particularly fortunate position because we have a rather friendly gentleman in the White House."

Senator Bridges of New Hampshire told a House tax investigating committee today that he had inquired into a 7-million dollar tax case at the request of an old friend. The friend is William Power Maloney, who recently appeared before the committee as counsel for Henry W. Grunewald, the so-called "mystery man." Senator Bridges testified that he does not know the Hyman Harvey Klein, against whom the government has filed the 7-million dollar tax claim, became interested in the case " from a desire to encourage quick and proper action...to be sure the government received what was due it, and that the final decision was fair to the taxpayer. Senator Bridges said he sought no special favor;. would not have become involved if he'd known all the facts;. described "this favor" as the type of thing Congressmen and Senators must do if they want to remain in Congress;. a "typical" inquiry;..he's handled thousands of others like it. Later, Chairman King told the Senator that it appeared that his friends had taken advantage of him.

A Senate agricultural committee was today told that the government granted a 40-thousand dollar grain loan to a South Dakota farmer whose bins later turned out to be empty.

Professor David N. Rowe of Yale University told the McCarran committee today that in his view, Owen Lattimore "is probably the principal agent of Stalinism" among American far eastern specialists. The Yale professor said he was talking about "ideas and ideologies". He said he had no knowledge of any formal association with Communism by

Lattimore. In Baltimore, Lattimore said: "When the Russians DISAGREE with somebody they call him a war-monger or an agent of Wall Street Professor Rowe seems to have the same standards of debate."

Robert Ramspeck, the head of the United States civil service, called on the American press today to see that criticism of government workers is "specific, not general"... so that public faith in our form of government is not weakened. In a speech to the National Press Club in Washington, Mr. Ramspeck said: "Let's hang a medal as quickly as we'd hang a culprit. There's room for both..even in an election year."

Senator Kerr of Oklahoma, a Democratic candidate for President, predicts that if Mr. Truman decides not to run he will not name any candidate as his "heir apparent." Senator Kerr thinks the Chicago convention will be a wide open affair if the President doesn't run for re-election.

Mr. Truman returned to the White House from his Key West vacation today. When reporters asked him about continued reports that he's chosen Governor Stevenson of Illinois to be the Democratic candidate, the President said: "I have nothing to say." As he walked into the

NEW White House, Mr. Truman told reporters: "I'm glad of this opportunity, to move back into the President's House. The beautiful part is that I didn't have to do any of the work of moving in."

Senator Kefauver, campaigning in Nebraska, said today: "If the President doesn't want to run I think the people will want to chose the Democratic nominee. in the primary elections."

In Wisconsin, Senator Taft kept up his busy speech-making schedule. told one audience: "In one case, the delegates have abandoned their candidate (Warren) and in the other the candidate (Stassen) seems to have abandoned his delegates."

General Alfred Gruenther, chief of staff to General Eisenhower at Shape headquarters in Paris, spent another day testifying - in secret to the Senate Armed Services Committee. Later, Chairman Russell told reporters: "General Gruenther is one of the ablest men in our military establishment.. I know of no one better qualified to take over command of Shape"..if and when General Eisenhower comes home.

The Federal Reserve Board by a three to two vote today ordered the world's biggest banking combine...Transamerica Corporation... to be split up. Last January Transamerica had stock in 48 banks in five western states, with almost 700 branch banks and deposits totaling seven billion dollars. Transamerica says "at long last we can now go to court and have a fair hearing."

The Office of Price Administration today ordered the nation's 500-thousand restaurants to post their dollars-and-cents price ceilings, where their customers can see them. No general changes in overall restaurant prices expected. the new ceilings will be geared to the government's cost of living index.

The State Department today recognized the new revolutionary government of General Batista in Cuba...the 18th nation to grant this recognition.

American, British and Italian delegates have agreed to meet soon to negotiate an agreement that would give the Italians a greater voice in governing the allied zone of Trieste.

In Tunisia, the Bey of Tunis has refused to receive two emmissaries of French President Auriol. President Auriol is intervening personally in support of the French move to beat down the spread of Tunisian nationalism.

In Munich, a package addressed to West Germany's Chancellor Adenauer blew up in police headquarters.. A German bomb-dismantling expert was killed, and three other policemen wounded.

LeSueur 27 March 1952 7:45

Senator Benton TODAY challenged Senator McCarthy, calling upon the Wisconsin Republican to press for trial of his 2 million dollar "LIBEL" suit, before running for re-election, THIS puts the case of Senator McCarthy where it has, perhaps, always belonged:"In politics." Now this reporter has no intention of attempting to try this case on the radio. Both of these able politicians have now recorded their desire to seek a decision in the United States Courts...Senator McCarthy, who e been both a lawyer and a judge, says he will handle his own case, if it comes to trial.. And Senator Benton, of Connecticut, a man well-versed in the intricacies of the advertising and public relations business, may give a good enough account of himself, to satisfy those who favour his side..

But considering the wealth of emotion that has already been expended on the radio, TV, in the newspapers and news magazines, regarding the merits of the background of this case, it seems to this reporter that any court decision should be amplified.. That to the public servant who emerges victorious in this action, should come a suitable political reward..

Now this reporter has never heard anyone refer to Senator Benton as a communist, and certainly few have battled against communist suspects more stoutly than Senator McCarthy...

And since both of these gentlemen have already reached one of the highest public offices in the land, this reporter humbly suggests that the winner of this case, not only be returned by the voters to the Senate, but chosen to represent his country in the highest international organization, the United Nations. Now pro-administration stalwarts like Senator Sparkman of Alabama have already represented this country, as a member of the United States Mission to the UN, and Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, campaign manager for General Esienhower, has also been accorded that honor...Both of them acquitted themselves well when confronted by Soviet opposition...Their Senate training served them in good stead.. I'm not sure whether Senator Benton has yet affiliated himself with any presidential candidate, but Senator McCarthy is generally recognized as a supporter of Senator Taft...Therefore in recognition of the Administration's "professed" bi-partizan foreign policy, and in fairness to all the presidential candidates, it would be shattering no precedent if a Taft supporter like Senator McCarthy were named to one of the many United Nation's committees [redacted] to represent the anti-communist [redacted] front of the United States... For example the next scheduled United Nations conference is the Commission of Human rights, on which Mrs. Roosvelt has been battling the Russians for years...It will be followed in short order by the Committee on Forced Labor, on which a majority of United Nations will wage argument with Russia and its satellites... These might well serve as [redacted] trial heats, warm-ups for such a redoubtable anti-communist as Senator McCarthy,...or, of course, Senator Benton... whose defense in the McCarthy libel ~~action~~ suit may well be that he, Senator Benton, knows a communist when he sees one.. In announcing his ~~[redacted]~~ libel action, Senator McCarthy stated that if he had ~~[redacted]~~ never attacked communists in the government, "Bill Benton would not be attacking McCarthy." ~~[redacted]~~ This reporter is in no position to comment on that...

But I believe it's in my province to suggest that either, or, [redacted] well, why not? Both of these highly-trained men, move into the Big Time...Pit their wits and their acknowledged skill with words against self-proclaimed communists, the genuine article, the official representatives of Soviet Russia... Who, indeed, could be better fitted to wage war against Soviet propaganda, than Senator Benton? If I'm not mistaken, this former assistant secretary of state in charge of public information, has already served as an american delegate to a UN freedom of the press committee...as a retired advertising expert, he might well inject some shrewd, positive slogans into our rather negative, anti-communist UN speeches..

On the other hand, who would be better-equipped to to combat the smear tactics of a Vishinsky or Jacob Malik, than Senator McCarthy? Some people might think the Wisconsin Republican has been too rough on those he has suspected of following the communist line...But Senator McCarthy could take off the gloves if he confronted Soviet Russia's Jacob Malik... There's a 1 hundred per cent communist worthy of the Senator's mettle...the burly comrade Malik would never hesitantly search his memory for indidents deep in the past..

He'd probably even boast about his communist affiliations... Then Senator McCarthy could unlimber his big guns,...operate without fear of misunderstanding or criticism.(.make headlines, not only in this country, but the world over...

If given full rein at the United Nations, McCarthy might even worst Malik so badly, as to bring about the Big Russian's downfall in the eyes of the Kremlin...a diplomatic victory of no small order...

Well, If Senator' McCarthy appointment to the UN mission accomplished nothing else, it might at least, clear the political atmosphere in this country.

n to the western world..

Larry LeSueur speaking....I'll be back in a moment with the word for today..(CUE) But first, Bob Dixon..

One of the ~~most~~ constructive things about the United Nations is that it offers both a forum and an escape valve for international ~~diplomacy~~ arguments. Debate and argument are often a good thing, for as someone once observed: "Discussion is the anvil on which the spark of truth is struck." And a good rule for ~~men~~ the diplomats to follow was set down a long time ago, by the Roman statesman, Cato, when he said: "Speak the truth freely, though the truth be hard."

Goodnite!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
LARRY LESUEUR REPORTING
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

THURSDAY - MARCH 27, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

Good evening: Here's what happened today:

Defense Secretary Lovett says that if the truce talks in Korea collapse, the armed forces will have to ask for more money from Congress. In secret testimony before a House committee, (released today), Mr. Lovett said we will soon be spending 167-million dollars a day for military security. And, he says, it will cost this much until the end of 1954. Assistant Defense Secretary McNeil says the Defense Department will soon ask Congress for one and a half billions to cover the cost of the Korean war; not all the costs, but those that could not be absorbed within the department's present funds.

In Korea today, bad weather kept our air activity to a minimum. On the ground, patrol skirmishes broke out at scattered points.

At Pamunjom, we exchanged detailed statements with the enemy on the prisoner of war issue. In another tent, where the negotiators are discussing how to supervise a truce, the Communists questioned the right of the U.N. negotiator to represent the South Korean people. And allied spokesman said later: "This strikes a new mark so far as the picayune nature of an issue if concerned."

Undersecretary of the Air Force Gilpatrick said today, that it will take nearly foru more years for the Air Force to build up to 126 modern combat wings. Under the new "stretch-out" program, the Air Force has again cut its peak production estimates. Originally, after the Korean war started, the Air Force aimed at a top production of 2-thousand planes a month. Now it plans to reach a peak production of 900 planes a month sometime in 1933.

Defense Mobilizer Wilson conferred with his top aides today on how to avoid a steel strike. No statements were issued. And in Pittsburgh, David McDonald, secretary treasurer of the steelworkers union, told a C.I.O. state convention: "The union is in a particularly fortunate position because we have a rather friendly gentleman in the White House."

Senator Bridges of New Hampshire told a House tax investigating committee today that he had inquired into a 7-million dollar tax case at the request of an old friend. The friend is William Power Maloney, who recently appeared before the committee as counsel for Henry W. Grunewald, the so-called "mystery man". Senator Bridges testified that he does not know the Hyman Harvey Klein against whom the Government has filed the 7-million dollar tax claim, but became interested in the case "from a desire to encourage quick and proper action, to be sure the Government received what was due it, and that the final decision was fair to the taxpayer. Senator Bridges said he sought no special favor; would not have become involved if he'd known all the facts; described "this favor" as the type of thing Congressmen and Senators must do if they want to remain in Congress; a "typical" inquiry"; he's handled thousands of others like it. Later, Chairman King told the Senator that it appeared that his friends had taken advantage of him.

A Senate agricultural committee was today told that the Government granted a 40-thousand dollar grain loan to a South Dakota farmer whose bins later turned out to be empty.

Professor David N. Rowe of Yale University told the McCarran committee today, that in his view, Owen Lattimore "is probably the principal agent of Stalinism among American far-eastern specialists. The Yale professor said he was talking about "ideas and ideologies." He said he had no knowledge of any formal association with Communism by Lattimore. In Baltimore, Lattimore said: "When the Russians disagree with somebody, they call him a warmonger or an agent of Wall Street. Professor Rose seems to have the same standards of debate."

Robert Ramspeck, the head of the United States Civil Service, called on the American press today to see that criticism of government workers is "specific not general" so that public faith in our form of Government is not weakened. In a speech to the National Press Club in Washington, Mr. Ramspeck said: "Let's hang a medal as quickly as we'd hang a culprit. There's room for both, even in an election year."

Senator Kerr of Oklahoma, a Democratic candidate for President, predicts that if Mr. Truman decides not to run, he will not name any candidate as his "heir apparent." Senator Kerr thinks the Chicago convention will be a wide open affair if the President doesn't run for re-election.

Mr. Truman returned to the White House from his Key West vacation toda When reporters asked him about continued reports that he's chosen Governor Stevenso of Illinois to be the Democratic candidate, the President said: "I have nothing to say." As he walked into the new White House, Mr. Truman told reporters: "I'm glad of this opportunity, to move back into the President's House. The beautiful part of it is that I didn't have to do any of the work of moving in."

Senator Kefauver, camapaigning in Nebraska, said today: "If the President doesn't want to run, I think the people will want to chose the Democratic nominee themselves in the primary elections."

In Wisconsin, Senator Taft kept up his busy speech-making schedule, told one audience: "In one case, the delegates have abandoned their candidate (Warren), and in the other, the candidate (Stassen) seems to have abandoned his delegates."

General Alfred Gruenther, chief of staff to General Eisenhower at SHAPE headquarters in Paris, spent another day testifying in secret to the Senate Armed Services Committee. Later, Chairman Russell told reporters: "General Gruenther is one of the ablest men in our military establishment. I know of no one better qualified to take over command of SHAPE" if and when General Eisenhower comes home.

The Federal Reserve Board by a three to two vote today ordered the world's biggest banking combine, Transamerica Corporation, to be split up. Last January Transamerica had stock in 48 banks in five western states, with almost 700 branch banks and deposits totaling seven billion dollars. Transamerica says: "At long last we can now go to court and have a fair hearing."

The Office of Price Administration today ordered the nation's 500-thousand restaurants to post their dollars-and-cents price ceilings where their customers can see them. No general changes in overall restaurant prices expected. The new ceilings will be geared to the government's cost of living index.

The State Department today recognized the new revolutionary government of General Batista in Cuba - the 18th nation to grant this recognition.

American, British and Italian delegates have agreed to meet soon to negotiate an agreement that would give the Italians a greater voice in governing the allied zone of Trieste.

In Tunisia, the Bey of Tunis has refused to receive two emmissaries of French President Auriol. President Auriol is intervening personally in support of the French move to beat down the spread of Tunisian nationalism.

In Munich, a package addressed to West Germany's Chancellor Adenauer blew up in police headquarters. A German bomb-dismantling expert was killed, and three other policemen wounded.

Senator Benton today challenged Senator McCarthy, calling upon the Wisconsin Republican to press for trial of his 2-million dollar "libel" suit before running for re-election. This puts the case of Senator McCarthy where it has, perhaps, always belonged: "In politics." Now this reporter has no intention of attempting to try this case on the radio. Both of these able politicians have now recorded their desire to seek a decision in the United States Courts. Senator McCarthy, whose been both a lawyer and a judge, even says he will handle his own case, if it comes to trial. And Senator Benton, of Connecticut, a man well-versed in the intricacies of the advertising and public relations business, may give a good enough account of himself to satisfy those who favour his side.

But considering the wealth of emotion that has already been expended on the radio, TV, the newspapers and news magazines, regarding the merits of the background of this case, it seems to this reporter that any court decision should be amplified: that to the public servant who emerges victorious in this action, should come a suitable political reward. Now this reporter has never heard anyone refer to Senator Benton as a communist, and certainly few have battled against communist suspects more stoutly than Senator McCarthy.

Since both of these gentlemen have already reached one of the highest public offices in the land, this reporter humbly suggests that the winner of this case, not only be returned by the voters to the Senate, but chosen to represent his country in the highest international organization, the United Nations Now pro-administration stalwarts, like Senator Sparkman of Alabama, have already represented this country. as a member of the United States Mission to the U.N., and Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, campaign manager for General Eisenhower, has also been accorded that honor. Both of them acquitted themselves well when confronted by Soviet opposition. Their Senate training served them in good stead. I'm not sure whether Senator Benton has yet affiliated himself with any presidentia candidate, but Senator McCarthy is generally recognized as a supporter of Senator Taft. Therefore, in recognition of the Administration's "professed" bi-partizan foreign policy, and in fairness to all the presidential candidates, it would be shattering no precedent if a Taft supporter, like Senator McCarthy, were named to one of the many United Nation's committees to represnet the anti-communist front of the United States. For example, the next scheduled United Nations conference is the Commission of Human Rights, on which Mrs. Roosevelt has been battling the Russians for years. It will be followed in short order by the Committee on Forced Labor, on which a majority of United Nations will wage argument with Russia and its satellites. These might well serve as trial heats, warm-ups for such a redoubtable anti-communist as Senator McCarthy, or, of course, Senator Benton, whose defense in the McCarthy libel suit may well be that he, Senator Benton, knows a communist when he sees one. In announcing his libel action, Senator McCarthy stated, that if he had never attacked communist in the government, "Bill Benton would not be attacking McCarthy." This reporter is in no position to comment on that.

But I believe it's in my province to suggest that either, or well, why not both of these highly-trained men, move into the Big Time; pit their wits and their acknowledged skill with words against self-proclaimed communists, the genuine article, the official representatives of Soviet Russia: who, indeed, could be better fitted to wage war against Soviet propaganda than Senator Benton? If I'm not mistaken, this former Assistant Secretary of State in charge of public information, has already served as an American delegate to a U.N. Freedom of the Press committee. As a retired advertising expert, he might well inject some shrewd, positive slogans into our rather negative, anti-communist U.N. speeches.

On the other hand, who would be better-equipped to combat the smear tactics of a Vishinsky or Jacob Malik, than Senator McCarthy? Some people might think the Wisconsin Republican has been too rough on those he has suspected of following the communist line, but Senator McCarthy could take the gloves off if he confronted Soviet Russia's Jacob Malik. There's a one-hundred-per-cent communist worthy of the Senator's mettle: the burly comrade Malik would never hesitantly search his memory for incidents deep in the past. He probably even boast about his communist affiliations. Then Senator McCarthy could unlimber his big guns, operate without fear of misunderstanding or criticism, make headlines, not only in this country, but the world over.

If given full rein at the United Nations, McCarthy might even worst Malik so badly as to bring about the Big Russian's downfall in the eyes of the Kremlin: —— a diplomatic victory of no small order.

Well, if Senator McCarthy's appointment to the U.N. mission accomplished nothing else, it might at least clear the political atmosphere in this country.

This is Larry LeSueur. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word for Today." But first, Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

LESUEUR: One of the constructive things about the United Nations is that it offers both a forum and an escape valve for international arguments. Debate and argument are often a good thing, for as someone once observed: "Discussion is the anvil on which the spark of truth is struck." And a good rule for the diplomats to follow was set down a log time ago by the Roman statesman, Cato, when he said: "Speak the truth freely, though the truth be hard."

Good Night!

Friday - March 28, 1952

Good evening. Here's what happened today:

The Air Force believes ~~that~~ the Soviet Union's expanding force of atomic-bomb-carrying planes is "the most ominous threat this country has ever known." The House Appropriations Committee today released some of the testimony taken in secret from our top air force officials. Here's what they say: If Russia continues her present airplane building program within three years most of her planes will be jets. Her total number of planes capable of carrying atomic bombs will approach ours. Soviet jet production today is four times ours. They have a numerical ~~lead~~ lead in jets; we claim our planes are superior. But the delivery of all our warplanes is 15 per cent behind the schedules set last year. and those schedules have since been revised downward. As the House committee released this testimony, a Senate committee was told by top air force and naval officials: any move to eliminate flight pay in our armed forces will "wreck this nation's air power"... Veteran airmen would chose less ~~hazardous~~ dangerous assignments on the ground.

In Korea today our planes concentrated on attacking the enemy's supply lines and front-line positions. Our infantrymen captured one enemy hill in the east, ~~and~~ then withdrew. At the truce talks, the Communists said they want their suggestion that Russia be accepted as a member of a neutral inspection team to go to the top negotiators..be taken away from the staff officers.

And at the United Nations, here in New York, Jacob Malik was told, in effect, to sit down and be quiet, after he had launched another of his germ warfare charges. Mr. Malik was again accusing American forces of using germ warfare in Korea American Delegate Benjamin Cohen interrupted. Mr. Cohen said: "the charges are unfounded. Malik refuses to agree to an investigation.. therefore he should not be permitted to continue making such charges." Canadian Chairman Johnson ruled Malik's remarks "out of order." He was upheld..11 votes to Mr. Malik's one.

The Soviet germ warfare charge today resulted in the death of five persons in Iran.. another 200 were injured. Some 5-thousand members of the outlawed Communist party staged a demonstration in Teheran, CHARGING that we are spreading germs Anti-Communists broke it up. Before long ten truck loads of soldiers had to be called out to restore order.

In Damascus, Syrian police are trying to find out who bombed the office of the U.S. Information Service. The office was wrecked. A local radio operator was killed and several persons were injured.

The Bey of Tunis today agreed to name a new premier. one friendly to the French. and moderate in politics. The French say this paves the way for restoring order in the protectorate and giving Tunisia eventual self-rule.

~~West Germany's Chancellor Adenauer says that sometime in May, the British, French and American foreign ministers will arrive in Germany to sign an allied German peace contract.~~

~~In this country today, United States Marshals arrested Carl G. Ledolce in Rochester, New York. He was charged by the defense department of taking part in the killing of an O.S.S. man during the last war.~~

in Italy

in WASHINGTON, the House Appropriations committee wrote into a State Department appropriation bill a clause aimed at blocking any move to send an American diplomatic mission to the Vatican — without congressional approval.

General Gruenther, chief of staff to General Eisenhower, told reporters in Washington today: "You can't replace a man of the boss's stature without creating a great gap." General Grutneher said that if the Russians should attack in Europe we would try to force them to concentrate their troops. These concentrations would be vulnerable to tactical atomic bombing. The General said, "truly outstanding" progress has been made in building a defense for western Europe.

The American Farm Bureau Federation today proposed a 25 per cent cut in the foreign aid fund. But the Farm Bureau would increase by 500-millions the economic aid portion of the bill. The National Farmers Union, the C.I.O., and A.F. of L., all urged approval of the whole bill. The National Grange, supports it, but wants more emphasis on economic help and technical assistance under the Point 4 program.

Six of the nation's biggest steel firms will meet here in New York on Monday with leaders of the C.I.O. steelworkers, in an effort to agree on a new contract before the union's threatened strike on April 8. Defense Mobilizer Wilson predicts there will be a peaceful settlement before the strike date.

~~The House committee investigating tax scandals was told today that Daniel Bolicky, a former assistant commissioner of the tax Bureau, gave orders that help be given to Hyman Harvey Klein, against whom the government has filed a 7-million dollar claim; Henry M. Agry, head of the bureau's technical staff for 18 years, said Mr. Bolicky ordered him to find some way to lift the tax liens on Klein's property.~~

Down in Texas, where the army and air force are holding the biggest manuvers in American history, the "war" got very realistic today. It seems that the "defending" forces captured a member of the "invading" 82nd airborne division. When the "prisoner" was released his nose had been skinned. So: one company of the 82nd, carefully laid aside its rifles and machine guns, went after the first defense platoon it could find.. ~~and~~ whipped the entire platoon..with bare fists. No official comment.

The President today asked Congress to make sure that the two and a half million men and women of voting age, who are now in the armed forces, get a chance to vote this year.

In Maine, the Republican state convention has voted to give 9 of its DELEGATES at the NATIONAL convention to General Eisenhower. Five went to

CBS RADIO DIVISION

LARRY LESUEUR - EDWARD P. MORGAN

Friday, March 28, 1952
7:45-8:00 P.M.

LESUEUR: .... One of my colleagues, Edward P. Morgan, has been travelling around Wisconsin, listening to the speeches and the voters. For his report, let's switch to Edward P. Morgan in the WKOW Newsroom in Madison, Wis.

MORGAN: The following definite statements can be made about the Wisconsin political situation as of now: Senator Taft has a cold in the head. California's Governor Warren is nursing some bruises from a couple of falls, non-political, on the ice during one of his campaign rounds. Senator Kefauver was so tired by his handshaking schedule that he had to cancel a couple of his last engagements before leaving for Nebraska and the campaign there. And Harold Stassen has the makings of a headache in some reaction to his offer to split his delegates with General Eisenhower.

Beyond this thin beachhead of facts the situation quickly drops off into a deep sea of speculation. Even the experts are hugging the shoreline, hesitant to get caught out with predictions that might sink them when the voting comes next Tuesday. They have duly noted the fact that the election falls on April Fool's Day. One of the reasons for the confusion is the confusing composition of the ballot. On the Democratic side, for instance, there are two slates of favorite Son delegates, running on behalf of President Truman, and then there's the man with the 'coonskin cap, Mr. Kefauver. He has staged by far the most energetic campaign among the Democrats, and the impression an eyewitness gets, for what it's worth, is that he has done himself a lot of good, possibly enough to repeat his triumph in New Hampshire. At any rate, he is given a solid chance of capturing most of the twenty-eight-vote delegation.

On the Republican ticket there are five slates. Heading one of these is Mr. Taft, who quite manifestly is running for the Presidential nomination himself - period. Then there's a man named Perry J. Stearns, a Milwaukee attorney, who also says he is running on his own, altho observers doubt that he will run very far. But then the plot thickens. A gentleman farmer from Beloit, Grant A. Ritter, says a vote for him is a vote for General MacArthur, despite the fact that the General has said it would only be wasting the ballot. General Eisenhower's name is not entered, nor can it be, because write-ins are not allowed in Wisconsin. But he figures in the fight just the same, and this, perhaps, is the most confusing aspect of the whole business. Governor Warren's delegates were mostly identified as Eisenhower men before they got behind the Californian, and the impression is still inescapable that they would switch to the General at the Chicago convention if Warren couldn't make it after a ballot or two. But Minnesota's ex-Governor Stassen is now openly competing for Eisenhower votes with the unusual announcement that he will give half his delegates to the General. Senator Taft described the move to this reporter as an act of desperation, which would damage Stassen and help him, Taft.

At a rally here in Madison, about an hour from now, Stassen is expected to go into the motives of his decision a little more fully and a little more clearly. If you are well-befuddled up to now, we might as well go the full distance and report that perhaps the most bizarre feature of the Wisconsin primary is the fact that Democrats can vote the Republican ticket and vice versa. There is little evidence of vice versa, but there is considerable speculation to the effect that a lot of Democrats, particularly among organized labor, will temporarily invade G.O.P. ranks. Their maneuvre would be to block Taft by voting for Stassen or perhaps for Warren. Against this, however, is a Taft claim of important labor support. Taft indicates he will be well satisfied if he gets, say, twenty-two or twenty-four out of the total of thirty Republican delegates. His opponents argue he will have to do even better than that if he expects to counter-balance his New Hampshire defeat and the amazing Minnesota write-in for Eisenhower. Will he ~~xxxx~~ do this? That's what will make news on next Tuesday. The vote is expected to be heavy for a primary.

This is Edward P. Morgan in Madison, Wisconsin. Now back to Larry Lesueur in New York.

-30-

wdiphone trans./w. Scheiner

Senator Taft.. Two are neutral.

In Wisconsin today the candidates in the Republican presidential primary continued their hard campaigning. One of my colleagues, Edward P. Morgan, has been travelling around Wiswonsin listening to the speeches, and the voters. For his report: now let's switch to Edward P. Morgan in the WKOW newsroom in Madison, Wisconsin:

return cue:

now back to larry le seur in new york

LeSueur cbs 28 March 1952 7:45p

Well The spotlight of the Republican presidential primary race is now on Wisconsin, but the eyes of Democratic politicians are focused elsewhere, at next Tuesday's Nebraska primary..

Reporters in Omaha say, the Democratic contest there, has shoved the Taft-Eisenhower battle into the background, even in that old-time Republican stronghold..

Seems that a conviction is growing in the political camps of Senator Kefauver of Tennessee and Senator Kerr of Oklahoma, that IF President Truman doesn't run, he may have waited too long to name the democratic party candidate.. Think he could have hand-picked his man two months ago, but it's now becoming more difficult... This conviction is evidently spurring the two democratic presidential candidates, to greater efforts in the Nebraska popularity contest..

Senators Kefauver and Kerr have stopped being polite to each other, have started hurling political mud...Senator Kefauver accuses Kerr of starting a "smear" campaign, of trying to taint him with the red Bruce of "communist leanings", while Kerr charges the Tennessean with an "utter disregard for truth," says he's tried to inject a note of religious intolerance into the campaign...

It does appear that the crisis of indecision in the democratic party is deepening...The clash between President Truman and the national chairman, Frank McKinney, tho quickly-smoothed over, carries with it, signs that the President and his top political advisor are not in complete command of the situation..

It's getting more difficult for Mr. Truman to hold delegations, without becoming a candidate for re-election...The device of using pro-Truman"Favorite sons" to control key delegations is not working too well... and It's already getting rather late to launch a boom for Governor Adlai Stevenson of Illinois..

The problem of succession in a democracy, even bears a superficial resemblance to that of a Dictatorship...Premier Stalin is now in the process of juggling palace favorites, without committing himself... But if President Truman doesn't run, it may be just as hard for an out-going President to dominate his party, as it will be for an aging Dictator..

This is Larry LeSueur speaking...I'll be back in a moment with the word for today. (CUE) But first Bob Dixon..

The President's refusal to say whether he is going to run again, is of course a matter of no little concern to other Presidential hopefuls. For them, Josh Billings may have summed it all up when he said: "Silence is still a noise." In any event, at the moment, the President could pretty well adopt a line spoken by another Democrat, David Hill, back in 1896. "Yes, said Mr. Hill, I am a Democrat still - very still."

Goodnite!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
LARRY LESUEUR REPORTING
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

FRIDAY - MARCH 28, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

Good evening: here's what happened today:

The Air Force believes the Soviet Union's expanding force of atomic-bomb-carrying planes is "the most ominous threat this country has ever known." The House Appropriations Committee today released some of the testimony taken in secret from our top air force officials. Here's what they say: If Russia continues her present airplane building program, within three years most of her planes will be jets. Her total number of planes capable of carrying atomic bombs will approach ours. Soviet jet production today is four times ours. They have a numerical lead in jets - we claim our planes are superior. But the delivery of all our warplanes is 15 per cent behind the schedules set last year, and those schedules have since been revised downward. As the House committee released this testimony, a Senate committee was told by top air force and naval officials: any move to eliminate flight pay in our armed forces will "wreck this nation's air power." Veteran airmen would chose less dangerous assignments on the ground.

In Korea today, our planes concentrated on attacking the enemy's supply lines and front-line positions. Our infantrymen captured one enemy hill in the east and then withdrew. At the truce talks, the communists said they want their suggestion that Russia be accepted as a member of a neutral inspection team to go to the top negotiators - be taken away from the staff officers.

And at the United Nations, here in New York, Jacob Malik was told, in effect, to sit down and be quiet, after he had launched another of his germ-warfare charges. Mr. Malik was again accusing American forces of using germ warfare in Korea. American delegate, Benjamin Cohen interrupted. Mr. Cohen said: "The charges are unfounded. Malik refuses to agree to an investigation, therefore he should not be permitted to continue making such charges." Canadian Chairman Johnson ruled Malik's remarks "out of order." He was upheld: 11 votes to Mr. Malik's one.

The Soviet germ-warfare charges today resulted in the death of five persons in Iran: another 200 were injured. Some 5-thousand members of the outlawed communist party staged a demonstration in Teheran, charging that we are spreading germs. Anti-communists broke it up. Before long, ten truck loads of soldiers had to be called out to restore order.

In Damascus, Syrian police are trying to find out who bombed the office of the U.S. Information Service. The office was wrecked. A local radio operator was killed and several persons were injured.

The Bey of Tunis today agreed to name a new premier - one friendly to the French and moderate in politics. The french say this paves the way for restoring order in the protectorate and giving Runisia eventual self-rule.

In Washington, the House Appropriations committee wrote into a State Department appropriation Bill, a clause aimed at blocking any move to send an American diplomatic mission to the Vatican without Congressional approval.

General Gruenther, chief of staff to General Eisenhower, told reporters in Washington today: "You can't replace a man of the bass's stature without creating a great gap." General Gruenther said that if the Russians should attack in Europe, we would try to force them to concentrate their troops. These concentrations would be vulnerable to tactical atomic bombing. The General said: "Truly outstanding" progress has been made in building a defense for West Europe.

The American Farm Bureau Federation today proposed a 25 per cent cut in the foreign aid fund. But the Farm Bureau would increase by 500-millions the economic aid portion of the bill. The National Farmers Union, the C.I.O. and A. F. of L. all urged approval of the whole bill. The National Grange supports it, but wants more emphasis on economic help and technical assistance under the Point 4 program.

Six of the nation's biggest steel firms will meet here in New York on Monday with leaders of the C.I.O. steelworkers in an effort to agree on a new contract before the union's threatened strike on April 8. Defense Mobilizer Wison predicts there will be a peaceful settlement before the strike date.

Down in Texas, where the Army and Air Force are holding the biggest manuvers in American history, the "war" got very realistic today. It seems that the "defending" forces captured a member of the "invading" 82nd Airborne Division. When the "prisoner" was released, his nose had been skinned. So - one company of the 82nd carefully laid aside its rifles and machine guns, went after the first Defense Platoon it could find, whipped the entire platoon - with bare fists. No official comment.

The President today asked Congress to make sure that the two and a half million men and women of voting age, who are now in the armed forces, get a chance to vote this year.

In Maine, the Republican state convention has voted to give nine of its delegates at the National Convention to General Eisenhower. Five went to Senator Taft: two are neutral.

In Wisconsin today, the candidates in the Republican presidential primary continued their hard campaigning. One of my colleagues, Edward P. Morgan, has been travelling around Wisconsin listening to the speeches and the voters. For his report, let's switch to Edward P. Morgan in the WKOW newsroom in Madison, Wisconsin.

MORGAN: The following definite statements can be made about the Wisconsin political situation as of now: Senator Taft has a cold in the head; California's Governor Warren is nursing some bruises from a couple of falls, (non-political), on the ice, during one of his campaign rounds; Senator Kefauver was so tired by his handshaking schedule that he had to cancel a couple of his last engagements before leaving for Nebraska and the campaign here; and Harold Stassen has the makings of a headache in some reaction to his offer to split his delegates with General Eisenhower.

Beyond this thin beachhead of facts, the situation quickly drops off into a deep sea of speculation. Even the experts are hugging the shoreline, hesitant to get caught out with predictions that might sink them when the voting comes next Tuesday. They have duly noted that fact that the election falls on April Fool's Day

One of the reasons for the confusion is the confusing composition of the ballot. On the Democratic side, for instance, there are two slates of Favorite Son delegates running on behalf of President Truman; and then there's the man with the 'coon-skin cap, Mr. Kefauver. He has staged by far the most energetic campaign among the Democrats, and the impression an eyewitness gets, for what it's worth, is that he has done himself a lot of good, possibly enough to repeat his triumph in New Hampshire. At any rate, he is given a solid chance of capturing most of the twenty-eight-vote delegation.

On the Republican ticket there are five slates. Heading one of these is Mr. Taft, who quite manifestly is running for the Presidential nomination himself - period. Then there's a man named Perry J. Stearns, a Milwaukee attorney, who also says he is running on his own,(although observers doubt that he will run very far). But then the plot thickens. A gentleman farmer from Beloit, Grant A. Ritter, says a vote for him is a vote for General MacArthur, despite the fact that the General has said it would only be wasting the ballot. General Eisenhower's name is not entered, nor can it be, because write-ins are not allowed in Wisconsin. But he figures in the fight just the same, and this, perhaps is the most confusing aspect of the whole business. Governor Warren's delegates were mostly identified as Eisenhower men before they got behind the Californian, and the impression is still inescapable that they would switch to the General at the Chicago convention if Warren couldn't make it after a ballot or two. But Minnesota's ex-Governor Stassen is now openly competing for Eisenhower votes with the unusual announcement that he will give half his delegates to the General. Senator Taft described the move to this reporter as an act of desperation, which would damage Stassen and help him, Taft.

At a rally here in Madison, about an hour from now, Stassen is expected to go into the motives of his decision a little more fully and a little more clearly. If you are well-befuddled up to now, we might as well go the full distance and report that perhaps the most bizarre feature of the Wisconsin primary is the fact that Democrats can vote the Republican ticket and vice versa. There is little evidence of vice versa, but there is considerable speculation to the effect that a lot of Democrats, particularly among organized labor, will temporarily invade G.O.P. ranks, Their manuvers would be to block Taft by voting for Stassen or perhaps for Warren. Against this, however, is a Taft claim of important labor support. Taft indicates he will be well satisfied if he gets, say, twenty-two or twenty-four out of the total of thirty Republican delegates. His opponents argue he will have to do even better than that if he expects to counter-balance his New Hampshire defeat and the amazing Minnesota write-in for Eisenhower. Will he do this? That's what will make news on next Tuesday. The vote is expected to be heavy for a primary.

This is Edward P. Morgan in Madison, Wisconsin, Now back to Larry LeSueur in New York.

LESUEUR: The spotlight of the Republican presidential primary race is now on Wisconsin, but the eyes of Democratic politicians are focused elsewhere at next Tuesday's Nebraska primary. Reporters in Omaha say the Democratic contest there has shoved the Taft-Eisenhower battle into the background, even in that old-time Republican stronghold.

Seems that a conviction is growing in the political camps of Senator Kefauver of Tennessee and Senator Kerr of Oklahoma, that if President Truman doesn't run, he may have waited too long to name the Democratic Party candidate; think he could have hand-picked his man two months ago, but it's now becoming more difficult. This conviction is evidently spurring the two Democratic presidential candidates to greater efforts in the Nebraska popularity contest. Senators Kefauver and Kerr have stopped being polite to each other, have started hurling political mud. Senator Kefauver accuses Kerr of starting a "smear" campaign, of trying to taint him with the red brush of "communist leanings," while Kerr charges the Tennessean with an "utter disregard for truth!" says he's tried to inject a note of religious intolerance into the campaign.

It does appear that the crisis of indecision in the Democratic Party is deepening. The clash between President Truman and the national chairman, Frank McKinney, though quickly-smoothed over, carries with it signs that the President and his top political advisor are not in complete command of the situation. It's getting more difficult for Mr. Truman to hold delegations without becoming a candidate for re-election. The device of using pro-Truman "Favorite Sons" to control key delegations is not working too well, and it's already getting rather late to launch a boom for Governor Adlai Stevenson of Illinois.

The problem of succession in a Democracy even bears a superficial resemblance to that of a Dictatorship. Premier Stalin is now in the process of juggling palace favorites without committing himself. If President Truman doesn't run, it may be just as hard for an out-going President to dominate his party, as it will be for an aging Dictator.

This is Larry LeSueur speaking. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." But first, Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

LESUEUR: The President's refusal to say whether he is going to run again is, of course, a matter of no little concern to other presidential hopefuls. For then, Josh Billings may have summed it all up when he said: "Silence is still a noise." In any event, at the moment, the President could pretty well adopt a line spoken by another Democrat, David Hill, back in 1896. "Yes," said Mr. Hill, "I am a Democrat still - very still."

Good Night!

Monday - March 31, 1952

Good evening: Here's what happened today:

Charles E. Wilson said today that American production has swung the military balance against Russia. In his final news conference, a few hours ago, Mr. Wilson bowed out as the government's defense mobilizer. He refused to talk about his dispute with the President over the steel case. But we've recorded for you the major points Mr. Wilson made at his news conference:

(runs 1;20 ending with wilson saying: Bill Downs doubled..in fact tripled.. our strength in being to date)

Mr. Wilson left his office and his government position today. He resigned after accusing the President of backing down on a promise to grant the steel industry some price increase to compensate for wage increases recommended by the Wage Stabilization Board.

Today, the leaders of six big steel companies and the C.I.O. steelworkers postponed.. a conference at which they were to try to work out an agreement. The industry says the postponment is "temporary..pending further developments." Phil Murray, the union president, says he assumed the meeting will start tomorrow.

CBS RADIO DIVISION

LARRY LESUEUR

Monday, March 31, 1952
7:45-8:00 P.M.

LESUEUR: ... In his final news conference a few hours ago, Mr. Wilson bowed out as the Government's Defense Mobilizer. He refused to talk about his dispute with the President over the steel case. But we've recorded for you the major points Mr. Wilson made at his news conference:

WILSON: I believe we are fast overtaking Russia in quantity of production of war materiel; that in quality of production, it's my personal opinion that we have passed them. One more personal opinion, for what it's worth -- and I'm not sure how much it's worth -- I believe that we and our Allies, in view of the way the production of war materiel is rolling in America and part of it rolling to our Allies, I believe that we now have the balance of power. Our output of military goods is now approximately five times the production we were achieving in the first quarter after Korea. I believe ... sincerely believe that we have doubled our strength, indeed, yes, almost tripled our strength, indeed, to date.

* * * * *

LESUEUR: ... Correspondent Morgan has been making a last-minute canvas of the situation in Wisconsin, so for his report let's switch to Edward P. Morgan in the WISN newsroom in Milwaukee.

MORGAN: The tumult and the shouting of the spellbinders have died, leaving the voice of the so-called observer naked'ly alone and quavering. Wherefor we repair to the storm-cellar of historical fact and raise the question: Why all this fuss about tomorrow's Wisconsin election anyway? After all, it's only a primary. The answer is pointedly supplied by one of this state's leading political writers, Edwin R. Bailey of the Milwaukee Journal, who assembles the following facts: In 1940 the victory of New York's Governor Dewey over the late Arthur Vandenberg in the Wisconsin primary put the Michigan Senator out of the race for the Republican presidential nomination. In 1944, Wendell Willkie bowed out as a candidate when Dewey beat him here. And in 1948, General MacArthur faded out of the running after Minnesota's ambitious Harold Stassen won the Wisconsin primary. No wonder, then, that in 1952, now that he's dealt himself a hand in this contest, Senator Taft has his blue chips down on the outcome. Weeks ago, Taft's national campaign manager, David Ingalls, said if the Senator lost in Wisconsin he would be thru as a candidate. At that time the Taft organization here was talking confidently of capturing, perhaps, all thirty of the G.O.P. convention delegates. But now they've trimmed their sails. Now they say victory will still clearly be theirs if they get twenty out of the total. Technically that may be true, but it disregards the possibility of Stassen and California's Governor Warren between them getting more of the popular vote than the combination of Taft and the weak but vocal favorite Son slate for General MacArthur. The justification for lumping the Warren-Stassen votes together is that, one way or another, these candidates are identified with General Eisenhower. Why has Taft's strength slipped, if in fact it has? One possible reason rears up in the big, warm personality of Earl Warren, who may turn out to be the suprise element of this campaign. His schedule was so clumsily handled that in town after town, he had no one to talk to because people simply didn't know that he was there. Nevertheless, where arrangements did jell, they jelled well. Interestingly enough, Warren drew one of his biggest crowds and best receptions in Appleton, hometown of Senator McCarthy. Warren's delegates are mostly anti-McCarthy men.

Today an important politician remarked that he thought Senator Taft would talk himself out of the job before he gets it. This would, indeed, be an anomaly, because people have consistently applauded Taft's platform as he stumped the state. When this was pointed out to the politician, he replied that the Senator might have sold his platform, but he hadn't sold himself. That, of course, is just an opinion, but it is being repeated with persistence. The Democrats are up a tree. Before President Truman sprung his "Coolidge" on Saturday nite, there were two rival Favorite Son slates entered for him. One remains committed on the thin chance of a draft, the other has decided to run uninstructed but liberal. A third slate is for Senator Kefauver, who, under the circumstances, is broadly favored.

This is Edward P. Morgan in Milwaukee. Now back to Larry Lesueur in New York.

-30-

-diphone trans./-s

In Washington, House and Senate committees have put aside work on a new economic controls bill until the current steel and mobilization disputes "cool off." [redacted] The union has threatened to strike a week from [redacted] tomorrow unless it [redacted] gets an agreement with the industry.

Another strike...by AF of L commercial telegraphers AT WESTERN UNION has been postponed at least until Thursday. A walkout by 31-thousand union members had been scheduled to start tonight.

[redacted]

The Senate today voted to give everyone in the armed forces a three per cent pay increase. INFANTRY- Men under fire in Korea would get an extra 45-dollars a month. The bill now goes back to the House where a different pay bill, calling for a ten per cent increase, has been approved.

Attorney General Mc Grath told a House committee today that he's changed his mind about Newbold Morris, the man he helped select to clean out corruption in government. Mc Grath testified that: He would not give the job to Morris if he had to do it again.. he doesn't know whether he will fill out the questionaiire Morris wants sent to top Justice Department employes... He hasn't decided whether he will advise others in government to sign the questionairres. Mr. Mc Grath told the committee: "Mr. Morris has made a lot of announcements.. I haven't tried to keep up with them all." Last February, when Mr. Morris was appointed to his job, Mc Grath pledged his "complete, enthusiastic and unlimited cooperation." Some Republican Congressmen now suggest that the President may have to fire either the Attorney General.. or Newbold Morris. Mr. Morris today refused any comment to reporters.

The House committee investigating tax scandals was told today special tax agents stopped investigating Henry Grunewald, the so-called mystery man, after "unusual interest" in the case was shown by a superior. The committee was told this interest came from Daniel A. Bolich, former assistant internal revenue commissioner. The committee also was informed that Mr. Bolich lived in a 20-dollar a day hotel suite in

~~on~~ Washington for 19 months. The rent was paid by Henry Grunewald.

~~Here in New York today, a grand jury criticized Herman Mayer O'Dwyer, new ambassador to Mexico. The jury says O'Dwyer deliberately suppressed evidence of police corruption in this city to avoid embarrassment to his administration. Chief Magistrate John Murtagh was cleared of charges that he had been criminally derelict.~~

In Korea, our truce negotiators again report "no progress." One of our patrols on the western front was forced to withdraw from an advanced hill position by heavy enemy artillery fire. Bad weather grounded most planes.

The French report ~~that~~ their troops in Indo-China have trapped some 5-thousand Communist-led ~~troops~~ rebels on the brink of Tonkin Gulf.

The United Nations was informed today that 12 African and Asian ~~Asian~~ countries are going to ask the Security Council to consider the French-Tunisian conflict.

Marshal Tito in Yugoslavia has warned the western powers that they may lose the sympathy of his people if they support Italian territorial claims ~~in~~ in Trieste.

In Washington today you could find a "statement on politics" almost anywhere you turned. In the wake of the President's announcement that he will not run for renomination, here's what happened: [redacted] Democratic Senator Kerr of Oklahoma says he is now an all-out candidate for President. [redacted] Senator George thinks Vice President Barkley will run for president. Speaker Rayburn says he is not a candidate. [redacted] White House Secretary Short refuses to say whether the President [redacted] prefers Illinois' Governor Stevenson for the Democratic nomination. Stevenson says again: "all he's running for is..governor of Illinois." Democratic Governor Williams of Michigan says he might be interested in the presidency, if not this year, perhaps in 1956. [redacted]

Tomorrow the voters of Nebraska and Wisconsin have their say on both Republican and Democratic presidential candidates. In Nebraska today leaders of the Taft write-in campaign called on supporters of General MacArthur to vote for Taft. Representative Buffet, the Taft leader told them: "Taft and MacArthur are on the same team and right now Taft is carrying the ball." Leaders of the Mac Arthur campaign say "Buffet is hurting Taft's chances by a dishonest appeal."

Correspondent Moragn has been making a last minute canvass of the situation in Wisconsin. So for his report let's switch to Edward P. Morgan in the W.I.S.N. newsroom in Milwaukee:

(runs 3 mins.. return cue: Now back to Larry Le Sueuer in NY)

LeSueur cbs 31 March 1952 7:45p

well

Professional politicians have already declared their conviction, that the democratic nomination race is wide-open. and certainly nothing could [redacted] be more wide-open than the general speculation among us, the voters [redacted] While we're about it, it might be interesting to see ourselves as others see us, to glance at how Mr. Truman's decision was mirrored overseas, among our [redacted] potential enemies...

The official Russian press has yet to comment on the President's withdrawal from the race... That's not at all unusual, because Moscow's press [redacted] and radio never re-act immediately...They [redacted] always wait until they get a Kremlin-[redacted] directive...

And one thing is certain about Mr. Truman, he was, [redacted] the most unpopular American president [redacted] in the Soviet Union since it was [redacted] launched 30 years ago this December..

There's no doubt that Moscow [redacted] will portray his decision as a [redacted] Russian victory, and [redacted] more than [redacted] even bet the Russian will claim [redacted] Truman was forced to withdraw becuz of the unpopularity of his foreign policy...

Our correspondent in Vienna, Alex Kendrick cables, that the communist press and radio of Eastern Europe has already given vent to a wild concerted shout of glee.. Declare that Truman's decision, not-to-run, is the result of growing opposition in this country, and in the ranks of the democratic party, to what they call his "war-mongering," and "world-wide aggression".... We're told that radio Prague, Warsaw, Budapest all hammer at the theme that Truman bowed out, becuz, the american masses emphatically rejected his policy of new taxes, forced re-armament and bloody adventures in Korea, ...

These communist radios seem to take it for granted, that General Eisenhower will be the next President... And although this may have tempered their jubilation, they use it as an angle to bolster their so-called Peace Offensive...The Italian communist paper headlines: "Truman withdraws to open the way for the Generals." Of course, with the Communists its "Head's they Win, tails we lose.." ~~And the really big story in the red press is are the charges of American germwarfare in Korea, complete with pictures of a bomb, captioned: "This is the "Pest-Bomb"~~ Everything is grist to the communist mill, but it may be more than a shot in the dark to wonder whether they aren't stalling off a Korean Armistice, Until After the presidential nominations in July.. This is Larry Lesueur be back

There is much political significance attached to tomorrow's primaries in Nebraska and Wisconsin, and many predictions on the outcome. We're inclined to go along with William Saroyan, who once said:"If one waits until a thing happens and then declares that it happened you can't go wrong - science, statistics, legal documents and everything else is on your side." Someone once remarked too:"No matter what happens there is always someone who knew it would."

Goodnite!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
LARRY LESUEUR REPORTING
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

MONDAY - MARCH 31, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

Good evening: Here's what happened today!

Charles E. Wilson said today that American production has swung the military balance against Russia. In his final news conference, a few hours ago, Mr. Wilson bowed out as the government's Defense Mobilizer. He refused to talk about his dispute with the President over the steel case. But we've recorded for you the major points Mr. Wilson made at his news conference:

WILSON: I believe we are fast overtaking Russia in quantity of production of war materials; that in quality of production, it's my personal opinion that we have passed them. One more personal opinion, for what it's worth, and I'm not sure how much it's worth; I believe that we and our Allies, in view of the way the production of war material is rolling in America and part of it rolling to our Allies, I believe that we now have the balance of power. Our output of military goods is now approximately five times the production we were achieving in the first quarter after Korea. I believe, sincerely believe that we have doubled our strength, indeed, yes, almost tripled our strength, indeed, to date.

LESUEUR: Mr. Wilson left his office and his government position today. He resigned after accusing the President of backing down on a promise to grant the steel industry some price increase to compensate for wage increases recommended by the Stabilization Board.

Today, the leaders of six big steel companies and the C.I.O. steelworkers, postponed a conference at which they were to try to work out an agreement. The industry says the postponement is "temporary, pending further developments." Phil Murray, the union president, says he assumed the meeting will start tomorrow.

In Washington, House and Senate committees have put aside work on a new economic controls bill until the current steel and mobilization disputes "cool off." The union has threatened to strike a week from tomorrow unless it gets an agreement with the industry.

Another strike by A.F. of L. commercial telegraphers at Western Union, has been postponed at least until Thursday. A walkout by 31-thousand union members had been scheduled to start tonight.

The Senate today voted to give everyone in the armed forces a three per cent pay increase. Infantry men under fire in Korea would get an extra 45-dollars a month. The bill now goes back to the House where a different pay bill, calling for a ten per cent increase, has been approved.

Attorney General McGrath told a House committee today that he's changed his mind about Newbold Morris, the man he helped select to clean out corruption in Government. McGrath testified that he would not give the job to Morris if he had to do it again; doesn't know whether he will fill out the questionnaire Morris wants sent to top Justice Department employees; hasn't decided whether he will advise others in Government to sign the questionnaires. Mr. McGrath told the committee: "Mr. Morris has made a lot of announcements. I haven't tried to keep up with them all." Last February when Mr. Morris was appointed to his job, McGrath pledged his "complete enthusiastic and unlimited cooperation." Some Republicn Congressmen now suggest that the President may have to fire either the Attorney General or Newbold Morris. Mr. Morris today refused any comment to reporters.

The House committee investigating tax scandals was told today - special tax agents stopped investigating Henry Grunewald, the so-called mystery man, after "unusual interest" in the case was shown by a superior. The committee was told this interest came from Daniel A. Bolich, former assistant internal revenue commissioner. The committee also was informed that Mr. Bolich lived in a 20-dollar a day hotel suite in Washington for 19 months. The rent was paid by - Henry Grunewald.

In Korea, our truce negotiators again report "no progress." One of our patrols on the western front was forced to withdraw from an advanced hill position by heavy enemy artillery fire. Bad weather grounded most planes.

The French report their troops in Indo-China have trapped some 5-thousand communist-led rebels on the brink of Tonkin Gulf.

The United Nations was informed today that 12 African and Asian countries are going to ask the Security Council to consider the French-Tunisian conflict.

Marshal Tito in Yugoslavia has warned the Western Powers that they may lose the sympathy of his people if they support Italian territorial claims in Trieste.

In Washington today, you could find a "statement on politics" almost anywhere you turned. In the wake of the President's announcement that he will not run for renomination, here's what happened: Democratic Senator Kerr of Oklahoma says he is now an all-out candidate for President. Senator George thinks Vice President Barkley will run for president. Speaker Rayburn says he is not a candidate. White House Secretary Short refuses to say whether the President prefers Illinois' Governor Stevenson for the Democratic nomination. Stevenson says again: all he's running for is governor of Illinois. Democratic Governor Williams of Michigan says he might be interested in the presidency, if not this year, perhaps in 1956.

Tomorrow the voters of Nebraska and Wisoncsin have their say on both Republican and Democratic presidential candidates. In Nebraska today leaders of the Taft write-in campaign called on supporters of General MacArthur to vote for Taft. Representative Buffet, the Taft leader told them: "Taft and MacArthur are on the same team and right now Taft is carrying the ball." Leaders of the MacArthur campaign say "Buffet is hurting Taft's chances by a dishonest appeal."

Correspondent Morgan has been making a last minute canvas of the situation in Wisconsin. So for, his report let's switch to Edward P. Morgan in the W.I.S.N. newsroom in Milwaukee.

MORGAN: The tumult and the shouting of the spellbinders have died, leaving the voice of the so-called observer nakedly alone and quavering. Wherefore we repair to the storm-cellar of historical fact and raise the question: why all this fuss about tomorrow's Wisconsin election anyway? After all, it's only a primary. The answer is pointedly supplied by one of this state's leading political writers, Edwin R. Bailey of the Milwaukee Journal, who assembles the following facts: In 1940, the victory of New York's Governor Dewey over the late Arthur Vandenberg in the Wisconsin primary put the Michigan Senator out of the race for the Republican Presidential nomination. In 1944, Wendell Willkie bowed out as a candidate when Dewey beat him here. And in 1948, General MacArthur faded out of the running after Minnesota's ambitious Harold Stassen won the Wisconsin primary. No wonder, then, that in 1952, now that he's dealt himself a hand in this contest, Senator Taft has his blue chips down on the outcome. Weeks ago, Taft's national campaign manager, David Ingalls, said, if the Senator lost in Wisconsin he would be through as a candidate. At that time the Taft organization here was talking confidently of capturing, perhaps all thirty of the G.O.P. convention delegates. But now they've trimmed their sails. Now they say victory will still clearly be theirs if they get twenty out of the total. Technically, that may be true, but it disregards the possibility of Stassen and California's Governor Warren between them getting more of the popular vote than the combination of Taft and the weak but vocal Favorite Son slate for General MacArthur. The justification for lumping the Warren-Stassen votes together is that, one way or another, these candidates are identified with General Eisenhower. Why has Taft's strength slipped, if in fact it has? One possible reason rears up in the big, warm personality of Earl Warren, who may turn out to be the surprise element of this campaign. His schedule was so clumsily handled that in town after town, he had no one to talk to because people simply didn't know that he was there. Nevertheless, where arrangements did jell, they jelled well. Interestingly enough, Warren drew one of his biggest crowds and best receptions in Appleton, hometown of Senator McCarthy. Warren's delegates are mostly anti-McCarthy men.

Today an important politician remarked that he thought Senator Taft would talk himself out of the job before he gets it. This would, indeed, be an anomaly, because people have consistently applauded Taft's platform as he stumped the state. When this was pointed out to the politician, he replied that the Senator might have sold his platform, but he hadn't sold himself. That, of course, is just an opinion, but it is being repeated with persistence. The Democrats are up a tree. Before President Truman sprung his "Coolidge" on Saturday nite, there were two rival Favorite Son slates entered for him. One remains committed on the thin chance of a draft, the other has decided to run uninstructed but liberal. A third slate is for Senator Kefauver, who, under the circumstances, is broadly favored.

This is Edward P. Morgan in Milwaukee. Now back to Larry LeSueur in New York.

LESUEUR: Professional politicians have already declared their conviction that the Democratic nomination race is wide-open, and certainly nothing could be more wide-open than the general speculation among us, the voters. While we're about it, it might be interesting to see ourselves as "others see us," to glance at how Mr. Truman's decision was mirrored overseas, among our potential enemies.

The official Russian press has yet to comment on the President's withdrawal from the race. That's not at all unusual, because Moscow's press and radio never re-act immediately: they always wait until they get a Kremlin directive. One thing is certain about Mr. Truman: he was the most unpopular American president in the Soviet Union since it was launched 30 years ago this December. There's no doubt that Moscow will portray his decision as a Russian victory, and it's more than even bet the Russians will claim Truman was forced to withdraw because of the unpopularity of his foreign policy.

Our correspondent in Vienna, Alex Kendrick, cables that the communist press and radio of Eastern Europe has already given vent to a wild concerted shout of glee: declare that Truman's decision not-to-run is the result of growing opposition in this country, and in the ranks of the Democratic Party, to what they call his "warmongering" and "world-wide aggression". We're told that radio Prague, Warsaw, Budapest - all hammer at the theme that Truman bowed out, because the American masses emphatically rejected his policy of new taxes, forced rearmament and bloody adventures in Korea.

These communist radios seem to take it for granted, that General Eisenhower will be the next President, and although this may have tempered their jubilation, they use it as an angle to bolster their so-called Peace Offensive. The Italian communist paper headlines: "Truman withdraws to open the way for the Generals." Of course, with the communists, it's "Head's they win; tails they lose." Everything is grist to the communist mill, but it may be more than a shot in the dark to wonder whether they aren't stalling off a Korean armistice until after the presidential nominations in July.

This is Larry LeSueur. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." But first, Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

LESUEUR: There is much political significance attached to tomorrow's primaries in Nebraska and Wisconsin, and many predictions on the outcome. We're inclined to go along with William Saroyan, who once said: "If one waits until a thing happens and then declares that it happened, you can't go wrong: science, statistics, legal documents and everything else is on your side." Someone once remarked too: "No matter what happens, there is always someone who knew it would."

Good Night!

Tuesday - April 1, 1952

Good evening: Here's what happened today:

The citizens of Wisconsin and Nebraska have almost completed their voting in the presidential primaries. There [redacted]. The polls closed in Wisconsin's rural areas an hour and a half ago. They'll stay open in the cities for another hour. And in Nebraska, the first polls close in one hour..with all voting scheduled to be completed in two hours.

Here are the first scattered returns in the Wisconsin race: There are [redacted] over 32-hundred precincts in Wisconsin. We have reports from 18 of them. They show this result at the moment: IN the REPUBLICAN RACE:-

Taft - 684
STASSEN — 519
WARREN — 446

Ritter — 36

AND in the Democratic race:

Kefauver-245
to 51 votes for his two opponents.

In Washington, Price Stabilizer Ellis Arnall met twice today with Benjamin Fairless, president of United States Steel. Then Mr. Arnall told reporters:" I am very, very fearful we are going to have a steel strike a week from today. That is, if everyone continues as adamant as they appear to be now. In other words,"he said," I don't see how it can be averted unless someone gives. I have no reason to feel optimistic." Mr. Arnall also indicated that he does not think the steel industry should be granted a price increase beyond what the Capehart formula calls for.

Here in New York, Phil Murray, head of the C.I.O. steelworkers, told reporters the steel industry is guilty of "unwarranted delay", in the conferences to which IT invited the union. Mr. Murray said at the end of two days of waiting for the industry to start discussing a contract the industry has not met with the union.. has offered no explanation for the delay. John A. Stephens, spokesman for six of the biggest steel companies, says the industry people are "waiting further developments" before starting the talks.

The C.I.O. Communications Workers union today called a strike for next Monday by 15-thousand telephone repairmen and installers. They're scheduled to leave their jobs in 43 states. The repairmen are employed by Western Electric.. a subsidiary of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

We have two conflicting reports tonight on the state of our air power. The Senate Preparedness Committee has issued a report saying American airpower is "admittedly inadequate." Based on secret testimony from high air force officials, the committee says: our situation is particularly bad in respect to the number of modern planes available to the air force. There is no ground for optomism in assessing the nation's airpower. A very large number of World War Two planes are being used in Korea. The committee also reports that during 1951, aircraft production fell behind schedule continually "by a significant percentage". This lag took place even though schedules were revised downward on more than one occassion.

But Charles E. Wilson, who resigned as defense mobilization chief yesterday, said today: critics of lagging production of modern jet planes.. tanks and other weapons.. are wrong. He feels the re-armament program is now well launched. Contracts have been let for 71-billion dollars worth of equipment and construction. An estimated 26-billion dollars worth of material has already been delivered. Mr. Wilson says "the ultimate goal of military security for the free world can certainly be achieved."

In Korea today, our Sabrejet pilots shot down ten Communist Migs.. probably destroyed three others.. damaged an additional ten. It was one of the biggest bags for a single day since the war started. There is no word on any losses we may have suffered. There was little fighting on the ground.. and no progress to report from the armistice talks. Navy Secretary Kimball, visiting Tokyo, told reporters that if the Chinese Nationalists should invade the Chinese mainland our Navy would stand by and "cheer." Administration officials in Washington say Mr. Kimball's view is personal.. there has been no change in the President's order to the 7th fleet to keep Formosa neutralized.. to prevent any Communist attack on the island, or the launching of any attack from the island.

Out in Nevada today, the Atomic Energy Commission started a new series of atomic explosions. Today's was different from others in the past.. reporters SAY that this explosion sent weird streams of flame shooting high into the sky after a high-flying bomber dropped the weapon.

In Washington, Attorney General Mc Grath is scheduled to call on the President tomorrow. Mc Grath says he asked for the appointment to discuss department business. Earlier, the White House requested a transcript of Mc Grath's statement yesterday that he had not made up his mind whether to fill out the FINANCIAL questionnaire given him by Newbold Morris. Representative Chelf of the House committee, called on the President today. He said the President pledged "full and complete" co-operation in the committee's investigation of Mc Grath and the Justice Department. Chelf said he hopes Mr. Truman will make available the income tax returns of McGrath and 19 other Justice Department officials.

Another House committee--investigating the tax scandals--was told today that 31 tax cases in the New York area have been "improperly closed" since 1945. The group is looking into the activities of

Daniel Bolich, ~~the~~ former assistant internal revenue commissioner, who was head of the intelligence office in New York from 1945 to 1951. //

Vice President Barkley said today that he's giving "careful consideration" to the possibility of running for the Democratic nomination for President.

Senator Taft.. back in Washington after campaigning in Wisconsin.. said he's in the Republican race to the finish. He said he still believes General MacArthur is supporting him. Taft added: "I imagine he would run only if he thought I would lose."

In Baltimore today, a federal jury convicted six second-string Communist leaders on charges of conspiring to advocate the overthrow of the government by force.

Here in New York, a jury found Willie "the actor" Sutton guilty of staging a 64-thousand-dollar bank hold-up. An accomplice, Thomas Kling, was also found guilty. No date was set for the sentencing of the two men.

In London, Prime Minister Churchill rejected a suggestion from a Laborite that a British general be proposed to succeed General Eisenhower

if and when the General leaves his Shape command. Mr. Churchill told the House of Commons:" I am bound to say, when you think of the great American army and all they are doing to support the front in Europe, if they had the slightest wish to have the command, we should certainly support them."

Italy's Premier De Gasperi today invited Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia to "seek conciliation" over the Trieste dispute. De Gasperi said Italy wants nothing that does not belong to Italy.. nothing which could prejudice the relations of Italians and Yugoslavs... nothing that might humiliate Tito.

Queen Juliana of the Netherlands is on her way to this country and a four weeks tour. Her plane left Amsterdam just before noon... is due in Washington tomorrow afternoon.

LeSueur 1 april 1952 7:45p

Prime Minister Joseph Stalin of Russia, who shows no signs of withdrawing from the Soviet election campaign, today delivered himself of a political opinion...It was one calculated to do him no harm in the Soviet Union, nor in Western Europe, either..

He opined that world war three is no closer now than it was two or three years ago, says he belives that the peaceful co-existence of capitalism and communism is quite possible...

It's true that Mr. Stalin's commments were solicited by a group of american newspaper and radio men and that the soviet leader did not offer these opinions by his now customary means... That is, an interview with himself in Pravda...But the questions cabled him, by the american editors, begged the answers that he gave. Now That big mail box on the side of the Kremlin is a constant target for questions to Stalin...But he only answers those whose timing and import are such that his answers will support whatever ideas he's trying to push across... I've sent him questions ,too, when I was stationed in Moscow...But he never answered mine... and this is not in the nature of sour grapes, but to point out that Mr. Stalin or private secretaries carefully cull those letters or cables arriving at the Kremlin, looking for things to which an answer could help Stalin's foreign policy.. If I'm not mistaken, Ed Murrow once sent Stalin a cable, too, demanding an answer to whether the accredited CBS correspondent in Moscow was going to be permitted to broadcast...Stalin never answered that one, either... He just let the passage of time take care of it... The CBS correspondent was not permitted to broadcast over radio Moscow.. That was at the start of the cold-war, and no american correspondent has been allowed to use radio Moscow since.

But when it suits his book, Premier Stalin never hesitates to go over the heads of governments to make headlines in the free press...And if the right questions don't come along, Mr. Stalin doesn't hesitate to think some up for himself. He has no doubt that Pravda will print his answers...

In answer to today's question about a third world war, whether it's closer now than it was two or three years ago, Mr. Stalin assured the world that it was not. But the value of his pronouncement may be judged in the light of the statement uttered by his Ambassador to the United Nations, Jacob Malik, in Paris at the last UN Assembly meeting...Mr. Malik then declared

(and that was only two months ago,) that world war three was not only just closer, but "had already started ...in Korea, Indo-china, Tunis and Morocco..."

[All one can say is, that two months later, the communists must think the time is ripe for a different answer. This is the eve of an international economic conference in Moscow, to which a number of Westerners have accepted invitations, the theme of the conference apparantly being "trade opportunities with the communist East--" a trade which the United States does NOT encourage...Free trade with the East, Being one of the temptations that Russia is NOW dangling in front of Germany...

Stalin's answers to the questions today, were not very elaborate, just enough to throw a little oil on the stormy waters of American-Russian relations, just a few phrases like a "booster shot" to his current peace inoculations. Thinks a meeting of the heads of the great powers would "possibly be useful": and considers as already stated that the present moment is opportune for the unification of Germany

His answers completely ignore Mr. Malik's terrifying remarks made 8 weeks ago, and of course the present communist claims that germ-warfare has become a hideous reality..in Korea and China..

In fact, they entirely overlook the situation in Korea a scant year and a half ago, when the Chinese Communist armies invaded Korea, when Stalin's program of "war by satellite" reached its climax...If those Chinese armies had succeeded in their ambitions, they would have driven the allied armies into the Sea And there would have been nothing left in Korea to negotiate over..

We don't know how many times Mr. Stalin has said that communism and capitalism could exist side-by-side, but that never stops him from trying to cut capitalism's throat, whenever a favorable opportunity presents itself, as in Greece, Berlin, Korea and Indo-China...

The only reason that world war three is not closer today than it was a few years ago, is that this country has shown the most extra-ordinary patience and remarkable steadiness, in the face of the most brazen provocations that any country (of such enormous military potential) has ever withstood..

~~Premier Mr. Stalin can [illegible] Red Chinese confederate Mao-Tse-Dung, didn't succeed in his [illegible] ambitions, otherwise Mr. Stalin might well have been speaking today from an air-raid shelter.~~

This is Larry LeSueur...I'll be back in a moment with the word for today (CUE but first, Bob Dixon..

[redacted] Stalin and Russia Appear to change their tactics from time to time, but their strategy seems fundamentally the same... So far as [redacted] tactics are concerned, C. W. Grafton once pointed out: "Times change and people change their ideas." But La Fontaine might have been talking about Communist Russia when he said: "To pretend to change anyone is an illusion. He picks up his first trail at the first occasion."

Good Night..

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
LARRY LESUEUR REPORTING
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

TUESDAY - APRIL 1, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

Good evening: Here's what happened today!

The citizens of Wisconsin and Nebraska have almost completed their voting in the presidential primaries there. The polls closed in Wisconsin's rural areas an hour and a half ago. They'll stay open in the cities for another hour. And in Nebraska, the first polls close in one hour with all voting scheduled to be completed in two hours.

Here are the first scattered returns in the Wisconsin race: there are over 32-hundred precincts in Wisconsin; we have reports from 18 of them. They show this result at the moment. In the Republican race: Taft - 684; Stassen - 519; Warren - 446; Ritter - 36. And in the Democractic race: Kefauver - 245; 51 votes for his two opponents.

In Washington, Price Stabilizer Ellis Arnall met twice today with Benjamin Fairless, president of United States Steel. Then Mr. Arnall told reporters: "I am very, very fearful we are going to have a steel strike a week from today. That is, if everyone continues as adamant as they appear to be now. In other words," he said, "I don't see how it can be averted unless someone gives. I have no reason to feel optomistic." Mr. Arnall also indicated that he does not think the steel industry should be granted a price increase beyond what the Capehart formula calls for.

Here in New York, Phil Murray, head of the C.I.O. steelworkers told reporters the steel industry is guilty of "unwarranted delay" in the conferences to which it invited the union. Mr. Murray said at the end of two days of waiting for the industry to start discussing a contract the industry has not met with the union; has offered no explanation for the delay. John A. Stephens, spokesman for six of the biggest steel companies, says the industry people are "awaiting further developments" before starting the talks.

The C.I.O. Communications Workers union today called a strike for next Monday by 15-thousand telephone repairmen and installers. They're scheduled to leave their jobs in 43 states. The repairmen are employed by Western Electric - a subsidiary of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

We have two conflicting reports tonight on the state of our air power. The Senate Preparedness Committee has issued a report saying American airpower is "admittedly inadequate." Based on secret testimony from high air force officials, the committee says: our situation is particularly bad in respect to the number of modern planes available to the Air Force. There is no ground for optimism in assessing the nation's airpower. A very large number of World War Two planes are being used in Korea. The committee also reports that during 1951, aircraft production fell behind schedule continually "by a significant percentage." This lag took place even though schedules were revised downward on more than one occassion.

But Charles E. Wilson, who resigned as Defense Mobilization Chief yesterday, said today: critics of lagging production of modern jet planes, tanks and other weapons, are wrong. He feels the re-armament program is now well launched. Contracts have been let for 71-billion dollars worth of equipment and construction. An estimated 26-billion dollars worth of material has already been delivered. Mr. Wilson says "the ultimate goal of military security for the free world can certainly be achieved."

In Korea today, our Sabrejet pilots shot down ten Communist MIGs - probably destroyed three others - damaged an additional ten. It was one of the biggest bags for a single day since the war started. There is no word on any losses we may have suffered. There was little fighting on the ground, and no progress to report from the armistice talks. Navy Secretary Kimball, (visiting Tokyo), told reporters that if the Chinese Nationalists should invade the Chinese mainland, our Navy would stand by "and cheer." Administration officials in Washington say Mr. Kimball's view is personal: there has been no change in the President's order to the 7th fleet to keep Formosa neutralized to prevent any Communist attack on the island, or the launching of any attack from the island.

Out in Nevada today, the Atomic Energy Commission started a new series of atomic explosions. Today's was different from others in the past. Reporters say this explosion sent weird streams of flame shooting high into the sky after a high-flying bomber dropped the weapon.

In Washington, Attorney General McGrath is scheduled to call on the President tomorrow. McGrath says he asked for the appointment to discuss department business. Earlier, the White House requested a transcript of McGrath's statement yesterday that he had not made up his mind whether to fill out the financial questionnaire given him by Newbold Morris. Representative Chelf, of the House committee, called on the President today. He said the President pledged "full and complete" co-operation in the committee's investigation of McGrath and the Justice Department. Chelf said he hopes Mr. Truman will make available the income tax returns of McGrath and 19 other Justice Department officials.

Another House committee - investigating the tax scandals - was told today that 31 tax cases in the New York areahave been "improperly closed" since 1945. The group is looking into the activities of Daniel Bolich, former assistant internal revenue commissioner, who was head of the intelligence office in New York from 1945 to 1951.

Vice President Barkley said today that he's giving "careful consideration" to the possibility of running for the Democratic nomination for President.

Senator Taft, back in Washington after campaigning in Wisconsin, said he's in the Republicn race to the finish. He said he still believes General MacArthur is supporting him. Taft added: "I imagine he would run only if he thought I would lose."

In Baltimore today, a federal jury convicted six second-string communist leaders on charges of conspiring to advocate the overthrow of the Government by force.

Her in New York, a jury found Willie "the actor" Sutton guilty of staging a 64-thousand dollar bank hold-up. An accomplice, Thomas Kling was also found guilty. No date was set for the sentencing of the two men.

In London, Prime Minister Churchill rejected a suggestion from a Laborite that a British general be proposed to succeed General Eisehhower....if and when the General leaves his SHAPE command. Mr. Churchill told the House of Commons: "I am bound to say, when you think of the great American army and all they are doing to support the front in Europe, if they had the slightest wish to have the command, we should certainly support them."

Italy's Premier De Gasperi today invited Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia to "seek conciliation" over the Trieste dispute. De Gasperi said Italy wants nothing that does not belong to Italy - nothing which could prejudice the relations of Italians and Yugoslavs - nothing that might humiliate Tito.

Queen Juliana of the Netherlands is on her way to this country and a four weeks tour. Her plane left Amsterday just before noon; is due in Washington tomorrow afternoon.

Prime Minister Joseph Stalin of Russia, who shows no signs of withdrawing from the Soviet election campaign, today delivered himself of a political opinion. It was one calculated to do him no harm in the Soviet Union, nor in Western Europe, either. He opened that World War Three is no closer now than it was two or three years ago; says he believes that the peaceful co-existence of capitalism and communism is quite possible.

It's true that Mr. Stalin's comments were solicited by a group of American newspaper and radio men, and that the Soviet leader did not offer these opinions by his now customary means: that is, an interview with himself in Pravda. But the questions cabled him by the American editors, begged the answers that he gave. Now that big mail box on the side of the Kremlin is a constant target for questions to Stalin, but he only answers those whose timing and import are such that his answers will support whatever ideas he's trying to push across. I've sent him questions, too, when I was stationed in Moscow, but he never answered mine. And this is not in the nature of sour grapes, but to point out that Mr.

Stalin or private secretaries carefully cull those letters or cables arriving at the Kremlin, looking for things to which an answer could help Stalin's foreign policy. If I'm not mistaken, Ed Murrow once sent Stalin a cable, too, demanding an answer to whether the accredited CBS correspondent in Moscow was going to be permitted to broadcast. Stalin never answered that one, either: he just let the passage of time take care of it. The CBS correspondent was not permitted to broadcast over radio Moscow. That was at the start of the cold-war, and no American correspondent has been allowed to use radio Moscow since.

But when it suits his book, Premier Stalin never hesitates to go over the heads of governments to make headlines in the free press. And if the right questions don't come along, Mr. Stalin doesn't hesitate to think some up for himself. He has no doubt that Pravda will print his answers.

In answer to today's question about a third World War, whether it's closer now than it was two or three years ago, Mr. Stalin assured the world that it was not. But the value of his pronouncement may be judged in the light of the statement uttered by his Ambassador to the United Nations, Jacob Malik, in Paris at the last U.N. Assembly meeting: Mr. Malik then declared, (and that was only two months ago), that World War Three was not only just closer, but "had already started in Korea, Indo-China, Tunis and Morocco."

All one can say is, that two months later, the communists must think the time is ripe for a different answer. This is the eve of an international economic conference in Moscow, to which a number of Westerners have accepted invitations, the theme of the conference apparently being "trade opportunities with the communist East," a trade which the United States does not encourage - free trade with the East being one of the temptations that Russia is now dangling in front of Germany.

Stalin's answers to the questions today were not very elaborate, just enough to throw a little oil on the stromy waters of American-Russian relations, just a few phrases like a "booster shot" to his current peace inoculations: thinks a meeting of the heads of the great powers, as already stated, would "possibly be useful," and considers that the present moment is opportune for the unification of Germany. His answers completely ignore Mr. Malik's terrifying remarks made 8 weeks ago, and of course, the present communist claims that germ-warfare has become a hideous reality in Korea and China.

In fact, they entirely overlook the situation in Korea a scant year and a half ago, when the Chinese Communist armies invaded Korea, when Stalin's program of "war by satellite" reached its climax. If those Chinese armies had succeeded in their ambitions, they would have driven the allied armies into the sea, and there would have been nothing left in Korea to negotiate over.

We don't know how many times Mr. Stalin has said that communism and capitalism could exist side-by-side, but that never stops him from trying to cut capitalism's throat whenever favorable opportunity presents itself, as in Greece Berlin, Korea, and Indo-China.

The only reason that World War Three is not closer today than it was a few years ago, is that this country has shown the most extra-ordinary patience and remarkable steadiness, in the face of the most brazen provocations that any country (of such enormous military potential) has ever withstood.

This is Larry LeSueur. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." But first, Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

LESUEUR: Stalin and Russia appear to change their tactics from time to time, but their strategy seems fundamentally the same. So far as tactics are concerned, C. W. Grafton once pointed out: "Times change and people change their ideas." But La Fontaine might have been talking about Communist Russia when he said: "To pretend to change anyone is an illusion. He picks up his first trail at the first occasion."

Good Night!

Wednesday - April 2, 1952

Good evening: Here's what happened today:

Senator Taft has won the Wisconsin and Nebraska Republican primaries. In Wisconsin, The Ohio Senator [redacted] won 24 of the state's 30 delegates. The other six went to California's Governor Warren. Harold Stassen won no delegates. The popular vote, almost complete, gives Taft-- 315-thousand, Warren-- 262-thousand and Stassen, 167-thousand.

In Nebraska, with some 1770 of the more than 2-thousand precincts reporting: Taft has 65 thousand write-in votes...Eisenhower has 48 thousand write-in votes and Harold Stassen, whose name appeared on the ballot, has 43-thousand votes.

In both states, Senator Kefauver won the Democratic race. He received 85 per cent of all the Democratic votes in Wisconsin and at last report had 51-thousand votes to Senator Kerr's 35-thousand in the Nebraska race.

Senator Kefauver says he believes the "expression of faith" in his principles, in both states.. "will set the pattern for the nation."

Senator Taft, back in Washington, gave his analysis of the two primaries to reporters. We recorded portion's of what the Senator

CBS RADIO DIVISION

LARRY LESUEUR

Wednesday, April 2, 1952
7:45-8:00 p.m.

LESUEUR: ..... Senator Taft, back in Washington, gave his analysis of the two primaries to reporters. We recorded portions of what the Senator had to say. First, Wisconsin.

TAFT: I would regard it as a very substantial victory for the ... for our position in Wisconsin. I notice the Party line is because they didn't get 50%, but they ... that didn't affect ... but they don't account any ... for any of the ... any of the other factors which made it very difficult (unintelligible). Certain things, I think, ought to be clear. The ... in Wisconsin I was opposed by Stassen, who carried Wisconsin in 1948 over Dewey and MacArthur and has always been very strong with the Scandinavian vote and the rural vote in particular in Minnesota and Wisconsin both. In other words, it is ... always has been Stassen territory. I was opposed by Warren who had the full support of the LaFollette progressive organization, by the Eisenhower people who have the support of the most powerful newspaper in Wisconsin, the "Milwaukee Journal," which urged every Eisenhower supporter to vote for Warren. We haven't got all the figures as yet on Nebraska, but whatever it is it's ... it's a gratifying confirmation of the fact that Minnesota really showed nothing except that the Eisenhower people were all organized and put on the write-in campaign and we didn't.

Ed. trans.-A.A.Cardiff (30)

had to say: First, Wisconsin

(runs 1;20 cue: PUT IN THE WRITE-IN CAMPAIGN and we didn't)

The Senator went on to say that the results in the two midwestern states demonstrated "just as much of a groundswell for Taft as for Eisnhower" in that part of the country.

Senator Lodge, leader of the Eisenhower campaign, thought it "amazing" that Senator Taft did not get more votes in the two races, inasmuch as "the leading candidate" (meaning Eisenhower) was "absent from the contest."

Senator Lodge left for Paris by plane tonight. And General Eisenhower's friends in Abilene, Kansas, have been told--by letter from the General.. that he has "profound hopes" that he will be back in this country by the fourth of June, a month before the Republican convention.

In Washington, the top government officials and steel industry leaders indicate they hold little hopes of avoiding a steel strike next Tuesday. Defense Mobilization officials are all fearful that the strike will come off. Industry spokesmen say "the price situation is the big issue." Government officials indicate they will not allow the industry more than a two dollar a ton price increase. The industry insists it must have more to meet the wage recommendations of the Wage Stabilization Board. Tomorrow, here in New York, union and industry leaders, will start the conferences originally scheduled to BEGIN Monday. // Acting Mobilization Director Steelman has asked the Justice and Defense departments "to consider all eventualities".. including seizure of the industry. Steel officials say they may ask the federal courts to prevent seizure of the industry.

Another strike, scheduled to get underway at midnight. Some 30-thousand Western Union members of the A.F. of L. Commercial Telegraphers union say they'll stop WORKING unless they get an "acceptable" wage increase. The company says it will make no wage offer to the union.

The Senate today approved a bill, that would give the states permanent ownership of submerged tidelands up to three miles off their coasts.. with some variations. The federal government would get full title to all coastal lands beyond that. The vote was 50 to 35. Democratic Senator O'Mahoney says the President is sure to veto this bill.. as he vetoed similar legislation in 1946.

The Senate preparedness committee said today that the Communists have lost 218 Mig planes in air-to-air combat with our jets. We lost only 28 planes in the period up to March 25. This is a RATIO of almost eight to one. The committee offers this comparison of the enemy's MiG and our Sabrejet: The Mig is superior in speed, ceiling and rate of climb. In addition it is a lighter aircraft. The Sabrejet is superior in range.. gunsight, stability, control and firewpoer."

In Korea today we damaged two enemy planes. Our troops counter-attacked about 15-hundred Chinese troops who had assaulted our lines only four miles from the truce tents at Panmunjom. The negotiators there made no progress today.

The Pentagon has added another 162 names to the Korean casualty list. The total is now 106, thousand 956.

And the Defense Department estimates that the Korean war will have cost us slightly more than five billion dollars by the end of next June.

Attorney General Mc Grath spent 15 minutes with the President at the White House today. When he came out he refused to tell reporters whether he will resign, as a result of his refusal, at the moment, to answer a financial questionnaire from Newbold Morris, whose been assigned to cleanup corruption in government. Later in the day, both the President and Mc Grath went to National airport to welcome the visiting Queen Juliana of the Netherlands. Some reporters say they saw the President, Attorney General McGrath.. and later White House Secretary Short..engaged in a heated conversation. It lasted for about five minutes. ~~And the reports available to us indicate that the discussion was heated.~~ Neither the White House NOR Justice Department has any comment. The argument, if that's what it was, was called off ~~suspended~~ in time for the President to greet ~~welcome~~ the Queen who will a white House ~~be the Presidential~~ guest for three days.

The Treasury reported today that it collected a record 10-billion 800-million dollars income in taxes last month. And a House committee investigating the tax scandals was told today that Daniel Bolich, a former top official of the revenue bureau, spent well over twice as much as his government pay from ~~paid from~~ 1946 to 1950.

The Atomic Energy Commission says it is slightly behind schedule in building a Hydrogen-bomb materials plant in South Carolina. The Commission is seeking "a higher priority than even the military."

~~Here in New York, Willie Sutton [illegible],~~ ~~was sentenced to two terms of 15y years [illegible] to life each. But first he must finish the 30-year term he was serving when he escaped from Sing Sing prison in 1952. He also owes [illegible] of years in jail.~~

Two star baseball players, Ted Williams of the Boston Red Sox, and Jerry Coleman of the Yankees, passed their Marine physical exams today ~~[illegible]~~. Both are captains.

Fifteen African and Asian nations have called ~~on~~ upon the United Nations Security Council to consider the French-Tunisian dispute.. they say its a threat to international peace.

And Lieut. General Norstad, air commander ~~[illegible]~~ for Shape in central Europe, says a radar screen from the North Sea to the Alps was ordered into operation today.

Lesueur cbs 2 April 1952 7:45p well Although the returns are not altogther complete from Nebraska, It's clearly evident that Senator's Taft's campaign is back on the tracks...His victory in Wisconsin is [redacted] no hard-and-fast indication that the Ohio Senator will win the Republican nomination...but a defeat there would have sent his chances a-glimmering... [redacted] Now his double-starred victory in the no-write-in primary in Wisconsin and [redacted] Nebraska's write-in, certainly helps to remove any political tarnish he may have suffered at the hands of Esienhower in Minnesota and New Hampshire.. General Eisenhower's name could not, of course, be entered in Wisconsin...The primary law there provides that candidates could not be entered unless they "affirmatively assent." That barred Esienhower, because the General could not give his affirmative assent, without violating army regulations... Indeed, it first looked as though Senator Taft would have a walk-over in Wisconsin until Governor Warren entered the race. But ...The California governor, who made just a part-time [redacted] campaign there, was not a stalking horse for Eisenhower, [redacted] yet it was understood that if he failed to get the [redacted] nomination at the convention, the Wisconsin delegates pledged to him would shift to Esienhower...

Harold Stassen, who promised half of his Wisconsin delegates to Eisenhower and won NONE, was also a rallying point for any anti-Taft elements...But there was no way of telling what the Eisenhower influence did for either Warren or Stassen in Wisconsin ...Although between them, the two collered more of the popular vote than Taft...Nevertheless Taft's victory there was a very solid one...He carried 55 of the states' 71 counties, Warren took 9 counties, Stassen got 7...

One of the elements difficult to assess in Wisconsin was the influence of Senator McCarthy... McCarthy is known to be popular there with the Republican organization... But Senator McCarthy has not yet formally indorsed Senator Taft...

~~But Stassen, who lost out practically everywhere in Wisconsin, seems at least to have McCarthy's friendship. Stassen entered the state to campaign for McCarthy in 1946, and in 1948, the Wisconsin Senator served as number two delegate on the Stassen slate.~~

~~And Stassen appeared to be giving McCarthy an assist last summer by his testimony before the McCarran committee in the case of UN delegate Philip Jessup...But~~ and as far as yesterday's primary went, Senator McCarthy appeared to be adopting a hand's-off attitude..

The victory of Senator Kefauver in Wisconsin, while it was a landslide, appears less important than his triumph in Nebraska...In Wisconsin, the campaign's of his two pro-Truman opponents collapsed after the President's decision to NOT to Run. ~~withdrew~~...But in Nebraska, his battle with Senator Kerr, proved ~~harder~~ easier than it first appeared... The tennessean took about 58 per cent of the Nebraska democratic vote to the Oklahoma Senator's 39... Kerr capitulated at dawn to Senator Kefauver, But the Eisenhower support gave Taft a run for it until mid-day...One of the most remarkable things about the Nebraska write-in battle between Taft and Eisenhower, is that Stassen, the only Republican actually named on the ballot, ran third to both the "write-in" candidates...~~Although~~ Taft didn't even ~~enter the state of~~ campaign in Nebraska, It's apparent that the intense [redacted] instructor campaigns for "write-ins" paid off for both the unlisted Republican candidates..

Altho General Esienhower has not commented on his Nebraska [redacted] reversal, His new Jersey supporters got a warning today... [redacted] Were asked "not to be lulled into a sense of false security" by Senator Taft's withdrawal from the Jersey primary race..April 15...

~~But [redacted] should never count [redacted] fighter [redacted] And the that one or two primaries don't make an election [redacted] race..~~

And although there's another primary in Illinois on Tuesday, with considerable publicity to the winner, professional politicians are just as interested in the states that don't hold primaries, but [redacted] conventions matter. ...For example, Senator taft picked up 19 of Tennessee's 20 republican convention delegates today. And later this week another 72 delegates will be named by the relatively unpublicized conventions in Iowa and Michigan... those delegates will count just as much in the July national conventions, as the ones picked up in the headline primary [redacted] contests..

But what does it all prove? Probably that 3 or 4 primaries don't make an election horse-race....

This is Larry Lesueur speaking....I'll be back in a moment with the word for today.. (CUE) but first, Bob Dixon...

Tonight, everyone is trying to draw a conclusion from the Wisconsin and Nebraska primaries. Most americans are at least amateur political experts It was La Rochefoucauld who once observed: "The greatest gift is the power to estimate correctly the value of things." That still holds true. And equally true is this remark by Bertrand Russell: "Even when all the experts agree, they may well be mistaken."

Goodnite!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
LARRY LESUEUR REPORTING
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

WEDNESDAY - APRIL 2, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

Good evening: Here's what happened today!

Senator Taft has won the Wisconsin and Nebraska Republican primaries. In Wisconsin, the Ohio Senator won 24 of the state's 30 delegates. The other six went to California's Governor Warren. Harold Stassen won no delegates. The popular vote, almost complete, gives Taft - 315-thousand: Warren - 262-thousand: Stassen - 167-thousand.

In Nebraska, with some 1770 of the more than 2-thousand precincts reportin Taft has 65-thousand write-in votes, Eisenhower has 48-thousand write-in votes, and Harold Stassen, whose name appeared on the ballot, has 43-thousand votes.

In both states, Senator Kefauver won the Democratic race. He received 85 per cent of all the Democratic votes in Wisconsin, and at last report, had 51-thousand votes to Senator Kerr's 35-thousand in the Nebraska race. Senator Kefauver says he believes the "expression of faith" in his principles, in both states, "will set the pattern for the nation."

Senator Taft, back in Washington, gave his analysis of the two primaries to reporters. We recorded portion's of what the Senator had to say:

TAFT: I would regard it as a very substantial victory for the....for our position in Wisconsin. I notice the Party line is because they didn't get 50%, but they...that didn't affect....but they don't account any....for any of the ... any of the other factors which made it very difficult.....Certain things, I think, ought to be clear. The.....in Wisconsin I was opposed by Stassen, who carried Wisconsin in 1948 over Dewey and MacArthur, and has always been very strong with the Scandinavian vote and the rural vote in particular in Minnesota and Wisconsin both. In other words, it is....always has been Stassen territory. I was opposed by Warren who had the full support of the LaFollette progressive organization, by the Eisenhower people who have the support of the most powerful newspaper in Wisconsin, the "Milwaukee Journal," which urged every Eisenhower supporter to vote for Warren. We haven't got all the figures as yet on Nebraska, but whatever it is, it's....it's a gratifying confirmation of the fact that Minnesota really showed nothing except that the Eisenhower people were all organized and put on the write-in campaign and we didn't.

LESUEUR: The Senator went on to say that the results in the two midwestern states demonstrated "just as much of a groundswell for Taft as for Eisenhower" in that part of the country.

Senator Lodge, leader of the Eisenhower campaign, thought it "amazing" that Senator Taft did not get more votes in the two races, inasmuch as "the leading candidate" (meaning Eisenhower) was "absent from the contest."

Senator Lodge left for Paris by plane tonight. And General Eisenhower's friends in Abilene, Kansas, have been told - by letter from the General, that he has "profound hopes" that he will be back in this country by the fourth of June," a month before the Republican convention.

In Washington, the top government officials and steel industry leaders indicate they hold little hopes of avoiding a steel strike next Tuesday. Defense Mobilization officials are all fearful that the strike will come off. Industry spokesmen say "the price situation is the big issue." Government officials indicate they will not allow the industry more than a two -dollar-a-ton price increase. The industry insists it must have more to meet the wage recommendations of the Wage Stabilization Board. Tomorrow, here in New York, union and industry leaders will start the conferences originally scheduled to begin Monday. Acting Mobilization Director Steelman has asked the Justice and Defense Departments "to consider all eventualities" including seizure of the industry. Steel officials say they may ask the federal courts to prevent seizure of the industry.

Another strike, scheduled to get underway at midnight. Some 30-thousand Western Union members of the A.F. of L. Commercial Telegraphers union say they'll stop working unless they get an "acceptable" wage increase. The company says it will make no wage offer to the union.

The Senate today approved a bill that would give the states permanent ownership of submerged tidelands up to three miles off their coasts - with some variations. The Federal Government would get full title to all coastal lands beyond that. The vote was 50 to 35. Democratic Senator O'Mahoney says the President is sure to veto this bill as he vetoed similar legislation in 1946.

The Senate preparedness committee said today that the Communists have lost 218 MIG planes in air-to-air combat with our jets. We lost only 28 planes in the period up to March 25. This is a ratio of almost eight to one. The committee offers this comparison of the enemy's MIG and our Sabrejet: the MIG is superior in speed, ceiling and rate of climb. In addition, it is a lighter aircraft. The Sabrejet is superior in range, gunsight, stability, control and firepower.

In Korea today, we damaged two enemy planes. Our troops counter-attacked about 15-hundred Chinese troops who had assaulted our lines only four miles from the truce tents at Panmunjom. The negotiators there made no progress today.

The Pentagon has added another 162 names to the Korean casualty list. The total is now 106,956.

And the Defense Department estimates that the Korean war will have cost us slightly more than five billion dollars by the end of next June.

Attorney General McGrath spent 15 minutes with the President at the White House today. When he came out, he refused to tell reporters whether he will resign, as a result of his refusal, at the moment, to answer a financial questionnaire from Newbold Morris, whose been assigned to cleanup corruption in Government. Later in the day, both the President and McGrath went to National airport to welcome the visiting Queen Juliana of the Netherlands. Some reporters say they saw the President, Attorney General McGrath, and later White House Secretary Short, engage in a heated conversation. It lasted for about five minutes. Neither the White House nore Justice Department has any comment. The argument, if that's what it was, was called off in time for the President to greet the Queen who will be a White House guest for three days.

The Treasury reported today that it collected a record 10-billion 800-million dollars in income taxes last month. And a House committee investigating the tax scandals was told today that Daniel Bolich, a former top official of the Revenue Bureau, spent well over twice as much as his government pay from 1946 to 1950.

The Atomic Energy Commission says it is slightly behind schedule in building a Hydrogen-bomb materials plant in South Carolina. The Commission is seeking "a higher priority than even the military."

Two star baseball players, Ted Williams of the Boston Red Sox, and Jerry Coleman of the Yankees, passed their Marine physical exams today. Both are captains

Fifteen African and Asian nations have called upon the United Nations Security Council to consider the French-Tunisian dispute: they say its a threat to international peace.

And Lieut. General Norstad, air commander for SHAPE in central Europe, says a radar screen from the North Sea to the Alps was ordered into operation today.

Although the returns are not altogether complete from Nebraska, it's clearly evident that Senator Taft's campaign is back on the tracks. His victory in Wisconsin is no hard-and-fast indication that the Ohio Senator will win the Republican nomination, but a defeat there would have sent his chances a-glimmering. Now his double-starred victory in the no-write-in primary in Wisconsin and Nebraska certainly helps to remove any political tarnish he may have suffered at the hands of Eisenhower in Minnesota and New Hampshire. General Eisenhower's name could not, of course, be entered in Wisconsin. The primary law there provides that candidates could not be entered unless they "affirmatively assent." That barred Eisenhower, because the General could not give his affirmative assent, without violating army regualtions. Indeed, it first looked as though Senator Taft would have a walk-over in Wisconsin, until Governor Warren entered the race. But the California Governor, who made just a part-time campaign there, was not a stalking horse for Eisenhower; yet it was understood that if he failed to get the nomination at the convention, the Wisconsin delegates pledged to him, would shift to Eisenhower.

Harold Stassen, who promised half of his Wisconsin delegates to Eisenhower and won none, was also a rallying point for any anti-Taft elements, but there was no way of telling what the Eisenhower influence did for either Warren or Stassen in Wisconsin. Although between the, the two collared more of the popular vote than Taft, nevertheless Taft's victory there was a very solid one. He carried 55 of the states' 71 counties, Warren took 9 counties, Stassen got 7.

One of the elements difficult to assess in Wisconsin was the influence of Senator McCarthy. McCarthy is known to be popular there with the Republicn organization. But Senator McCarthy has not yet formally indorsed Senator Taft; and as far as yesterday's primary went, Senator McCarthy appeared to be adopting a hand's-off attitude.

The victory of Senator Kefauver in Wisconsin, while it was a landslide, appears less important than his triumph in Nebraska. In Wisconsin, the campaign's of his two pro-Truman opponents collapsed after the President's decision not to run. But in Nebraska, his battle with Senator Kerr, proved easier than it first appeared. The Tennessean took about 58 per cent of the Nebraska Democratic vote to the Oklahoma Senator's 39. Kerr capitulated at dawn to Senator Kefauver, but the Eisenhower support gave Taft a run for it until mid-day. One of the most remarkable things aobut the Nebraska write-in battle between Taft and Eisenhower, is that Stassen, the only Republican actually named on the ballot, ran third to both the "write-in" candidates, Taft didn't even campaign in Nebraska. It's apparent that the intense instruction campaigns for "write-ins" paid off for both the unlisted Republican candidates.

Although General Eisenhower has not commented on his Nebraska reverse, his New Jersey supporters got a warning today: were asked "not to be lulled into a sense of false security," by Senator Taft's withdrawal from the Jersey primary race-April 15.

Although there's another primary in Illinois on Tuesday, with considerable publicity to the winner, professional politicians are just as interested in the states that don't hold primaries, but conventions instedd. For example: Senator Taft picked up 19 of Tennessee's 20 Republican convention delegates today, and later this week, another 72 delegates will be named by the relatively unpublicized conventions in Iowa and Michigan. Those delegates will count just as much in the July national conventions, as the ones picked up in the headline primary contests. But what does it all prove? Probably that 3 or 4 primaries don't make an election horse-race.

This is Larry LeSueur. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." But first, Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

LESUEUR: Tonight everyone is trying to draw a conclusion from the Wisconsin and Nebraska primaries. Most Americans are at least amateur political experts. It was La Rochefoucauld who once observed: "The greatest gift is the power to estimate correctly the value of things." That still holds true. And equally true is this remark by Bertrand Russell: "Even when all the experts agree, they may well be mistaken."

Good Night!

Thursday - April 3, 1952

Good evening. Here's what happened today:

Attorney General Mc Grath fired Newbold Morris from his job as assistant in charge of ending corruption in government. The President then accepted Attorney General Mc Grath's resignation, AND named Federal Judge James PATRICK McGrannery to be attorney general. Judge McGrannery says: "MY job will be the restoration of the faith of the American people, in the government of the United States, and it will be done completely by the Justice department."

Today's Washington drama opened with Attorney General McGrath calling reporters to his office SHORTLY AFTER NOON. They found him surrounded by F.B.I. Chief Hoover and two assistant attorney generals. Mr. Mc Grath gave reporters, a copy of a curt note addressed to Newbold Morris. It said: "Sir".. please be informed your appointment is terminated at the close of business today. You are hereby requested to turn over your files, records and documents to the F.B.I." Mr. Mc Grath, who had appointed Newbold Morris to the job just two months ago, refused to answer any questions. It was only on Monday that he told a House committee he didn't knoew if he would fill out a financial questionaiire prepared by Mr. Morris. He told the same committee: if he had to do it again he would not appoint Newbold Morris. Reporters asked the attorney general:"where do we go from here" on the corruption investigation.?" Mc Grath shook his head, said nothing.

Reporters hurried to the White House to ask questions. They were informed the President and Mrs. Truman were dining with Queen Juliana of the Netherlands. --COULD NOT BE DISTURBED. Other reporters rushed to the offices of Newbold Morris. They found him with a news flash in his hand.. (that's how he found out he had been fired.) A messenger from Mc Grath's office arrived a few minutes later. The reporters asked questions. "Do you know why you were dismissed?" He said: "nobody had told him." "Are you going to ask why?" He said: no. "Were you surprised?" Mr. Morris said: Yes. He was asked: "Do you care?" He said: "Not very much, as long as my wife loves me." Next question: "What will happen now?" Mr. Morris said: "That's out of my hands." The questioner persisted. And Mr. Morris said: "Maybe the President's news conference will clear it up."

[redacted]

While reporters waited for the President's news conference.. at 4 p.m... they had a chance to find out what some members of Congress

CBS RADIO DIVISION

LARRY LESUEUR

Thursday, April 3, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 P.M.

LESUEUR: ... came at 4:00 P.M. at the President's news conference. Griffing Bancroft covered that conference for us. Tell us what went on, Griff.

BANCROFT: Well, Larry, I went to the conference early. I thought there'd be a crowd, but what a crowd. All 200 seats in the conference room were filled 15-min. before it started and 65 more newsmen crowded in, standing against the wall. Then the President and his aides came in. Mr. Truman looked jovial. He joked with photographers he had let in to take pictures before the talking started. When the flashbulbs stopped, the President said, "I have an announcement." Then he said - and he seemed to drop his jovial air, he sounded curt when he said simply: "The Attorney General has resigned. He will be succeeded by James P. McGrannary, a U.S. District Judge for eastern Pennsylvania." A half a dozen reporters were on their feet, shouting, "Mr. President." The President then seemed to regain his jovial air, which he maintained while parrying questions and he's good at that.

The first newsman recognized asked, "Who is going to handle the cleanup campaign?" "It will be handled by the new Attorney General," said the President. The questionswent on, rapid fire: "Did McGrath fire Newbold Morris with your knowledge and approval?" "It was under discussion but I was not consulted," said the President. He added hurriedly, "I made no suggestions." He said the first he knew definitely that Morris had been fired was when he read it on theWhite House news ticker.

Then the President was asked if a grim conversation he had with McGrath at the airport concerned Morris. "That was a private conversation," said thePresident. "Will you re-instate Morris?" he was asked. The answer was: "That's up to the new Attorney General." The word 'new' was stressed.

Then another question: "Did you ask McGrath to resign?"

"He resigned, just now," said the President. "Why did he resign?" "Because he wanted to." "Was his resignation voluntary?" "Resignations are always voluntary," the President said with a grin. It was obvious at this point that the President was not going to give the reporters the answer they all wanted, - 'whether the President fired his attorney general or whether the cabinet member quit in a huff.'

But, the reporters kept on trying; that's what they're paid for. "How did he resign, Mr. President?" "He resigned by telephone," replied the President. "Who put in the call, you or McGrath?" "I can't answer that," said the President. Then someone shouted, "Thank you, Mr. President," and there was a mad rush for the door and the telephones. And, Larry, that ended the White House chapter of today's Morris-McGrath-McGrannary story.

(30)

ed. trans. P. O.

were thinking. Republican Senator Mundt of South Daketa said: "This makes the whole Administration clean-up drive look like a fine piece of deception. Morris is handed to the public as a free-lance with wide authority to investigate the Attorney General or anybody else. Now we find his first victim, refuses to answer questions and fires Morris." Senator Mc Carran said: "MC Grath is to be congratulated.. he should have done it a month ago. Democratic Representative Rogers of California said: "We must find out what this is all about. Somebody must take positive action."

That came at 4 p.m. at the President's news conference. Griffing Bancroft covered that conference for us. Tell us what went on, Grif?

(runs 2;30 ending: Larry..that ended the White House chapter of today's Morris-McGrath-McGrannery story.)

But the Washington reporter's work was not yet done. The former attorney General Harold Mc Grath.. former senator from Rhode Island.. ~~former~~ former Chairman of the Democratic ~~nation~~ National committee.. issued a statement. It said:" I have done my duty as I saw it. I have stood up for what I believe to be the great principles of personal liberty and fundementel rights of employes of the federal government." The Mc Grath statement ended: "I gladly accept the penalty which in this instance, attaches to the performance of duty." Mc Grath was obviously refering to his belief that the Morris financial questionnaire pried into rights of government employes.

Almost while Mc. Grath was having his say, reporters in Philadelphia found Federal Judge Mc Granery. -- The new ATTORNEY GENERAL. The 52-year-old former Congressmen AND FORMER ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL, said he had no inkling of what was going on in Washington, until the President telephoned him. He said he has no plans whatsoever about Newbold Morris. The judge said: "It has always been my opinion that the Constitution of the United States provides that corruption in the government shall be dealt with by the Justice Department. In my estimation, the whole situation is in the hands of God. and with His help, we will do the job."

[redacted]

Back in Washington, Howard Mc Grath, as one of his final acts of the Day, sent Judge Mc Grannery a telegram. It said: "My heartiest conratulations, and I suggest you bring a pair of asbestos trousers with you."

And then near the end of this hectic day in Washington the reporters went back to get Newbold Morris's story. He told them: "If my brief career in Washington hasn't accomplished anything else, we have gotten rid of Howard McGrath. And it took us only two months to do it." Morris said; "Everything was cozy, cordial and comfortable, until they found out I meant business... I never had any illussions about Mc Grath." Then for the benefit of a photographer, Morris typed out a message to Mc Grath. It said in part: "I am not mad at you. I'm only sorry that you didn't want me to clean house. Keep your shirt on. Private life is not so bad. Respectfully, Newbold."

And, at about this time, Howard Mc Grath walked out of the Justice Department, was cheered by a crowd, spoke a few words for newsreel cameras, then stepped into his car: with tears in his eyes.

So ends today's big Washington story.

Here in New York we had news today that could affect the lives of many more Americans. Phil Murray, the head of the C.I.O. Steelworkers, says he believes a nation-wide steel strike will definitely take place at one minute after midnight Tuesday. At a conference with steel industry leaders today, the union turned down the first concession the industry had made since bargaining started late last year. The industry offered the union a 16-cent-an-hour wage increase.. compared to the 26 cents an hour (including fringe benefits) recommended by the Wage Stabilization Board. After the union said "NO".. the conference was adjourned indefinitely. Industry leaders say they will start banking their furnaces tomorrow. And government officials are now debating the President's next step, whether to call on the injunction provision of the Taft-Hartley law, or to seize the industry. Steel leaders have made it clear they will fight "seizure" in the courts. Today in Washington, Price Stabilizer Arnall made it evident that the government will give the steel industry no special price increase, to meet the higher wages recommended by the Stabilization Board. And Benjamin Fairless, president of U. S. Steel, says he's very pessimistic." Phil Murray is mailing strike notices to his union leaders in the field tonight. Normally, this is done by telegram.

But A. F. of L. employes had walked out of Western Union offices across the country at midnight. The union says the walkout by 13-thousand employes is one hundred per cent effective. The company says it resumed partial service by noon. But most of Western Union's 2-thousand main offices and one thousand branch offices were reported closed..and accepting no messages.

In Detroit today, the C. I. O. telephone workers called their top leaders to a meeting to "review our present bargaining situation" with the Bell Telephone System. Union telephone installers and distributors are scheduled to walkout of Western Electric Company plants on Monday.

The President today madd it clear that there is no dissiastisfaction among certain government officials with our negotiators in Korea. He congradicted a published story that said this.

And the news from Korea tells us that some of our top generals and admirals, are now conferring with the ~~[illegible]~~ armistice negotiarors at Munsan. Generals Ridgeway and Van Fleet, and their top aides, were there today. A Spokesman says we called off yesterday's secret meeting on exchanging prisoners of war "for constructive purposes." He acknowledges the possibility of what the correspondents there call "important developments" but he says this is not "a foregone conclusion."

There were three more jet battles in the air over North Korea today. Our pilots destroyed or damaged eight enemy Migs.. bringing ~~their~~ the total number~~s~~ of plane~~s~~ we destroyed or damaged in the first three days ~~days~~ of April, to 40.

Dr. Bruce ~~Chisholm~~ Chisholm, the chief of the World Health Organization, just back from a visit to the Far East, said today that if the United Nations were actually engaged in ~~[illegible]~~ germ warfare, as charged by the Communists, the results would be far more effective than the results propagandized by the enemy. Dr. Chisolhm, said if bacteriological warfare is used in a modern way "very large numbers of people would die very suddenly... the death of one million people would be nothing."

Queen Juliana of the Netherlands addressed a joint session of Congress today. She said her country, with our aid, is now once more able to stand on its own feet economically. She thanked us for our help and reminded the Congress that: "Mankind in its distress has to trust largely to your good judgement for its deliverance. Your decisions," said the Queen, " have enormous repercussions throughout the world."

There was quite a bit of political news today. The President said he is not a candidate for Senator or Representative from Missouri. He refused to name his favorite candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination..said the field is wide open. And Mr. Truman added he intends to continue to fight for peace, when he leaves the White House as a private citizen.

The Supreme Court ruled today, in an Alabama case, that a presidential elector candidate may be compelled to support his party's national ticket.

Senator Russell proposed to Senator Kefauver that their May 6th primary in Florida be put on an "all or nothing basis." Senator Kefauver says this would be conspiring to violate the states rights of the people of Florida

This is Larry LeSueur. I'll be back in a moment with the word for today....(CUE) But first, Bob Dixon...

~~Washington in the past few years [illegible] for investigations.~~

~~And~~ As a result of today's developments involving Newbold Morris and Attorney General McGrath ~~we [illegible]~~ we may see a new series of investigations. It was Confucius who ~~once~~ said:"Knowledge is acquired through a careful investigation of things. With things investigated, knowledge becomes complete." That may or may not be true today, but certainly Menander was right when he said:"Nothing's more pleasing than to know all the facts."

Goodnite!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
LARRY LESUEUR REPORTING
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

THURSDAY - APRIL 3, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

Good evening: Here's what happened today!

Attorney General McGrath fired Newbold Morris from his job as assistant in charge of ending corruption in Government. The President then accepted Attorney General McGrath's resignation, and named Federal Judge James Patrick McGrannery to be Attorney General. Judge McGrannery says: "My job will be the restoration of the faith of the American people in the Government of the United States, and it will be done completely by the Justice Department."

Today's Washington drama opened with Attorney General McGrath calling reporters to his office shortly after noon. They found him surrounded by F.B.I. Chief Hoover and two assistant Attorney Generals. Mr. McGrath gave reporters a copy of a curt note addressed to Newbold Morris. It said: "Sir.....please be informed your appointment is terminated at the close of business today. You are hereby requested to turn over your files, records and documents to the F.B.I." Mr. McGrath, who had appointed Newbold Morris to the job just two months ago, refused to answer any questions. It was only on Monday that he told a House committee he didn't know if he would fill out a financial questionaire prepared by Mr. Morris. He told the same committee: if he had to do it again, he would not appoint Newbold Morris. Reporters asked the Attorney General: "Where do we go from here on the corruption investigation?" McGrath shook his head: said nothing.

Reporters hurried to the White House to ask questions. They were informed the President and Mrs. Truman were dining with Queen Juliana of the Netherlands and could not be disturbed. Other reporters rushed to the offices of Newbold Morris. They found him with a news flash in his hand: (that's how he found out he had been fired). A messenger from McGrath's office arrived a few minutes later. The reporters asked questions. "Do you know why you were dismissed?" He said: nobody had told him. "Are you going to ask why?" He said: no. "Were you surprised?" Mr. Morris said: yes. He was asked: "Do you care?" He said: "Not very much as long as my wife loves me." Next question: "What will happen now?" Mr. Morris said: "That's out of my hands." The questioner persisted. And Mr. Morris said: "Maybe the President's news conference will clear it up."

While reporters waited for the President's news conference at 4 P.M., they had a chance to find out what some members of Congress were thinking. Republican Senator Mundt of South Dakota said: "This makes the whole Administration clean-up drive look like a fine piece of deception. Morris is handed to the public as a free-lance with wide authority to investigate the Attorney General or anybody else. Now, we find his first victim refuses to answer questions and fires Morris." Senator McCarran said: "McGrath is to be congratulated; he should have done it a month ago." Democratic Representative Rogers of California said: "We must find out what this is all about. Somebody must take positive action."

That came at 4 p.m. at the President's news conference. Griffing Bancroft covered that conference for us. Tell us what went on, Griff?

BANCROFT: Well, Larry, I went to the conference early. I thought there'd be a crowd, but what a crowd. All 200 seats in the conference room were filled 15 minutes before it started and 65 more newsmen crowded in, standing against the wall. Then the President and his aides came in. Mr. Truman looked jovial. He joked with photographers he had let in to take pictures before the talking started. When the flashbulbs stopped, the President said; "I have an announcement." Then he said - and he seemed to drop his jovial air; he sounded curt when he said simply: "The Attorney General has resigned. He will be succeeded by James P. McGranery, a U.S. District Judge for eastern Pennsylvania." A half a dozen reporters were on their feet, shouting, "Mr. President." The President then seemed to regain his jovial air, which he maintained while parrying questions and he's good at that.

The first newsman recognized asked, "Who is going to handle the clean-up campaign?" "It will be handled by the new Attorney General," said the President. The questions went on, rapid fire: "Did McGrath fire Newbold Morris with your knowledge and approval?" "It was under discussion but I was not consulted," said the President. He added hurriedly, "I made no suggestions." He said the first he knew definitely that Morris had been fired was when he read it on the White House news ticker.

Then the President was asked if a grim conversation he had with McGrath at the airport concerned Morris. "That was a private conversation," said the President. "Will you re-instate Morris?" he was asked. The answer was: "That's up to the new Attorney General." The word 'new' was stressed.

Then another question: "Did you ask McGrath to resign?" "He resigned, just now," said the President. "Why did he resign?" "Because he wanted to." "Was his resignation voluntary?" "Resignations are always voluntary," the President said with a grin. It was obvious at this point that the President was not going to give the reporters the answer they all wanted - whether the President fired his Attorney General or whether the cabinet member quit in a huff.

But, the reporters kept on trying: that's what they're paid for. "How did he resign, Mr. President?" "He resigned by telephone," replied the President. "Who put in the call, you or McGrath?" "I can't answer that," said the President. Then someone shouted, "Thank you, Mr. President," and ended the White House chapter of today's Morris-McGrath-McGranery story.

LESUEUR: But the Washington reporter's work was not yet done. The former Attorney General, Harold McGrath, former Senator from Rhode Island, former Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, issued a statement. It said: "I have stood up for what I believe to be the great principles of personal liberty and fundamental rights of employees of the Federal Government." The McGrath statement ended: "I gladly accept the penalty which in this instance attaches to the performance of duty." McGrath was obviously refering to his belief that the Morris' financial questionnaire pried into rights of government employees.

Almost while McGrath was having his say, reporters in Philadelphia found Federal Judge McGranery - the new Attorney General. The 52-year-old former Congressmen, and former Assistant Attorney General, said he had no inkling of what was going on in Washington, until the President telephoned him. He said he has no plans whatsoever about Newbold Morris. The Judge said: "It has always been my opinion that the Constitution of the United States provides that corruption in the Government shall be dealt with by the Justice Department. In my estimation, the whole situation is in the hands of God, and with his help, we will do the job." Back in Washington, Howard McGrath, as one of his final acts of the day, sent Judge McGranery a telegram. It said: "My heartiest congratulations, and I suggest you bring a pair of asbestos trousers with you."

And then near the end of this hectic day in Washington, the reporters went back to get Newbold Morris' story. He told them: "If my brief career in Washington hasn't accomplished anything else, we have gotten rid of Howard McGrath. And it took us only two months to do it." Morris said: "Everything was cozy, cordial and comfortable, until they found out I meant business. I never had any illusions about McGrath." Then for the benefit of a photographer, Morris typed out a message to McGrath. It said in part: "I am not mad at you: I'm only sorry that you didn't want me to clean house. Keep your shirt on. Private life is not so bad. Respectfully, Newbold."

And, at about this time, Howard McGrath walked out of the Justice Department, was cheered by a crowd, spoke a few words for newsreel cameras, then stepped into his car - with tears in his eyes. So ends today's big Washington story.

Here in New York, we had news today that could affect the lives of many more Americans. Phil Murray, the head of the C.I.O. steelworkers, says he believes a nation-wide steel strike will definitely take place at one minute after midnight Tuesday. At a conference with steel industry leaders today, the union turned down the first concession the industry had made since bargaining started late last year. The industry offered the union a 16-cent-an-hour wage increase - compared to the 26 cents-an-hour (including fringe benefits) recommended by the Wage Stabilization Board. After the union said "no", the conference was adjourned indefinitely. Industry leaders say they will start banking their furnaces tomorrow. And government officials are now debating the President's next step, whether to call on the injunction provision of the Taft-Hartley law or to seize the industry. Steel leaders have made it clear they will fight "seizure" in the courts. Today in Washington, Price Stabilizer Arnall made it evident that the Government will give the steel industry no special price increase to meet the higher wages recommended by the Stabilization Board. And Benjamin Fairless, president of U.S. Steel, says he's very pessimistic." Phil Murray is mailing strike notices to his union leaders in the field tonight. Normally this is done by telegram.

But A.F. of L. employees had walked out of Western Union offices across the country at midnight. The union says the walkout by 13-thousand employees is one hundred per cent effective. The company says it resumed partial service by noon. But most of Western Union's 2-thousand main offices and one thousand branch offices were reported closed - and accepting no messages.

In Detroit today, the C.I.O. telephone workers called their top leaders to a meeting to "review our present bargaining situation" with the Bell Telephone System. Union telephone installers and distributors are scheduled to walkout of Western Electric Company plants on Monday.

The President today made it clear that there is no dissatisfaction among certain government officials with out negotiators in Korea. He congratulated a published story that said this.

And the news from Korea tells us that some of our top generals and admirals are now conferring with the armistice negotiators at Munsan. Generals Ridgway and Van Fleet, and their top aides, were there today. A spokesman says we called off yesterday's secret meeting on exchanging prisoners of war "for constructive purposes." He acknowledges the possibility of what the correspondents there call "important developments," but he says this is not "a foregone conclusion."

There were three more jet battles in the air over North Korea today.

Our pilots destroyed or damaged eight enemy MIGs, bringing the total number of planes we destroyed or damaged in the first three days of April to 40.

Dr. Bruce Chisholm, the chief of the World Health Organization, just back from a visit to the Far East, said today that if the United Nations were actually engaged in germ warfare, as charged by the communists, the results would be far more effective than the results propagandized by the enemy. Dr. Chisholm, said if bacteriological warfare is used in a modern way, "very large numbers of people would die very suddenly: the death of one million people would be nothing."

Queen Juliana of the Netherlands addressed a joint session of Congress today. She said her country, with our aid, is now once more able to stand on its own feet economically, She thanked us for our help, and reminded the Congress that "Mankind in its distress has to trust largely to your good judgement for its deliverance. Your decisions," said the Queen, "have enormous reprecussions throughout the world."

The Supreme Court ruled today, in an Alabama case, that a presidential elector candidate may be compelled to support his party's national ticket.

This is Larry LeSueur. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." But first, Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

LESUEUR: As a result of today's developments involving Newbold Morris and Attorney General McGrath, we may see a new series of investigations. It was Confucius who said: "Knowledge is acquired through a careful investigation of things. With things investigated, knowledge becomes complete." That may or may not be true today, but certainly Menander was right when he said: "Nothing's more pleasing than to know all the facts."

Good Night!

Friday - April 4, 1952

Good evening; here's what happened today:

General Ridgeway said in Korea: "I think we are making progress in the truce talks." This is the most optimistic statement the general has made since the talks began last July. The General told reporters that he thinks the deadlock can be broken, if both sides make concessions. There was no meeting today, to discuss the exchange of prisoners of war. This series of meetings has been recessed "indefinitely.".. by mutual agreement. Our jet planes flew over North Korea today without meeting any opposition.

In Washington, today the new attorney general, Judge James P. McGRAINERY conferred with the President and then told reporters he had been ordered to straighten out the Justice Department "if there's anything wrong there." We've recorded for you some of the questions reporters asked.. and Judge McGrainery's answers:

(runs two minutes)

CBS RADIO DIVISION

LARRY LESUEUR

Friday, April 4, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 P.M.

LESUEUR: ... We've recorded for you some of thequestions reporters asked and Judge McGranery's answers.

McGRANERY: ... and take over and be the Attorney General. And in doing that he would give me his full support.

QUESTION: What direction will the cleanup campaign now take (unintelligible)

McGRANERY: Well, I would propose to ... if there is anything to be cleaned up to clean it up within the framework of the Department of Justice itself.

QUESTION: And how do you propose to go about it?

McGRANERY: Well, I propose to ask Mr. Hoover to give me full and complete report.

QUESTIONS: Well, what about the files that already exist that Mr. Newbold Morris had?

McGRANERY: I'll look them over. Somebody told me that there's something there that is of a responsible (indistinct) If there is, I want to use it.

QUESTION: Well, Judge, are you going to completely abolish the special investigator ... the offices of Newbold Morris?

McGRANERY: Yes.

QUESTION: And depend entirely on the F.B.I.

McGRANERY: On the Department of Justice.

QUESTION: Well, (indistinct) the first investigation that you might make be within the Justice Department itself?

McGRANERY: I will report on the Justice Department first off, yes, sure.

QUESTION: First off.

McGRANERY: Sure.

QUESTION: Look did this kind of surprise you being called in to take over?

McGRANERY: Indeed,

McGRANERY: Indeed it did. Not a 'surprise,' that's mild, it was a 'shock.' (laughter) Because I was very happy on the bench.

QUESTION: Judge, what procedure will you use if you uncover evidence of wrongdoing what will your ...

McGRANERY: Grand jury. Put it right into the grand jury.

QUESTION: Well, ~~you're~~ are you going to abolish the questionnaire that's been handed out?

McGRANERY: I don't know. I haven't ... I ... you know I've never seen the questionnaire. I'd like to look it over a little. I'll use anything that I see and I think's good.

QUESTION: You're not ruling that out?

McGRANERY: No.

QUESTION: Do you think there might be a special grand jury for this (indistinct)

McGRANERY: Not necessarily. No. I think the ... you don't need a special grand jury to handle these matters. Unless it'ssomething of a long, tedious investigative nature, yes, then you need a special grand jury.

(30)

Even before Judge McGranery arrived in Washington from Philadelphia, one congressman..Velde of Illinois.. called him a "whitewash artist." Republican Congressmen Velde doesn't like the way Mc Granery handled the Amerasia case ..when he was an assistant attorney general.

Newbold Morris returned to his home in New York tonight. Before he left Washington he told his staff: he hopes someone will carry on what he started.. he criticized "men of power" who succumb to the temptations of mink coats.

Attorney General McGrath is still on the job..although he resigned yesterday. The White House says no date has yet been fixed for him to leave. Senator McCarran, Nevada Democrat, says the firing of Mc Grath "was one of the most cruel and unjustifiable acts I have ever seen.. next to the removal of MacArthur."

The government is still seeking a way to avoid the steel strike..scheduled for Wednesday morning. But a spokesman for Acting Defense Mobilizer Steelman says the government at present has no definite plan..Today, Mr. Steelman asked both union and industry to meet in New York with the chairman of the Wage Stabilization Board, Nathan P. Feinsinger ~~Feinsinger~~. Mr. Feinsinger flew to New York, told reporters he has been ordered to try to reach a settlement of the dispute. He's trying to get both sides to re-open negotiations.

The A.F. of L. Commercial Telegraphers Union says its strike against Western Union is one hundred per cent effective. The company says it has restored service in 42 major cities.

The C.I.O. Communications Workers said today they will probably start a nation~~wide~~ wide strike directed against the Bell Telephone system on Monday morning.

The House committee investigating tax scandals heard today from T. Vincent Quinn, district attorney of Queens County, New York. He testified that when he was a congressmen he accepted legal fees in tax cases. He said it was his view that this was not wrong. Assistant Attorney General ~~McInerney~~ MacINERNEY appears to agree with Mr. Quinn.

The House voted today to set up another investigating committee.. to examine the records of tax-exempt educational and philanthropic organizations. Representative Cox of Georgia, who may be the committee chairman, says the job will be to find out if such ~~[illegible]~~ organizations as the Rockefeller and Carnegie foundations spend their money on "un-American and subversive organizations." Democratic Representative Celler of New York said this inquiry is really directed at the Julius Rosenwald Fund.. which has aided Negroes and other minority groups.

The House today voted to cut the State Department's budget request by one-third..cut it to 318-millions. The cut would particulalry hit the department's overseas propaganda activities..like the Voice of America.

The House also voted against setting-up any diplomatic mission at the Vatican unless the Senate confirms the head of the mission.

The President said today, that the North Atlantic Treaty alliance is raising the odds against World War Three. And Secretary of State Acheson.. on this third anniversary of the signing of the treaty..said: "Danger is still with us..the hardest part of the task lies ahead."

General Eisenhower, the NATO commander, conferred today, for more than four hours, with Senator Lodge, leader of his political campaign. The two men met at the general's Paris headquarters.

And Senator Carlsen of Kansas, another leader in the Eisenhower campaign, today made public parts of a letter, he said the General recently wrote a friend. Among other things the General says:" As of now,

I feel safe in saying the great concern of the American people is: assurance that we have a two-party system..honesty and integrity in government.. acknowledgement that our resources are limited.. excessive spending and taxation can be a great danger." The General says he feels the people want an Administration with a sense of justice and fair play, rather than "slickness" in appealing to special inteerests and pressure groups."

In Iowa today the Republican state convention voted to give General Eisenhower 14 of its national convention delegates. Nine go to Senator Taft.. and three others are neutral.

In Illinois, Governor Stevenson said, he cannot approve a campaign to write-his name-IN- as a Democratic presidential candidate, in Illinois's primary on Tuesday. He said he cannot approve.. because he's a candidate for renomination as governor.

Here in New York, a federal court jury is now considering contempt charged against Frank Costello. The jury started to deliberations after Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan had removed two of the jurors. One, Mrs. Helen Louise Maxon, the foreman, said Judge Ryan accused her of being mixed up in a deal to prevent any verdict. She told reporters this charges is "ridiculous." No reason was given for the dismissal of the second juror.. Julius A. Fox.

LeSueur cbs 3 April 1952 7:45p

Well American businessmen have practically ignored it, of course, but the International Economic Conference [redacted] in Moscow today, may be big stuff in Eastern Europe...Like most communist designs, it seems to have two purposes...One to do the Soviets, some good, the other to do us some harm. Now There's some suppicion that the Soviet bloc is hurting, from our ban on the exports of strategic materials, like metals and rubber...

But Moscow is naturally not presenting it that way to the West... They'll paint a picture of how much good non-communist states can do for themselves (in the markets and from the raw material sources) of communist europe and Asia...

But since the Kremlin always places politics above even economics, it's seems quite likely that Moscow's primary purpose is to rally anti-american feeling in Europe...That uncomfortably wide-spread feeling, that if it were'nt for america's stress on re-armament, and american embargoes on trade with East Europe, the non-communist nations might be doing better than they are, now and in the future...

These evidences of anti-americanism among the western nations, ~~for~~ SOME reason or another, are what Moscow likes to call the "capitalist contradiction." According to their philosophy it's difficult for capitalist nations to get together on anything, becuz they're usually competing with each other for business. Now America is not only Russia's greatest rival, but becuz some Europeans regard us as swaggering "fat boys," it's apparent that the Kremlin is trying to seize an opportunity to rationalize these anti-american feelings on economic grounds. exploit them as best they can...

Only a scattering of small businessmen from the United States, Canada and Japan, accepted invitations to the Moscow conference...

The State Department, under the lead of Secretary Acheson, carefully explained the pitfalls, and few american or canadian businessmen were eager to become communist cats-paws...

Nevertheless a disappointing number of Britishers, are going - some 2 DOZEN including 4 labor party members and Lord Boyd-Orr, former head of the UN food and agriculture organization, who once disagreed with the United States over a food project.. The British government has not forbidden it, but speaking for the Conservative Government Anthony Eden said no benefits to Britain could be expected.

And not all of our latin-american neighbors have been as loyal as we would have preferred... Both Brazil and Argentina have sent delegations...in the "unofficially" expressed hope of increasing national trade...Like some other Western nations, both of these smaller countries would apparently like to put themselves in, at least, a better bargaining position, show this country, that they're not completely dependent on us.. And despite the French government's quiet opposition, about 30 Frenchmen have gone to Moscow...also some 20 west German businessmen.

Of course, some of these gentlemen are probably going because the trip to Moscow is in the nature of what we call a "JUNKET." Some of them are small businessmen and college professors who are going for the ride...Moscow is paying their round-trip air passage, and giving them ten free days in the Russian capital. Russia is also cashing on the aura of mystery created by the iron curtain, promising them permission to travel in the Soviet Union when the conference is over...

And another bait that the Soviet Union used was to resurrect Oskar Lange to send out the invitations, Oskar Lange, a former University of Chicago Economist, once headed the Polish delegation to the United Nations...When he showed signs of being a little too friendly with westerners, he was recalled...Apparently the Kremlin doesn't trust him OUTSIDE the Soviet Union, but he's still useful to lure Westerners inside...

We're told the Russians spared no details for the comfort and convenience of their Western guests. Put a fleet of limosines at their disposal, to take them from the Brand New Sovietskaya hotel, to the pre-revolutionary, Hall of Columns, a handsome building that's been refurnished with shiny new birchwood desks for the visitors.

The Saviets have even taken over one of the United Nation's novelties...installed a six-way simultaneous translation system, with headphones carrying running translations in english, french, german, russian, chinese and spanish..

The delegates say they found another UN touch in a documents room, or provides mimeographed stenographic reports of the Moscow conference sessions, in any of five languages..

And rules of proceedure were quickly adopted to barr political attacks on any of the various countries represented...

Well it all goes to show, that altho Premier Stalin may be gently strumming the harp of "Capitalism and Communism living peacefully together," Both at this conference and in his answers to an american editors questionaire earlier this week, The Kremlin, Nevertheless, still keeps its eyes on the ball... It's goal being the isolation of America from its allies.. This is Larry Lesueur speaking....I'll be back in a moment with the word for today...(Cue) But first, Bob Dixon..

The Russians are ~~cautiously~~ clearly hopeful that their Economic Conference will not only win them a little more trade but ~~a few more~~ influence a few more friends as well. For those attending the Conference, these words by Francis Quarles would seem appropriate:"A friendship that is begun for an end, will not continue to the end." Perhaps Euripides got even closer to the point when he said:"Nothing is of more service to mankind than a prudent mistrust."

Goodnite.

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
LARRY LESUEUR REPORTING
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

FRIDAY - APRIL 4, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

Good evening: here's what happened today!

General Ridgway said in Korea: "I think we are making progress in the truce talks." This is the most optimistic statement the General has made since the talks began last July. The General told reporters that he thinks the deadlocks can be broken, if both sides made concessions. There was no meeting today to discuss the exchange of prisoners of war. This series of meetings has been recessed "indefinitely" by mutual agreement. Our jet planes flew over North Korea today without meeting any opposition.

In Washington today, the new Attorney General, Judge James P. McGranery conferred with the President and then told reporters he had been ordered to straighten out the Justice Department, "if there's anything wrong there." We've recorded for you some of the questions reporters asked and Judge McGranery answers.

MCGRANERY: .....and take over and be the Attorney General. And in doing that he would give me his full support.

QUESTION: What direction will the cleanup campaign now take.....

MCGRANERY: Well, I would propose to.....if there is anything to be cleaned up .....to clean it up within the framwork of the Department of Justice itself.

QUESTION: And how do you propose to go about it?

MCGRANERY: Well, I propose to ask Mr. Hoover to give me full and complete report.

QUESTION: Well, what about the files that already exist that Mr. Newbold Morris had?

MCGRANERY: I'll look them over. Somebody told me that there's something there that is of a responsible.....If there is, I want to use it.

QUESTION: Well, Judge, are you going to completely abolish the special investigatpn ....the offices of Newbold Morria?

MCGRANERY: Yes.

QUESTION: And depend entirely on the F.B.I.

MCGRANERY: On the Department of Justice.

QUESTION: Well, ...the first investigation that you might make be within the Justice Department itself?

MCGRANERY: I will report on the Justice Department first off, yes, sure.

QUESTION: First off?

MCGRANERY: Sure!

QUESTION: Look - did this kind of surprise you --- being called in to take over?

MCGRANERY: Indeed it did. Not a 'surprise'; that's mild. It was a shock... .....because I was very happy on the bench.

QUESTION: Judge, what procedure will you use if you uncover evidence of wrong-doing? What will your.....

MCGRANERY: Grand jury: put it right into the grand jury.

QUESTION: Well, are you going to abolish the questionnaire that's been handed out?

MCGRANERY: I don't know. I haven't.....I.....you know I've never seen the questionnaire. I'd like to look it over a little. I'll use anything that I see and I think is good.

QUESTION: You're not ruling that out?

MCGRANERY: No.

QUESTION: Do you think there might be a special grand jury for this.....

MCGRANERY: Not necessarily. No. I think the.....you don't need a special grand jury to handle these matters. Unless it's something of a long, tedious investigative nature, yes: then you need a special grand jury.

LESUEUR: Even before Judge McGranery arrived in Washington from Philadelphia, one Congressman, Velde of Illinois, called him a "whitewash artist." Republican Congressman Velde doesn't like the way McGranery handled the Amerasia case when he was an Assistant Attorney General.

Newbold Morris returned to his home in New York tonight. Before he left Washington, he told his staff he hopes someone will carry on what he started. He criticized "men of power" who succumb to the temptations of mink coats.

Attorney General McGrath is still on the job, although he resigned yesterday. The White House says no date has yet been fixed for him to leave. Senator McCarran, Nevada Democrat, says the firing of McGrath "was one of the most cruel and unjustifiable acts I have ever seen - next to the removal of MacArthur

The Government is still seeking a way to avoid the steel strike scheduled for Wednesday morning. But a spokesman for Acting Defense Mobilizer Steelman says the Government at present has no definite plan. Today, Mr. Steelman asked both union and industry to meet in New York with the chairmen of the Wage Stabilization Board, Nathan P. Feinsinger. Mr. Feinsinger flew to New York, told reporters he has been ordered to try to reach a settlement of the dispute. He's trying to get both sides to re-open negotiations.

The A. F. of L. Commercial Telegraphers Union says its strike against Western Union, is one hundred per cent effective. The company says it has restored service in 42 major cities.

The C.I.O. Communications Workers said today they will probably start a nationwide strike directed against the Bell Telephone system on Monday morning.

The House committee investigating tax scandals, heard today from T. Vincent Quinn, district attorney of Queens County, New York. He testified, that when he was a Congressman, he accepted legal fees in tax cases. He said it was his view that this was not wrong. Assistant Attorney General MacInerney appears to agree with Mr. Quinn.

The House voted today to set up another investigating committee to examine the records of tax-exempt educational and philanthropic organizations. Representative Cox of Georgia, who may be the committee chairman, says the job will be to find out if such organizations as the Rockefeller and Carnegie Foundations spend their money on "un-American and subversive organizations." Democratic Representative Celler of New York said this inquiry is really directed at the Julius Rosenwald Fund, which has aided Negroes and other minority groups.

The House today voted to cut the State Department's budget request by one-third - cut it to 318-millions. The cut would particularly hit the Department's overseas propaganda activities like the Voice of America.

The House also voted against setting-up any diplomatic mission at the Vatican, unless the Senate confirms the head of the mission.

The President said today, that the North Atlantic Treaty alliance is raising the odds against World War Three. And Secretary of State Acheson, on this third anniversary of the signing of the treaty, said: "Danger is still with us; the hardest part of the task lies ahead."

General Eisenhower, the NATO commander, conferred today, for more than four hours, with Senator Lodge, leader of his political campaign. The two men met at the General's Paris headquarters.

And Senator Carlsen of Kansas, another leader in the Eisenhower campaig today made public parts of a letter he said the General recently wrote a friend. Among other things the General says: "As of now, I feel safe in saying the great concern of the American people is assurance that we have a two-party system, honesty and integrity in Government, acknowledgement that our resources are limited excessive spending and taxation can be a great danger." The General says he feels the people want an Administration with a sense of justice and fair play rather than "slickness" in appealing to special interests and pressure groups."

In Iowa today the Republican state convention voted to give General Eisenhower 14 of its national convention delegates. Nine go to Senator Taft, and three others are neutral.

In Illinois, Governor Stevenson said he cannot approve a campaign to write his name 'in as a Democratic presidential candidate in Illinois' primary on Tuesday. He said he cannot approve, because he's a candidate for renomination as governor.

Here in New York, a federal court jury is now considering contempt charges against Frank Costello. The jury started its deliberations after Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan had removed two of the jurors. One, Mrs. Helen Louise Maxon, the foreman, said Judge Ryan accused her of being mixed up in a deal to prevent any verdict. She told reporters this charge is "ridiculous." No reason was given for the dismissal of the second juror, Julius A. Fox.

American businessmen have practically ignored it, of course, but the International Economic Conference in Moscow today, may be big stuff in Eastern Europe. Like most communist designs, it seems to have two purposes: one to do the Soviets some good, the other to do us some harm. Now there's some suspicion that the Soviet bloc is hurting, from our ban on the exports of strategic materials, like metals and rubber. But Moscow is naturally not presenting it that way to the West. They'll paint a picture of how much good non-communist states can do for themselves in the markets and from the raw material sources of communist Europe and Asia.

But since the Kremlin always places politics above even economics, it's seems quite likely that Moscow's primary purpose is to rally anti-American feeling in Europe. That uncomfortably wide-spread feeling, that if it weren't for America's stress on re-armament, and American embargoes on trade with the East Europe, the non-communist nations might be doing better than they are now, and in the future. These evidences of anti-Americanism among the western nations, for some reason or another, are what Moscow likes to call the "capitalist contradiction." According to their philosophy, it's difficult for capitalist nations to get together on anything, because they're usually competing with each other for business. Now America is not only Russia's greatest rival, but because some Europeans regard us as swaggering "fat boys", it's apparent that the Kremlin is trying to seize an opportunity to rationalize these anti-American feelings on economic grounds - exploit them as best they can.

Only a scattering of small businessmen from the United States and Canada and Japan accepted invitations to the Moscow conference. The State Department, under the lead of Secretary Acheson, carefully explained the pitfalls, and few American or Canadian businessmen were eager to become communist cats-paws. Nevertheless, a disappointing number of Britishers are going, some two dozen, including four Labor Party members and Lord Boyd-Orr, former head of the UN Food and Agriculture Organization, who once disagreed with the United States over a food project. The British Government has not forbidden it, but speaking for the Conservative Government, Anthony Eden said no benefits to Britain could be expected.

And not all of our Latin-American neighbors have been as loyal as we would have preferred. Both Brazil and Argentine have sent delegations - in the "unofficially" expressed hope of increasing national trade. Like some other Western nations, both of these smaller countries would apparently like to put themselves in at least a better bargaining position; show this country that they're not completely dependent on us. And despite the French Government's quiet oppositio about 30 Frenchmen have gone to Moscow --- also some 20 West German businessmen.

Of course some of these gentlemen are probably going because the trip to Moscow is in the nature of what we call a "Junket". Some of them are small businessmen and college professors who are going for the ride. Moscow is paying their round-trip air passage, and giving them ten free days in the Russian capital. Russia is also cashing on the aura of mystery created by the Iron Curtain; promisin them permission to travel in the Soviet Union when the conference is over.

And another bait that the Soviet Union used, was to resurrect Oskar Lange to send out the invitations. Oskar Lange, a former University of Chicago Economist, once headed the Polish delegation to the United Nations. When he showed signs of being a little too friendly with Westerners, he was recalled. Apparently the Kremlin doesn't trust him outside the Soviet Union, but he's still useful to lure Westerners inside.

We're told the Russians spared no details for the comfort and convenience of their Western guest: put a fleet of limosines at their disposal, to take them from the brand new Sovietskaya Hotel, to the pre-revolutionary Hall of Columns, a handsome building that's been refurnished with shiny new birchwood desks for the visitors. The Soviets have even taken over one of the United Nation's novelties, installed a six-way simultaneous translation system, with headphones carrying running translations in English, French, German, Russian, Chinese, and Spanish. The delegates say they found another UN touch in a documents room; it provides mimeographed stenographic reports of the Moscow conference sessions in any of five languages. And rules of procedure were quickly adopted to barr political attacks on any of the various countries represented.

Well, it all goes to show, that although Premier Stalin may be gently strumming the harp of "Capitalism and Communism living peacefully together," both at this conference and in his answers to an American editors questionnaire earlier this week, the Kremlin, nevertheless, still keeps its eyes on the ball.- it's goal being the isolation of America from its allies.

This is Larry LeSueur speaking. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." But first, Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

LESUEUR: Clearly the Russians are hopeful that their Economic Conference will not only win them a little more trade, but influence a few more friends as well. For those attending the Conference, these words by Francis Quarles would seem appropriate: "A friendship that is begun for an end will not continue to the end." Perhaps Euripides got even closer to the point when he said: "Nothing is of more service to mankind than a prudent mistrust."

Good Night!

Monday - April 7, 1952

This is the news:

The leaders of the steel industry and the C.I.O. steel workers, are doing "some serious thinking" about their dispute. A strike is scheduled to begin one minute after midnight tomorrow. Nathan P. Feinsinger, chairman of the Wage Stabilization Board, who has been meeting with both sides, was asked today if he's made any progress. He said: "When people start serious thinking, that's always progress."

The government today acted to conserve steel, in the event of a strike. It has frozen the shipment of all steel from the mills to manufacturers of civilian goods. Its a precautionary measure..to be sure enough steel is available for our atomic energy program, for making jet planes, ammunition, and completing our defense plants.

Already some 31-thousand workers are jobless because of the threat of a strike; some mills have started laying-off workers, and U.S. Steel has laid-off some of its coal miners. #

An estimated 67-thouand telephone workers went on strike today: 16-thousand of them are maintenance and installation workers for Western Electric, in 43 states; the others are phone operators, craftsmen, clerks and others in five states: New Jersey, Ohio, Michigan,

Northern California and Nevada. Spokesmen for the phone companies say service is almost normal.. (slow in some spots). The C.I.O. Communications Workers have not organized picket lines in many places. (If they do, this might keep additional thousands of phone workers from their jobs.) It appears that the union is having some trouble getting its messages to its field offices. For one thing, they say they don't want to trust the phones.. and then they don't want to violate picket lines at Western Union offices. A.F. of L. employes have been on strike against Western Union for five days. The company says service has been restored in 82 major cities. The union says "We have the country sewed up..except for New York City."

~~Chairman Vinson of the House Armed Services Committee said today that we'll have "an almost completely modern" defense force by the middle of 1956.~~

~~The Air Force disclosed that by the end of June it will have 90 bases in use in this country and an additional 180 scattered over the rest of the world.~~

~~The managers of the country's major airports recommend that the government require civilian airplane manufacturers to build planes that~~

~~can be operated from present runways... up to 7 thousand feet.~~

~~Here in New York an investigation is underway to try to determine what caused a cargo plane to crash in the borough of Queens on Saturday. Five persons were killed.~~

~~Commerce Secretary Sawyer says that if we do not have an all-out war "it may be well to set some limits to the expenditure of our money and resources."~~

IN WASHINGTON,

The Senate Internal Security Committee was told today, that in the 1930's the Russians chose Owen Lattimore to prepare the western nations to admit Mongolia to the League of Nations. Igor Bogolepov, described as a former Soviet foreign office official, who is now employed by our government abroad, was the witness. He says the late Maxim Litvinov, then foreign minister, recommended Lattimore for the job. Committee members say Mr. Lattimore has written several books on Mongolia. Bogolepov testified that much of the material in books by Americans about Russia, was originally prepared by the Soviet foreign office. He said the Russians used the Soviet Council of the Instiutte of Pacific Relations to get military information from other countries, and to spread ideas the Russians wanted to spread.

The House committee investigating tax scandals was told today that Joseph D. Nunan, Jr, former commissioner of Internal Revenue, is too ill to appear before the committee tomorrow. Chairman King says "this type of behavior..illness when called to testify--is now assuming epidemic proportions." He says the committee will not wind up its operations until its heard all the witnesses it wants to testify.

Today, Frank Nathan of Miami Beach, testified that in 1948 he was looking through a War Assets Administration brochure.. came across an announcement, that a government aluminum plant in California was to be sold. He telephoned Joseph Labowitz, a New York junk dealer. Nathan said that from the single phone call he and Labowitz made 57-thousand dollars..each.

The Senate Judiciary Committee today decided to hold hearings on the fitness of Judge McGrannery to be attorney general. Chairman Mc Carran has also asked the F.B.I. for a complete report on Mr. McGrannery. McCarran says he knows of no protests against the man the president has chosen to succeed J. Howard Mc Grath. Today, Mc Grath left his office after telling 2-thousand Justice Department employes: "you are working for a great administration, and a great president." Although fired by the President, Mr. Mc Grath was supposed to stay on the job until the Senate confirmed Judge McGrannery. He said he is leaving now because he no longer can make "objective decisions."

The Red Cross warned today that because of unprecedented mountain snows, that are now melting, the nation may suffer the worst series of floods in more than 70 years. The threatened areas are: the Missouri River basin.. the Rio Grande region.. New England.. Central California, Utah, and the the Lake Erie and Lake Huron areas. The Red Cross says : if these regions have continued warm spells, day and night, or if they have heavy sustained rains, major floods will undoubtedly develop.

Good weather is forecast for Illinois tomorrow... where Senator Taft, and Harold Stassen, are both on the presidential primary ballot. Eisenhower supporters predict The General will draw a substantial write-in vote.

In Paris today, Senator Lodge, leader of the General's campaig n, PREDICTED [redacted] that Ike will go to the Republican convention in July with "well over 500 votes",,, Nomination requires 603.

It rained hard in Korea today..keeping ground action to a minimum. Most planes were grounded. The truce negotiators met for seven minutes.. briefly restated some of their positions and adjourned for another day.

Edward R. Murrow: April 7, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

During the last couple of weeks the Russians have said and done certain things that may be highly significant. There is no clear line to be drawn between Russian policy and Russian propaganda. Both are devious, subject to sudden reversals, and fraught with apparent inconsistency. Let's first examine the evidence.

The Russians came forth with a proposal for the unity, re-armament and independence of Germany. Marshall Stalin said he didn't think war was any nearer than it was in '50 or '51. The Marshal had a conversation with the retiring Indian Ambassador in Moscow, and that diplomat spoke of the need for a high level conference of the leaders of the great powers; apparently quoted Stalin in saying that there was no question that could not be solved. The Communist negotiators at Panmunjom appeared to bend a little, were on the surface at least inclined to make a few concessions. At the same time the whole apparatus of communist propaganda was turned loose in a really unprecedented campaign of hate and vilification against this country, with the claim that we are using germ warfare against China and North Korea.

At the same time a Soviet spokesman in Moscow, addressing an international economic conference, painted a glowing picture of what could happen if normal trade should be re-established between the communist and non-communist worlds.

Those, all too briefly are the facts. I would suggest that certain conclusions can reasonably be drawn from these developments. The first is, that the Russians have changed their tactics - are attempting to ease the tension. They have presented the Germans with the alternative of integration with the West, or unity, independence and sovereignty. They have played upon the basic desires of millions of Germans, in both the eastern and western zones; and they have created new dissension in the ranks of the supporters of West Germany's Chancellor Adenauer. The Russians have said again, that peaceful co-existence with the West is possible. They have carefully refrained from any aggressive act, or threat, such as those that have driven through Congress every foreign aid bill since 1947.

At the International Trade Conference in Moscow they have held out the promise to shipbuilders in Italy, textile manufacturers in Britain, the industrialists of the Ruhr, to the French and to the Japanese, the prospect of trade with the communist-dominated world. It is an attractive offer, a bid to re-open traditional channels of trade for countries that need both markets and raw materials. The German industrialists will see visions of markets stretching all the way to the China Sea. The British can trade textiles for coarse grain and timber. The French can buy Silesian coal for less than they pay for American coal. The Japanese must trade with the mainland of Asia or be subsidized by the American taxpayer. The fact that Russia hasn't lived up to her trade agreements with Sweden, or even with her own satellites does not serve to dim the vision. Conflict of political ideology did not prevent scrap iron from being sold to Japan before Pearl Harbor; oil sold to communist China; and it did not prevent a group of British industrialists from negotiating with their counterparts in Germany two weeks before the war began in 1939.

Clearly the Russians are bent upon easing the tension. How then are we to explain their fierce propaganda campaign on the subject of germ warfare. It is not aimed at us or our Western allies. It is rather designed to thicken the layer of hate and mistrust that they are spreading over the peoples they control. The Russians play simultaneously upon the ignorance and nationalism of illiterate masses in Asia - upon the desire of Germans for national unity, independence and the removal of the armies of occupation. At the same time they attempt to relax the tension in the West and to hold out the prospect of the restoration of normal commerce.

A lull in the West, an offer to talk, confusion in Germany, increased hatred toward the West in Asia, offers of trade with the communist world; a formidable, and at least partially effective, set of proposals. They have for the time being, it seems, regained the diplomatic and propaganda initiative for the Soviet Union. But it would be unwise to regard all this as reflecting any basic change in Russian objectives. It represents a versatile and perhaps patient program — But no matter how often Stalin says the two worlds can live in peace - that everything can be settled by high level talks; no matter what offers are made to the Germans, or to the traders of the Western world, the Russian objective - their first article of faith - must be the conquest of the world for communism. Their purpose is as inflexible as our own. This latest series of moves contains nothing to indicate that their goal has altered. They merely demonstrate that they are employing, with considerable skill, new and flexible means of attempting to achieve their ultimate objective.

The Russians, obviously, are not unaware that nations, as well as armies move ahead on their stomachs. In their long-range planning for renewed trade, the Russians seem to agree with Thomas Jefferson's contention that "the selfish spirit of commerce, feels no passion or principle but that of gain." They also seem to be taking a page out of Alexander Pope who said:"What war can ravish, commerce can bestow. And he returns a friend, who came a foe."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Tuesday - April 8, 1952

This is the news:

The President will speak to the nation tonight at 10;30 p.m., eastern standard time. His talk, which will be heard over most of these stations, will be concerned with the steel dispute. At the moment, industry, union, and government officials expect the strike to start as scheduled. (at one minute after midnight) Acting Mobilization Director Steelman says plans have been made for the President to seize the industry, as soon as it is clear no agreement is possible. The industry says it will challenge such seizure in the courts. At the moment, Mr. Steelman thinks there is "a possibility" of a settlement by midnight. Earlier in the day, Nathan Feinsinger, of the Wage Stabilization Board, said that if he were a gambling man "I would not bet against a settlement." Mr. Feinsinger has been meeting here in New York with both sides. Phil Murray, the Union president, and John A. Stephens, the chief industry negotiator, had a private 30 minute conference. After that Mr. Murray said:" It is, as it was." Already an estimated 100-thousand men have been laid off because of the threat of the strike..or its premature start in some plants. Railroads have made their plans to lay off workers if the strike starts at midnight.

The telephone strike went into a second day with leaders of the 68-thousand strikers threatening to set-up nation-wide picket lines tomorrow. This could cause a much greater disruption of service than HAS OCCURRED so far. Federal mediators are now on their way to Detroit, to try to settle the deadlocked negotiations there. If this is settled the whole dispute which stretches to 43 states might be ended.

We now have the first early returns from the Illinois PRESIDENTIAL primary. There are 96-hundred precincts in the state.

We have reports from 56 of them. They show: Taft... 29-hundred votes

Stassen 400 votes and 223 write-in votes for Eisenhower.

2A

In the same precincts, Senator Kefauver, whose name is on the ballot, has 39-hundred votes. Governor Stevenson's name has been written-in 14 times.

Senator Lodge, leader of the Eisenhower campaign, left Paris for home today. He told reporters that his visit had been very successful, very encouraging. He would say nothing about reports that General Eisenhower has sent a letter of resignation to Washington. Neither the Defense Department nor the White House has any comment on this.

~~Democratic Presidential Candidate Russell said today he will have at least 300 and maybe 400 votes on the first ballot at the Democratic convention. It takes 686 to nominate. And a Republican Senator, Mundt of Mundt, South Dakota, said today that Senator Russell is the south's last great chance to place a southern statesman in the White House. Mundt spoke in Jackson, Mississippi.~~

The House today voted to cut 21-million dollars from the military budget: money that would have gone for research, the National Security Resources Board, and to set up universal military training.

In Korea: nine months of truce talks have now passed. Nothing was accomplished at the last meeting. But the Communists did propose that the negotiarrs consider as "one" question: their demand that Russia be considered a neutral nation for the purposes of inspection after the armistice; and our proposal that the enemy not be allowed to build military airfields after the armistice.

In Washington today, the House committee investigating the Justice Department decided to call Newbold Morris to testify on Thursday. He'll be asked about charges he made last week that "official Washington doesn't want to be investigated."

A Senate committee today heard William Bullitt, former ambassador to Moscow and Paris, charge that Owen Lattimore is either a "phony" Far Eastern expert or else ~~is~~ was interested in promoting the conquest of the Far East by Russia. Mr. Bullitt said that in Moscow in 1936 Lattimore told him he should urge President Roosevelt to recognize the independence of Outer Mongolia. Bullitt said he knew at the time that Outer Mongolia was completely dominated by Russian secret police. ~~Bullitt also said that in Paris, 13 years ago, the then Premier Daladier told him of two State Department employes named Hiss.. suspected of being Soviet agents. Mr. Bullitt said he never heard anything else against Donald Hiss, Alger's brother. The former ambassador also urged that Chinese Nationalists be sent from Formosa to Indo-China~~

[redacted]

Tax Commissioner Dunlap today asked Congress for more money to enforce the new gambling tax law.. or else to repeal the law. He says there's been "no appreciable enforcement" of the gambling tax law because Congress has failed to provide the money to hire agents.

Here in New York today, Frank Costello was fined 5-thousand dollars and sentenced to 18 months in prison for contempt of the Senate Crime Committee. Costello is free on bail, pending appeal. [redacted]

The U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals has turned down a second plea for mercy from Julius and Ethel Rosenberg. The court ruled they must be electrocuted for giving away war-time secrets to Russia.

Here in New York today, Leon and Anne Jolson took the oath of citizenship. They are both natives of Poland..were interned by the Germans during the war. The Jolsens came to this country in 1947..without a penny. They borrowed 2-thousand dollars and Mr. Jolsen organized a sewing machine COMPANY. Last year it did 10-million dollars worth of business. One of the first things Leon Jolsen did, after taking the oath today, was to give Columbia University 10-thousand dollars.. for a fellowship for displaced men and women and refugees. He told reporters he was greatly moved when no one questioned him about his race or religion in this country.

In Texas, Liet. General Hoge early today cancelled a scheduled parattroop jump because of high winds. The order never was received by the commanders of the jump. So three hours later 31-hundred men of the 508th Regimental Combat Team jumped.. the largest mass jump since the last war. (One man was killed when his chute failed to open.) Many of our top generals, in the manuver area to witness the jump, did not know it was being carried out, until after it had started. Two fighter planes in the operation collided.. one pilot was killed.. the other parachuted to safety.

In France today, Premier Pinay won ten confidence votes, and approval of his budget. It calls for almost four billions for defense.

Edward R. Murrow: April 8, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

Juliana Louise Emma Maria Wilhelmina of Orange Nassau, Queen of the Netherlands, today received an honorary degree from Columbia University which stands upon soil that was once Dutch territory. Queen Juliana is the head of a devout, industrious, liberty-loving and enlightened nation. She has been making a number of speeches in this country - (writes most of them herself.) The speeches have been brief, and in a season of ~~great~~ Much speech-making, restrained, direct (and marked with the assurance of one who is not running for office.)

Today Queen Juliana continued what appears to be her crusade against the western world's attachment to material values. She even dared to say that man has a soul, and he ought to do some thinking about it. The Queen's main complaint was about our drift toward specialization, the tendency to pin down, to classify, to make systems and catalogues, and to strive after perfection, and so specialists are needed to look after every section of life. Here we meet the danger of mistaking details for essence. Queen Juliana seemed to be saying, in the American vernacular, that we are tending to learn more and more about less and less. She said: "We become specialized so much, that we are educated to become brains on wheels. You see brains carried by the wheels of the subway. And you see brains behind big cigars, driving along in luxurious cars, carried by the wheels to their highly restricted jobs. Poor exploited experts, with some very conventional and poor remains of a heart, and even less of a soul. We are in danger of becoming little objects, with no purpose. This means weakness for society. It is a form of disintegration, like a planet which has become grit and dust. The substance has gone. When every man and woman regains the notion of being somebody, each a unique personality, like nobody else, each with a task toward society, then we will be on the right path. Then democratic society will be much stronger. It will be much better armed against every sort of menace. If it consists of members invested with the dignity of the human being, it could itself gain dignity."

The people of the Netherlands set great store on human dignity. Their country is proof that a nation's greatness is not measured by size. The Dutch are a very steady people, some call them dull - but they have always struck me as a people who have made a bargain, and reached a complete understanding with their own conscience. They do not require to consult others as to what that conscience dictates.

The present Queen's mother was undoubtedly one of the most beloved monarchs in Europe. You would not have picked her out of a crowd as a Queen, but rather as a somewhat formidable person, who set a good table, maintained strict discipline in her home - a good person to take your troubles to. She once troubled this reporter considerably. During the war she was to receive an honorary degree, by radio, from Rutgers University. Queen Wilhelmina arrived at Broadcasting House in London, to be greeted by a group of dignitaries, and offered a cup of tea. She declined all formality and the tea, and with a gesture and glance which reduced this reporter to the status of knee pants, she said: "We must to work. Let us rehearse." We repaired to the studio. The Queen read her acceptance speech in perfect English. And at the end of it she said: "Now you must criticize. What mistakes did I make?" I asserted that her diction and delivery were perfect, and that my fellow-countrymen would have not the least difficulty in understanding every word. But the Queen replied: "I asked you to criticize; please do so." Attempting to be responsive to the royal demand, I said: "Well, Your Majesty, that one word, the name of the University, Rutgers, it seemed to me you pronounced it "Rukers". She pinned me to the wall with a glance, and said: "Perhaps I should know how to pronounce that word. It is a Dutch word." And then she smiled and said: "But if your countrymen will understand it better, I will mispronounce my own language." She did, too, called it Rutgers.

The attitude of the Dutch - a nation, small, civilized and almost defenceless - can be summed up in the words of an ancestor of the present Queen, William the Silent, who said: "It is not necessary to hope, in order to undertake; nor is it necessary to succeed in order to persevere."

Murrow: April 8, 1952. WORD FOR TODAY

The Dutch are not lacking in either courage or pride. ~~Their character is reflected in their Queen.~~ In her speech today, Juliana put into practice advice given by Montaigne more than 250 years ago when he said: "Be not ashamed to say what you are not ashamed to think." She and her people also know well what James Allen meant when he said: "Whether you be a man or a woman, you will never do anything in this world without courage. It is the greatest quality of the mind next to honor."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Wednesday - April 9, 1952

This is the news:

Very little steel was produced in this country today. The C.I.O. steelworkers, who called off their threatened strike last night, generally found that the industry was not prepared to put them TO work. Some plants called in maintenance men to get ready.. others said, first, they would see how the industry fared in its test of government seizure. Later, they announced that afternoon and evening shifts would go to work.

Three companies: Republic, Bethlehem and Youngstown, challenged the President's seizure of the steel industry in a Washington district court. The steel people argued: they were being deprived of their constiutional rights.. AND would suffer "irreperable damages" unless the court granted them a temporary injunction.. (prvented the government from seizing their mills) But Judge Alexander Holtzoff disagreed. He said an injunction should not be invoked, unless there's a very strong reason for it. He said he was "doubtful, to say the least, whether a federal court has authority to issue an injunction against the President". (who ordered the seizure) Further, he said, the industry had not proved that it would suffer heavy damages if the government took over the plants. While this hearing was going on the President, in effect, invited Congress to "establish specific terms and conditions" by law for government operation of the steel mills. Mr. Truman said [redacted] he does not believe any immediate action by Congress is necessary. But, he said, Congress faces at least three possibilities: "maybe Congress will feel" the industry's demands for "exhorbitant price increases" should be granted. "Maybe Congress will feel" the steelworkers should be forced to stay on the job without a contract. "Maybe Congress will feel" the industry should be permitted to shut down..(with the danger that means to the defense program.) Mr. Truman said: he does not believe Congress will favor any of these courses. But that is a matter for Congress to determine.

~~Republican Senators attacked the President's order of last night as having "the flavor of totalitarian philosophy" and usurping his powers." The message [illegible] this.~~

~~In the nation's steel mills most members of the Steelworkers union found the gates to their jobs locked when they reported for work this morning. They told reporters: the industry was striking against the~~

~~government, they were being looked only, but later in the day a number of mills announced they were ready to resume normal operations.~~

~~In Washington,~~ Defense Mobilizer ~~William~~ STEELMAN met with steel and union representatives for 75 minutes..discussing how to get the mills back into production. And the Industry announced that Clarence B. Randall, president of Inland Steel, would reply to the President's message of last night, with a radio talk tonight. It will be heard over most of these stations at 10;~~00~~ 45 p.m. eastern standard time.

The telephone strike spread across the nation today. Striking Western Electric installers were ordered to set up picket lines at phone company plants. And Joseph Bierne, president of the C.I.O. ~~communication~~ communications workers, told his 300-thousand union members not to cross the lines. In a number of cities, union members who are not on strike, took a few hours off to attend mass meetings in sympathy with the strikers. We have no adequate report at the moment on just how effective these tactics have been .

The Western Union strike, went into another day with company President Marshal accusing strike leaders of trying to throw the company into government ownership.

While strikes were keeping many people from work, the weather was acting up in a number of states, creating more work and suffering for thousands of people. An earthquake shook parts of seven states in the southwest and midwest.. from Des Moines, Iowa, to Austin, Texas. The Missouri River, in its worst flood in 71 years, has forced more than 11-hundred persons out of Pierre, the capital of South Dakota, and neighboring Fort Pierre. In Iowa, the National Guard has been called on to fight the Missouri river.. floods are sweeping south across thousands of acres of Iowa and Nebraska farmland.

In Washington today the House voted to limit defense spending to 46-billions in the year starting July first. The House ordered a nine per cent cut in the President's military budget. Representative Mahon of Texas, leading the Administration battle, says this will wreck the defense build-up and "sow the seeds of another war."

The House voted unanimously to cite Henry W. Grunewald for contempt of Congress. Grunewald, claimed no privilege against incriminating himself.. just refused to answer questions ABOUT HIS INCOME.

Newbold Morris, fired last week as the government's corruption hunter, told reporters in Washington today he made a mistake when he called Federal Judge McGranery a "real whitewasher." Mr. Morris publicly apologized to the man the President named to be the new attorney general.

Senator Taft won what he called "a smashing victory" in yesterday's Illinois primary. With almost all votes counted, Taft has 862-thousand to 146-thousand for Harold Stassen and 135-thousand write-in votes for General Eisenhower. Senator Taft told reporters this "eradicates the Minnesota write-in vote, ballyhooed so vigorously by the Internationalist press." He said "It's not an easy task to defeat a peopular war-time general in Successive elections"..meaning Wisconsin, Nebraska and Illinois.

Senator Lodge, the Eisenhower campaign manager, says: "We were not involved. This doesn't mean a thing. There was no direct appeal for a write-in for Eisenhower." I'd like to discuss some other Lodge views in a minute.

The American Civil Liberties Union today sent a complaint to the Federal Communications Commission charging CBS, NBC, ABC, and the Dumont Television network with "blacklisting" performers for "real or alleged associations and beliefs."

In Korea today, a United Nations negotiator said the allies "absolutely will not trade" with the enemy negotiators. The Communists suggest they would give up their demand to have Russia on a "neutral" inspection team if we would permit them to build airfields after an armistice.

The Pentagon reports another 178 casualties in Korea.. a total now of 107-thousand.

Edward R. Murrow: April 9, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

Senator Cabot Lodge, political leader of the Eisenhor for President movement, is back from Paris. He had prolonged political conversations with the General. (He thinks we'll know soon, when the General will come back.)

Senator Dirksen had cabled Senator Lodge a series of questions, asking for the General's "unequivocal statement" on them. The Illinois Republican wanted to know the General's stand on the Taft-Hartley law, increase or reduction in Social Security benefits, government spending, a compulsory federal fair employment practises commission; also wanted to know Eisenhower's attitude on Truman's foreign policy, and military spending, tax rates, the Brannan Farm Plan, and socialized medicine. Senator Lodge said the Dirksen cable didn't reach him before he left Paris, and he implied that it wouldn't have made any difference if it had. Lodge thought Dirksen and his questions were just a political trick; made Dirksen undignified, and he shouldn't do it. Senator Lodge said he wouldn't presume to answer the questions for General Eisenhower. Lodge said: "We know more of where General Eisenhower stands on the great issue, the real living issue of our time - the organization of a durable peace - than we know of any other candidate." "That" said Senator Lodge "is what counts. That's why people have so much confidence in the General."

And then Senator Lodge volunteered the comment that we can reduce expenses, reduce taxes, end inflation, end the concentration of power in Washington, end the casualty lists in Korea, and stop the anxiety in every home, once a durable peace has been attained. "That", he said, "is the great issue of our time, and we know where the General stands on that." The Senator is of course correct. The General is for peace. So far as we know, all the other candidates are too. General Eisenhower has stated his formula for peace in these words: "First, justice, freedom and opportunity for all men. Second, international understanding. Third, disarmament. Fourth, a respected United Nations." That is a formula with which most candidates, of both Parties, would probably agree.

Senator Lodge said he had briefed General Eisenhower on the political situation. And he added: "I was bold enough to suggest to him that he never go out of character, because the people like him for himself." That phrase, "never go out of character", is of course subject to varying interpretations. But my information is that Senator Lodge, in using it, described the pre-Convention strategy that will be followed by the Eisenhower supporters. When the General returns home he will probably make three or four major speeches of rather general nature, outlining his philosopy of government and the relation of the citizen to the state. He will attempt to remain aloof from the details of partisan debate - not committing himself upon the highly controversial issues raised in Senator Dirksen's cable, as well as others the Senator did not raise.

It will of course be the strategy of General Eisenhower's opponents in the Republican Party - and it will be the objective for certain reporters who are not the spokesmen for any Party - to smoke the General out as to where he stands on a substantial number of domestic issues. It may be, as some ~~commentators~~ Political Experts claim, that it doesn't matter where a candidate stands before election, because that's no sure guide as to what he'll do after he's elected. Nevertheless, the process of trying to pin the General down should be both interesting and informative.

For the time being at least, the General's advisors would seem to have agreed that they should try to keep him above the battle.

Occasionally Secretary of State Acheson attempts to define the nature of our battle against communist aggression. He did so again today, and with no easy optimism. He said: "The free world is making ~~XXXXXXXXXXX~~ discouragingly slow economic progress. In this field there is much to discourage one. Trade barriers are as stiff as they were twelve years ago. The climate for international investments is not only bad but is getting worse." Mr. Acheson said: "Communism is hitting the free world hard, with two basic ideas. The first that misery is not pre-ordained and that something can be done about it. And second, that independence for many colonial peoples is within reach." Certainly those two ideas are the basic communist appeal in Asia, Africa and the Middle East. They have produced a rising appetite for change. We cannot deny the existence of the appetite. We may not be able to control or ration it. Mr. Acheson defined it in clear and simple language. The communist and non-communist worlds are competing for the allegiances of those parts of the world not yet committed to either camp. This competition will continue and intensify, , whether it is peace or war.

The Spring fever of politics is with us. And the concerted campaign to force candidates to "face the issues and speak up" is on. Those seeking office are apt to feel the way Oscar Wilde did when he said: "Questions are never indiscreet, but answers sometimes are." Those trying to evaluate the candidates probably would agree with Lincoln, who once remarked: "I fear explanations explanatory of things explained."

Good Night and Good Luck.

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

WEDNESDAY - APRIL 9, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Very little steel was produced in this country today. The C.I.O. steelworkers, who called off their threatened strike last night, generally found that the industry was not prepared to put them to work. Some plants called in maintenance men to get ready: others said, first, they would see how the industry fared in its test of government seizure. Later, they announced that afternoon and evening shifts would go to work.

Three companies - Republic, Bethlehem and Youngstown - challenged the President's seizure of the steel industry in a Washington district court. The steel people argued: they were being deprived of their constitutional rights, and would suffer "irreperable damages" unless the court granted them a temporary injunction, (prevented the Government from seizing their mills). But Judge Alexander Holtzoff disagreed. He said an injunction should not be invoked unless there's a very strong reason for it. He said he was "doubtful, to say the least, whether a federal court has authority to issue an injunction against the President," (who ordered the seizure). Further, he said, the industry had not proved that it would suffer heavy damages, if the government took over the plants. While this hearing was going on the President, in effect, invited Congress to "establish specific terms and conditions" by law, for government operation of the steel mills. Mr. Truman said he does not believe any immediate action by Congress is necessary. But, he said, Congress faces at least three possibilities: "maybe Congress will feel" the industry's demands for "exhorbitant price increases" should be granted; "maybe Congress will feel" the steelworkers should be forced to stay on the job without a contract; "maybe Congress will feel" the industry should be permitted to shut down - with the danger that means to the defense program. Mr. Truman said he does not believe Congress will favor any of these courses. But that is a matter for Congress to determine.

Defense Mobilizer Steelman met with steel and union representatives for 75 minutes, discussing how to get the mills back into production. And the industry announced, that Clarence B. Randall, president of Inland Steel, would reply to the President's message of last night, with a radio talk tonight. It will be heard over most of these stations at 10:45 p.m. Eastern Standard Time.

The telephone strike spread across the nation lines at phone company plants. And Joseph Bierne, president of the C.I.O. communications workers told his 300-thousand union members not to cross the lines. In a number of cities, union members who are not on strike, took a few hours off to attend mass meetings in sympathy with the strikers. We have no adequate report at the moment on just how effective these tactics have been.

The Western Union strike went into another day with company President Marshal accusing strike leaders of trying to throw the company into government ownership.

While strikes were keeping many people from work, the weather was acting up in a number of states, creating more work and suffering for thousands of people. An earthquake shook parts of seven states in the southwest and midwest from Des Moines, Iowa, to Austin, Texas. The Missouri River, in its worst flood in 71 years, has forced more than 11-hundred persons out ot Pierre, the capital of South Dakota, and neighboring Fort Pierre. In Iowa, the National Guard has been called on to fight the Missouri River: floods are sweeping south across thousands of acres of Iowa and Nebraska farmland.

In Washington today, the House voted to limit ddfense spending to 46-billions in the year starting July first. The House ordered a nine per cent cut in the President's military budget. Representative Mahon of Texas, leading the Administration battle, says this will wreck the defense build-up and "sow the seeds of another war."

The House voted unanimously to cite Henry W. Grunewald for contempt of Congress. Grunewald claimed no privilete against incriminating himself; just refused to answer questions about his income.

Newbold Morris, fired last week as the government's corruption hunter, told reporters in Washington today he made a mistake when he called Federal Judge McGranery a "real whitewasher." Mr. Morris publicly apologized to the man the President named to be the new attorney general.

Senator Taft won what he called "a smashing victory" in yesterday's Illinois primary. With almost all votes counted, Taft has 862-thousand to 146-thousand for Harold Stassen and 135-thousand write-in votes for General Eisenhower. Senator Taft told reporters this "eradicates the Minnesota write-in vote ballyhooed so vigorously by the Internationalist press." He said: "It's not an easy task to defeat a popular war-time general in successive elections" - meaning Wisconsin, Nebraska and Illinois.

Senator Lodge, the Eisenhower campaign manager, says: "We were not involved. This doesn't mean a thing. There was no direct appeal for a write-in for Eisenhower." I'd like to discuss some other Lodge views in a minute.

The American Civil Liberties Union today sent a complaint to the Federal Communications Commission charging CBS, NBC, ABC and the Dumont Television network with "blacklisting" performers for "real or alleged associations and beliefs."

In Korea today, a United Nations negotiator said the allies "absolutely will not trade" with the enemy negotiators. The communists suggest they would give up their demand to have Russia on a "neutral" inspection team if we would permit them to build airfields after an armistice.

The Pentagon reports another 178 casualties in Korea - a total now of 107-thousand.

Senator Cabot Lodge, political leader of the Eisenhower for President movement, is back from Paris. He had prolonged political conversations with the General. (He thinks we'll know soon when the General will come back.)

Senator Dirksen had cabled Senator Lodge a series of questions, asking for the General's "unequivocal statement" on them. The Illinois Republican wanted to know the General's stand on the Taft-Hartley law, increase or reduction in Social Security benefits, government spending, a compulsory Federal Fair Employment Practices Commission; also wanted to know Eisenhower's attitude on Truman's foreign policy, and military spending, tax rates, the Brannan Farm Plan, and socialized medicine. Senator Lodge said the Dirksen cable didn't reach him before he left Paris, and he implied that it wouldn't have made any difference if it had. Lodge thought Dirksen and his questions were just a political trick; made Dirksen undignified, and he shouldn't do it. Senator Lodge said he wouldn't presume to answer the questions for General Eisenhower. Lodge said: "We know more of where General Eisenhower stands on the great issue, the real living issue of our time - the organization of a durable peace - than we know of any other candidate." "That," said Senator Lodge, "is what counts. That's why people have so much confidence in the General."

And then Senator Lodge volunteered the comment that we can reduce expenses, reduce taxes, end inflation, end the concentration of power in Washington, end the casualty lists in Korea, and stop the anxiety in every home, once a durable peace has been attained. "That," he said, "is the great issue of our time, and we know where the General stands on that." The Senator is of course correct. The General is for peace. So far as we know, all the other candidates are too. General Eisenhower has stated his formula for peace in these words: "First, justice, freedom and opportunity for all men. Second, international understanding. Third, disarmament. Fourth, a respected United Nations." That is a formula with which most candidates of both Parties would probably agree.

Senator Lodge said he had briefed General Eisenhower on the political situation; and he added: "I was bold enough to suggest to him that he never go out of character, because the people like him for himself." That phrase, "never go out of character," is of course subject to varying interpretations. But my information is that Senator Lodge, in using it, described the pre-Convention strategy that will be followed by the Eisenhower supporters. When the General returns home, he will probably make three or four major speeches of rather general nature, outlining his philosophy of government and the relation of the citizen to the state. He will attempt to remain aloof from the details of partisan debate - not committing himself upon the highly controversial issues raised in Senator Dirksen's cable, as well as others the Senator did not raise.

It will of course be the strategy of General Eisenhower's opponents in the Republican Party - and it will be the objective for certain reporters, who are not the spokesmen for any Party - to smoke the General out, as to where he stands on a substantial number of domestic issues. It may be, as some political experts claim, that it doesn't matter where a candidate stands before election, because that's no sure guide as to what he'll do after he's elected. Nevertheless, the process of trying to pin the General down would be both interesting and informative.

For the time being at least, the General's advisors would seem to have agreed that they should try to keep him above the battle.

Occasionally, Secretary of State Acheson attempts to define the nature of our battle against communist aggression. He did so again today, and with no easy optimism. He said: "The free world is making discouraging slow economic progress. In this field there is much to discourage one. Trade barriers are as stiff as they were twelve years ago. The climate for international investments is not only bad, but is getting worse." Mr. Acheson said: Communism is hitting the free world hard, with two basic ideas. The first, that misery is not preordained and that something can be done about it. And second, that independence for many colonial peoples is within reach." Certainly those two ideas are the basic communist appeal in Asia, Africa and the Middle East. They have produced a rising appetite for change. We cannot deny the existence of the appetite. We may not be able to control or ration it. Mr. Acheson defined it in clear and simple language. The communist and non-communist worlds are competing for the allegiance of those parts of the world not yet committed to either camp. This competition will continue and intensify, whether it is peace or war.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: The spring fever of politics is with us, and the concerted campaign to force candidates to "face the issues and speak up," is on. Those seeking office are apt to feel the way Oscar Wilde did when he said: "Questions are never indiscreet, but answers sometimes are." Those trying to evaluate the candidates probably would agree with Lincoln, who once remarked: "I fear explanations explanatory of things explained."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Thursday - April 10, 1952

This is the news:

The government has lifted its ban on the shipment of steel to manufacturers who use it for consumer goods. Commerce Secretary Sawyer says steel productic "will very shortly be back to normal." He also told reporters that for the time being existing rates of pay and working conditions will continue.. Acting Mobilization Director Steelman met with industry and union leaders today..but had no progress to report. Four steel companies asked Federal Judge Pine in Washington for a quick hearing on their request for a permanent injunction. (to prevent the government from operating the seized steel mills) Government attorneys said they need time to work out their case. The industry lawyers charged the government with "stalling." (Judge Pine granted more time to the government lawyers.)

The President said today he will not try to force a [redacted] settlment, as long as both sides are conferring in Washington. He was asked if he will put into effect the Wage Stabilization Board's recommendations for pay increases for the workers. He said he'll cross that bridge when he comes to it. Mr. Truman refused to comment on last night's speech by Clarence B. Randall, the president of Inland Steel.

Mr. Randall had charged that the President, in seizing some 90 steel mills, had carried out "a corrupt political deal with the C.I.O and Phil Murray." Mr. Murray, president of the Steelworkers, called Mr. Randall "a prevaricator of the lowest type"..said Randall had insulted "the President , me, and thousands of steel workers."

The telephone strike spread today. Officials of the C.I.O. Communications workers say nearly 200-thousand phone workers were off their jobs. They were honoring picket lines, set-up by 16-thousand Western Electric Company strikers. Some of the picket lines were set up only long enough to disrupt normal business; others were maintained during the day. The American Telehpone and Telegraph Company says service by its long lines division was "fair to normal."

The president of the C.I.O. oil workers..O.A. Knight..today accused the oil industry of failing to co-operate with the government in an attempt to avert a nation-wide oil strike. Both sides were to meet in St. Louis with a panel of the Wage Stabilization Board. Industry representatives did not appear. Knight said:"Turn us loose and we'll get the job done on the picket line." An estimated 250-thousand C.I.O., A.F. of L. and independent oil workers are demanding a 25 cents an hour wage increase. The threatened strike was postponed for a second time when the President intervened last March.

The President today refused to tell reporters whether he has notice that General Eisenhower is about to resign his Nato post..or whether he has the general's letter of resignation on his desk. A high official in the general's presidential campaign says he has every reason to believe such a letter is now in the White House or the Pentagon. Another "high official"..this one on the NATO staff.. says he doesn'T think General Eisenhower will resign until he's FIRST told the NATO council at its meeting a week from Monday.

The President told the reporters he would not accept a draft for re-nomination.. doesn't know if he'll go to the convention..but will support whoevere the party selects. He said he would express no candidate preference .(at this time.)

Eisenhower TODAY won 20 of the 22 delegates from the state of Kansas. The other two went to Taft. That makes the national convention count: 187 delegates for Taft and 80 for Eisenhower.

[redacted]

[redacted]

The President today asked the Senate to give up its historical right to approve the nominations of postmasters, U.S. marshals and customs officials. In three re-organization plans, the President proposed, that the Postmaster General appoint postmasters, under civil service regulations. The Attorney general would appoint U.S. Marshals, and the Secretary of the Treasury would name customs officials..all under civil service. The job would have to be done gradually, as present appointments end. The plans become effective unless either house votes against them within 60 days.

Newbold Morris told a House committee today that he cannot help its investigation of the Justice Department. He said his own investigation "never got off the ground." Morris says he "heard" that many cabinet members were prepared to resign rather than fill out his financial questionnaire. He said J. Edgar Hoover of the F.B.I. "knows where the bodies are buried" in the federal government.. "knows about the performance of anybody in government who has discretionary powers." Republican Representative Keating of New York asked Morris if he knew that six months ago the Justice Department was investigating Morris' connection with a tanker deal. Morris said: no.. never heard of it.

The Senate today voted 60 to nothing to continue its study of Senator Benton's demands that Senator Mc Carthy be thrown out of the Senate. Before the vote, McCarthy announced that he and his friends would vote to continue the inquiry. And, in turn, he demanded that a Senate committee investigate Senator Benton. McCarthy wants the committee too look into Benton's taxes.. business. campaign expenditures.. and service in the State Department. Benton said that since he started his move against McCarthy he has been subjected to "threats, intimidation and blacmail of one type or another." [redacted]

The Government tonight issued new ceiling regulations for bakery products. (It will probably mean a slight increase in the retail price of bread, pies, cakes and pastries.)

The Missouri River has driven additional thousands from their homes all the way from Pierre in South Dakota down to Omaha and Council, Bluffs, Nebraska.

In Korea, the truce negotiarors held a six minute meeting. The last five meetings have consumed a total of thirty minutes and thirty seconds..with no progress to report. [redacted]

A Bolivian radio broadcast says the revolt against the military government has been defeated. Chilean sources say 200 persons have been killed in a battle that's still going on. There are no direct reports from Bolivia.

Edward R. Murrow: April 10, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

Our argument with Russia about the most important question in Europe - the future of Germany - continues. And it doesn't seem to be getting anywhere. The Russians have answered our latest note, and they appear to have made only one minor concession. The Western Powers want a United Nations Commission to study the possibility of free elections in both the east and west zones of Germany. The Russian reply says this should be done by representatives of the Big Four, which presumably means that they would exercise a veto, as they have done in Berlin and in Austria. The Russians want a united Germany, they say, with its own independent army and air force. What we have been trying to get is twelve German divisions as part of the European Army. The Russians say the eastern frontier of Germany, that is the Oder-Niesser Line, is fixed. We say that can't be settled until there is a peace treaty with Germany.

The Russians have reversed their position on the matter of the re-armament of Germany. They are now willing to permit it. They explain this by saying that we have agreed that the Japanese should re-arm, so there's no sense in saying the Germans can't do the same thing.

This latest Russian Note repeats in most essentials everything contained in their communication of a month ago. It's as though the Russians were saying: "We meant what we said the first time, and we say it again." Moscow is clearly trying to play Germany and the Western Powers against each other. The Russians promise an unlimited German army and air force; but at the same time say that Germany can't regain her eastern provinces. On the surface these two offers would seem to cancel each other out. What the Russians are really saying, in the long-range view, is that if German aspirations should lead them to the West that would be all right. If a united and nationalist Germany should expand over France and the Low Countries, as the communists have done in China, that would suit Russian purpose admirably.

There is precedent for this fixing of one frontier but not another. Back in 1925 at Locarno, France and Germany agreed to fix the western frontiers of Germany. By implication this left Germany's eastern frontiers - those facing Russia and Poland - open for expansion. What the Russians are offering now is a sort of Locarno in reverse.

The Russians are accustomed to think in long-range terms. They know as well as anyone that the control of, or an alliance with Germany means the domination of all Western Europe. The Russians are offering national unity, independence, an army and air force, and the prospect of much trade with the communist world. All of these things the Germans want. They know that their country cannot be ~~XXXXXXXX~~ reunited peacefully without Russian consent.

At the moment the moderate forces under Chancellor Adenauer are in the saddle in Germany. They appear determined to set up a European defense community, and to work out a peace contract with the Western Powers. But the Germans must weigh the relative attractiveness of what is offered by the West, and what is offered by the Soviet Union. The current Russian peace offensive, if it is not handled with skill, could create so much confusion and irresolution in Western Europe and in Western Germany that Adenauer and his moderates would be unhorsed, thereby paving the way for those Germans who would - in what they believe to be their national self-interest - be delighted to make a deal with the Russians. If Germany should be lost to the West, there is then no possibility of an effective defense of Western Europe.

These exchanges of diplomatic Notes make rather dull reading, even for those accustomed to the double talk of diplomatic correspondence. But the stakes involved in this bidding for German favor and support are so enormous that Russian success in this move would mean that the rest of Europe would fall into their lap, probably without battle. The Russians know this, so do the Germans; and that is why there can be no stability in Europe, no real success for our foreign policy, no real ~~[illegible]~~ beef on the Skeleton of the European Army or the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, until the future of Germany is settled or at least charted. Germany has been the decisive factor in creating two world wars. And now - divided and defeated - Germany and German policy remain the pivot on which the history of the next few years will turn.

The Russians are using the best bait there is in international diplomacy: the appeal to nationalism. Somerset Maugham came pretty close to describing Russia's position, with regard to Germany, when he said:"Nations are governed by self-interest, but they prefer to believe that their aims are altruistic." And a former Nazi leader, Hans Frank once remarked:"Right is whatever profits a nation; wrong is whatever harms it."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Friday - April 11, 1952

This is the news:

General Eisenhower will be released from his European Command on June first. He will be returned to "inactive status" in the army, and, five weeks before the Republican national convention, will be free to take a more activie part in his campaign for the presidential nomination. The White House today released letters from, and to, the General. The first, from Eisenhower on April second.. (the first anniversary of his job at SHAPE,) requested that he be released. General Eisenhower wrote Defense Secretary Lovett "I consider the specific purposes for which I was recalled, to have been largely accomplished; the command is formed, the procedures established, and basic questions settled." The General requested "appropriate action to secure" his release. He noted this would give time for the selection of a successor, and for him to confer with that successor. Secretary Lovett wrote the General that all this has been arranged. White House Secretary Short says that in addition to these formal letters the President and the General have exchanged personal letters.. cordial letters. They were not made public. Mr. Short says he had no information today on who might be chosen to take over the command at SHAPE headquarters in France.

[redacted]

Gen Eisenhower [redacted] has already made plans for a tour of the capitals of the North Atlantic treaty countries before he returns home.

Tomorrow, Eisenhower has promised to tell reporters just what his plans are, militarily and politically.

His leading supporters in this country are happy that the General has decided to leave his military job. Senator Lodge calls it "welcome news to the American people." Senator Carlson says: "When the General arrives home he will discuss with our people the grave domestic and international problems confronting us." Senator Duff says Eisenhower's return will enable the people to see and hear him. Duff adds: "That ought to satisfy all demands."

Other presidential candidate are eager to have the General state his views. Harold Stassen says: "The public will await with interest his statements and actions." Senator Kefauver, the leading Democratic contender, says:"It is only fair and proper for Eisenhower to return, and state his views on the issues before the people."

Senator Taft has no comment, yet, on Eisenhower's return.

Democratic Representative Powell of New York said today he hopes that the Senate Labor Committee will invite Eisenhower to testify on his civil rights views, as soon as the General removes his unfirom. Powell had written Eisenhower asking for these views. He received a letter from the General saying he "simply could not find time to make the detailed studies and analysis, necessary to answer the questions" submitted by the Congressmen. The General also questioned "the propriety of an officer on active duty publicly discussing" the many issues Powell proposed.

Another letter from the General was released today..at least one paragraph from it. The treasurer of the Eisenhower campaign in New Jersey, says the General recently wrote a friend, that if he does received the Republican nomination "I am determined to lead the entire organization into a fight in which there will be no cessation, no rest, and no lack of intensity until the final decision is made."

On the Democratic side, the President told party workers today he is sure the Democratic convention will nominate "good" candidates.. and he thinks they will win in November. In a message published in the national party paper, the President says: "The Republicans will try to duck and dodge and divert the attention of the voters by slick propaganda and phony arguments." He believes the way to win is to fight a hard-hitting campaign.. and get the facts to the people in "plain and simple language."

Acting Defense Mobilizer Steelman made no head-way today in meetings with representatives of the steel industry and the C.I.O. steelworkers. The conferences will be resumed on Monday. Today the 170-man wage policy committee of the union met in Washington and aggreed that: "the patience of the steelworkers is not inexhuatisible." The union representatives says : "the time is overdue" for a settlement of their dispute on the basis of the recommendations made by the Wage Stabilization Board.

Another C.I.O. union... the Communication Workers... have called a top-strategy meeting in Washington tomorrow, to decide whether to call an all-out strike of telephone workers across the country. Earlier today 18-thousand workers at the Michigan Bell Telephone Company ended their five-day strike. They reached agreement with management on a almost 13 cents an hour pay boost. Joseph Bierne, national president of the Communications workers, said then that this "could serve as a pattern" for settling other phone disputes..."if the American Telehpone and Telegraph Company chooses." But apparently other Bell System companies refused to follow the terms of the Michigan agreement. So tonight a Union leader said Mr. Bierne called the top-strategy meeting to decide if the union should call a nation-wide strike similar to the one in 1947.

The Atomic Energy Committee announced today that it is planning a new one billion dollar plant to produce Uranium-235.. a key atomic substance. The commission is studying possible locations in the Ohio River Valley. This plant, which would take from three and a half to four years to build, would be spread over six thousand acres...need 45-hundred operating workers.

The minister-counselor of the Chinese embassy in Washington, today denied that either he or the military attache at the embassy signed 20-odd documents Senator Morse has introduced in the Congressional Record. The documents indicated that the two Chinese officials sought a "secret pipeline" to high Democratic party officials. The minister-counselor says the dispatches were actually signed by Nationalist General P.T. Mow, who was recently discharged. Chairman Karsten of the House executive expenditures committee wants a Congressional investigation, to determine if our aid to China has "been misued" to finance the China Lobby.

The House un-American Activities Committee today released secret testimony it took yesterday from Elia Kazan, the director of many Broadyway and Hollywood hits. Kazan says he was a Communist party member for about 19 months ending in 1936. He says he quit in disillusionment over Communist regimentation.

A Pan American airliner with 69 passengers aboard crashed off San Juan, porto Rico today. Rescue workers say there are 18 survivors... 12 dead... 39 missing. The pilot of the plane, Captain John C. Burn was among the survivors. He is the husband of the singer, Jane Froman. Nine years ago, Miss Froman was in a plane crash off Lisbon and was rescued by Captain Burn whom she later married.

In Korea the truce negotiators met for but 90 seconds today..the sixth quick meeting in as many days. (Allied spokesman feel the enemy is waiting for instructions from higher up.)

And in Bolivia, the right wing revolutionists now say they have control of the country, after a three-day revolt in which at least one thousand persons were killed... and two thousand wounded.

Edward R. Murrow: April 11, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

What follows is by way of one or two footnotes to today's Eisenhower story. The General is not committed, either by his own words or those of his managers, to come back and engage in any slam-bang pre-Convention campaign. He promises that if he is nominated he will give it everything he's got; but between now and the Chicago Convention, the way is left open for him to follow the strategy already agreed upon - a few speeches of general nature, the continued release of parts of letters written to anonymous friends, and the continued refusal to commit himself on specific issues,on the grounds that his duties in Europe have prevented him from having adequate opportunity to inform himself and to reach firm opinions on a wide variety of domestic issues.

It would appear that the pre-Convention strategy for the Eisenhower campaign was accurately described by Senator Lodge, who said he "must not go out of character," and by Paul Hoffman, who said "the office should seek the man rather than the man seek the office." One of the most interesting political questions for the month of June will be whether the General and his supporters can maintain successfully this attitude of aloofness and detachment - the refusal to engage in controversy and commitment about specific questions of public interest.

Private cables from France and Germany indicate that those two countries view the prospect of the General's departure with a mixture of regret and hope. The regret stems from the belief that his successor - whoever he may be - cannot employ the same combination of prestige and persuasiveness, that has caused the General to do such a remarkable job in a delicate situation, in the space of one year. / Both the French and the Germans think he understands their problems; believe that as President he would continue to give first priority to Europe, in American strategic planning. / The politically literate in both countries fear the nomination and election of Senator Taft, because they feel this would pave the way for a possible American withdrawal from Europe. That this might not happen under a Taft administration, does not serve to lessen the fears of Europeans. # Eisenhower's popularity is greater than Taft's in Europe, but the Europeans aren't going to vote. # There won't be any vote taken, either, on General Eisenhower's successor. Theoretically he will be chosen by the twelve member-nations of NATO. Actually the choice of Eisenhower's successor will be made by the President.

It is widely believed that General Eisenhower would like to see his

Chief of Staff, Lieutenant-General Gruenther, take over the job. Eisenhower has been doing everything he can to push Gruenther forward - expose him to the high officials of the other NATO nations, - sent him today to lunch with the Turkish Ambassador and the French Defense Minister, sent him to the last big conference of NATO at Lisbon. The betting on Eisenhower's successor spreads between Gruenther and Ridgway. Gruenther would not bring to the job the prestige of combat command. He does not have Eisenhower's charm or persuasiveness. He is essentially a planner and a thinker, with an extraordinarily clear and lucid mind.

Whoever wins the political nominations and the election, the Grand Alliance is fortunate, in being able to make its choice of Supreme Commander between two such able men as Gruenther and Ridgway.

General Eisenhower, if he gets the nomination, will find himself under attack from the Democratic opposition. And he will know what Thomas Jefferson meant when he said:"When a man assumes a public trust he should consider himself public property." Eisenhower's strategy may be to avoid detailed debate on specific issues, but it was Benjamin Franklin who pointed out:"As we must account for every idle word, so we must, for every idle silence."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Monday - April 14, 1952

This is the news:

The Red Cross says the Missouri River flood could become the most damaging and costly in our history. Brigadier General Don Shingler, army engineer for the river, says its "coming down with a rip and a roar.. we are in a lot of trouble.. the Missouri is at unprecedently dangerous levels." He's told the governors of Nebraska and Iowa: "We are on borrowed time." At the moment there are no reports of any lives lost... most people had ample warning of what was in store for them all along the river, from South Dakota to Missouri. But more than a million and a quarter acres of some of the richest farm land in the nation is now underwater. The Red cross estimated that the flood has "affected" 74-thousand people... 19-thousand families.. there is no reliable estimate on just how many people have lost their homes, how many have lost their jobs, because of the Missouri. ~~Whole towns have been abandoned. In some areas railroads are moving furniture and household goods to high and dry grounds along the Missouri.~~ The river has now broadened into a ten mile span, in places where you used to be able to throw a rock across.. a week ago. Hundreds of farms have been gobbled up. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has named the floodded areas of Nebraska and Iowa as "disaster areas".. that means people in these sections are eligible for emergency loans./ And AFTER the governors of Iowa and South Dakota appealed to the President for emergency aid, Mr. Truman allocated 250-thousand dollars to each state. Throughout the area there is a mass evacuation... Red Cross workers call it the greatest ever witnessed in this part of the Missouri Valley./ People are leaving their homes and their village streets by automobile, truck.. trains and on foot./ And while they stuggle to get away from the approaching flood waters, Air Force and Coast Guard planes and helicopters are flying into the flooded areas with Red Cross supplies..sandbags.. rescuing stranded victims.

At the moment, Sioux City, Iowa, appears to be in the biggest trouble. Art Smith has been covering that story for us in the city where--according to our last report--a fifth of its blocks were covered with water./ For more details, let's switch to Art Smith in the WNAX newsroom in Sioux City, Iowa.

(return cue..after 2 mins..

"At this moment Ed, we're watching, waiting and hoping for the best.)

One hundred Miles south of Sioux City.. which Art Smith has just described for us... the Omaha-Council Bluffs area is getting ready for what's expected to be the worst floods these cities, [redacted] with a combined population of 366-thousand residents, have ever experienced.

Here the crest is not expected until Thursday. But already in Council Bluffs...in Iowa... 25-thousand persons have been evacuated... all non-essential business places have been closed...schools are closed.. the Mayor has ordered the evacuation of three quarters of the city. And across the river in OMAHA [redacted]..in NEBRASKA [redacted]...five thousands residents have been evacuated. [redacted]

[redacted]

[redacted] Another mighty river, the Mississippi, is causing more trouble. Governor Anderson of Minnesota has appealed to the White House for federal aid for the flooded areas in his state. St. Paul is now experiencing the worst Mississippi flood in its history. [redacted] Flatlands for 15 miles along the river have been flooded in some areas. [redacted] The [redacted] sewage disposal plant that serves both St. Paul and Minneapolis has been knocked out... with sewage dumping into the Mississippi as it flows south. The municipal airport is under water. Flood stage in St. Paul is 14 feet. The last report we had put the river at 21 feet and 7 inches. [redacted].. with a crest of 22 feet and four inches expected by Thursday. [redacted]

In all nine states are suffering: Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska, North and South Dakota, Montana, Kansas [redacted] Missouri and Wisconsin...in what the Red Cross says could become the most damaging and costly floods in our history.

In Washington today, officials of the C.I.O. steelworkers and the steel industry conferred again with government negotiaors. All report "no change" in the steel dispute. The Senate Labor Committee says its going to investigate the President's seizure of the industry.

In Ohio, 16-thousand Bell Telephone workers settled their strike after a week of negotiations. They received pay boosts ranging from four to seven dollars a week. For a time striking Western Electric workers withdrew their picket lines from the Bell installations. But five hours later they were back. And officials of the C.I.O. Communications Workers say a settlement of the Western Electric strike is still far away.

The Interstate Commerce Commission today gave southern and western railroads permission to raise their freight rates nine per cent; eastern roads can increase their rates by six per cent. Its estimated this will cost shippers about 678-million dollars a year. [redacted]

[redacted]

The President [redacted] go [redacted] project.

The PRESIDENT TODAY

[redacted] praised Senator Tom Connally of Texas..who has decided not to run for re-election...as one who has made important contributions to our government. The Texas senator says he "does not desire to run again" and he's not "looking for, or responding to, any draft."

In Korea, the Monday truce negotiations lasted 15 seconds. Our chief negotiarors, Admiral Joy and Admiral Libby have now returned to the conference area after a week in Tokyo.

A leading supporter of General Eisenhower for president said today that "the Russians fear and respect" Eisenhower. Republican Senator Carlson of Kansas says the General has made it clear that he believes "the great middle way" is the American way to approach problems. ~~Another Eisenhower supporter, Senator Saltonstall of Massachusetts says it would be a good thing for the nation if, after the General returns home, he brings his position on major issues "up to date." Another Republican Senator Wallgren of Idaho, who supports Taft, says the General "completely has repudiated" his previous position that he would stay out of politics unless he received "a clear cut call" from the voters.~~

Tomorrow, the state of New Jersey holds its primary.. with Eisenhower..Taft..and Harold Stassen all on the Republican ballot. My colleage Edward P. Morgan has been spending some time in New Jersey. Ed, how do things across the river look to you?

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Monday, April 14, 1952
7:45-8:00 P.M.

MURROW: ... At the moment Sioux City, Iowa, appears to be in the biggest trouble. Art Smith has been covering that story for us in the city where, according to our latest reports, a fifth of its blocks are covered with water. For more details let's switch to Art Smith in the WNAX newsroom in Sioux City, Iowa.

SMITH: For the first time in days the people here have dared to open their eyes to the disaster about them. What they have seen has not been pleasant, and only now is the complete realization beginning to make an impression. Families stand in little groups, looking across the vast muddy water to a chimney. It marks their home. Mud-caked clothes are mute evidence of their struggle, but they lost to the Big Muddy. They aren't complaining. Too many others are in the same fix. But just as they fought its relentless rise, now they watch for any indication of recession - but the crest still holds. In their hearts they know it will be days, possibly weeks, before they can walk up to the dilapidated door they once called home.

You know this cross-section of distress that you're seeing is only a segment, that it's being duplicated every mile along the river. Like his city cousin, it's the farmer who is taking it on the chin, but his only means of livelihood, the soil, has been swept from his hand. Even the banter of two farmers, both of whom have lost their lands, has a hollow ring, as one says, "what you doin' - irrigatin'?"

Modern methods of rescue work here were just too much for one old couple. When the giant rotor of the helicopter set it down in a dry spot, near by, they just didn't have faith to step into the machine that promised rescue. They waited for the boat that might come later. It's what is yet to come that will really test the morale of these valiant workers, for the battle is not yet over. Red-eyed and haggard, some have worked unceasingly for seventy-two hours - but these dikes must be held. What is the limit of man's endurance? It hasn't been reached here yet. At this moment, Ed, we are watching, waiting and hoping for the best.

* * * * *

MURROW: Tomorrow the State of New Jersey holds its primary, with Eisenhower, Taft and Harold Stassen all on the Republican ballot. My colleague Edward P. Morgan has been spending some time in New Jersey.

Ed, how do things across the river look to you?

MORGAN: Confused, Ed. George Washington crossing the Delaware to surprise the British at Trenton some years ago could hardly have employed more subterfuge than rival Republican partisans in the current New Jersey primary campaign. The fight between Eisenhower and Taft factions has become a desperate one, with ugly overtones of deception and bitterness. So intense is the feeling that, in a way, the damage done to the State G.O.P. organization may be a more important result than whether the General or the Senator wins in tomorrow's voting. Harold Stassen is also on the Republican ballot, but his chances seem almost invisible.

Senator Kefauver is the only candidate formally entered on the Democratic side, but altho he may get a large popularity vote, the national scramble on the Democratic nomination will prevent his claiming clear control of the New Jersey delegation. Jersey delegates to the Chicago Presidential conventions do not have to commit themselves now.

The Republican fight came out into the open when Governor Alfred E. Driscoll endorsed General Eisenhower, putting much of the State G.O.P. organization behind him. Taft angrily protested that Driscoll had broken a pledge of neutrality. Driscoll denied any such pledge had ever been made. Taft then tried to withdraw his name from the ballot, but a state court ruled that he could not do so. He cancelled his formal campaign anyway. His opponents charged then that the campaign never stopped, that it simply went underground. Now it was the Senator's turn with the denials - and he made them. And so the acrimonious debate has spread like an infection, and it's got the R professional Republican politicians worried. As one seasoned G.O.P. leader put it to this reporter in Atlantic City yesterday, "we'd better save our strength for the Democrats. It's not good to let our people get so mad at each other than they won't turn out a big vote in the fall."

Neutral observers are almost impossible to find, but there is an inescapable feeling that Governor Driscoll's declaration for Eisenhower, some weeks ago, has done the General more harm than good, because of the internecine fight with the Taft forces that it touched off.

Tonite both sides are knocking down earlier predictions of strength, so they can try to claim triumph or, perhaps better said, explain away defeat. Driscoll now says 51% of the popular vote for Eisenhower would be a victory for their camp. That's a considerable retreat. Ex-Congressman Hartley, a Republican, who jointly wrote the Taft-Hartley Act, says that without a formal campaign it would be a miracle if Taft got 20%. For what they're worth, estimates of the sideline experts, so-called, give Eisenhower upwards of 60% of the popular vote, with perhaps 28 or more of the 38 G.O.P. convention delegates, the rest, to Taft. But as the Newark Star-Ledger shrewdly observes today, "this Republican rift in Jersey reflects a condition in the national party which, if not mended, could actually mean another Democratic victory in November." Tomorrow's results in New Jersey, Ed, may be not so much eyewash as eye-opener.

MURROW: That was my colleague Edward P. Morgan, who has been wandering about New Jersey for the last few days trying to get the temper of political climate there.

-30-

Ediphone trans./E. Scheiner

From time to time the nation concerns itself with the problems of flood control. But generally, it's not until we're experiencing some sort of ~~minor~~ crisis, that the clamour grows loud enough to be heard. Those in the path of the present floods would be the first to agree with this observation by Paul Sears. He once said:"To an eye trained to read the landscape, the tragic disaster of flood has but one meaning. (Our continent is sick.")

Good Night and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

MONDAY - APRIL 14, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Red Cross says the Missouri River flood chould become the most damaging and costly in our history. Brigadier General Don Shingler, army engineer for the river, says it's "coming down with a rip and a roar...we are in a lot of trouble....the Missouri is at unprecedently dangerous levels." He's told the governors of Nebraska and Iowa: "We are on borrowed time." At the moment there are no reports of any lives lost: most people had ample warning of what was in store for them all along the river from South Dakota to Missouri. But more than a million and a quarter acres of some of the richest farm land in the nation is now underwater. The Red Cross estimated that the flood has "affected" 74-thousand people - 19-thousand families. There is no reliabel estimate on just how many people have lost their homes; how many have lost their jobs because of the Missouri. The river has now broadened into a ten mile span in places where you used to be able to throw a rock across a week ago. Hundreds of farms have been gobbled up. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has named the flooded areas of Nebraska and Iowa as "disaster areas": that means people in these sections are eligible for emergency loans. And after the governors of Iowa and South Dakota appealed to the President for emergency aid, Mr. Truman allocated 250-thousand dollars to each state. Throughout the area there is a mass evacuation. Red Cross workers call it the greatest ever witnessed in this part of the Missouri Valley. People are leaving their homes and their village streets by automobile, truck, trains, and on foot. And while they struggle to get away from the approaching flood waters, Air Force and Coast Guard planes and helicopters are flying into the flooded areas with Red Cross supplies, sandbags, rescuing stranded victims.

At the moment, Sioux City, Iowa, appears to be in the biggest trouble. Art Smith has been covering that story for us in the city where - according to our last report - a fifth of its blocks were covered with water. For more details, let's switch to Art Smith in the WNAX newsroom in Sioux City, Iowa.

SMITH: For the first time in days the people here have dared to open their eyes to the disaster about them. What they have seen has not been pleasant, and only now is the complete realization beginning to make an impression. Families stand in little groups, looking across the vast muddy water to a chimney. It marks their home. Mud-caked clothes are mute evidence of their struggle, but they lost to the Big Muddy. They aren't complaining. Too many others are in the same fix. But just as they fought its relentless rise, now they watch for any indication of recession - but the crest still holds. In their hearts they know it will be days, possibly weeks, before they can walk up to the dilapidated door they once called home.

You know this cross-section of distress that you're seeing is only a segment, that it's being duplicated every mile along the river. Like his city cousin, it's the farmer who is taking it on the chin, but his only means of livelihood, the soil, has been swept from his hand. Even the banter of two farmers, both of whom have lost their lands, has a hollow ring, as one says, "What you doin' - irrigatin'?"

Modern methods of rescue work here were just too much for one old couple. When the giant motor of the helicopter set it down in a dry spot near by, they just didn't have faith to step into the machine that promised rescue. They waited for the boat that might come later. It's what is yet to come that will really test the morale of these valiant workers, for the battle is not yet over. Red-eyed and haggard, some have worked unceasingly for seventy-two hours - but these dikes must be held. What is the limit of man's endurance? It hasn't been reached here yet. At this moment, Ed, we are watching. waiting and hoping for the best.

MURROW: One hundred miles south of Sioux City, which Art Smith has just described for us, the Omaha-Council Bluffs area is getting ready for what's expected to be the worst floods these cities, with a combined population of 366-thousand residents, have ever experienced.

Here the crest is not expected until Thursday. But already in Council Bluffs, in Iowa, 25-thousand persons have been evacuated; all non-essential business places have been closed; schools are closed; the Mayor has ordered the evacuation of three quarters of the city. And across the river in Omaha in Nebraska five thousands residents have been evacuated.

Another mighty river, the Mississippi, is causing more trouble. Governor Anderson of Minnesota has appealed to the White House for federal aid for the flooded areas in his state. St. Paul is now experiencing the worst Mississippi flood in its history. Flatlands for 15 miles along the river have been flooded in some areas. The sewage disposal plant that serves both St. Paul and Minneapolis has been knocked out, with sewage dumping into the Mississippi as it flows south. The municipal airport is under water. Flood stage in St. Paul is 14 feet. The last report we had put the river at 21 feet and 7 inches, with a crest of 22 feet and four inches expected by Thursday.

In all, nine states are suffering: Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska, North and South Dakota, Montana, Kansas, Missouri, and Wisconsin....in what the Red Cross says could become the most damaging and costly floods in our history.

In Washington today, officials of the C.I.O. steel workers and the steel industry, conferred again with government negotiators. All report "no change" in the steel dispute. The Senate Labor Committee says its going to investigate the President's seizure of the industry.

In Ohio, 16-thousand Bell Telephone workers settled their strike after a week of negotiations. They received pay boosts ranging from four to seven dollars a week. For a time striking Western Electric workers withdrew their picket lines from the Bell installations. But five hours later they were back. And officials of the C.I.O. Communications Workers say a settlement of the Western Electric strike is still far away.

The Interstate Commerce Commission today gave southern and western railroads permission to raise their freight rates nine per cent; eastern roads can increase their rates by six per cent. It's estimated this will cost shippers about 678-million dollars a year.

The President today praised Senator Tom Connally of Texas, who has decided not to run for re-election, as one who has made important contributions to our government. The Texas Senator says he "does not desire to run again", and he's not "looking for or responding to any draft."

In Korea, the Monday truce negotiations lasted 15 seconds. Our chief negotiators, Admiral Joy and Admiral Libby have now returned to the conference area after a week in Tokyo.

A leading supporter of General Eisenhower for president said today, that "the Russians fear and respect" Eisenhower. Republican Senator Carlson of Kansas says the General has made it clear that he believes "the great middle way" is the American way to approach problems.

Tomorrow, the state of New Jersey holds its primary with Eisenhower, Taft, and Harold Stassen all on the Republican ballot. My colleage, Edward P. Morgan, has been spending some time in New Jersey. Ed, how do things across the river look to you?

MORGAN: Confused, Ed. George Washington crossing the Delaware to surprise the British at Trenton some years ago could hardly have employed more subterfuge than rival Republican partisans in the current New Jersey primary campaign. The fight between Eisenhower and Taft factions has become a desperate one, with ugly overtones of deception and bitterness. So intense is the feeling that, in a way, the damage done to the State G.O.P. organization may be a more important result than whether the General or the Senator wins in tomorrow's voting. Harold Stassen is also on the Republican ballot, but his chances seem almost invisible.

Senator Kefauver is the only candidate formally entered on the Democratic side, but although he may get a large popularity vote, the national scramble on the Democratic nomination will prevent his claiming clear control of the New Jersey delegation. Jersey delegates to the Chicago Presidential conventions do not have to commit themselves now.

The Republican fight came out into the open when Governor Alfred E. Driscoll endorsed General Eisenhower, putting much of the State G.O.P. organization behind him. Taft angrily protested that Driscoll had broken a pledge of neutrality. Driscoll denied any such pledge had ever been made. Taft then tried to withdraw his name from the ballot, but a state court ruled that he could not do so. He cancelled his formal campaign anyway. His opponents charged then that the campaign never stopped, that it simply went underground. Now it was the Senator's turn with the denials - and he made them. And so the acrimonious debate has spread like an infection, and it's got the professional Republican politicians worried. As one seasoned G.O.P. leader put it to this reporter in Atlantic City yesterday: "We'd better save our strength for the Democrats. It's not good to let our people get so mad at each other that they won't turn out a big vote in the fall."

Neutral observers are almost impossible to find, but there is an inescapable feeling that Governor Driscoll's declaration for Eisenhower, some weeks ago, has done the General more harm than good, because of the internecine fight with the Taft forces that it touched off.

Tonite both sides are knocking down earlier predictions of strength so they can try to claim triumph or, perhaps better said, explain away defeat. Driscoll now says 51% of the popular vote for Eisenhower would be a victory for their camp. That's a considerable retreat. Ex-Congressman Hartley, a Republican, who jointly wrote the Taft-Hartley Act, says that without a formal campaign, it would be a miracle if Taft got 20%. For what they're worth, estimates of the sideline experts, so-called give Eisenhower upwards of 60% of the popular vote, with perhaps 28 or more of the 38 G.O.P. convention delegates; the rest, to Taft. But as the Newark Star-Ledger shrewdly observes today: "This Republican rift in Jersey reflects a condition in the national party which, if not mended, could actually mean another Democratic victory in November." Tomorrow's results in

New Jersey, Ed, may be not so much eyewash as eye-opener.

MURROW: That was my colleague Edward P. Morgan, who has been wandering about New Jersey for the last few days trying to get the temper of political climate there.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: From time to time the nation concerns itself with the problems of flood control. But generally, it's not until we're experiencing some sort of crisis, that the clamour grows loud enough to be heard. Those in the path of the present floods would be the first to agree with this observation by Paul Sears. He once said: "To an eye trained to read the landscape, the tragic disaster of flood has but one meaning. Our continent is sick."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Tuesday - April 15, 1952

This is the news:

The Red Cross now estimates that 100-thousand persons have been affected by the floods in the middle west. The President is flying to Omaha tomorrow and has invited the governors of seven affected states to meet with him, to discuss plans for the present and future. At least 34 towns have been flooded... some of them as many as six miles from the normal channel of the Missouri River. There is only one death reported: a motorist who lost control of his car and was trapped in a flood-filled ditch. The big threat... (expected tomorrow)..is in the Omaha-Council Bluffs area. Three-fourths of Council Bluffs has been evacuated...only ten thousand persons are left in this city of 45-thousand. Day and night, volunteer workers, townspoeople, soldiers, students, army and National Guard soldiers, have been reinforcing and building up the dikes in this section. Lieut. General Pick, chief of army engineers, says:"We have a good chance to hold.. but no one can tell." The worst is over at Sioux City, Iowa. The crest has started to fall slightly. All day in this and other stricken areas, radio stations have been working day and night, broadcasting flood news.. appeals for volunteers... appeals for equipment.. instructions, announcements. We asked our correspondent Art Smith, in the newsroom, at W.N.A.X. in Sioux City,

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Tuesday, April 15, 1952
7:45-8:00 P.M.

MURROW: .... All day in this and other stricken areas, radio stations have been working day and nite, broadcasting flood news, appeals for volunteers, appeals for equipment, instructions, announcements. We asked our correspondent Art Smith in the newsroom at WNAX in Sioux City to let us hear the type of radio messages being broadcast in the Missouri Valley today.

SMITH: Radio stations, amateur and commercial, wear a proud glow along the Missouri as they hear praise for public service. Thru cooperation with hundreds of other agencies, advance warnings were given the valley residents: first, coordination of vital emergency work; second, the attempt to return to normal that still continues. Independent Station KCOM, Sioux City, among others, has performed yeoman service. Here is a recorded cross-section of these messages:

KCOM MESSAGE: This message from Jackson, Nebraska: Young Jim Lorb? is to contact KCOM as to where he is and where his folks can pick him up. He may still be in South Sioux City.

SPEAKER: A note from the Indian Reservation at Fort Thompson, S.D.: Mrs. Clara Crasibull? wants us to tell Mr. and Mrs. John Macks their grandchildren are safe. So don't worry:

SPEAKER: Eliot Johnson, the City Engineer at Yankton, wants the people of East Yankton to get water from somewhere other than their wells, until they can have their well water tested. The WNAX newsroom had a call earlier from Mrs. Clinton Parker at Hastings, Iowa, near Council Bluffs. She wanted her son, 400 miles away in the flood zone, near Whitlock Crossing, north of Pierre, to call her if he was safe. Well, a happy mother has advised us her son called after hearing the message in a flood worker's boat. He's all right.

SPEAKER: Mrs. Elsie Fuller would like to contact Don Dall at Whiting. They have taken the baby to the Lutheran Hospital. It is very urgent that they get in touch with him. Call 21255.

SPEAKER: High water hasn't stopped the stork. I've just had a call from Highmore, S.D., asking that we broadcast the arrival of a baby boy to Mrs. Alvin Kershman. Mr. Kershman is marooned by high water at his farm south of Herold. Mother and son are both fine.

SPEAKER: It is very, very urgent that replacements be available for the men on the bank in South Sioux City. The boys are very weary and must have replacements.

SPEAKER: A. W. Leesline of Sioux City would like to notify his family, now in Jefferson, that he's working with the volunteer forces in South Sioux City, Nebraska, at the Combination Bridge.

SPEAKER: At Berlin in South Dakota, Joe O'Connor says he has 100 acres of land available for cattle storage. The land is located on Highway 19, north of the city. Bring your own hay.

SPEAKER: A trainer has sent dog food to all the homeless dogs in South Sioux City.

SMITH: Art Smith in Sioux City, Iowa. Now back to Ed Murrow in New York.

MURROW: Thank you, Art Smith.

-30-

Ediphone trans./E. Scheiner

to let us hear the type of radio messages being broadcast in the Missouri Valley today.

(2;30 return cue:

this is art smith in sioux city, iowa.. Now back to Ed Murrow in NY)

To the east, the Mississippi River rose a fraction of an inch higher today. Army engineers say a crest is likely tomorrow at St. Paul, now suffering from its worst flood in history. And the President has allocated 100-thousand dollars for ermrgency relief in Minnesota.

In Washington, the government has given up its attempt to get an agreement in the steel dispute. Acting Defense Mobilizer Steelman says further talks with the union and industry would not be productive at this time. He's going to consult with the President.

Nathan P. Feinsinger, the chairman of the Wage Stabilization Board, told a Senate committee today that government seizure of the steel industry "meant the difference between life and death" for the men in Korea. He says Defense Secretary Lovett insisted that continued steel production was "a matter of clear military necessity." Mr. Feinsinger said Charles E. Wilson, the former defense mobilizer, did not understand the Wage Board's program, and "created havoc in negotiations" by his statement that the Board's proposals were a threat to the anti-inflation program.

In Pittsburgh, Senator Taft said the President's seizure of the steel mills "opened the way for any President to make himself a dictator." Taft said the President violated the Constiution.

The government today said that steel allotments for schools, hospitals, and other commercial construction will be more than doubled (during July, August and September) from the present allotments.

In Cleveland, Federal Judge Freed today granted the government a prelimibary injunction, which bans three railroad unions from striking against the government. The Army has been running the nation's railroads since August of 1950. The engineers, firemen and conductors want to strike for higher wages and other benefits. Judge Freed, [redacted] said [redacted] said, he ruled as he did "in the interests of national safety, to prevent irreperable injury."

New Jersey telephone strikers agreed to go back to work today... for a pay increase of $4 a week, and other benefits. And federal mediators are trying to settle the strike of 16-thousand workers at Western Electric plants.

The President today signed the Japanese peace treaty, which goes into effect on April 28th.. Emperor Hirohito's birthday.

In New Jersey the polls will close in a few minutes, in the state's presidential primary. Rain during the day made it likely that the total vote would not come up to [redacted] predicted... one million votes.

In Nevada, the Atomic Energy Commission set off another atomic explosion today.. (the 14th at this site). The blast was plainly visible 75 miles away in Las Vegas.. but it was neither felt nor heard there.

~~The Air Force today sent its secret new eight-jet H-B-52 bomber into the air for the first time in battle. And in Spokane, at the Fairchild Air Force Base, a giant B-50 bomber crashed on a take-off and burst into flames in a wheat field. Fifteen of the 17 men aboard were killed.~~

At Mather Air Field, near Sacremento, six AIR FORCE officers ~~were~~ are under a preliminary charge of disobedience of an order to fly. And four officers are charged with disobeying a superior officer, by refusing to fly at Randolph Air Force base in Texas.

A Senate committee says thousands of young airmen at Keesler Field, in Mississipp, have been "plundered" of millions of dollars by gamblers who paid graft to the city of Biloxi.

In Korea today, a strong United Nations tank force killed or wounded 300 Chinese Communists in a heavy bombardment of enemy lines on the central front. Again, there was no progress at the truce talks.

Edward R. Murrow: April 15, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

Britain is now pledged to come to the aid of Italy, West Germany, France, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg. / The official announcement was made today. / The nations named are likewise committed to come to the aid of Britain, if she is attacked. / This agreement applies only to Europe, and does not cover French or British positions in Africa or the Middle East. The British will not become members of the European Army. # This move places two former enemies - Germany and Italy - on an almost equal footing with the nations they fought in the late war. The treaty will run for seventeen years, which will cause it to expire at the same time as the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance.

This is essentially a "tidying up" process. Britain was already committed to the defense of West Germany by the presence there of four-and-a-half British and Canadian divisions. / It is aimed in part at reassuring the French, who remain fearful that without British participation, Germany would come to dominate any West European alliance.

Tonight it was announced that two Dictators on the Iberian peninsula, Salazar of Portugal and Franco of Spain, have reached an agreement - "the formation of a common front toward problems of western defense." They agreed to treat their two countries as a "strategic unity." This is a rather cryptic communique. Portugal is a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization; Spain isn't. We have been trying for many months to make a deal with Franco to associate Spain more closely with the Western defense effort. Our allies in Europe want no part of such an arrangement. It now appears, on the basis of today's statement, that Spain may be entering, so to speak, through the back door; but opinion will have to be suspended on this until we have more details of the agreement between Spain and Portugal.

Our government last night decided to suspend opinion and decision on the Tunisian request that their case be brought before the Security Council. Nationalist China, the Soviet Union, Brazil, Chile and Pakistan voted for it. France and Britain voted against; Greece, the Netherlands and Turkey abstained, and so did the United States. In so doing we risk the hostility of the whole Arab-Asian bloc, and a number of Latin-American nations as well. If we had voted for the Tunisian case to be heard, the French Government and French opinion would have been outraged.

Valid arguments can be advanced as to why we should have voted in favor of the Tunisian case being heard. Other arguments, perhaps equally valid, can be advanced as to why we should have voted against it. Our economic, political and strategic interests are somewhat in conflict, as they were in the case of Morocco. This reporter does not pretend to know what our decision should have been, (because he is not in possession of all the facts.) But one fact is clear: we didn't have a policy; we shirked a decision. Nations abstain on vital issues, out of fear, timidity, or indecision. Our abstention had the effect of blocking the Tunisian appeal. But yet we wouldn't lay it on the line. Our spokesmen speak of our world leadership and responsibilities; and when a test comes, where our interests are in conflict, we neither lead nor are responsible. We say, in effect: We abstain, we'll sit this one out, prefer not to be counted. We neither support our ally, France, nor do we support the Tunisians who are seeking independence. And the result is, that we acquire the suspicion tinged with contempt, of both sides. Perhaps it's too much to expect us to have a foreign policy in an election year. But leaders must lead, or abdicate.

The techniques of international politics are very often difficult to define. The same could probably be said of motives. It was Will Rogers who once observed that "diplomacy is a great thing if it wasn't transparent." ~~But like it cannot,~~ We live in a world of diplomatic maneuvering and we ~~would do well to~~ might remember this warning from Joseph C. Grew:"The decline of nations inevitably follows the possession of great power without the exercise of great leadership."

Good Night and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

TUESDAY - APRIL 15, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Red Cross now extimates that 100-thousand persons have been affected by the floods in the middle west. The President is flying to Omaha tomorrow, and has invited the governors of seven affected states to meet with him to discuss plans for the present and future. At least 34 towns have been flooded: some of them as many as six miles from the normal channel of the Missouri River. There is only one death reported: a motorist who lost control of his car and was trapped in a flood-filled ditch. The big threat, (expected tomorrow), is in the Omaha-Council Bluffs area. Three-fourths of Council Bluffs has been evacuated: only ten thousand persons are left in this city of 45-thousand. Day and night, volunteer workers, townspeople, soldiers, students, army and National Guard soldiers, have been reinforcing and building up the dikes in this section. Lieut. General Pick, chief of army engineers, says: "We have a good chance to hold, but no one can tell." The worst is over at Sioux City, Iowa. The crest has started to fall slightly. All day in this and other stricken areas, radio stations have been working day and night broadcasting flood news, appeals for volunteers, appeals for equipment, instructions, announcements. We asked our correspondent Art Smith in the newsroom at W.N.A.X. in Sioux City to let us hear the type of radio messages being broadcast in the Missouri Valley today.

SMITH: Radio stations, amateur and commercial, wear a proud glow along the Missou as they hear praise for public service. Thru cooperation with hundreds of other agencies, advance warnings were given the valley residents: first, coordination of vital emergency work; second, the attempt to return to normal that still continues. Independent station, KCOM, Sioux City, among others, has performed yeoman service. Here is a recorded cross-section of these messages:

KCOM MESSAGE: This message from Jackson, Nebraska: young Jim Lorb is to contact

KCOM as to where he is and where his folks can pick him up. He may still be in South Sioux City.

SPEAKER: A note from the Indian Reservation at Fort Thompson, S.D.: Mrs. Clara Crazibull wants us to tell Mr. and Mrs. John Macks their grand-children are safe. So don't worry!

SPEAKER: Elliot Johnson, the City Engineer at Yankton, wants the people of East Yankton to get water from somewhere other than their wells, until they can have their well water tested. The WNAX newsroom had a call earlier from Mrs. Clinton Parker at Hastings, Iowa, near Council Bluffs. She wanted her son, 400 miles away in the flood zone, near Whitlock Crossing, north of Pierre, to call her if he was safe. Well, a happy mother has advised us her son called after hearing the message in a flood work's boat. He's all right.

SPEAKER: Mrs. Elsie Fuller would like to contact Don Dall at Whiting. They have taken the baby to the Lutheran Hospital. It is very urgent that they get in touch with him. Call 2-1255.

SPEAKER: High water hasn't stopped the stork. I've just had a call from Highmore, S.D., asking that we broadcast the arrival of a baby boy to Mrs. Alvin Kershman. Mr. Kershman is marooned by high water at his farm south of Herold. Mother and son are both fine.

SPEAKER: It is very, very urgent that replacements be available for the men on the bank in South Sioux City. The boys are very weary and must have replacements.

SPEAKER: A. W. Lesline of Sioux City would like to notify his family, now in Jefferson, that he's working with the volunteer forces in South Sioux City, Nebraska, at the Combination Bridge.

SPEAKER: At Berlin in South Dakota, Joe O'Connor says he has 100 acres of land available for cattle storage, The Land is located on Highway 19, north of the city. Bring your own hay.

SPEAKER: A trainer has sent dog food to all the homeless dogs in South Sioux City.

SMITH: Art Smith in Sioux City, Iowa. Now back to Ed Murrow in New York.

MURROW: Thank you, Art Smith.

To the east, the Mississippi River rose a fraction of an inch higher today. Army engineers say a crest is likely tomorrow at St. Paul, now suffering from its worst flood in history. And the President has allocated 100-thousand dollars for emergency relief in Minnesota.

In Washington, the Government has given up its attempt to get an agreement in the steel dispute. Acting Defense Mobilizer Steelman says further talks with the union and industry "would not be productive at this time." He's going to consult with the President.

Nathan P. Feinsinger, the chairman of the Wage Stabilization Board, told a Senate committee today, that Government seizure of the steel industry "meant the difference between life and death" for the men in Korea. He says Defense Secretary Lovett insisted that continued steel production was "a matter of clear military necessity." Mr. Feinsinger said Charles E. Wilson, the former defense mobilizer, did not understand the Wage Board's program, and "created havoc in negotiations" by his statement that the Board's proposals were threat to the anti-inflation program.

In Pittsburgh, Senator Taft said the President's seizure of the steel mills "opened the way for any President to make himself a dictator." Taft said the President violated the Constitution.

The Government today said that steel allotments for schools, hospitals, and other commercial construction will be more than doubled during July, August, and September from the present allotments.

In Cleveland, Federal Judge Freed today granted the Government a preliminary injunction which bans three railroad unions from striking against the Government. The Army has been running the nation's railroads since August of 1950. The engineers, firemen and conductors want to strike for higher wages and other benefits. Judge Freed said he ruled as he did "in the interests of national safety, to prevent irreperable injury."

New Jersey telephone strikers agreed to go back to work today for a pay increase of four dollars a week and other benefits. And federal mediators are trying to settle the strike of 16-thousand workers at Western Electric plants.

The President today signed the Japanese peace treaty, which goes into effect on April 28th, Emperor Hirohito's birthday.

In New Jersey the polls will close in a few minutes in the state's presidential primary. Rain during the day made it likely that the total vote would not come up to the predicted one million votes.

In Nevada, the Atomic Energy Commission set off another atomic explosion today; the 14th at this site. The blast was plainly visible 75 miles away in Las Vegas, but it was neither felt nor heard there.

At Mather Air Field, near Sacramento, six Air Force officers are under a preliminary charge of disobedience of an order to fly. And four officers are charged with disobeying a superior officer by refusing to fly at Randolph Air Force base in Texas.

A Senate committee says thousands of young airmen at Keesler Field, in Mississippi, have been "plundered" of millions of dollars by gamblers who paid graft to the city of Biloxi.

In Korea today, a strong United Nations tank force killed or wounded 300 Chinese Communists in a heavy bombardment of enemy lines on the central front. Again, there was no progress at the truce talks.

Britain is now pledged to come to the aid of Italy, West Germany, France, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg. The official announcement was made today. The nations named are likewise committed to come to the aid of Britain, if she is attacked. This agreement applies only to Europe, and does not cover French or British positions in Africa or the Middle East. The British will not become members of the European Army. This move places two former enemies - Germany and Italy - on an almost equal footing with the nations they fought in the late war. The treaty will run for seventeen years, which will cause it to expire at the same time as the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance.

This is essentially a "tidying up" process. Britain was already committed to the defense of West Germany by the presence there of four-and-a-half British and Canadian divisions. It is aimed in part at reassuring the French, who remain fearful that without British participation, Germany would come to dominate any West European alliance.

Tonight it was announced that two Dictators on the Iberian peninsula, Salazar of Portugal and Franco of Spain, have reached an agreement - "the formation of a common front toward problems of western defense." They agreed to treat their two countries as a "strategic unity." This is a rather cryptic communique. Portugal is a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization; Spain isn't. We have been trying for many months to make a deal with Franco, to associate Spain more closely with the western defense effort. Our allies in Europe want no part of such an arrangement. It now appears, on the basis of today's statement, that Spain may be entering, so to speak, through the back door; but opinion will have to be suspended on this until we have more details of the agreement between Spain and Portugal.

Our Government lastnight decided to suspend opinion and decision on the Tunisian request that their case be brought before the Security Council. Nationalist China, the Soviet Union, Brazil, Chile and Pakistan voted for it. France and Britian voted against; Greece, The Netherlands and Turkey abstained, and so did the United States. In so doing we risk the hostility of the whole Arab-Asian bloc, and a number of Latin-American nations as well. If we had voted for the Tunisian case to be heard, the French Government and French opinion would have been outraged.

Valid arguments can be advanced as to why we should have voted in favor of the Tunisian case being heard. Other arguments, perhaps equally valid, can be advanced as to why we should have voted against it. Our economic political and strategic interest are somewhat in conflict, as they were in the case of Morocco. This reporter does not pretend to know what our decision should have been, (because he is not in possession of all the facts). But one fact is clear: we didn't have a policy; we shirked a decision. Nations abstain on vital issues, out of fear, timidity, or indecision. Our abstention had the effect of blocking the Tunisian appeal. But yet we wouldn't lay it on the line. Our spokesmen speak of our world leadership and responsibilities; and when a test comes, where our interests are in conflict, we neither lead nor are responsible. We say, in effect: We abstain; we'll sit this one out; prefer not to be counted. We neither support our ally, France, nor do we support the Tunisians who are seeking independence. And the result is, that we acquire the suspicion tinged with contempt of both sides. Perhaps it's too much to expect us to have a foreign policy in an election year. But leaders must lead, or abdicate.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: The techniques of international politics are very often difficult to define. The same could probably be said of motives. It was Will Rogers who once observed that "Diplomacy is a great thing, if it wasn't transparent." We live in a world of diplomatic maneuvering and we might remember this warning from Joseph C. Grew: "The decline of nations inevitably follows the possession of great power without the exercise of great leadership."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Wednesday - April 16, 1952

This is the news:

The President said today: "We've fooled around with flood control long enough. Its time for action." Mr. Truman met, NEAR OMAHA, with the governors of seven states in the mid-west flood area, after flying over ~~them~~ some of the million acres now under water. He said he thinks this flood has put more land under water than any previous flood. And he told the governors and reporters: "This is the bread basket of the nation. It ought to be protected, and it can be protected. These floods are not necessary". Mr. Truman said he hopes Congress will not economize by cutting the funds he's recommended for flood control. He wants the MID-WEST governors to help him lobby for the same kind of control he said Southern congressmen have secured for their part of the country.

As the President flew back to Washington, Lieut. General Pick, CHIEF ARMY ENGINEER, said: 87-thousand persons have been displaced by the Missouri flood.. the water has blocked railroads in 27 places.. flooded 83 main highways.. flooded 50 cities and towns. Right now the danger point is the Omaha-Council ~~Bluffs~~ Bluffs area. The crest had been expected early tomorrow.. 31 and a half feet. But the weather experts now predict it will not come until tomorrow night. Above these two cities the river is spreading out into a great lake...15 miles wide. This is delaying the crest. Col. Jack Person of the army engineers, refuses to make any prediction of whether the carefully built up dikes can hold. But he says "IF God helps those who help themselves, he definitely will help the people of Council Bluffs."

One of the governors who met near Omaha with the President today was ADLAI Stevenson of Illinois. While he was on his way, his office issued a statement saying, in part: "I could not accept the nomination for any other office this summer." Gov. Stevenson insists he will run for re-election.. not be a Democratic candidate for President. Senator Kefauver thinks this is "very favorable" to his candidacy." Senator Kerr, another candidate, says its a happy solution to have distinguished opponents withdraw.

The Republican presidential candidates and their backers found new reason today to issue statements. General Eisenhower won the New Jersey primary by 150- thousand votes. With almost all votes counted, Eisenhower has 386- thousand....Taft, 236- thousand and Stassen 24- thousand. The General, visting in Belgium today, told reporters: "When that many Americans think you are fit for office, it makes you proud but thoughtful. But I'm not talking any politics anymore. What I said just now is not politics." General Ike added:"It's just an observation."

Harold Stassen feels the results are about what he anticipated. And Senator Taft, whose name was on the ballot although he withdrew from active campaigning in anger..Senator Taft said:" The results are a little better than we expected." He thought it was very encouraging considering that he had the state Republican organization against him. John Hamilton, one of the Taft managers, called the results a moral victory for Taft.. he thinks Eisenhower made "a sorry showing." He said the general had the support of what he called "a ruthless political machine and an outpouring of money seldom seen in American politics." New Jersey's Governor Driscoll, accused by Taft supporters of going back on his promise to be neutral, said:" A loss by 150-thousand votes in a compratively small vote in an election conducted in horrible weather is no moral victory." And Senator Lodge, leader of the Eisenhower campaign, says:"The Eisenhower victory wagon is rolling. After New Jersey, nothing can stop it."

In Washington today, Commerce Secretary Sawyer met with Phil Murray, president of the steelworkers, and Benjamin Fairless of

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Wednesday, April 16, 1952
7:45-8:00 P.M.

MURROW: .... We've recorded for you part of Mr. Arnall's explanation of why the industry should not get the $12.00-a-ton increase.

ARNALL: The increase in steel profits has been so large that even profits after taxes now exceed the pre-Korean profits after taxes and exceed them by so much that the steel industry would probably not be eligible for price increases at least during the balance of 1952, according to our standards.

MURROW: Then, Republican Senator Morse of Oregon offered his views on steel industry profits:

MORSE: The Korean war in and of itself has been the cause, because of the war contracts these companies have obtained, for greater profits than they made at any time during World War II, after taxes. And that's why the Senator from Oregon speaks with some little feeling when he listened on the radio the other nite to Mr. Randall weep, figuratively speaking, such tears over the profit problem of the steel industry and says the President didn't, however, tell you ... didn't, however, talk to you in terms of profits after taxes. But what Mr. Randall didn't tell the American people is that when you take the profits, after taxes, you still have a great industry, along with some other industries in this country, just reaping tremendous profits out of the blood that's being spent in Korea. I'm for them getting reasonable profits necessary to keep this free enterprise system of ours working, but I happen to think that it's the responsibility of this Congress to really, for once in the history of our country, put into legislative form some legislation that will take the profits out of the spilling of American blood on the battlefields, spilled in the defense of this flag.

SPEAKER: I just want to tell you that this ...

(applause)

MORSE: This issue has got to be taken to the American people in this summer ahead of us, and I want to say to the politicians in both parties

here this afternoon that, once the American people come to understand this problem, the crosses that they're going to put behind the ballots in November will be in defense of the crosses that are standing up in the battlefields of the world where American boys have died - and they didn't die to make this kind of profit for the steel industry of the United States.

MURROW: Presumably, the Senate committee will also hear from industry witnesses. When it does, we shall endeavor to give you their side of the story.

-30-

Ediphone trans./E. Scheiner

United States Steel. Mr. Sawyer is said to be "working on the problem" of what to do about the steel dispute. Republican Senator Ferguson and Representative Shafer, both of Michigan, are talking about impeaching the President. Senate Republican Leader Bridges has proposed an investigation of the President's seizure of the steel industry..calls it "the gravest constiutional crisis since the civil war." And a Senate Labor Committee todsy heard Price Stabilizer Ellis Arnall say that to give the industry the 12-dollar a ton price increase IT wants to meet wage increases, would send the cost of living up five per cent. Mr. Arnall says this would cost the average American 300-dollars a year and he doesn't think "the people are big enough saps to pay it." We've recorded for you part of Mr. Arnall's explanation of why the industry should not get the 12-dollar A TON increase:

(Arnall ends: ACCORDING TO OUR STANDARDS)

Then Republican Senator Morse of Oregon offered his views on STEEL industry profits:

(Morse ends: for the steel industry of the United States)

Presumably, the Senate committee will also hear from industry witnesses. When it does we shall endeavor to give you their side of the story

The President today nominated Robert Murphy, now ambassador to Belgium, to be the first post-war ambassador to Japan.

Secretary of State Acheson says the Russians show no sincere wilingness to settle the East-West differences..in spite of their propaganda peace campaign.

In Korea, the Communists captured one of our hill positions on the western front. And the truce negotiarors met for a total of 20 seconds..exchanged 27 words.

The Pentagon reports that we suffered another 237 casualties in Korea last week. The total list now has one hundred and seven thousand, three hundred and seventy one names.

Edward R. Murrow: April 16, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

The Air Force is in trouble. ~~XXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXX~~ Thirteen reserve officers ~~have been~~ scheduled to be - court-martialled for refusing to fly. One of them--Lieutenant ~~XXXX~~ Verne Goodwin - was sentenced today; nine others are "under investigation." Lieutenant Goodwin, aged 30, was sentenced to two years in prison without pay, and dismissed from the Air Force. / Goodwin said the reason he refused to fly - a cargo plane to England and back - was in order that his wife, who is nervous about ~~XX~~ his flying, could safely have their first child. He said the baby was born two months prematurely, when his wife learned he was to be court-martialled for refusing to fly. / Apparently what happened was that Lieutenant Goodwin asked for a ground assignment; it was refused; and then he said he wouldn't fly because it would be murdering his unborn child. Mrs. Goodwin says she'll put the child in a nursery and go back to work as a secretary.

At Randolph Field in Texas - often called the West Point of the Air Force - eight reserve officers called back to duty, held a meeting in civilian clothes last night, and demanded a Congressional investigation of what they called "this Boy Scout Camp". They are all combat veterans of the late war, and they claim that Randolph is now stacked with "high ranking, free-loading regulars who never had any overseas time." The reserve officers say they thought they were being called back to replace regulars who had gone to war, but when they arrived, they found some of the same ones they ran into in the last war, who sent them overseas, waiting to send them over again.

Part of all this, of course, is the old conflict between regulars and reserves. It happens in the Army as well as the Air Force. The "West Point Protective Society", as it has been called, has frequently been accused of giving the best berths to its members.

But it is clear that the Air Force difficulties are not confined to a few rebellious reserve officers recalled to duty. General Hoyt Vandenberg, Chief of the Air Force, told a Senate Committee today that there is trouble attracting new pilots, and difficulty in retaining the experienced crews we now have. He emphasized the need for extra flight pay; said the reserves had left good, high-paying jobs - have dependents, and this had caused some of them to feel that it was a lot better to refuse to fly than to fly. Air Secretary Thomas Finletter told the Committee there were three reasons for the difficulty in getting men for pilot training. For the first time in history not enough West Point graduates are joining the Air Force; not enough who want to fly and who are physically fit. Mr. Finletter said too that the reserve officer training program in the universities isn't producing the pilots. Out of sixty-seven hundred cadets only eighteen hundred want to fly, and less than half of those will be able to qualify for pilot training. / The Secretary of the Air Force said that when the new class of aviation cadets starts training tomorrow every available, qualified applicant will have been accepted. / In the past there had generally been a backlog of men who wanted to fly. / Veteran reserve pilots who feel they've done their flying, and not enough qualified youngsters eager to learn. It's easier to state the problem than provide the solution.

The government's seizure of the steel industry last week is still very much a live issue in Washington. There are political as well as legal undertones. [redacted] The Courts will finally decide the legality of the seizure. As Publilius Syrus once said:"Only where law prevails can people prevail." M.L. Byran put it more bluntly:"The best government, he said, is that in which the law speaks instead of the lawyer."

Good Night and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

WEDNESDAY - APRIL 16, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President said today: "We've fooled around with flood control long enough. It's time for action." Mr. Truman met near Omaha with the governors of seven states in the mid-west flood area after flying over some of the million acres now under water. He said he thinks this flood has put more land under water than any previous flood. And he told the governors and reporters: "This is the bread basket of the nation. It ought to be protected and it can be protected. These floods are not necessary." Mr. Truman said he hopes Congress will not economize by cutting the funds he's recommended for flood control. He wants the mid-west governors to help him lobby for the same kind of control he said southern Congressmen have secured for their part of the country.

As the President flew back to Washington, Lieut. General Pick, chief Army engineer, said: 87-thousand persons have been displaced by the Missouri flood; the water has blocked railroads in 27 places; flooded 84 main highways; flooded 50 cities and towns. Right now the danger point is the Omaha-Council Bluffs area. The crest had been expected early tomorrow - 31 and a half feet. But the weather experts now predict it will not come until tomorrow night. Above these two cities the river is spreading out into a great lake 15 miles wide. This is delaying the crest. Col. Jack Person of the army engineers refuses to make any prediction of whether the carefully built up dikes can hold. But he says: "If God helps those who help themselves, He definitely will help the people of Council Bluffs."

One of the governors who met near Omaha with the President today was Adlai Stevenson of Illinois. While he was on his way, his office issued a statement saying, in part: "I could not accept the nomination for any other office this summer." Gov. Stevenson insists he will run for re-election - not be a Democratic candidate for President. Senator Kefauver thinks this is "very favorable" to his candidacy. Senator Kerr, another candidate says it's a happy solution to have distinguished opponents withdraw.

The Republican presidential candidates and their backers found new reason today to issue statements. General Eisenhower won the New Jersey primary by 150-thousand votes. With almost all votes counted, Eisenhower has 386-thousand, Taft has 236-thousand and Stassen 24-thousand. The General, visiting in Belgium today, told reporters: "When that many Americans think you are fit for office, it makes you proud but thoughtful. But I'm not talking any politics any more. What I said just now is not politics." General Ike added: "It's just an observation."

Harold Stassen feels the results are about what he anticipated. And Senator Taft, whose name was on the ballot although he withdrew from active campaigning in anger - Senator Taft said: "The results are a little better than we expected." He thought it was very encouraging considering that he had the state Republican organization against him. John Hamilton, one of the Taft managers, called the results a moral victory for Taft: he thinks Eisenhower made "a sorry showing." He said the General had the support of what he called "a ruthless political machine, and an outpouring of money seldom seen in American politics." New Jersey's Governor Driscoll, accused by Taft supporters of going back on his promise to be neutral, said: "A loss by 150-thousand votes in a comparatively small vote in an election conducted in horrible weather, is no moral victory." And Senator Lodge, leader of the Eisenhower campaign, says: "The Eisenhower victory wagon is rolling. After New Jersey, nothing can stop it."

In Washington today, Commerce Secretary Sawyer met with Phil Murray, president of the steelworkers, and Benjamin Fairless of United States Steel. Mr. Sawyer is said to be "working on the problem" of what to do about the steel dispute. Republican Senator Ferguson and Representative Shafer, both of Michigan, are talking about impeaching the President. Senate Republican Leader Bridges has proposed an investigation of the President's seizure of the steel industry: calls it "the gravest constitutional crisis since the Civil War." And a Senate Labor Committee today heard Price Stabilizer Ellis Arnall say that to give the industry the 12-dollar a ton price increase it wants to meet wage increases, would send the cost of living up five per cent. Mr. Arnall says this would cost the average American 300-dollars a year and he doesn't think "the people are big enough saps to pay it." We've recorded for you part of Mr. Arnall's explanation of why the industry should not get the 12-dollar-a-ton increase:

ARNALL: The increase in steel profits has been so large that even profits after taxes now exceed the pre-Korean profits after taxes, and exceed them by so much that the steel industry would probably not be eligible for price increases at least during the balance of 1952, according to our standards.

MURROW: Then, Republican Senator Morse of Oregon offered his views on steel industry profits.

MORSE: The Korean war in and of itself has been the cause, because, of the war contracts these companies have obtained, for greater profits than they made at any time during World War II, after taxes. And that's why the Senator from Oregon speaks with some little feeling when he listened on the radio the other night to Mr. Randall weep, figuratively speaking, such tears over the profit problem of the steel industry and says the President didn't, however, tell you .....didn't, however, talk to you in terms of profits after taxes. But what Mr. Randall didn't tell the American people is that when you take the profits, after taxes, you still have a great industry, along with some other industries in this country, just reaping tremendous profitsout of the blood that's being spent in Korea. I'm for them getting reasonable profits necessary to keep this free enterprise system of ours working, but I happen to think that it's the responsibility of this Congress to really, for once in the history of our country, put into legislative form some legislation that will take the profits out of the spilling of American blood on the battlefields, spilled in the defense of this flag.

SPEAKER: I must tell you that this.....

(applause)

MORSE: This issue has got to be taken to the American people in this summer ahead of us, and I want to say to the politicians in both parties here this afternoon that, once the American people come to understand this problem, the crosses that they're going to put behind the ballotsin November will be in defense of the crosses that are standing up in the battlefields of the world where American boys have died - and they didn't die to make this kind of profit for the steel industry of the United States.

MURROW: Presumably, the Senate committee will also hear from industry witnesses. When it does we shall endeavor to give you their side of the story. The President today nominated Robert Murphy, now ambassador to Belgium, to be the first post-war ambassador to Japan.

Secretary of State Acheson says the Russians show no sincere willingness to settle the East-West differences - inspite of their propaganda peace campaign.

In Korea, the Communists captured one of our hill positions on the western front. And the truce negotiators met for a total of 20 seconds - exchanged 27 words.

The Pentagon reports that we suffered another 237 casualties in Korea last week. The total list now has one hundred and seven thousand, three hundred and seventy-one names.

The Air Force is in trouble. Thirteen reserve officers scheduled to be court-martialled for refusing to fly. One of them - Lieut. Verne Goodwin - was sentenced today; nine others are "under investigation." Lieut. Goodwin, aged 30, was sentenced to two years in prison without pay, and dismissed from the Air Force. Goodwin said the reason he refused to fly - a cargo plane to England and back - was in order that his wife, who is nervous about his flying, could safely have their first child. He said the baby was born two months prematurely when his wife learned he was to be court-martialled for refusing to fly. Apparentl what happened was the Lieut. Goodwin asked for a ground assignment; it was refused; and then he said he wouldn't fly because it would be murdering his unborn child. Mr.s Goodwin says she'll put the child in a nursery and go back to work as a secretary.

At Randolph Field in Texas - often called the West Point of the Air Force - eight reserve officers called back to duty, held a meeting in civilian clothes last night, and demanded a Congressional investigation of what they called "this Boy Scout Camp." They are all combat veterans of the late war, and they claim that Randolph is now stacked with "high ranking, free-loading regulars, who never had any overseas time." The reserve officers say they thought they were being called back to replace regulars who had gone to war, but when they arrived, they found some of the same ones they ran into in the last war, who sent them overseas, waiting to send them over again.

Part of all this, of course, is the old conflict between regulars and reserves. It happens in the Army as well as the Air Force. The "West Point Protective Society", as it has been called, has frequently been accused of giving the best berths to its members.

But it is clear that the Air Force difficulties are not confined to a few rebellious reserve officers recalled to duty. General Hoyt Vandenberg, Chief of the Air Force, told a Senate Committee today that there is trouble attracting new pilots, and difficulty in retaining the experienced crews we now have. He emphasized the need for extra flight pay; said the reserves had left good, high-paying jobs - have dependents, and this had caused some of them to feel that it was a lot better to refuse to fly than to fly. Air Secretary Thomas Finletter told the Committee there were three reasons for the difficulty in getting men for pilot training. For the fitst time in history not enough West Point graduates are joining the Air Force; not enough who want to fly and who are physically fit.

Mr. Finletter said too, that the reserve officer training program in the universiti isn't producing the pilots. Out of sixty-seven hundred cadets, only eighteen hundred want to fly, and less than half of those will be able to qualify for pilot training. The Secretary of the Air Force said that when the new class of aviation cadets starts training tomorrow every available, qualified applicant will have been accepted. In the past, there had generally been a backlog of men who wanted to fly. Veteran reserve pilots who feel they've done their flying, and not enough qualified youngsters eager to learn. It's easier to state the problem than provide the solution.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: The Government's seizure of the steel industry last week is still very much a live issue in Washington. There are political as well as legal undertones. The courts will finally decide the legality of the seizure. As Publilius Syrus once said: "Only where law prevails can people prevail." H. L. Byran put it more bluntly: "The best government, he said, is that in which the law speaks instead of the lawyer."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Thursday - April 17, 1952

This is the news:

The Missouri River is still rising here in the Omaha-Council Bluffs area. Lieut. General Pick, chief of army engineers, says "today is the critical day." The weather experts who predicted the crest would come about two hours from now.. are now telling us an exact prediction is no longer possible because of the heavy water pouring into the area. BUT IT SHOULD BE TONIGHT. Army engineers feel the fight is just beginning. ~~Generally, they no longer fear that their levess will be toppped. They fear sandboils.. underwater seepage that passes through some part of the base of the levee and sneaks up behind it. It rained in Omaha and Council Bluffs today. And~~ The river passed through here at a speed of eight and a half to nine miles an hour. In a few minutes I'd like to offer you some impressions one picks up tramping through Council Bluffs, Iowa. Here in Omaha, Mayor Cunningham says his city is still "high, dry and handsome." He points out there has been no loss of life in this area. And he says that even if the dikes should fail, ~~Omaha~~ only a small part of Omaha's business and industrial life will be affected. The President has allocated a quarter of a million dollars for flood relief in Nebraska. And the Red Cross says it will need, to start, 10-million dollars for relief in the Missouri and Mississipp River area.

While these two cities..Omaha and Council Bluffs...wait and watch the river, for 125 miles downstream there is new fear... ancitipation of record crests over the week-end.

[redacted] ~~ANOTHER 250 THOUSAND DOLLARS HAS BEEN ALLOCATED FROM~~ [redacted] ~~FUND - THIS TIME TO THE STATE OF NEBRASKA.~~ 3

AT HIS NEWS CONFERENCE THIS AFTERNOON, THE PRESIDENT SAID IF THE MIDWESTERN GOVERNORS HADNT "DRAGGED THEIR FEET" ON FLOOD CONTROL PLANS, THE SITUATION WOULDNT BE WHAT IT IS AT THE MOMENT.

MR. TRUMAN ALSO TALKED POLITICS. HE SAID THREE MONTHS AFTER HE BEGAN HIS SECOND TERM HE MADE UP HIS MIND NOT TO RUN FOR RE-ELECTION. ~~HE TOLD NEWSMEN THEY COULD QUOTE HIM DIRECTLY ON THIS OBSERVATION: "WHEN A MAN HAS BEEN RESPONSIBLE FOR 8 YEARS, AS I WILL HAVE BEEN BY JANUARY 20TH, HE SHOULD HAVE MADE BY THAT TIME ALL THE CONTRIBUTION TO THE WELFARE OF THE NATION THAT HE CAN POSSIBLY GIVE. I DONT THINK THAT ANY MAN, NO MATTER HOW GOOD HE IS, IS INDISPENSABLE IN ANY JOB. I TRIED TO GIVE THE NATION THE BEST I HAD." THEN, HE ADDED, THE GREATEST EPITAPH A MAN COULD HAVE IS ON A TOMBSTONE IN ARIZONA, "HERE LIES JACK WILLIAMS - HE DONE HIS DAMNEDEST."~~ The PRESIDENT SAID HE WAS SORRY THAT GOVERNOR STEVENSON OF ILLINOIS HAD DECIDED NOT TO BE A PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE...THAT HE CONSIDERES HIS SPECIAL ADVISER AVERILL HARRIMAN ONE OF THE MOST ABLE AND PATRIOTIC CITIZENS IN THE COUNTRY...AND THAT HE CONSIDERES HIMSELF PERFECTLY FREE TO EXPRESS A CHOICE FOR THE DEMOCRATIC PRESIDENTIAL NOMINATION, BUT THAT THIS WAS NOT THE PROPER TIME.

STEVENSON , IN NEW YORK FOR A TESTIMONIAL DINNER TO HARRIMAN, SAID HE HAD NO PLAN TO SUPPORT MR. HARRIMAN FOR THE NOMINATION BUT "HES A MIGHTY GOOD MAN." Thinks SENATOR DOUGLAS OF ILLINOIS, WHO HAD FAVORED STEVENSONS CANDIDACY, MADE KNOWN EARLIER TODAY THAT HE WILL BACK SENATOR KEFAUVER. HE DESCRIBED THE TENNESSEE SENATOR AS THE BEST AVAILABLE CANDIDATE THE DEMOCRATS HAVE. KEFAUVER SAYS HES "ELATED" BY THE ENDORSEMENT. BOTH KEFAUVER AND SENATOR TAFT WERE IN BOSTON TODAY, CAMPAIGNING FOR THE MASSACHUSETTS PRIMARY. BOTH WERE ASKED TO COMMENT ON THE PRESIDENTS SEIZURE OF THE STEEL INDUSTRY. KEFAUVER SAID THE PRESIDENT ACTED AS A LAST RESORT AND "MEANT WELL." TAFT SAID THE SEIZURE IS A VALID CASE FOR IMPEACHMENT AND THAT THE HOUSE OUGHT TO LOOK INTO THE CASE. IN WASH

[redacted]

5

HEAVY WINDS KEPT OUR PLANES GROUNDED IN KOREA THROUGHOUT THE DAY. AND THERE WAS NO FURTHER PROGRESS DURING THE TWO AND A HALF MINUTE MEETING OF THE TRUCE SUB-COMMITTEES.

MY COLLEAGUE, ALEX KENDRICK CABLES FROM VIENNA THAT THE U.S. HIGH COMMISSIONER'S OFFICE WILL ISSUE A 190-PAGE REPORT TOMORROW. THAT REPORT WILL DISCLOSE THAT 5-HUNDRED CARTELS AND TWO BANKS CONTROL VIRTUALLY THE ENTIRE COUNTRY'S ECONOMY. THE UNITED STATES [redacted] WILL DEMAND AN IMMEDIATE BREAKUP OF THE CARTEL AND PRICE-FIXING SYSTEMS.

FORMER SECRETARY OF STATE JAMES BYRNES - NOW GOVERNOR OF SOUTH CAROLINA - SAYS IN A COLLIER'S MAGAZINE ARTICLE TONIGHT, THAT IT IS NOT TRUE, AS PRESIDENT TRUMAN CONTENDS, THAT THEIR BREAK CAME OVER FOREIGN POLICY. BYRNES DENIES THAT HE FAILED TO KEEP THE PRESIDENT INFORMED ON DEVELOPMENTS AT THE 1945 MOSCOW CONFERENCES. HE SAYS THE SPLIT RESULTED OVER HIS CRITICISM OF DOMESTIC POLICIES MADE IN A SPEECH IN 1949. MR. BYRNES WRITES, "PRESIDENT TRUMAN IS TRYING TO FALSIFY THE RECORD TO LOOK GOOD IN THE HISTORY BOOKS. BUT NOT EVEN THE PRESIDENT HAS THE RIGHT TO SUBSTITUTE FICTION FOR HISTORY."

AND IN WASHINGTON TODAY, THE 61ST CONGRESS OF THE DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION ASKED THAT A CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE PERSONALLY GO TO FORT KNOX TO CHECK UP ON HOW MUCH GOLD IS ACTUALLY STORED THERE."

[redacted]

IN WASHINGTON, CIO PRESIDENT PHIL MURRAY, SPEAKING AT THE NATIONAL PRESS CLUB LUNCHEON, SAID THE STEEL INDUSTRY IS ENGAGING IN THE GREATEST ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN IN HISTORY AGAINST THE PRESIDENT AND THE GOVERNMENT. HE CHARGED THAT THE INDUSTRY IS TRYING TO CREATE STRIKES AND DISTRUBANCES NOW THAT THE GOVERNMENT HAS TAKEN OVER. HE WARNED THAT THE UNION WILL NOT COMPROMISE ITS WAGE DEMANDS. A SPOKESMAN FOR THE INDUSTRY SAID TONIGHT THAT "CONFISCATION OF PRIVATE PROPERTY THREATENS THE FREEDOM OF EVERY AMERICAN. WE WOULD BE LETTING THE PUBLIC DOWN IF WE DID NOT PRESENT THE FACTS THROUGH EVERY AVAILABLE MEDIUM."

AT HIS NEWS CONFERENCE, THE PRESIDENT NOTED THAT THE FINAL DECISION IN GRANTING THE UNION ITS WAGE DEMANDS RESTS WITH HIM. IN ANSWER TO ANOTHER QUESTION, HE SAID HE BELIEVES HE HAS THE CONSTITUTIONAL POWER TO SEIZE THE COUNTRYS RADIO STATIONS AND NEWSPAPERS - IF SUCH ACTION WERE NECESSARY TO PROTECT THE BEST INTERESTS OF THE NATION.

THE CHIEF OF THE AIR FORCE, GENERAL VANDENBERG, GOT INTO THE ARGUMENT TODAY OVER THOSE 15 RESERVE PILOTS WHO HAVE REFUSED TO FLY ANY MORE. HE SAID THE SITUATION HAS BEEN MAGNIFIED, THAT ITS "A TEMPEST IN A TEAPOT," AND THAT THERE'S NO TRUTH TO THOSE "NAUSEOUS UNDERTONES THAT RESERVES ARE BEING USED IN KOREA AS CANNON FODDER WHILE REGULAR AIR FORCE OFFICERS GET SAFE JOBS." THE AIR FORCE REPORTS THAT SINCE THE START OF THE KOREAN WAR 22-HUNDRED FLIERS HAVE BEEN TAKEN OFF ACTIVE DUTY - 9-HUNDRED OF WHOM INDICATED FOR ONE REASON OR ANOTHER THAT THEY NO LONGER WANTED TO FLY.

~~REPEAT YES - FROM NINE HUNDRED OF~~

There is being waged on both sides of the Misouri a grim grinding battle.... There is great strain on the levees and fatigue and determination mark the faces of men and women..The White men crowded the river too closely but they are determined not to retreat..Flying up the river this morning there were grain elevators sticking up out of a sullen brown sea..It seemed that they should have had lights revolving on top of them;a double line of cottonwoods lead up to just the roof of a house..As we approached Omaha the pilot said,"Wheres the city..there should be a river there somewhere."We were flying over brown ocean that seemed to bend up to meet a gray dripping sky..

In this battle as in war,its the people who lift your heart...accountants and bank clerks wrestling sandbags...the mechanic acting as traffic cop who has stood at that intersection for twenty-two hours.You ask him how much longer he can stand it and he says"As long as I have to."No bravado no heroics just a job to do....The boy driving a big bulldozer who admits under questioning that he has been home..off that big cat,once since last Saturday. Questioning also reveals that he isnt sure which day of the week this is.. This is men and Machines against the river..Its rained all day...Over on the other side of the river about six hundred blocks have been evacuated..There are no children in the playgrounds...the roller coaster stands like a monument to a past age...You can look straight through houses..They even took the window curtains,as well as furniture,ice boxes and all the rest..There is no traffic except for an occasional official car...GIs with carbines huddle around fires built in garbage cans...They look like all the other soldiers you have seen trying to keep warm..They are there to prevent looting and there has been very little of that...The garage doors are open,and the cars are gone..That part of Council Bluffs is a ghost town that hasnt had time to fall down..There is a sign outside one house saying..I shall return...There are trucks that were delivering fur coats and fancy dresses last week..They are now delivering sandbags;a delivery wagon with the name of a sewing machine firm painted on its side opens its doors and dispenses hot coffee.

This is a motley army if ever I saw one... fishing boots galoshes, tennis shoes...golf shoes...sports jackets business suits.....They fight the river face to face..and then it attacks from the rear...sand boils they call them — ..the water crawls under the dikes and erupts behind them..Only thing to do is build a ring of sandbags around it, and keep on building it...took seven hundred men to corall one last night but they did it.....Serious seepage at a critical point on the levee last night...so they decided to build a secondary levee or dike...three hundred yards long..about twenty eight feet high..and it was done in Six hours... Draglines carry alls trucks..I have seen dirt moved in many places but nothing like this.....There is nothing frantic or excited about this effort...The people doing the job dont seem to hate the river..They are too busy trying to controll it...They may win, or they may lose, the big test will come sometime tonight...The men are wet cold and hungry..Their eyes are the eyes of men just out of combat..The eyes of the men who fought the big fires in London during the blitz.....Tonight in council Bluffs the troops will be sleeping in their clothes...men with lanterns and flashlights will be patrolling the levees...many of them are veterans..They have fought the river be before...can anticipate its tactics.....Whatever the outcome may be these people have met the big test.....There has been speculation as to how those of us who live in this nation would stand up to the disasters that march with modern war...The answer is here....There is a community of effort..there is a great deal of improvisation...but above all there is a steadiness and a willingness to work....So far there has been only one fatality along the whole River, in this attack by the Misouri...and that one might have been properly called a traffic accident.. ~~This is a well run campaign against the river...and the real tragedy is the fact~~ that the whole thing need not have happened...

END

One day,somehow ,we shall eliminate thiese recurring battles with our rivers... the terrible waste of property and energy.. tonight those who have left their homes along the Misouri have done what they can..now they must wait...For as Thomas Fuller said..In doubtfull matters courage may do much..in desperate, ~~courage~~ patience....If the whole congress could see this something surely would be done.

Good nite + good luck

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Thursday, April 17, 1952
7:45-8:00 P.M.

ANNC'R: (C O M M E R C I A L)

And now, here is Edward R. Murrow.

MURROW: THIS IS THE NEWS:

The Missouri River is still rising here in the Omaha-Council Bluffs area. Lieut. General Pick, Chief of Army Engineers, says today is the critical day. The weather experts, who predicted the crest would come about two hours from now, are telling us an exact prediction is no longer possible, because of the heavy water pouring into the area, but it should be tonite. Army Engineers feel the fight is just beginning. The river passed thru here today at a speed of eight and a half to nine miles an hour. In a few minutes I'd like to offer you some impressions one picks up tramping thru Council Bluffs, Iowa. Here in Omaha, Mayor Cunningham says his city is still high, dry, and handsome. He points out there has been no loss of life in this area, and he says that even if the dikes should fail, only a small part of Omaha's business and industrial life will be affected.

The President has allocated a quarter of a million dollars for flood relief in Nebraska, and the Red Cross says it will need, to start, ten million dollars for relief in the Missouri and Mississippi River areas. While these two cities, Omaha and Council Bluffs, wait and watch the river, for a hundred and twenty-five miles downstream there is new fear, anticipation of record crests over the week end.

At his news conference this afternoon, the President said, "If the Midwestern Governors hadn't dragged their feet on flood control plans, the situation wouldn't be what it is at the moment." Mr. Truman also talked politics. He said, three months after he began his second term he made up his mind not to run for reelection. The President said he was sorry that Governor Stevenson of Illinois had decided not to be a Presidential candidate, that he considers his special advisor, Averell Harriman, one of the most able and patriotic citizens ~~ef~~ in the country, and that he considers himself perfectly free to express a choice for the Democratic Presidential nomination, but that this was not the proper time.

Governor Stevenson, in New York for a testimonial dinner to Harriman, said he had no plan to support Mr. Harriman for the Presidential nomination, but he thinks he's a mighty good man. Senator Douglas of Illinois, who had favored Stevenson's candidacy, made known earlier today that he will back Senator Kefauver. He described the Tennessee Senator as the best available candidate the Democrats have. Kefauver says he's elated by the endorsement. Both Kefauver and Senator Taft were in Boston today, campaigning for the Massachusetts primary. Both were asked to comment on the President's seizure of the steel industry. Kefauver said the President acted as a last resort and he meant well. Senator Taft said, "the seizure is a valid case for impeachment, and that the House ought to look into the case."

In Washington, CIO President Phil Murray, speaking at the National Press Club luncheon, said the steel industry is engaging in the greatest advertising campaign in history, against the President and the Government. He charged that the industry is trying to create strikes and disturbances now that the Government has taken over. He warned that the union will not compromise its wage demands. A spokesman for the industry said tonite that confiscation of private property threatens the freedom of every American; we would be letting the public down if we did not present the facts thru every available medium. At his news conference, the President noted that the final decision in granting the union its wage demands rests with him. In answer to another question, he said he believes he has the Constitutional power to seize the country's radio stations and newspapers, if such action were necessary to protect the best interests of the nation.

The Chief of the Air Force, General Vandenberg, got into the argument today over those thirteen reserve pilots who have refused to fly anymore. He said the situation has been magnified, that it's a tempest in a teapot and that there's no truth to those nauseous undertones that reserves are being used in Korea as cannon-fodder while regular Air Force officers get safe jobs. The Air Force reports that since the start of the Korean war, 2200 fliers have been taken off active duty, 900 of whom indicated, for one reason or another, that they no longer wanted to fly.

Heavy winds kept our planes grounded in Korea thruout the day, and there was no further progress during the two-and-a-half-minute meeting of the truce subcommittees.

My colleague Alex Kendrick cables from Vienna that the U.S. High Commissioner's office will issue a 190-page report tomorrow. That report will disclose that five hundred cartels and two banks control virtually the entire country's economy. The United States will demand an immediate breakup of the cartel and price-fixing systems in Austria.

Former Secretary of State James Byrnes, now Governor of South Carolina, says in a Collier's Magazine article tonite that it is not true, as President Truman contends, that their break came over foreign policy. Byrnes denies that he failed to keep the President informed on developments at the 1945 Moscow conferences. He says the split resulted from his criticism of domestic policies, made in a speech in 1949. Mr. Byrnes writes: "President Truman is trying to falsify the record to look good in the history books. But not even the President has the right to substitute ~~hist~~ fiction for history."

And in Washington today the 61st Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution asked that a Congressional committee personally go to Fort Knox to check up on how much gold is actually stored there.

There is being waged on both sides of the Missouri River a grim and grinding battle. There is great strain on the dikes and levees, and fatigue and determination mark the faces of men and women. The white men crowded the river too closely, but they're determined not to retreat. Flying up the river this morning, there were grain elevators sticking up out of a sullen brown sea. It seemed that they should have had lights revolving on top of them, like lighthouses. A double line of cottonwoods led up to just the roof of a house. As we approached Omaha, the pilot said, "Where's the city? There should be a river there somewhere." We were flying over a brown ocean that seemed to bend up to meet a grey, dripping sky.

In this battle, as in war, it's the people who lift your heart; accountants and bank clerks wrestling sandbags; the mechanic acting as traffic cop, who has stood at that intersection for twenty-two hours. You ask him how much longer he can stand it, and he says, "Just as long as I have to." No bravado, no heroics - just a job to do. The boy driving a big bulldozer who admits under questioning that he has been home, off that big cat, once since last Saturday. Questioning also reveals that he isn't sure which day of the week this is.

This is a business of men and machines against the river. It's rained all day. Over on the other side of the river, about six hundred blocks have been evacuated in Council Bluffs. There are no children in the playgrounds, the roller coaster stands like a monument to a past age. You can look straight thru the houses. They even took the window curtains, as well as furniture, ice boxes and all the rest, when they moved out. There is no traffic, except for an occasional official car. GIs with carbines huddle around fires built in garbage cans. They look like all the other soldiers you have seen trying to keep warm. They're there to prevent looting, and there has been very little of that. The garage doors stand open and the cars are gone. That part of Council Bluffs is a ghost town that hasn't had time to fall down. There is a sign outside one house saying, "I shall return!" There are trucks that were delivering fur coats and fancy dresses only last week; they're now delivering sandbags. A delivery wagon with the name of a sewing machine firm painted on its side opens its doors and dispenses hot coffee. This is a motley army, if ever I saw one.

Fishing boots, galoshes, tennis shoes, golf shoes, sports jackets, business suits. They fight the river face-to-face, and then it seems that the river attacks from the rear. Out here they call it sandboils. The water crawls under the dikes and erupts like a geyser behind them. The only thing to do in that situation is to build a ring of sandbags around the erupting water and then to just keep on building it, higher and higher and higher, until the water in that circle of sandbags reaches practically the level that obtains in the river itself. Last nite there was a sandboil. It took seven hundred men to corral it - but they did it, all right. Also last nite there was serious seepage at a critical point on the levee. So they decided to build a secondary levee or a dike, and it was to be about three hundred yards long and it had to go up to a height of about twenty-eight feet. And the whole job was done in exactly six hours. It involved draglines, carryalls, trucks. I have seen dirt moved in many places, but I have never seen anything like this.

There is nothing frantic or excited about this effort. The people who were doing a job don't seem to hate the river. They're too busy trying to control it. They may win or they may lose. The big test will probably come some time tonite. The men are wet and cold and hungry. Their eyes are the eyes of men just out of combat, the eyes of the men who fought the big fires in London during the blitz. Tonite in Council Bluffs the troops will be sleeping in their clothes. Men with laterns and flashlights will be patrolling the levees. Many of them are veterans. They have fought the river before. They can anticipate its tactics. Whatever the outcome may be, these people have already met the big test. There has been speculation as to how those of us who live in this nation would stand up to the disasters that march with modern war. The answer is here. There is a community of effort, there is a great deal of improvisation, but, above all, there is a steadiness and a willingness to work. So far, there has been only one fatality along the whole river in this attack by the Missouri.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the Word for Today. Now, here is Bob Dixon.

DIXON: (C O M M E R C I A L)

That's my word for today. And here's Mr. Murrow with his Word for Today.

MURROW: ... somehow we shall eliminate these recurring battles with our rivers, the terrible waste of property and energy. Tonite, those who've left their homes along the Missouri have done what they can, and now they can only wait. For, as Thomas Fuller once said, "in doubtful matters, courage may do much, in desperate patience." If the whole Congress could see this, something surely would be done.

Good Night and Good Luck!

(C O M M E R C I A L)

This is the CBS RADIO NETWORK.

Ediphone trans./E. Scheiner

Friday - April 18, 1952

This is the news:

The Missouri River has passed its crest, here in the Omaha-Council Bluffs area. The weather Bureau says the crest period was reached last midnight and continued through noon today. The Bureau has revised its predicted crest of 31 and a half feet..by one foot. Lieut. General Pick, chief of army engineers, says the danger is not yet over..he won't be satisfied until the river is down to 28 feet. Its now just over 30. The engineers estimate that they have spent 20-million dollars on the Missouri flood so far.. and the danger is not yet over. The weather bureau estimates the river will not be down to 28 feet before Sunday. As one newspaper, the Omaha World-Herald put it: this area is "two days and two feet away from safety." And local leaders are appealing to the men who manned the levees.. and seemingly beat the big river..to stay on the job..until it is done. Already, some of the heavy earth-moving equipment used to such good advantage in this area is on its way southward..to help other communities suffering from floods in Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas and Missouri. Across the river, in Council Bluffs today, Miss Elizabeth McCannon was put to bed..suffering from exhaustion. City officials say she spent much of the past six days helping evacuate families and filling sandbags. Miss McCannon is 71 years old.

The President said in Washington today that he's destermined to keep Congress in session for the rest of the year..if necessary..in order to to get the money he thinks is necessary for national security. In a speech to the Amvets, Mr. Truman said: Congressmen try to impress voters in an election year..they try to make headlines by cutting military appropriations. The House recently took six billion from defense requests. Mr. Truman says this is a terribly dangerous thing..will only invite attack if we continue it. He says that if Congress adjoursn without viting the necessary defense funds he will call the House and Senate back for a special session. To all of this Republican Senator Capehart of Indiana commented: "A typical threat of both little and big dictators.. everybody is out of step but Harry."

In addition to fiscal matters, the President emphasized the seriousness of the international situation. He said we have no reason to be complacent.. we are still in deadly peril from Communism.

And Defense Secretary Lovett says: we cannot afford to relax our defensen effort.. a grim and ominous thread is running through the entire fabric of world events. Mr. Lovett says: If war should come we might have to use new weapons "so destructive that they might leave little of civilization as we know it."

Commerce Secretary Sawyer said today that he will probably announce a wage increase for the C.I.O. steelworkers if union and industry are not able to come to an agreement by next week. Mr. Sawyer has asked both sides to meet again to try to settle their differences. If they cannot.. he will consult with the President and the Justice Department and announce a wage increase for the steelworkers. Mr. Sawyer says the big stumbling block is still the industry's insistence on a price increasse of 12-dollars a ton. They say this is necessary to pay the recommendations made by the Wage Stabilization Board

Price Stabilizer Arnall said today he would approve a price increase of three dollars..no more.

In Korea today, five days of bad weather came to an end. Our Sabrejets renewed their attack against enemy Migs. In six seperate battles they shot down one enemy plane and damaged three others. A few hours from now the suspended secret talks on how to exvhange prisoners of war will be resumed in Korea.

4- ~~APPROVAL~~:

A NON-SCHEDULED TWO- ENGINED C-46 WHICH LEFT NEW YORK YESTERDAY CRASHED INTO A HILLSIDE 25 MILES FROM THE LOS ANGELES INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT THIS MORNING KILLING ALL 28 ABOARD. THE PLANE WAS OPERATED BY NORTH CONTINENT AIRLINES AND TONIGHT, THE CIVIL AERONAUTICS ADMINISTRATION ORDERED THE COMPANY TO CEASE OPERATIONS FOR 30 DAYS BECAUSE OF A PAST RECORD OF CAA VIOLATIONS.

THE NEW YORK STATE COUNTY DEMOCRATIC CHAIRMEN HAVE ENDORSED MUTUAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATOR AVERALL HARRIMAN FOR THE DEMOCRATIC PRESIDENTIAL NOMINATION. THEY SAID THIS IS NOT "A GESTURE OR HOLDING OPERATION." EVERY EFFORT WILL BE MADE TO GET MR. HARRIMAN THE NOMINATION.

FIVE NEWSMEN OF THE LAKE CHARLES, LOUISIANA, "AMERICAN PRESS" WERE AQUITTED TODAY OF CHARGES ACCUSING THEM OF DEFAMING PUBLIC OFFICIALS AND 3 ADMITTED GAMBLERS. THE PAPER HAD BEEN CONDUCTING A STRONG CAMPAIGN AGAINST LOCAL CRIME CONDITIONS.

THE PRESIDENT'S PRESS SECRETARY, JOE SHORT, SAYS THERE WILL BE NO FURTHER COMMENT ON MR TRUMAN'S STATEMENT YESTERDAY THAT HE COULD SEIZE NEWSPAPERS AND RADIO STATIONS IF IT WAS IN THE BEST INTERESTS OF THE COUNTRY. SHORT SAID THE QUESTION WAS "PURELY HYPOTHETICAL AND ACADEMIC."

THE AIR FORCE'S ALL JET 8- ENGINE VERSION OF THE B-36 HEAVY BOMBER MADE ITS FIRST FLIGHT AT FORT WORTH, TEXAS TODAY.

~~AND IN WASHINGTON, TENNESSE'S REPUBLICAN REPRESENTATIVE REECE WROTE THIS SEVEN WORK LETTER TO PRESIDENT TRUMAN. "WHY DONT YOU SEIZE THE MISSOURI RIVER."~~

~~END AARON~~

WASHINGTON NEGOTIATIONS AIMED AT ENDING THE WESTERN UNION STRIKE COLLAPSED THIS AFTERNOON WHEN THE UNION REJECTED A COMPANY PLAN FOR ENDING THE WALKOUT. THE COMPANY WANTED SOME 31,000 STRIKING EMPLOYES TO GO BACK TO WORK FOR 60 DAYS-- UNDER PREVIOUS WORKING CONDITIONS-- PENDING FURTHER DISCUSSIONS. THE UNION SAID: "NO."

~~WASHINGTON NEGOTIATIONS AIMED AT ENDING THE WESTERN UNION STRIKE COLLAPSED THIS AFTERNOON WHEN THE UNION REJECTED A COMPANY PLAN FOR ENDING THE WALKOUT. THE COMPANY WANTED SOME 31,000 STRIKING EMPLOYES TO GO BACK TO WORK FOR 60 DAYS-- UNDER PREVIOUS WORKING CONDITIONS-- PENDING FURTHER DISCUSSIONS. THE UNION SAID: "NO."~~

THERE'S A MORE OPTIMISTIC NOTE IN CONNECTION WITH THE 12-DAY, NATIONWIDE TELEPHONE STRIKE. The WESTERN ELECTRIC COMPANY MADE NEW PROPOSALS AT A NEW YORK BARGAINING SESSION. AND A UNION OFFICIAL SAYS THE OFFER HAS "APPRECIABLY NARROWED" THE GAP BETWEEN THE REVISED UNION DEMANDS AND COMPANY PROPOSALS.

This afternoon I spent some time in a coast guard helicopter...just drifting about over the Missouri river...Only a few men along the levees...many of them lying down Resting ...That river looks like its on stilts...its raised up above the surrounding country....looks like a giant flume or big irrigation ditch...between Omaha and Council bluffs it narrows to a mere twelve hundred feet from bank to bank..and thats where the pressure is...and where it will remain for many days./.It isnt going over the top of the dikes and levees, but this is sandy soil around here and it will be many days ..perhaps as much as a week, before the river stops trying to break out..//Its digging and scouring all the time...but people out here are breathing a little easier...time now to worry a little about sore backs and blistered hands...The victory was won almost imperceptibly..and it may not b be permanent...At five thirty this morning we stood on the bridge over the river ...it sort of strummed,in an off note key as the steel stood against the drive of the water...the bridge shivered and moaned softly..(when the crest came we didnt know it.)...Now that there has come a respite, there has been time to look a little at how this battle was fought...Most of the people who fought it are nameless...some of them just waited for the emergency that didnt come...and as in war,the waiting is hard.....For two days almost everyone I have talked to has said...the key to this whole business..the reason we raised thirteen miles of levees three feet in six days...the reason we evacuated the people so smoothly..the reason there was no declaration of martial law..the reason for almost everthing came back to the civil defense organisation...I think it may be the real story of this struggle..The civil defense people here didnt just make plans to deal with a bombing attack...They trained four battalions of auxilliary firemen...told people how to put out little fires...They trained four hundred auxilliary police...minimum training period forty hours...those are the men who have been handling traffic..the established police force couldnt have done it...Civil defense tried to train one person in each home in first aid.... the safety record in this operation is magnificant...Trucks leaded with gravel and sand highballing thru narrow streets...heavy dirt moving equipment slithering inthe mud...and not a fatal accident....When the flood started the authorities said...first we must make a list of all heavy equipment,trucks bulldozers and the rest....Civil defense reached into its files and said..here it is ..all ready for you.....When men were wanted,civil defense had the plan and the leaders... They hadnt recruited a lot of people and then given them nothing to do..but the equivalent of a staff,comany and even squad leaders had been established....Its like the army ixx if you have a staff and a cadre of officers and non comms.. and then thousands of recruits arrive..you can do something with them by noon the next day...it may not be very good but you can get going....you have your key men for communications...for supply..your chain of command is established... Thats pretty much what happened here...The man who runs Civil defense in Omaha is Sam Reynolds...a grey haired cigar smoking individual who was born to command ...he says he just sits back and watches his organisation function..and learns whats wrong with it.....More special passes are needed...so a printer gets out of bed at four in the morning and prints them....Some billy clubs are needed so a man opens his shop and turns them out on a lathe....The other day they were filling sandbags at the rate of ten thousand an hour..It was decided they required fifteen thousand an hour...so they up and filled fifteen thousand an hour..on a twenty four hour basis.....When the danger became aparent the local AFL teamsters union was negotiating with the trucking and hauling industry.. about a new contract...pretty tough bargaining Im told....both sides just decided to suspend the argument...the owners supplied the trucks..the union men drove them...nobody got paid...but the people and there household effects were evacuated.....A substantail number of people..just ordinary workmen and GIs have said to this reporter...dont forget to say something about the Salvation army...theyve done a swell job....and from what Ive seen they have certainly done just that....This isnt so much a story of a flood...its people...

...those who live on high ground..where no flood is going to touch them...have gone down in the valley to help....The civil defense organisation has certainly demonstrated that its valuable important and effective in a community crisis and performs certain vital functions which are important even if no bomb ever falls on this land...These two cities have changed...the knowledge of danger shared produced added tolerance as it always does....shoe clerks have come to know men who work in the railway yards...Men who own great industries have learned that they have muscles....The people who live along this stretch of the Misouri have gained a certain dignity from this fight with the River...and they have set an example of fortitude and hard work that ought to please their ancestors who floated down this river in flat boats or canoes.....

This is Ed Murrow...Ill be back in a moment with the word for today...

Now here is bob Dixon...

Much of the heavy gear required to fight a river has gone south...downstream to renew the battle...the end of this story is not yet written...but there has been some talk of a banquet or celebration to mark this victory over the River.. One man of some distinction with whom I spoke today said...I will have no part of any celebration which does not include every river rat ...every man who has been down on those levees...The River may still counter attack but tonight there are some mighty proud people about here

good night and good luck

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Friday, April 18, 1952
7:45-8:00 p.m.

ANNOUNCER: (Commercial)

And, now, here is Edward R. Murrow!

MURROW: This ... is the news! The Missouri River has passed its crest here in the Omaha-Council Bluffs area. The weather bureau says the crest period was reached last midnight and continued through noon today. The bureau has revised its predicted crest of 31½ feet by one foot. Lieutenant General Pick, Chief of Army Engineers, says the danger is not yet over. He won't be satisfied until the river is down to 28 feet. It's now just over 30. The engineers estimate that they have spent twenty million dollars on the Missouri flood so far and the danger is not yet over. The weather bureau estimates the river will not be down to 28 feet before Sunday. As one newspaper, the Omaha "World-Herald," put it this area is two days and two feet away from safety and local leaders are appealing to the men who man the levees and seemingly beat the big river to stay on the job until it is done. Already, some of the heavy earth-moving equipment used to such good advantage in this area is on its way southward, to help other communities suffering in floods in Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas, and Missouri.

Across the river, in Council Bluffs, today Miss Elizabeth McCannon was put to bed, suffering from exhaustion. City officials say she spent so much of the past week helping evacuate families and filling sandbags. Miss McCannon is seventy-one years old.

The President said in Washington today that he's determined to keep Congress in session for the rest of the year, if necessary, in order to get the money he thinks is necessary for national security. In a speech to the AMVETS, Mr. Truman said congressmen try to impress voters in an election year. They try to make headlines by cutting military appropriations. The House recently took six billion from defense requests. Mr. Truman says this is a terribly dangerous thing, will only invite attack if we continue to do it. He says that if Congress adjourns without voting the necessary defense funds he will call the House and Senate back for a special session. To all of this, Republican Senator Capehart, of Indiana, commented - a typical threat of both little and big dictators. Everybody is out of step but Harry.

In addition to fiscal matters, the President emphasized the seriousness of the international situation. He said we have no reason to be complacent. We are still in deadly peril from Communism.

And Defense Secretary Lovett says we cannot afford to relax our defense efforts. A grim andominous threat is running through the entire fabric of world events. Mr. Lovett says if war should come we might have to use new weapons, XX so destructive that they might leave little of civilization as we know it.

Commerce Secretary Sawyer said today that he will probably announce a wage increase for the CIO Steelworkers if Union and industry are not able to come to an agreement by next week. Mr. Sawyer has asked both sides to meet again, to try to settle their differences. If they cannot, he will consult with the President and the Justice Department and announce a wage increase for the steelworkers. Mr. Sawyer says the big stumbling block is still the industry's insistence on a price increase of twelve dollars a ton. They say this is necessary to pay the recommendations made by the Wage Stabilization Board.

Price stabilizer Arnall said today he would approve a price increase of three dollars a ton, - no more.

In Korea today five days of bad weather came to an end. Our Sabre jets renewed their attack against enemy MIGs. In six separate battles they shot down one enemy plane and damaged three others. A few hours from now the suspended secret talks on how to exchange prisoners-of-war will resumed in Korea.

A non-scheduled two-engine C-46, which left New York yesterday, crashed into a hillside twenty-five miles from the Los Angeles International Airport this morning, killing all twenty-eight aboard. The plane was operated by North Continent Airlines and tonight the Civil Aeronautics Administration ordered the Company to cease operations for thirty days because of the past record of CAA violations.

The New York State County Democratic Chairmen have endorsed mutual security administrator, Averell Harriman, for the Democratic presidential nomination. They said this is not a gesture or a holding operation. Every effort will be made to get Mr. Harriman the nomination.

Five newsmen of the Lake Charles, Louisianna, "American Press," were acquitted today of charges accusing them of defaming public officials and three admitted gamblers. The paper had been conducting a strong campaign against local crime conditions.

The President's Press Secretary, Joe Short, says there will be no further comment on Mr. Truman's statement yesterday that he could seize newspapers and radio stations if it was in the best interests of the country. Mr. Short said the question was purely hypothetical and academic.

The Air Force's all-jet eight-engine version of the B-36 heavy bomber made its first flight at Fort Worth, Texas, today.

Washington negotiations aimed at ending the Western Union strike collapsed this afternoon when the Union rejected the Company plan for ending the walk-out. The Company wanted some thirty-one thousand striking employees to go back to work for sixty days under previous working conditions, pending further discussions. The Union said "no."

There's a more optimistic note in connection with the twelve-day nationwide telephone strike. The Western Electric Company made new proposals at a New York bargaining session and the Union official says the offer has appreciably narrowed the gap between the revised Union demands and the Company proposals.

This afternoon I spent some time in a Coast Guard helicopter just drifting about over the Missouri River. Only a few men along the levees, many of them lying down, resting in the sun. That river looks like it's on stilts. It's raised up above the surrounding country. It looks like a giant flume or a big irrigation ditch. Between Omaha and Council Bluffs, it narrows to a mere twelve hundred feet from bank to bank and that's where the pressure is and where it will remain for many days. It isn't going to go over the top of the dykes or the levees, but this is sandy soil around here and it will be many days, perhaps as much as a week, before the river stops trying to break out. It's digging and scouring all the time, but people out here are breathing a little easier. Time now to worry a little about sore backs and blistered hands. The victory was won almost imperceptibly and it may not be permanent. At five-thirty this morning we stood on the bridge over the river. It sort of strummed in an off-note key as the steel stood against the drive of the water. The bridge shivered and moaned softly and when the crest came we didn't know it. Now, that there has come a respite there has been time to look a little at how this battle was fought. Most of the people who fought it are nameless. Some of them just waited for the emergency that didn't come and, as in war, the waiting is the hard time.

For two days almost everyone I have talked to has said the key to this whole business, the reason we raised thirteen miles of levees three feet in six days, the reason we evacuated the people so smoothly, the reason there was no declaration of martial law, the reason for almost everything, came back to the Civil Defense organization. I think it may be the real story of this struggle. The Civil Defense people here didn't just make plans to deal with a bombing attack. They trained four battalions of auxiliary firemen. They told people how to put out little fires before they become big ones. They trained four hundred auxiliary police; minimum training period, forty hours. Those are the men who have been handling traffic. The established police force couldn't have done it. Civil Defense tried to train at least one person in each home in a matter of first aid and the safety record in this incredible operation is magnificent. Trucks, loaded with gravel and sand, highballing through narrow streets day and night. Heavy dirt moving in heavy equipment, slithering in the mud, and so far not a single fatal accident. When the flood started, the authorities said first of all we ought to make a list of all the heavy equipment, all the trucks, bulldozers, and all the rest, and the Civil Defense authorities just reached into their files and said - all right, if you want it, here it is, all ready for you. We made it up months ago. We know exactly where every truck, bulldozer, every drag line, every piece of heavy equipment is to be found. And when men were wanted, Civil Defense had both the plan and the leaders. They hadn't recruited a lot of people and then given them nothing to do, but they had the equivalent of the staff, company, and even squad leaders and that had all been established. It's like the Army. If you have a staff and a coterie of officers and noncoms and then thousands of recruits arrive, you can do something with them by noon the next day. They may not be very good, but you can get going. You have your key men for communications, for supply, your chain of command is all established. That's pretty much what happened here. The man who runs Civil Defense in Omaha is Sam Reynolds, a gray-haired, cigar-smoking individual who was born to command. He says he just sits back and watches his organization function and learns what's wrong with it. More special passes are needed so a printer gets out of bed at four in the morning and prints them. Some billet clubs are needed so a man opens his shop and turns them out on a lathe. The other day they were filling sandbags at the rate of ten thousand an hour. It was decided theyrequired fifteen thousand an hour, so they just up and filled fifteen thousand an hour on a twenty-four-hour basis.

When the danger became apparent the local AFL Teamsters Union was negotiating with atrucking and hauling industry about a new contract. Pretty tough bargaining, I'm told, too. Both sides just decided to suspend the argument. The owners supplied the trucks. The Union men drove them. Nobody got paid, but the people and their household effects were evacuated. A substantial number of people, just ordinary workmen and GIs, have said to this reporter -- don't forget to say something about the Salvation Army. They've done a swell job. And from what I've seen they have certainly done just that. The people who live along this stretch of the Missouri have gained a certain dignity from this fight with the river and they've set an example of fortitude and hard work.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the-word-for-today.

ANNOUNCER: (Commercial)

That's my word-for-today and here's Mr. Murrow with his word-for-today.

MURROW: ..... to fight a river has gone south, downstream, to renew the battle. The end of this story is not yet written, but there has been some talk of a banquet or a celebration to mark this victory over the river. One man, of some distinction, with whom I spoke today said: "I will have no part of any celebration which does not include every river rat, every man, who has been down on those levees."

Goodnight ... and good luck!

ANNOUNCER: (Commercial)

Listen to Murrow on Monday.

This is the CBS RADIO NETWORK

Ed.trans.-A.A.Cardiff

Mon., April 21, 1952

MONDAY

This is the news:

One convict has been killed, eight wounded, at the Southern Michigan prison..one of the largest in the world. For almost 24 hours now more than half of the prison's 48-hundred inmates have been rioting.. burning prison buildings.. and holding at least ~~eight~~ 9 guards as hostages. Reporter Ron Gamble is at the Scene..in Jackson, Michigan. What's the situation at the moment RON?

(runs 3 mins return cue:

That's pretty much the story, Ed, ~~here in Jackson tonight~~)

An older prison revolt...at the New Jersey state prison farm in [redacted] Rahway... has now lasted for four days and nights. Two Hundred and thirty one convicts are holding eight hostages in their barricaded barracks. The state agreed to start an investigation of the State Parole Board..as demanded by the prisoners. But state officials refuse to agree not to take disciplinary action against those involved.

Here in Washington today the Senate passed an appropriation bill that contains a clause banning the use of any of the money to carry out the President's seizure of the steel mills. The vote was 44 to 31. Republican supporters of the amendment says it amounts to CENSURE of the President's action. Democratic opponents say it IS meaningless.. that even if the House approves it will have little practical affect. Before the vote, the President wrote Vice President Barkley that "serious consequences" could result from any move to freeze the spending of government funds. Mr. Truman said:"The Congress cannot perform its constitutional functions simply by paralyzing the operations of the government in an emergency." Again the President suggested that he's willing to listen to any proposals on steel that the Congress might make. He said: If the Congress disagrees with his seizure of the industry "it should do more than tell me what I should not do"... it should pass some legislation spelling out what should be done. And again the President warned that a steel shutdown, for any substantial length of time, would reduce the ability of our troops IN Korea to defend themselves against attack. During the debate in the Senate, DEMOCRATS Humphrey and Lehman, and Republican Senator Morse, challenged these republicans who have been threatening to start impeachment proceedings against the President, to get on with their threat .

In Korea today there were only light patrol contacts on the battlefront. But in the air, our Sabrejets destroyed seven enemy Migs, and damaged six others. There is no report on our losses..if any. The Navy reveals that the Communists have greatly improved shore batteries protecting their northeast coast positions. The Navy says the enemy has been shelling our warships at a distance of nearly ten miles.. an indication that the Communists now have radar-directed heavy guns. There was no progress at the Panmunjom truce talks.

The State Department says that at least 62 Americans are believed to be under arrest in Communist China...42 in jail, and another 20 under house arrest. The Department says another 150 Americans have been unable to get permits to leave China. They face arrest at any time. All of this information had been withheld for the last two years because the State Department feared that publicity might interfere with negotiations for the release of the Americans....most of them are missionaries and mission workers.

Two officials of the North Atlantic military organization told us about some of their problems today. General Alfred M. Gruenther, chief of staff to General Eisenhower, says the allies "still lack the necessary force to stop a determined Soviet attack " in Europe. However, he said, our capabilities for defense are much greater than they were a year ago. General Gruenther.. who might get Eisenhower's job at Shape.. said our allies in Europe have never discussed.. let alone planned.. an attack on any Communist countries.

The chief of staff for the NATO defense forces in southern Europe...Admiral Robert B. Carney...said in Washington today that the allied naval situation would be "relatively good" in the Mediterranean.. should war start tomorrow. Admiral Carney says his command is desperately short of land based, tactical air power. And the Italian, Greek and Turkish land forces under his command are all short of weapons, transportation, and communication equipment.

At Randolph Air Force base in Texas today, charges against two airmen who refused to fly have been dismissed. Major General Lacey, said the two men were lacking in spirit, stamina and resolution... and both were incapable of performing flying missions because of their physical condition. Similar charges against four others are being investigated. General Vandenbergh, chief of staff of the air force, was at Randolph today. He issued a statement saying: its not true that the air force is proposing a soft attitude on the question of refusal to fly. He said:"There is no room in the air force for malingerers, opportunists or shirkers least of all."

Out in Nevada tomorrow, the Atomic Energy Commission will drop another atomic bomb from an airplane [redacted]. We're told that it will be more powerful than the bombs dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

The Committee for Economic Development says that the federal budget can be balanced in the coming fiscal year without increasing taxes or [redacted] hurting the defense program. The Committee describes itself as a non-profit, non-political organization supported by contributions by business organizations. Its report says that if Congress refuses to cut down spending to match the income the government expects this year, the budget could be brought into balance with a sales tax. The Committee recommends that this temporary tax on retail sales apply to everything except food, housing and items already subjected to the federal excise tax. The Committee for Economic Development figures that the forcast deficit of 10-billions could be eliminated by: reducing waste and inefficiency in the military budget... giving the military only what it can spend in the fiscal year.. and reducing by almost three billions non-military expenditures.

In the Missouri Valley today, crews are still working to hold levees against the river. There was some rain..that softened dikes and made it difficult to bring trucks into areas where they were needed. The crest appeared to be by-passing St. Joseph. And the levees are still holding at the Sherman air force base at Old Fort Levenworth. Upstream, at Council Bluffs, the tension that gripped the city for ten days is gone.. The thousands of people who had been removed from their homes are now awaiting permission to go back.

The President today named Stanley Andrews, editor of an Arkansas newspaper, to head the Point Four program.. as texhnical co-operation administrator. He will succeed Dr. Harry Bennett who was killed last year in an airplane accident in the Middle East.

Walter Reuther, the president of the C.I.O. auto workers, told a Senate labor sub-committee today that the best way to get a good Fair Employment Practises law is to elect Senators and a vice president who will work together to prevent a filibuster next year.

In Florida, the campaigning Senator Kefauver said he wants fair employment practises in the nation.. But he believes more progress can be made on a voluntary and persuasive basis rather than "through penal statutes." Kefauver today received his first endorsement by a big labor organization... the United Textile Workers of America.. A F ofL.. with 100-thousand members.

Sir Stafford Cripps has died ..after a long illness..in Switzerland...He was 62 a member of Mr Churchills wartime governmet, and later Chancellor of the Exchequer in the Labour government.//.Sir Stafford a brilliant lawyer became the symbol of austerity and continuing sacrafice in Britain.//.He was always a controversial figure, but few men served their country more devotedly, or at greater personal sacrafice.....

.....It isnt easy to find a few words to mark the passing of a friend...but these might be suitable for Sir Stafford Cripps.....Stafford ~~was~~ is a queer duck...When he talks you stand shivering from the icy blasts of cold logic..Yet I never met anyone with more heart who wre so little of it on his sleeve....That was said by an anonomous friend of Sir Staffords....

good night and good luck...

Fire

This is the news:

The rioting prisoners at the Southern Michigan prison..among the biggest in the world..have released two of the eleven guards they have been holding as hostages. One of the guards was ill..the other 69-years old. One convict has been killed...eight others wounded. Prison officials now say they have cleared the big yard..have everything under control except for three cell blocks. Their first estimate of the damages caused by the convicts runs to as much as two-million dollars.

It all started last night in Cell Block 15... 104 of the toughest prisoners in the instiution managed to seize four prison guards, before anything could be done about it. They complained, over the prison telephone system, about brutality on the part of some guards. This morning, a riot started in the mess hall at breakfast time. The prisoners attacked their guards,, threw plates, cups, knives and forks all over the place. Then the broke into the big yard... started to set fire to some of the buildings and rooms. The prison laundry was almost completely destroyed by fire...the chapel and the butcher shop also were fired.. Then the convicts moved into the quartermaster depot.. took some guard uniforms..burned others. Some prisoners moved into the mental patients ward and the epileiptic patenits ward. They broke into prison desks ans files..scattered papers everywhere..set fire to others. They moved into the prison's hobby shop.. took tools they found there, and used them to rip apart anything they could find. They broke the master lock system that controls whole tiers of cell doors. And they managed to take seven more guards as hostages.. a total of eleven. This afternoon 200 state police were called in. With 400 prison guards they started to clear out the yard. Some troopers or guards fired sub-machine guns. They were supposed to fire over the heads of the prisoners. But one was killed..eight wounded.. and a state trooper was hit on the head with a thrown baseball bat. The convict leaders..those in Cell Block 15..had threatened to "cut-off a guards head" if there was any shooting. But after the yard was cleared two of the guards were released. One of the hostage guards, Kenneth Parson, was allowed to talk to reporters briefly. He appeared at a window, smoking a cigaret, and said:"I have been treated all right. I have not been hurt at all." A leader of the convicts in Cell Block 15 told reporters:"We have bargaining power.. and we are sincere... but we don't know whether the warden is sincere or not." Prison officials now hope to get order in all cell blocks before starting to negotiate over the hostages.

Stand by ..Gruenther...

MURROW...Today in NY General Alfred Gruenther, General Eisenhowers Chief of Staff talked about the problems of the European Command...We recorded part of his remarks...He spoke of the Problems of German participation in the European Army...and then he said....

Gruenther Three tenty five....

Murrow....If the agreement with Germany is not signed..the question of the defense of Europe remains unsolved...and General Eisenhowers mission will have largely failed....

.....

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

MONDAY - APRIL 21, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

One convict has been killed, eight wounded at the Southern Michigan Prison, one of the largest in the world. For almost twenty-four hours now, more than half of the prison's 4800 inmates have been rioting, burning prison buildings and holding at least nine guards as hostages. Reporter Ron Gamble is at the scene in Jackson, Michigan. What's the situation at the moment, Ron?

GAMBLE: ....say with any certainty that the problems of Southern Michigan's prison are settled. Let us say, it looks better now than it did several hours ago. State Police Commissioner Don Leonard and his more than two hundred State Troopers have battled a bitter group of inmates all day today, and it would appear the battle is swinging in their direction. It's well enough to know, of course, that there's trouble here, but you had to be here to really get the feeling that this is the worst outbreak of its kind anywhere. The administration building at Southern Michigan Prison is a beautiful place, and on any ordinary day you walked into its immaculate interior and saw friendly inmates in white shirts standing behind the counters. Today all this was changed. There was no air of friendliness anywhere. Your credentials had better be in order if you were going to move at all. The lobby of the "ad" building was alive with Michigan State Police, whose expressions told well the seriousness of this current assignment. If you were passed by Security, you walked around other guards, thru three massive doors, and still more guards. There you were, in the rotunda. Wasn't an orderly sight. We recorded the sound - and you are now in the prison rotunds.

(SHOUTING AND NOISE)

Things have quieted down a bit at the moment. We talked to Jack Underwood of the WIBM news staff, from whose studios we're broadcasting tonight. He told us the last word from prison officials was that the situation is under control, except in cell blocks 11 and 12. These two blocks alone will house between seven hundred and nine hundred inmates. A closer estimation is impossible at this time. Almost every window in the prison is broken and every implement at hand was used - fists, bottles. And for use, if they had the chance, these men had obtained picks and shovels, which they broke into blunt-edged persuaders. Even the recreational equipment, baseball bats, were on hand if the opportunity ever came to use them. Luckily, the chance was never there - and gradually order began to shape itself from chaos. Even Warden Julian Frisbie sounded an optimistic note a short time ago.

FRISBIE: We, uh, think that we.....we have the disturbance under control to a certain extent. We have the men out of the yard, in their cell blocks, have control of all the buildings, and we hope to keep it that way. However, that is merely a guess. It may get worse, or it might get better.

GAMBLE: So, you see, even Warden Frisbie couldn't guarantee the trouble was over. He stated to us a short time later that while right now it looked good, he wouldn't promise what might occur thirty minutes in the future. And the latest word just in, even as we talk to you: all prisoners are back in their cells except about 170 from cell block 15, the detention section where the riot started last night and where nine guards are still held as hostages.

So we may safely say the end is in sight here at Jackson Prison, but there is still a lot of dirty work to be done before the all-clear can be sounded. The residents of this Michigan city hope that will be very soon. It's been a blow to civic pride. And the prison officials, who have never really liked the idea of being forced to do a job like this, they hope the history of this prison will never again record such an event. Until today, Southern Michigan Prison had an enviable reputation as an orderly organization, and it will be years before this nation forgets the news that broke not so many hours ago.

This is Ron Gamble in Jackson, Michigan. And, Ed, that's pretty much the story from Jackson tonight.

MURROW: An older prison revolt, at the New Jersey State Prison Farm in Rahway, has now lasted for four days and nights. Two hundred and thirty-one convicts are holding eight hostages in their barricaded barracks. The State agreed to start an investigation of the State Parole Board, as demanded by the prisoners, but state officials refuse to agree not to take disciplinary action against those involved.

Here in Washington today the Senate passed an appropriation bill that contains a clause banning the use of any of the money to carry out the President's seizure of the steel mills. The vote was 44 to 31. Republican supporters of the amendment say it amounts to a censure of the President's action. Democratic opponents say it's meaningless, that even if the House approves, it will have little practical effect. Before the vote, the President wrote Vice President Barkley that serious consequences could result from any move to freeze the spending of government funds. Mr. Truman said, "The Congress cannot perform its constitutiona functions simply by paralyzing the operations of the Government in an emergency." Again, the President suggested that he's willing to listen to any proposals on steel that the Congress might make. He said if the Congress disagrees with his seizure of the industry, "it should do more than tell me what I should not do. It should pass some legislation spelling out what should be done." And again the President warned that a steel shutdown for any substantial length of time will reduce the ability of our troops in Korea to defend themselves against attack. During the debate in the Senate, Democrats Humphrey and Lehman and Republican Senator Morse of Oregon challenged those Republicans who have been threatening to start impeachment proceedings against the President, challenged them to get on with their threat.

In Korea today there were only light patrol contacts on the battlefront, but in the air our Sabre jets destroyed seven enemy MIGs and damaged six others. There is no report on our losses, if any.

The Navy reveals that the Communists have greatly improved shore batteries protecting their northeast coast positions. The Navy says the enemy has been shelling our warships at a distance of nearly ten miles, an indication that the Communists now have radar-directed heavy guns.

There was no progress at the Panmunjom truce talks.

The State Department says that at least sixty-two Americans are believed to be under arrest in Communist China, forty-two in jail and another twenty under house arrest. The Department says another 150 Americans have been unable to get permits to leave China. They face arrest at any time. All of this information has been withheld for the last two years because the State Department feared that publicity might interfere with negotiations for the release of the Americans. Most of them are missionaries and mission workers.

Two officials of the North Atlantic military organization told us about some of their problems today. General Alfred M. Gruenther, Chief of Staff to General Eisenhower, says the Allies still lack the necessary force to stop a determined Soviet attack in Europe. However, he said, our capabilities for defense are much greater than they were a year ago. General Gruenther who might get Eisenhower's job at SHAPE, said our Allies in Europe have never discussed, let alone planned, an attack on any Communist country.

The Chief of Staff for the NATO defense forces in southern Europe, Admiral Robert B. Carney, said in Washington today that the Allied naval situation would be relatively good in the Mediterranean, should war start tomorrow. Admiral Carney says his command is desperately short of landbased tactical airpower. And the Italian, Greek and Turkish land forces under his command are all short of weapons, transportation and communication equipment.

At Randolph Air Force Base in Texas today, charges against two airmen who refused to fly have been dismissed. Major General Lacey said the two men were lacking in spirit, stamina, and resolution, and both were incapable of performing flying missions because of their physical condition. Similar charges against four others are being investigated. General Vandenberg, Chief of Staff of the Air Force, was at Randolph today. He issued a statement saying, "it is not true that the Air Force is proposing a soft attitude on the question of refusal to fly." He said, "there is no room in the Air Force for malingerers, opportunists, or shirkers, least of all."

Out in Nevada tomorrow, the Atomic Energy Commission will drop another atomic bomb from an airplane. We're told that it'll be more powerful than the bombs dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

The Committee for Economic Development says that the Federal budget can be balanced in the coming fiscal year without increasing taxes or hurting the defense program. The committee describes itself as a non-profit, non-political organization, supported by contributions from business organizations. Its report says that if Congress refuses to cut down spending to match the income the Government expects this year, the budget could be brought into balance with a sales tax. The committee recommends that this temporary tax on retail sales apply to everything except food, housing, and items already subjected to the Federal excise tax. The Committee for Economic Development figures that the forecast deficit of ten billions could be eliminated by reducing waste and inefficiency in the military budget, by giving the military only what it can spend in the fiscal year and by reducing by almost three billions non-military expenditures.

In the Missouri Valley today crews are still working to hold levees against the river. There was some rain and that softened dikes and made it difficult to bring trucks into areas where they are needed. The crest appeared to be by-passing St. Joseph, and the levees are still holding at the Sherman Air Force Base at Old Ft. Leavenworth. Upstream, at Council Bluffs, the tension that gripped the city for ten days is gone. The thousands of people who have been removed from their homes are now awaiting permission to go back.

The President today named Stanley Andrews, editor of an Arkansas newspaper, to head the Point 4 program as Technical Cooperation Administrator. He will succeed Dr. Harry Bennett who was killed last year in an airplane accident in the Middle West.

Sir Stafford Cripps has died, after a long illness, in Switzerland. He was 62, a member of Mr. Churchill's wartime government and later Chancellor of the Exchequer in the Socialist Labor Government. Sir Stafford Cripps, a brilliant lawyer, became the symbol of austerity and continuing sacrifice in Britain. He was always a controversial figure, but few men served their country more devotedly or at greater personal sacrifice.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCAIL

MURROW: It isn't very easy to find a few words to mark the passing of a friend. But these might be suitable for Sir Stafford Cripps. It was said: "Stafford is a queer duck. When he talks, you stand shivering from the ice blasts of cold logic. Yet, I never met anyone with more heart who wore so little of it on his sleeve." That was said by an anonymous friend of Sir Stafford's.

Good Night and Good Luck!

Tuesday

April 22, 1952

D.M.
Doors - Vandenberg
Bankhead Hamm

This is the news:

The Senate today defeated a move to deny the use of any government funds to carry out the seizure of the steel industry. This needed a two-third majority and failed to get it by four votes. The Senate Banking Committee has voted to investigate the way the government has handled the whole steel dispute. And until this is completed, the committee will not work on the new bill to extend wage and price controls. (This bill expires at the end of June.)

A Senate Labor committee looking into the steel dispute, today heard from John A. Stephens, chief negotiator for the industry. He said the Wage Stabilization Board recommendations "ignored the guides" provided by the board's own regulations. He said Congress should pass a law, giving the government the power of injunction for more than the 80-days now provided by the Taft-Hartley law. Mr. Stephens says he would have this law used only where the national interest is threatened, by what he called "the exercise of monopolistic union power."

In the House, Republican Representative Hale of Maine offered a bill requiring the House to find out if the President was, "guilty of any high crime or misdemeanor" in seizing the steel industry. Many Republicans have been talking about impeachment proceedings..Representative Hale is the first to move in this direction. But apparently he will not have the support of the House Republican policy Committee. [redacted]

[redacted].

The prison revolt at the Raway, New Jersey state prison farm ended today. The 231 convicts who had kept themselves locked up for almost 114 hours left their dormitory wing..and freed the eight guards they held as hostages. [redacted]t.

In Jackson, Michigan, at the Southern Michigan Prison, two of the 179 convicts still holding-out today broadcast over the prison radio. They demanded an end to prison brutality and 11 other conditions before they surrender. In return for the safe conduct granted the two [redacted] convicts..who made the broadcast..they later released one of the guards they held as hostage. Apparently their are still ten guards in Cellblock 15..the last remaining center of the revolt. Today the ringleaders threw out THREE convicts..after beating them with a chain. Warden Frisbie says the men had planned to write a note to prison officials giving away the defense plans in the cellblock. ~~There were other reports of some fighting going on among these prisoners. All the guards being held in the cellblock have sent out notes saying they have not been harmed.~~

Out in Nevada today fifteen hundred soldiers huddled in fox holes as an atomic bomb was set off three and a half miles away from them. No one was hurt. C.B.S. Radio Correspondent Dallas Townsend was out in Yucca Flats to watch the bomb drop. This is the scene he recorded.. the other voice in the background is the official observer reporting over the loud speaker system:

(runs 2; 20..return cue:
AS IF WATER WERE FLOWING OVER A GIGANTIC WATERFALL.

While millions of Americans watched the explosion on television, the troops in the area apparently MADE a good time of it. Lieut. General Joseph M. Swing, one of the three generals with the soldiers, told reporters:"The young men were laughing and cracking jokes.

They are confident that ordinary fortifications can protect them."

General Swing said "the worst that most of us got was a mouthful of dirt."

~~One hour and 45 minutes after the explosion, when radiological experts reported the area safe, about 100 picked paratroopers were dropped from four planes flying about one thousand feet above the blackened spot when the bomb had burst.~~ Later, Gordon Dean, chairman of the Atomic Energy Committee, told reporters:"If there had been a city out there it would have been destroyed."

The Air Force revealed today that one of our giant B-36 heavy bombers has launched an F-84 Thunderjet in flight. The Air Force says Consolidated Vultee has been conducting this type of experiment at Fort Worth, Texas. The Fort Worth "Star Telegram" says the B-36 is also capable of "recovering" the Thunderjet in flight..but there is no word on this in the air force announcement.

Here in Washington, the Air Force announced that another pilot has been convicted on charges growing out of a refusal to fly. Captain Carl J. Izard, 34, of Keesler air force base in Biloxi, Mississippi, has been found guilty of "malingering" by a court martial. He was sentenced to dishonrable dismissal and forefeiture of all pay and allowances.

~~General Vandenbergh, the air force chief of staff, says that the majority of the 11 [illegible] similar cases reported so far "involve much more fear of combat than fear of flying."~~

A former air force chief of staff.. General Tooey Spaatz... told a Senate committee today that the scheduled slowdown on air force production is "an inexcusable risk." General Spaatz, who retired in 1948, says a lot of time already has been wasted since the first atomic explosion in the Soviet union. He feels we must build a bigger and better air force than Russia, as quickly as possible. He says the present plan to stretch-out our aircraft production is "gambling with out security."

The government reported today that its consumer price index went up one-tenth of one per cent last month... the first increase in three months. ~~The rise is too small to [illegible] wage increases for unions that have escalator clauses in their contracts.~~

The government today suspended price controls on 16 raw commodities... including wool, hides and vegetable oils. This is the first major price decontrol since the price freeze went into effect in 1950. Its not expected to have any effect on the prices of goods made from the commodities..such as woll clothing, shoes, gloves and cooking oils.

~~Both New York and Pennsylvania held presidential primaries today. In both states the delegates chosen today will go to their respective conventions uninstructed. In New York voters will only select their convention delegates; in Pennsylvania, in addition to the delegates, Republican voters will have an opportunity to express a preference for General Eisenhower and Harold Stassen, both of whom are named on the ballot.~~

Here in Washington, the Democrats TODAY picked up a fourth candidate for president. Averill Harriman today announced that he's in the race with Senators Kefauver, Russell and Kerr. Here is a recording of Mr. Harriman's announcement:

(runs 1;44 ending

I will fight for these principles with all the strength and vigor I have.

In Korea today, allied and enemy negotiators at the truce talks went through another meeting without reporting any progress.

Congress today quickly passed a bill providing an extra 25-million dollars for relief of people in the Missouri Valley area. It was a unanimous vote in both the House and Senate. The river is still rolling southward in a sea ten-miles wide at some points. A spokesman for the army engineers at Kansas City says: "Today will tell the story. IF we can hold the remaining levees through the night, the worst should be over for the St. Joseph area." The engineers estimate that the total flood damage will reach 45-millions by the time the predicted 35-foot crest reaches St. Louis about the first of May.

In St. Louis Today, Fred Saigh, owner of the St. Louis Cardinals baseball team, was indicted on charges of evading 49-thousand dollars in income taxes.

In Santa Monica, California, Movie Producer Walter Wanger was sentenced to four months in the county jail. He was convicted of assault with a deadly weapon.. for shooting the agent of his wife, Joan Bennett.

Here in Washington the White House was opened to visitors today for the first time since it was remodeled. In the future the White House will be open to the public from 10 a.m. until noon..from Tuesdays through Saturdays.

In Indianapolis, the Spanish ambassador to the United States said:"There is nothing in Spain's political life basically at variance with the eternal moral principles, which should govern the free world." The ambassador said his country is willing to join the North Atlantic pact.. and can offer a 2-million-man army to fight communism in an emergency.

In due course we shall probably get some cautious report, about the effects of todays explosion.../but Gerald Johnson once said..."So many of our ideas and attitudes have been vaporised by the atomic bomb, that an inventory of what is left, has assumed a high priority rating."# Todays bomb wasnt felt in Washington... The inventory here is of votes and delegates...xx

Good night & Good Luck -

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

TUESDAY - APRIL 22, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Senate today defeated a move to deny the use of any government funds to carry out the seizure of the steel industry. This needed a two-thirds majority and failed to get it - by four votes. The Senate Banking Committee has voted to investigate the way the Government has handled the whole steel dispute, and until this is completed, the committee will not work on the new bill to extend wage and price controls. This bill expires at the end of June. A Senate labor committee looking into the steel dispute today heard from John A. Stephens, chief negotiator for the industry. He said the Wage Stabilization Board recommendations ignored the guides provided by the Taft-Hartley Law. Mr. Stephens says he would have this law used only where the national interest is threatened by what he called "the exercise of monopolistic union power."

In the House, Republican Representative Hale of Maine offered a bill requiring the House to find out if the President was guilty of any high crime or misdemeanor in seizing the steel industry. Many Republicans have been talking about impeachment proceedings. Rep. Hale is the first to move in this direction, but apparently he will not have the support of the House Republican Policy Committee

The prison revolt at Rahway, New Jersey, State Prison Farm ended today. The 231 convicts, who had kept themselves locked up for almost 114 hours, left their dormitory wing and freed the eight guards they held as hostages.

In Jackson, Mich., at the Southern Michigan Prison, two of the 179 convicts still holding out today broadcast over the prison radio. They demanded an end to prison brutality and eleven other conditions before they surrendered. In return for the safe conduct granted the two convicts who made the broadcast, they later released one of the guards in Cell Block 15, the last remaining center of the revolt. Today the ring-leaders threw out the three convicts, after beating them with a chain. Warden Frisbie says the men had planned to write a note to prison officials, giving away the defense plans in the cell block.

Out in Nevada today, fifteen hundred soldiers huddled in fox-holes as an atomic bomb was set off three and a half miles away from them. No one was hurt. CBS Radio correspondent Dallas Townsend was out in Yucca Flats to watch the bomb drop. This is the scene he recorded. The other voice, in the background, is the official observer reporting over the loud-speaker system.

TOWNSEND: The time is rapidly approaching. There's increasing tension here on News Knob, Nevada. Quet is settling down, altho here and there people are still walking about, talking to each other.

OBSERVER: The detonation will take place approximately forty-two seconds after release, at an elevation of 3500 feet above the target.....

TOWNSEND: Everybody is sitting here, waiting.

OBSERVER: Bombs away! Bombs away!

TOWNSEND: The bomb has now been dropped. It is now falling toward the target. That bomb will explode at an altitude of 3,000 to 3,500 feet.

OBSERVER: Fifteen. Ten. Five...four...three...two...one...zero.

TOWNSEND: That's it. You could feel the flash. You could see the heat. We're waiting here three seconds. We can see the cloud going up in the air.....

OBSERVER: One thousand one....one thousand two.....one thousand three.

TOWNSEND: We're taking our goggles off. There is the cloud, the enormous cloud....

OBSERVER: .....at approximately thirty seconds.

TOWNSEND: Alrady going high into the air ..... a great, glowing mass. The cloud is beginning to expand, a sort of cataract of white foam. Black cloud is forming over the top of that.

OBSERVER: That was the shock wave.

TOWNSEND: At the exact center of ground zero an enormous cloud has spread out for miles over the desert. Miles....I'd say five or six miles at least. It has already reached the mountains on either side of this Yucca Flat, and from the center of that cloud another great cloud is beginning to rise up. And now we're looking up at the atomic cloud, which has risen many thousands of feet up into the air. It's still glowing. And now it's forming the doughnut effect, spreading out rapidly, and the top still seems to be pouring over, as if water were falling over a gigantic waterfall.

MURROW: While millions of Americans watched the explosion on televison, the troops in the area apparently made a good time of it. Lieut. General Joseph M. Swing, one of the three generals with the soldiers, told reporters: "The young men were laughing and cracking jokes. They are confident that ordinary fortifications can protect them." General Swing said: "The worst that most of us got was a mouthful of dirt." Later, Gordon Dean, Chairman of the Atomic Energy Committee, told reporters: "If there'd been a city out there, it would have been destroyed."

The Air Force revealed today that one of our giant B-36 heavy bombers has launched an F-84 Thunderjet in flight. The Air Force says Consolidated Vultee has been conducting this type of experiment at Fort Worth, Texas. The Fort Worth Star-Telegram says the B-36 is also capable of recovering the Thunderjet in flight, but there is no word on this in the Air Force announcement.

Here in Washington, the Air Force announced that another pilot has been convicted on charges growing out of a refusal to fly. Captain Carl J. Izzard, 34, of Keesler Air Force Base in Biloxi, Miss., has been found guilty of malingering by a court martial. He was sentenced to dishonorable dismissal and forfeiture of all pay and allowances.

A former Air Force Chief of Starff, General Tooey Spaatz, told a Senate committee today that the scheduled slowdown on Air Force production is an inexcusable risk. General Spaatz, who retired in 1948, says a lot of time already has been wasted since the first atomic explosion in the Soviet Union. He feels we must build a bigger and better air force than Russia, as quickly as possible. He says the present plan to stretch out our aircraft production is gambling with our security.

The Government today suspended price controls on sixteen raw commodities, including wool, hides, and vegetable oils. This is the first major price decontrol since the price freeze went into effect in 1950. It's not expected to have any effect on the prices of goods made from the commodities, such as wool clothing, shoes, gloves, and cooking oils.

The Government reported today that its consumer price index went up one-tenth of one per cent last month, the first increase in three months.

Here in Washington the Democrats today picked up a fourth candidate for President. Averell Harriman today announced that he's in the race with Senators Kefauver, Russell, and Kerr. Here is a recording of Mr. Harriman's announcement.

HARRIMAN: I am deeply honored that New York State Democratic leaders have recommended me for nomination as a Democratic candidate for President. The action of my friends in forming a nation-wide committee in my behalf, under the leadership of Senator Herbert H. Lehman and Rep. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr. is very gratifying. I have answered their confidence in me by assuring them that I am an active candidate for the nomination. I am humbly aware of the tremendous responsibilities involved in such a decision. I have reached this decision because I am convinced that we are presented this year with issues of profound importance for the future of our country and the world. We must fight to preserve and continue the progress towards a better America and a peaceful world that has been made under the Democratic administrations of Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman. Our domestic and foreign policies are inseparable. The welfare and prosperity of the American people are decisively affected by the success of our efforts for world peace. In turn, our foreign policies can succeed only if they are based on strong, progressive, liberal domestic policies. Recognizing the inter-dependence of domestic and foreign policy, the Democratic party stands for an expanding economy, social progress for all our citizens, and far-sighted, unfaltering world leadership. I will fight for these principles with all the strength and vigor I have.

MURROW: In Korea today, Allied and enemy negotiators at the truce talks went thru another meeting, without reporting any progress.

Congress today quickly passed a bill providing an extra twenty-five million dollars for the relief of people in the Missouri Valley area. It was a unanimous vote in both the House and Senate. The river is still rolling southward in a sea ten miles wide at some points. A spokesman for the Army engineers at Kansas City says today will tell the story. If we can hold the remaining levees thruout the nite, the worst should be over for the St. Joseph area. The engineers estimate that the total flood damage will reach forty-five millions by the time the predicted thirty-five-foot crest reaches St. Louis, some time about the 1st of May.

In St. Louis today, Frod Saigh, the owner of the St. Louis Cardinals' baseball team, was indicted on charges of evading $49,000 in income taxes.

In Santa Monica, Calif., movie producer Walter Wanger was sentenced to four months in the county jail. He was convicted of assault with a deadly weapon for shooting the agent of his wife, actress Joan Bennett.

Here in Washington, the White House was opened to visitors today for the first time since it was remodeled. It is announced that in the future the White House will be open to the public from 10:00 A.M. until noon, from Tuesdays thru Saturdays.

And out in Indianapolis the Spanish Ambassador to the United States said: "There is nothing in Spain's political life basically at variance with the eternal moral principles which should govern the free world." The Ambassador went on to say that his country is, of course, willing to join the North Atlantic Pact. And he said, further, that Spain could offer a two-million-man army to fight Communism in an emergency. There are, of course, some who have some doubts as to how effectively that army would fight.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." But first, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: I presume that in due course we shall probably get some cautious report about the effects of today's explosion in Nevada. But Gerald Johnson once said: "So many of our ideas and attitudes have been vaporized by the atomic bomb that an inventory of what is left has assumed a high priority rating." Today's bomb wasn't felt in Washington. The inventory here is still of votes and delegates.

Good Night and Good Luck!

Wed., April 23, 1952

Wed

This is the news:

The government has authorized the steel industry to raise its prices three dollars a ton. This was done under the Capehart amendment, which allows compensation for cost increases from the start of the Korean war, up to last July. Economic Stabilizer Putnam says the industry had asked him to hold up this increase...he thinks "it was for bargaining purposes" with the steelworkers. Mr. Putnam says it will be sometime next week before he can recommend a wage increase for the steelworkers.

Today, the National Advisory Board on Mobilization Policy... composed of representatives of industry, labor, agriculture and the public..agreed that the Wage Stabilization Board's recommendations in the steel dispute were within the Board's "pattern."

Phil Murray, the president of the steelworkers union, told a Senate commitee that the industry refused to make the union a wage offer, because it preferred that there should be no agreement..so that the industry could have a club over the government's head, to get larger price increases. [redacted]

2

The Senate voted tentatively today to kill the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. After the vote Majority Leader McFarland [redacted] said this will "destroy the effectiveness of the defense program" and deprive small businessmen of one way to seek loans. The Senate then voted to send the bill back to Committee.

The House sent back to its judiciary committee a bill that would let the President appoint 25 new federal judges. Republicans, who say the bill is now dead, argued the new judges are not necessary..and they feel this is not the time to give the President more power. Democrats said the new judges are needed to speed up the administration of justice.

The White House says the President has changed his mind about shifting flood control work from the army engineers, to a civilian in the Interior Department. There is no explanation. At Kansas City today, army engineers are raising the levees..just to be safe. And a fight to save the Sherman Air Force base at Fort Levenworth is still in progress.

The President today nominated Assistant Secretary of the Army Karl Bendetson to be promoted to undersecretary..

General Hull, army vice chief at yesterday's atomic explosion, says its was "a complete success from a tactical standpoint."

A House committee was told by two Treasury agents today that Joseph Nunnan, former commissioner of Internal Revenue, banked [redacted] 162-thousand dollars more than he reported in his income tax..(in the five years from 1945 to 1950.) They said that Mr. Nunnan could not explain how he got 97-thousand dollars of the amount involved.

[redacted]

Chairman Richards of the House Foreign Affairs committee said today he hopes Averell Harriman will resign his post as Mutual Security Administrator, if Mr. Harriman insists on running for the Democratic nomination for President. [redacted] But Mr. Harriman, insisting that he'll carry out his job on a "non-partisan plane", says "it is a common and well accepted practise for men holding public office to seek nomination for other offices."

Both the Eisenhower and Taft forces say they are, at least, satisfied with the primary results in Pennsylvani and New York. In Pennsylvania, General Eisenhower received 675-thousand more votes than the 173-thousand written-in for Senator Taft. Senator Duff, an Ike supporter, calls this "an unbelievably great victory."/Senator Taft says he's "quite satisfied."/None of the convention delegates chosen is bound to support any candidate..but both sides are making their claims. In New York, where delegates go to the convention unpledged and uninstructed, the Eisenhower forces are claiming 70 of the 90 delegates chosen yesterday. Taft says he will have 17.. three less than he hoped for. [redacted]

The Pentagon reports another 295 casualties in Korea last week. And the Chinese Communist radio says we have offered a new plan for exchanging war prisoners./They say, without confirmation, that we have submitted a new list of prisoners we hold..that this list does not contain the names of Chinese and Koreans who do not want to go back north./The Communists indicate they will turn down this plan.

In Jackson, Michigan, convicts still holding out at the Southern Michigan prison..released another hostage guard today..they still hold nine. The prison ring-leader Earl Ward, says there's been some sort of revolt against the way he is leading the hold-outs. Amd the released guard says the convicts "have plenty of weapons and enough food to hold out for a couple of weeks."

A group of Reserve officers at Randolph Air Force Base, have demanded an apology from the Air Force.../.they repeat their charges that Reserves are discriminated against by the regulars./and they contend that air force regulations state that flying is a "voluntary duty."/The first thing that should be pointed out is that this refusal to go aloft is confined..so far as we know, to only about fourteen officers../.The Air Force says it has grated relief from flying status to more than three hundred men, since the war began in Korea./.Hundreds of others have been ~~grxhxd~~ grounded for varying reasons./.But it is clear that some have not been able to stay on the ground thru normal channels..and have decided to refuse to fly, and to risk the consequences./.The airforce must maintain discipline...but these are not irresponsible kids...they are mature men..most of them with ~~familis~~ families...they were out of the service just long enough to get started in their own business or profession.//.But obviously you cant run an air force where any man who doesnt feel like flying can stay on the ground, any more than you could run an army where any man who didnt want to carry a gun could decide to carry a broom or an umbrella//..But those who shout that "the book" should be thrown at these men might take a longer look at the position of the men in the airforce... There is of course waste and inneficiency...just as there is in any branch of the service...our whole military establishment is probably more wastefull than that any other country....and thats because we as a nation are more wastefull than others../.It is true that some chairborne officers draw flying pay for flying a few hours a month..(.men whose flying ability wouldnt be of much use in a war.) Its also true that relations between regulars and reserves arent always of the best..(but the air force has no monopoly on that)..Those who would reduce or eliminate flying pay should remember that most of our Pilots in Korea and here at home are thirty or older..reserves and regulars....Most of our Aces in Korea are about that age...Part of the reason is that it takes longer to learn to fly the newer faster and more complicated aircraft.....Today we were talking to General Hoyt Vandenburg Chief of the air force..and he [redacted] recorded it this way...

VANDENBURG...

(runs 1;28.. ends.. "...take extreme care not to hinder or interrupt the process")

A ~~young man who enters the airforce has his ten thousand dollars~~ government insurance...~~and thats all....If he wants to get more when~~ he gets too old to fly ~~it will cost him much more...~~

Our reserves grow older each year.. Each interruption of their peace time carrers becomes more difficult...they aquire new responsibilities...children..and they aquire more caution too./.Mrs Anna Rosenberg the Assistant secretary of defense said today that our reserve force will be composed of veterans for years to come, ...unless congress approves universal military training...this involves a great inequality of sacrafice...interrupting a mans life two or three times...Mrs Rosenberg concludes that we are making the same mistake we did last time...

So far as the air force is concerned the question of the use of reserves presents a special problem...for flyers..like boxers have just so many fights in them..after that they cant go on,no matter how willing they may be/..the breaking time varys according to the man...but its there.//.Many of the reserves feel they have flown their missions...they are prepared to have another go at it, if the national welfare demands it..but they would like to see a little sharing of the work.//.Men who flew their missions in seventeens or twenty nines and lived. and who are now flying troop carriers...fighter pilots now being converted to bombers...and no prospect of adequate young replacements coming up on a long term planned basis.//.It pretty difficult to see how were going to build an effective airforce by cutting flying pay, and relying to the extent we are upon the reserves who have fought one war.//.This reporter doesnt know enough of the evidence, or circumstances, to hold an opinion as to what disciplinary action... if any, should be taken against these officers who refuse to fly...I know what the rule book says about refusing to carry out an order...but I have also seen men...brave men...who flew and fought well yesterday...and today they just couldnt do it anymore...I didnt know what had happened to them..generally they didnt either..but something had snapped, and they couldnt go on.//.It is a terrible and shamefull thing to see..but it makes one reluctant to engage in the sort of grand sweeping denunciations that have come from some typewriter pilots....

The matter of the reluctant flyers set us to looking for quotations on the subject of Duty...Oscar Wilde said..."Duty to often is what one expects from others"...and it was Thomas Carlyle who said..."Do the duty which lieth nearest to thee, which thou knowest to be a duty...thy second duty will already have become clearer ...

good night and good luck

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

WEDNESDAY - APRIL 23, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Government authorized the steel industry to raise its prices three dollars a ton. This was done under the Capehart amendment, which allows compensation for cost increases from the start of the Korean war up till last July. Economic stabilizer Putnam says the industry had asked him to hold up this increase. He thinks it was for bargaining purposes with the steel workers. Mr. Putnam says it will be sometime next week before he can recommend a wage increase for the steel workers.

Today, the National Advisory Board on mobilization policy, composed of representatives of industry, labor, agriculture, and the public, agreed that the Wage Stabilization Board's recommendations in the steel dispute were within the Board's pattern. Phil Murray, the President of the Steelworkers Union, told a Senate committee that the industry refused to make the Union a wage offer because it preferred that there should be no agreement, so that the industry could have a club over the Government's head to get larger price increases.

The Senate voted tentatively today to kill the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. After the vote, Majority Leader McFarland said this will destroy the effectiveness of the defense program and deprive small businessmen of one way to seek a loan. The Senate then voted to send the bill back to committee.

The House sent back to its judiciary committee a bill that would let the President appoint twenty-five new Federal Judges. Republicans, who say the bill is now dead, argue the new Judges are not necessary and they feel this is not the time to give the President more power. Democrats said the new Judges are needed to speed up the administration of justice.

The White House says the President has changed his mind about shifting flood control work from the Army Engineers to a civilian in the Interior Department.

There is no explanation.

At Kansas City today Army Engineers are raising the levees - just to be safe, and a fight to save the Sherman Air Force Base, at Fort Leavenworth, is still in progress.

The President today nominated Assistant Secretary of the Army, Karl Bendeteen, to be promoted to Under-Secretary.

General Hull, Army Vice Chief, at yesterday's atomic explosion says it was a complete success from a tactical standpoint.

A House committee was told by two Treasury agents today that Joseph Nunan, former Commissioner of Internal Revenue, banked one hundred and sixty-two thousand dollars more than he reported in his income tax in the five years from 1945 to 1950. They said that Mr. Nunan could not explain how he got ninety-seven thousand dollars of the amount involved.

Chairman Richards, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said today he hopes Averell Harriman will resign his post as Mutual Security Administrator if Mr. Harrison.....if Mr. Harriman insists on running for the Democratic nomination for President, but, Mr. Harriman, insisting that he'll carry out his job in a nonpartisan plane, says it is a common and well-accepted practice for men holding public office to seek nomination for other offices.

Both the Eisenhower and Taft forces say they are at least satisfied with the primary results in Pennsylvania and New York. In Pennsylvania, General Eisenhower received six hundred and seventy-five thousand more votes than the one hundred and seventy-three thousand written in for Senator Taft. Senator Duff, an Eisenhower supporter, calls this an unbelievably great victory. Senator Taft says he's quite satisfied. None of the convention delegates chosen is bound to support any candidate, but both sides are making their claims. In New York, where delegates to the Convention unpledged and uninstructed, the Eisenhower forces are claiming seventy of the ninety delegates chosen yesterday. Senator Taft says he will have seventeen, three less than he had hoped for.

The Pentagon reports another two hundred and ninety-five casualties in Korea last week and the Chinese Communist Radio says we have offered a new plan for exchanging war prisoners. They say, without confirmation, that we have submitted a new list of prisoners we hold and that this list does not contain the names of Chinese and Koreans who do not want to go back north. The Communist Radio indicates that they will turn down this plan.

In Jackson, Michigan, convicts still holding out at the Southern Michigan Prison released another hostage guard today. They still hold nine. The prison ringleader, Earl Ward, says there's been some sort of revolt against the way he is leading the hold-outs and the released guards say the convicts have plenty of weapons and enough food to hold out for a couple of weeks.

A group of reserve officers at Randolph Air Force Base have demanded an apology from the Air Force. They repeat their charges that reserves are discriminated against by the regulars and they contend that Air Force regulations state that flying is a voluntary duty. The first thing that should be pointed out is that this refusal to go aloft is confined, so far as we know, to only about fourteen officers. The Air Force says it has granted relief from flying status to more than three hundred men since the war began in Korea. Hundreds of others have been grounded for varying reasons, but it is clear that some have not been able to stay on the ground through normal channels and they have decided to refuse to fly and to risk the consequences. The Air Force, of course, must maintain discipline, but these are not irresponsible kids. They are mature men, most of them with families. They were out of service just long enough to get started in their own business or profession, but, obviously you can't run an Air Force where any man, who doesn't feel like flying, can stay on the ground any more than you could run an Army, where any man who didn't want to carry a gun, could decide to carry a broom or an umbrella, but those who shout that the book should be thrown at these men might take a longer look at the position of the men in the Air Force. There is, of course, waste and inefficiency just as there is in any branch of the service. Our whole military establishment is probably more wasteful than that of any other country and that's because we, as a nation, are more wasteful than others. It is true that some chair-borne officers drawing flying pay for flying a few hours a month; men, whose flying ability wouldn't be of much use in a war. It is also true that relations between regulars and reserves are not always of the best, but the Air Force has no monopoly on that. Those who would reduce or eliminate flying pay should remember that most of our pilots in Korea, and here at home, are about thirty years old or older, reserves and regulars. Most of our aces in Korea are about that age. Part of the reason is that it takes longer to learn to fly the newer, faster, and more complicated aircraft. Today, we were talking to General Hoyt Vandenberg, Chief of the Air Force, and he recorded it this way.

VANDENBERG: We cannot overlook the fact that the Air Force is meeting increasing difficulty in attracting sufficient numbers of young men, physically and mentally qualified for flying. About 90% of the flying officers now in the Air Force are veterans of World War II. Should a general war commence within the next few years, the crucial initial air campaigns of that war would have to be fought by these World War II veterans. The relatively small number of fliers, who have been trained since the end of the last war, do not possess the many thousand hours of flying experience required to operate the tremendously complex and expensive modern aircraft. To reduce or eliminate the flying pay of these veterans would inevitably reduce the incentive of precisely those individuals on whom the nation must depend for winning the all-important air battle. The national pool of militar flying skills is already dangerously small. The problem of increasing this pool is already difficult enough. Let us now, while time for reflection remains, take extreme care not to hinder or interrupt the process.

MURROW: Our reserves grow older each year. Each interruption of their peacetime careers becomes more difficult and onerous. They acquire new responsibilities - children - and they acquire more caution, too. Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, the Assistant Secretary of Defense, said today that our reserve force will be composed of veterans for years to come unless Congress approves universalmilitary training. This involves a great inequality of sacrifice, interrupting a man's life two or three times. Mrs. Rosenberg concludes that we are making the same mistake we did the last time. So far as the Air Force is concerned, the question of the use of reserves presents a rather special problem. For fliers, like boxers, have just so many fights in them. After tha, they cannot go on no matter how willing they may be. The breaking time varies according to the man, but it's always there. Many of the reserves feel that they have flown their missions. They are prepared to have another go at it if the national welfare demands it, but they would like to see a little sharing of the work: men, who flew their missions in B-17s or in B-29s and lived, men who are now flying troop carriers, fighter pilots who are now being converted to bombers, and no prospect of adequate, young replacements coming up on a long-term, properly planned basis. It's pretty difficult to see how we're going to build an effective Air Force by cutting flying pay and relying to the extent we are upon the reserves who have already fought one war. This reporter doesn't know enough of the evidence, or circumstances, to hold an opinion as to what disciplinary action, if any, should be taken against those officers who have refused to fly. I know, of course, what the rule book says about refusing to carry out an order, but I have also seen men, very brave men, who flew and fought well yesterday and today: they just couldn't do it any more. I didn't know what had happened to those men and generally they didn't know either, but something had snapped and they couldn't go on. It is a terrible and shameful thing to see, but it makes one reluctant to engage in the sort of grand, sweeping denunciations that have come from some "typewriter pilots."

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: The stories regarding the reluctant fliers sent us to scurrying about, looking for quotations on the subject of duty. Oscar Wilde once said: "Duty too often is what one expects from others." And it was Thomas Carlyle who said: "Do the duty which lieth nearest to thee, which thou knowest to be a duty, and the second duty will already have become clearer."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Thurs., April 24, 1952

THW.

This is the news:

Defense Secretary Lovett says that any halt in steel production, for a porlonged period, would be catastrophic. Mr. Lovett told a Senate committee he is "not aware of the merits" in the steel dispute. But he wants to make know the enormous consequences of a production shutdown. Any stoppage, he says, carries the gravest possibility of trouble.. would add to the hazards of our armed forces, and other combat men in contact with the enemy. Mr. Lovett said that when the President first called on him for an estimate of what might happen if the steel mills were shutdown, he told Mr. Truman: this could result in tragedy and disaster.. would aggravate "a degree of risk that is excessive right now." Mr. Lovett spoke to the Senate Labor Committee, as the steel dispute cropped up in another senate committee, in the house, the courts, and the White House.

The Senate Judicary subcommittee heard a representative of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce say that the President violated several articles of the constiution in seizing the steel industry. [redacted] [redacted]. AND Lambert H. Miller, of the National Association of Manufacturers, told the committee that if the President's "inherent powers" were carried to a logical conclusion the President, in either peace or war, would be an actual dictator.

In the House, approval was given today for a study by its labor committee of the Wage Stabilization Board. Republican Representative Allen said he believes the board favors labor; House Leader McCormack says the whole investigation is an attack on labor.

In the federal court, Thedore Kiendl, who says he represents 70 per cent of the steel industry, said that the government is trying to "foist" a wage increase on the industry.. [redacted] to [redacted] The steel lawyer argued: if the government puts a wage increase or the union shop into effect in the mills it will cause "almost incalculable" damages to the industry. [redacted]

[redacted]

The President..at a news conference...

[redacted] said his seizure of steel must be regarded against the gravity of the present world emergency.. the necessity for us [redacted] HAVING strong armed forces./And he pointed out to correspondents how he has acted, in the past, under the "inherent" powers of his office. He spoke of what we did in the Berlin airlift, how we enetered the war in Korea./He said once when Yugoslavia threatened to take over Trieste he ordered our Mediterranean fleet into nearby waters..he ordered General Eisenhower, then chief of staff, to send three divisions of our troops to northern Italy. There was no march on Trieste.

Then the President said that in 1946, when Russian troops were in Iran, he gave Stalin an "ultimatum" to get his troops out./Under persistent questioning, Mr. Truman insisted that the word "ultimatum" was proper. He said he sent it through channels... gave Stalin "a day certain" to remove his troops. The Russians did get out..the President said..because we were then in a position to meet the situation in this area.

A few hours later, a White House secretary told reporters there were some "technical discrepancies" in what the President had said..

But, Secretary Roger Tubby said, the "gist of the President's remarks were sound and right." Actually, the whole business of an "ultimatum" to Stalin was not new. For one thing, it was not an ultimatum. Tubby said the President had used that word in "a non-technical, laymen sense." What actually had happened was this: On March 6 of 1946 we sent the Russians a note, made public the next day, expressing our ernest hope that they'd remove their troops from Iran. We also said we could not remain indifferent to continued Soviet occupation of Iran. This was sent through channels..was not a personal note from Mr. Truman to Stalin.

[redacted]

As for the steel case itself the President smiled at suggestions in the House of Representatives that he be impeached. He said..that's political..the Republicans have a right do try it.. he has a pretty good defense. The President said that he has twice asked Congress for advise on how to meet this steel emergency and all he gets is talk that he has done wrong..that he ought to be impeached. The President said he has been abused for what he has done.. but he's not the first president to be abused and he knows how to take it.

~~When reporters asked about his "inherent" powers, the President cited historical examples: Jefferson the man who made the Louisiana Purchase for 15 millions and [illegible] with a movement to impeach him.. Tyler who annexed Texas [illegible] to whom the Mormon government sued for [illegible], California, Arizona and other areas. Lincoln, Franklin D. Roosevelt, all exercised tremendous presidential powers. A question asked is the President realized the dangers in these assertions. The President said of course, the emergency an emergency has to be met.~~

Mr. Truman also told reporters that there's been a lot of "hooey"..his word.. about the possible seizure of press and radio. Last week, at a news conference, he was asked if he thought he could seize newspaper and radio stations. He replied: Under circumstances similar to those in the steel dispute the President of the United States has to act..do whatever is best for the country."/Today Mr. Truman said the thought of seizing press and radio never occurred to him... its difficult to imagine the government taking such a step.

In New York today, the American Newspaper Publishers Association censured the President for seizing steel, and declared it would "resist and defeat" any similar move against the press "by any president." There were four dissenting votes.

Here in Washington, Daniel C. Gainey, the manager of Stassen headquarters, announced the closing of the local office here, and his view that General Eisenhower has the best chance to win the Republican nomination./But, he said, he is not counting Stassen out of the race.

The President sent Congress a message saying, in part: civil defense is equally as important as our armed forces.. but not one American city has made adequate prepartaion s for enemy attack. He accused Congress of being "penny wise and pound foolish" toward civil defense. He appealed for the full 600-million he has asked for civil defense this year.

House investogators were told today that Joseph Nunan, the former collector of Internal Revenue, collected a fee of just under 25-thousand dollars ..in stock... for three or four telephone calls. The investigators said the calls were made on behalf of Brown and Bigelow, a St. Paul firm. The firm eventually received a tax ruling that saved it some 700-thousand dollars.

The Missouri River leveled off at Kansas City today..with no major damage to the industrical areas. River Forecaster Corkhill says: "This is just about it... the weather outlook is bright, and we are beginning to see the daylight."

In Korea, Communist reporters are again hinting that a new development may crop up at the truce talks.

General Ridgeway..who closes his occupation headquarters in Japan on Monday.. pledges that "Japan can and will be defended against any attack."

In Berlin, 25-thousand Communist youths started a "peace rally" at the West Berlin boundary...14 were arrested.

And at Jackson, Michigan, the convicts of Cell Block 15.. have released the eight guards they held as hostages.. and given themselves up.

[redacted] Then they were marched off to a steak and ice cream dinner....

a sort of victory dinner for the prison reforms they have been promised after five days of [redacted] mutiny in which one prisoner was killed, AND 10 wounded. [redacted]

After four days here in Washington this reporter has become a political expert...It is necessary, in order to engage in conversation at any level in this town..(.The process is not difficult...you select your candidate, and then think up all the cliches..and perhaps a few reasons, why he can be elected...you admit with an air of tolerance, that he may not be the perfect man...but ..he can be elected.(and thats all that matters)).If he looses a primary..well he did better than you expected,and anyway primaries dont count...But if he wins..well thats a trend..highly significant..the grass roots have spoken..and the people will not be denied.#.Then of c urse there is the other kind of expert..he ~~concentrates~~ concentrates on thinking up reasons why none of the candidates can win...that of course leaves him in a low pressure area, or a vacuum..but it qualifies him as an expert.#.Most people would probably agree that Mr Truman is a political expert ..but he said today he has no candidate.."at this time"...repeated that phrase twi ce.(.The President has also said that primaries are "eyewash" and we are ~~forced~~ forced to go along wi th him.(.Observe the record, and the experts...Tafts great organisation and Eisenhowers great popular appeal..and right now there is a spread of less than twent five pledged delegates between them.(.and some of them may not stay pledged).#.In Pennsylvania Eisenhower wins the popularity contest but the delegates are about evenly divided..(.Also in Penn. Mac Arthur who wasnt a candidate got fifty five hundred votes...Warren who was a candidate got three thousand.//.Kefauver has shaken many hands,travelled many miles,and has roughly half the pledged delegates that Harriman has, because NY gave Harriman eighty eight delegates in one lump.//.The experts tell you..this is a fine man but hes too old./now here is an excellent candidate, but he comes from the south//.this man might make it but he lacks charm and presence.//.There is no shortage of candidates, but the "experts" can elect or destroy ~~xxx~~ any one of them..or the whole lot.//.I do observe however that the experts..professionals and amateurs alike, are reluctant to risk much folding money.....Observe too that there is a deplorable lack of political stories in circulation.//.However there is sound reason for confidence, and indeed optomism.//.The party will be saved..we shall rise to meet the challenge of world leadership...the budget will be balanced.... there will be clean and competent government...the ship of state will not be without a rudder...regardless of the horse it will get across the stream.//~~xxx~~ and all this will come to pass, because in due course, the whole thing will be taken out of the hands of the experts and settled by the people//.But its still too bad that Democrats and Republicans alike, dont really have anything to say about selecting their partys candidate...

On the subject of Experts Aesop once said.."How can anyone ~~forsixxxx~~ pretend to foretell the affairs of others, when they cannot forsee their own."

And Cicero had a word for those who are occasionally right.."Who is there, if he shoots at a mark all day, will not occasionally hit the white?

good night and good luck...

1952 APR 23 PM 3:46

CBS3308

NY APR 23,1952

ED MURROW

WTOP

FROM HOTTELET -- TODAY IS 30TH ANNIVERSARY RAPALLO TREATY STOP WHEN ADENAUER AND ALLIED HIGH COMMISSIONERS MET SAFTERNOON DISCUSS LATEST RUSSIAN NOTE THIS MUST HAVE GIVEN THEM ALL SERIOUS FOOD PROTHOUGHT STOP ESPECIALLY SINCE RUSSIANS USED TODAYS ANNIVERSARY ADLET GERMAN COMMUNISTS MAKE IT CLEAR IN SO MANY WORDS THAT LATEST RUSSIAN OFFER IS INTENDED LEAD TO ANOTHER RAPALLO DASH INVITATION ADGERMANY GET TOGETHER COMRUSSIA FOR MUTUAL PROFIT AT EXPENSE OF WEST PARAGRAPH TAEGLICHE RUNDSCHAU COMMA OFFICIAL SOVIET REPEAT SOVIET ORGAN IN EAST BERLIN COMMA TODAY RAN FOUR COLUMN ARTICLE HEADED QUOTE RAPALLO OR LOCARNO UNQUOTE SIGNED BY ANTON ACKERMANN WHO IS MOSCOWS TRUSTED STRONG MAN IN SOV-ZONE FOREIGN MINISTRY STOP ARTICLE RECALLS THAT RAPALLO 1922 QUOTE IMPROVED POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC POSITION OF GERMANY UNQUOTE AND STRESSES THAT ITS NOT JUST HISTORICAL EXAMPLE BUT ONE WHICH URGENTLY TOPICAL

STOP IT DENOUNCES PEACE CONTRACTS NOW UNDER NEGOTIATION BETWEEN BONN AND WEST AS QUOTE WORSE THAN LOCARNO UNQUOTE STOP DECLARES WESTWARD ORIENTATION FOR GERMANY TODAY MEANS WAR STOP ACKERMANN HOLDS UP CHOICE BETWEEN QUOTE WESTERN IMPERIALISTS WHO AIMING MAKE GERMANY ANOTHER KOREA UNQUOTE AND REPETITION OF RAPALLO QUOTE WHICH FRIGHTENS IMPERIALISTS PARAGRAPH ANOTHER BERLIN COMMUNIST PAPER BERLINER ZEITUNG SAYS QUOTE GERMPEOPLE MISSED GREAT OPPORTUNITY OFFERED BY RAPALLO STOP THEY WOULD BE TAKING LEAVE THEIR SENSES IF THEY MISSED NEW OPPORTUNITY IN SOVIET OFFER OF PEACE TREATY UNQUOTE PARAGRAPH WESTERN GERMAN COMMUNIST PRESS ALSO PRODUCED INSPIRED ARTICLES SAME SUBJECT STOP COLOGNE VOLKSSTIMME FRINSTANCE DECLARES WESTERN POWERS IN 1922 WERE TRYING QUOTE JUST AS THEY ARE TODAY UNQUOTE EXPLOIT ETBLEED GERMANY AND PLAY IT OFF AGAINST SOVIET UNION STOP BUT SAYS VOLKSSTIMME QUOTE SOVCOMMISSAR FONAFFAIRS CHICHERIN CATEGORICALLY REJECTED THIS IMPERIALIST GAME STOP HE CONTACTED GERMDELEGATION AT GENOA ECONOMIC CONFERENCE STOP CHANCELLOR WIRTH AND FORNMINISTER RATHENAU UNDERSTOOD THEIR PATRIOTIC DUTY TOWARD FATHERLAND STOP RAPALLO TREATY WAS SIGNED WITHIN FEW HOURS UNQUOTE WITH ONE STROKE IT ENDED COMPLETE LACK OF RIGHTS UNDER WHICH WEIMAR REPUBLIC HAD SUFFERED IN FORNAFFAIRS STOP GENOA CONFERENCE COLLAPSED WITHIN TWENTYFOUR HOURS STOP GERMANY HAD AGAIN BECOME INDEPENDENTLY ACTING FACTOR IN WORLD POLITICS UNQUOTE PARAGRAPH QUOTE SOVIET UNION IS AGAIN OFFERIN US HAND OF FRIENDSHIP JUST LIKE THIRTY YEARS AGO STOP ITS DRAFT PEACE TREATY FOR GERMANY GIVES US CHANCE WITH ONE STROKE TO PREVENT CONTRACTUAL AGREEMENTS WITH WEST WHICH WOULD BRING US MILITARY DICTATORSHIP SERFDOM AND WAR STOP OFFERS MADE TO US GERMANS AT RECENT MOSCOW ECONOMIC CONFERENCE ARE ALSO BASED ON ACCEPTANCE OF GERMANY AS EQUAL PARTNER UNQUOTE STOP THIS ARTICLE WAS HEADED QUOTE THIRTY YEARS AFTER RAPALLO DASH GERMANY AGAIN AT CROSSROADS BETWEEN SERFDOM AND FREEDOM UNQUOTE PARAGRAPH HISTORICALLY WE NOW SEE RAPALLO GREW EXFACT THAT BOTH GERMANS AND RUSSIANS WERE

TREATED AS PARIAHS BY WEST AFTER FIRST WORLD WAR STOP BUT IT WAS REFLECTION TOO OF WIDELY HELD TRADITIONAL FEELING THAT GERMANY AND RUSSIA TOGETHER COULD DOMINATE EUROPE STOP RUSSIA NOW SEEMS BENT ON REVIVING THAT FEELING STOP AT END OF 1920 DASH ABOUT YEAR AND HALF BEFORE RAPALLO UNDASH KARL RADEK AND KRASSIN WHO REPRESENTED COMINTERN AND SOVTRADE COMMISSION IN GERMANY RESPECTIVELY HAD APPROACHED GENERAL VON SCHLEICHER AND OFFERED MILITARY COLLABORATION WITH REICHSWEHR IN THE CAUSE OF WORLD REVOLUTION STOP REICHSWEHR HAD NO APPETITE FOR REVOLUTION BUT BEGAN AT ONCE WITH ELABORATE SECRET ARRANGEMENTS WHICH SAW FORBIDDEN GERMAN AIRCRAFT AND TANK FACTORIES ERECTED SOVIET SOIL AND LARGESCALE EXCHANGE STAFF AND TRAINING OFFICERS STOP VON SEECKTT WROTE SOVIET ARMY FIELD MANUAL AND RUSSIANS LIKE TUKHACHEVSKI AND ZHUKOV WENT THROUGH ADVANCED COURSES IN GERMANY STOP WHEN MOSCOW TODAY COUPLES OFFER OF GERMAN NATIONAL ARMY WITH OFFER OF SECOND RAPALLO IT IS PERFECTLY PLAIN WHAT IT HAS IN MIND STOP AFTER ALL STALIN HIMSELF IN OCTOBER 1949 DECLARED GERMANY AND RUSSIA HAVE QUOTE GREATEST POTENTIAL IN EUROPE FOR FULFILMENT GREAT ACTIONS OF WORLD SIGNIFICANCE UNQUOTE END OF HOTTELET, THIS FROM KENDRICK --

INFORMATIVELY FOLLOWING LAST WEEKS WHITE HOUSE VISIT OF AMBASSADOR DONNELLY IT CAN BE STATED CATEGORICALLY THAT DONNELLY WILL BE NOMINATED AS FIRST AMBASSADOR TO GERMANY AS SOON AS CONTRACTUAL AGREEMENT SIGNED STOP HE WILL BE SUCCEEDED AS HIGH COMMISSIONER AND AMBASSADOR IN VIENNA BY LLEWELLYN THOMPSON CAREER OFFICER CURRENTLY FIRST SECRETARY AND CHARGE AT ROME.....END

AARON.

GA PLS NY WISH WA 63

1952 APR 21 PM 4:26

CBS2986

NY APR 21,1952

ED MURROW

NEWSROOM WTOP

FROM SCHOENBRUN -- THE SUPREME COMMAND SWEEPSTAKES LOOKS LIKE A WIDEOPEN RACE IN THIS LAST STRETCH WEEK OF THE CONTEST FOR IKES JOB. THE EARLY FRONT-RUNNERS WERE GRUENTHER AND RIDGWAY BUT STEADY RISE TEMPERS BY RESPECTIVE BACKERS BEEN CAUSING UNPLEASANT SITUATION WHICH LOOKS AS THOUGH IT WILL RESULT IN NOMINATION DARK HORSE ACCORDING TOPLEVEL INFORMATION THIS CORRESPONDENT HEARD HERE.

ISSUE COMING RAPIDLY TO HEAD SINCE NATO COUNCIL SCHEDULED MEET HERE WEEK FROM TODAY TO TAKE UP THIS QUESTION. PROCEDURE IS FOR COUNCIL TO NAME COUNTRY WHICH WILL SUPPLY THE COMMANDER AND MOST OF FOURTEEN NATIONS FAVOR AMERICA. ONLY BRITAIN STILL PLAYING WITH IDEA NAME ONE ITS OWN MILITARY MEN SUCHS MONTY OR ALEXANDER BUT ALL OTHERS WANT AMERICAN FOR DOUBLE REASON - USA SUPPLYING BIGGEST CONTRIBUTION TO PWESTERN DEFENCE AND EUROPE FEELS ONLY WAY GET CONGRESS TO CONTINUE SUPPORT IS BY NOMINATING AMERICAN., ALSO AMERICAN SACEUR COMMITS USA PRESTIGE AND HONOR TO MAKING IT SUCCESS.

EUROPES FAVORITE CANDIDATE IS GRUENTHER AND SEVERAL HIGH OFFICIALS TOLD ME TODAY THAT IF GRUENTHER IS BYPASSED FOR SACEUR THEYLL INSIST HE BE KEPT ON LEASTLY AS CHIEF OF STAFF SINCE ANY SACEUR WILL NEED HIS EXPERIENCE AND KNOWLEDGE JUSTS IKE DID. PENTAGON SEEMS HOWEVER DETERMINED GET JOB FOR RIDGWAY OR LEASTLY BLOCK GRUENTHER. MY SOURCE SAYS TRUMAN DECIDED SIDESTEP THIS INCREASINGLY BITTER ARGUMENT BY NAMING NEITHER MAN. MY INFORMANTS TELL ME IKE WAS ASTONISHED WHEN SPECIAL ENVOY TOLD HIM NAME PRESIDENT CONSIDERING PUT FORWARD. ALTHOUGH NAME IS BEING KEPT TOPSECRET -- NOT EVEN MENTIONED IN CABLES OR LETTERS -- FACT THAT IT WAS SUCH SURPRISE TO IKE INDICATES COULD BE CHANGE SERVICE BRANCH--EITHER NAVY OR AIRFORCE COMMANDER. SPECULATION HERE OFFICIAL CIRCLES NOW CENTERING AROUND ADMIRAL CARNEY AND GENERAL VANDENBERG WITH VANDENBERG FAVORED OVER HERE. SOME OFFICERS EVEN SUGGEST THAT MAYBE FIVESTAR ADMIRAL NOW ON INACTIVE LIST MAY BE BROUGHT BACK SUCHS ERNIE KING OR CHESTER NIMITZ. THEY REMEMBERING THAT NIMITZ COMMANDED MARINES AND OTHER GROUND FORCE AND AIRFORCE UNITS IN PACIFIC AND THAT HES HAD CONSIDERABLE POSTWAR EXPERIENCE WITH UNINATIONS WHICH ADDS DIPLOMATIC PRESTIGE TO HIS NAME WHICH IMPORTANT THIS KIND JOB.

THIS SPECULATION CONFINED SMALL INNER CIRCLE OFFICERS AND OFFICIALS HERE HASNT YET HAD PUBLIC CIRCULATION WOULD APPRECIATE YOUR ADVICE WHATS BEING SAID WASHINGTON THIS LATEST DEVELOPMENT. MY SOURCE ON TRUMANS PRIVATE MESSAGE TO IKE IS VERY CLOSE TO HIM WHICH MAKES ME TAKE STORY SERIOUSLY BUT AM PUZZLED NOT SEEING IT TURN UP ANYWHERE ELSE. HAVE FEELING MY EXCLUSIVE HAS LASTED TOO LONG FOR COMFORT REGARDS

/END IT/

PAT / Please mail to Murrow / Truman

1952 APR 23 PM 4:37

CBS3329 TDY

NY APR 23, 1952

ED MURROW

NEWSROOM - WTOP

HRES INTERESTING LITTLE PIECE YOU MIGHT PLAY WITH ON PRIMARIES. IT WOULD SEEM SO FAR AT LEAST THEY ADD UP TO TRUMANS DESCRIPTION OF SO MUCH EYEWASH. WITH ALL THE FUSS STIRRED UP SO FAR RE IKES GREAT POPULAR APPEAL AND TAFTS GREAT ORGANIZATION, LATEST AP POLL SHOWS LESS 25 PLEDGED DELEGATE SPREAD BETWEEN TWO /TZFT 233, IKE 209/. IN PENNA. PRMARY YESTERDAY IKE BEAT TAFT BY POPULAR VOTE OF MORE THAN 600-THOUSAND, YET AP POLL SHOWS 20 PLEDGED DELEGATES FOR IKE, 18 FOR TAFT AND DESPITE POPULARITY SPREAD OF IKE, FINAL TRANSLATION OF CONVENTION VOTES REALLY DOESNT REST WITH PEOPLE OF PENNSYLVANIA AT ALL BUT WITH GOV. FINE. LIKEWISE, IN NEW YORK, WHERE NO POPULARITY CONTEST, ITS GENERALLY AGREED IKE HAS 70 OF STATES 96 VOTES. GETTING BACK TO PENNA. AND HOW REDICULOUS PRIMARIES CAN ADD UP TO, MAC ARTHUR WHO WASNT CANDIDATE GOT 55-HUNDRED VOTES, WARREN WHO IS ACTIVE CANDIDATE GOT 3-THOUSAND.

AS FOR DEMS, WITH ALL THE KEEFAUVER POPULAR VOTE SUCCESSES, HE NOW IS ALMOST TWICE AS FAR BEHIND HARRIMAN IN PLEDGED DELEGATES SIMPLY BECAUSE N.Y. GAVE HARRIMAN ITS 88 VOTES. ACTUALLY, OF 400 DEM DELEGATES INVOLVED IN PRIMARIES NO ONE ACCORDING TO AP KNOWS WHERE HALF STAND. SO MAYBE TRUMANS RIGHT AFTER ALL ABOUT PRIMIARIES BEING SO MUCH EYEWASH END

AARON CBS NY

1952 APR 24 PM 12:51

CBS2429 TDY

NY APR. 24, 1952

ED MURROW

NEWSROOM - WTOP

/FROM KENDRICK/

RECENT MOSCOW ECONOMIC CONFERENCE AND CURRENT SOVIET ECONOMIC WOOING OF WEST BECAUSE OF SAD PLIGHT OF SATELLITES HAS PRODUCED FOLLOWING LATEST IRON CURTAIN STORY PARA AN AUSTRIAN AND CZECH MEET AT THEIR COMMONBORDER STOP AUSTRIAN ASKS HOW THINGS ARE STOP QUOTE WE HAVE

PLENTY OF WORK UNQUOTE REPLIES CZECH STOP QUOTE WHAT DO YOU DO QUERY UNQUOTE ASKS AUSTRAIN STOP QUOTE WE MAKE POTS FROM CLAY AND SELL THEM TO DENMARK UNQUOTE ANSWERS CZECH STOP QUOTE THATS FINE WHAT DO YOU GET FOR IT QUERY UNQUOTE ASKS AUSTRIAN STOP QUOTE WE GET BUTTER

UNQUOTE SAYS CZECH STOP QUOTE THATS EXCLLENT UNQUOTE SAYS AUSTRIAN STOP QUOTE NO SAYS CZECH BECAUSE WE SELL THE BUTTER TO HUNGARY UNQUOTE STOP QUOTE BUT WHAT DO YOU GET FOR THE BUTTER QUERY ASKS AUSTRIAN STOP QUOTE WE GET GEESE FROM HUNGARY UNQUOTE SAYS CZECH STOP QUOTE WELL SAYS AUSTRIAN THATS GOOD TOO UNQUOTE STOP QUOTE NO BECAUSE WE SELL THE GEESE TO SOCUNION UNQUOTE SAYS CZECH STOP QUOTE BUT WHAT DO YOU GET FROM SOCUNION FOR YOUR GEESE QUERY ASKS AUSTRIAN STOP QUOTE WE GET MORE CLAY TO MAKE POTS OUT OF UNQUOTE REPLIES CZECH PARA MOST COMMON

IRON CURTAIN STORY COMING FROM EVERY SATELLITE COUNTRY IS ABOUT FAMED SOVIET GENETICIST MICHURIN WHO CROSS BRED COW AND GIRAFFE AND RESULTING ANIMAL HAS SUCH LONG NECK THAT IT EATS IN HUNGARY DASH OR BULGARIA OR ROMANIA DASH AND IS MILKED IN RUSSIA END

AARON CBS NY

1952 APR 24 PM 3:13

CBS3462

NY APR 24,1952

ED MURROW

WTOP

FROM HOTTELET -- IF YOU WISH EYE AVAILABLE FRIDAY WITH UNUSUALLY INTERESTING INTERVIEW ADENAUER BROADCASTING GERMRADIO TONIGHT STOP IN IT HE ADVOCATES FOUR POWER CONFERENCE CUMRUSSIA COMMA SUGGESTS WEST SHOULD DROP INSISTENCE ON UNINATIONS COMMISSION TO INVESTIGATE POSSIBILITY FREE ELECTIONS IN SOVZONE IF THIS DEMAND BLOCKS CONFERENCE CUMRUSSIA COMMA DECLARES RUSSIA MUST SHOW GOOD WILL BY GIVING UP ODER NEISSE LINE AND NEUTRALIZATION OF GERMANY STOP ADENAUER ALSO STRESSES WANTS PEACEFULLY UNITED GERMANY WITHIN UNISTATES OF EUROPE AND DENIES THERE ANY CONTRADICTION BETWEEN HIS DOMESTIC POLICY GERMUNITY AND FORN PLICY INTEGRATING GERMANY CUMWESTERN COMMUNITY PARAGRAPH PLEASE CALL THIS INTERVIEW ADMURROWS ATTENTION STOP AGENCIES SHOULD BE MOVING IT THIS EVENING

--END IT--

AARON.

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

THURSDAY - APRIL 24, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Defense Secretary Lovett says that any halt in steel production for a prolonged period would be catastrophic. Mr. Lovett told a Senate committee he is not aware of the merits in the steel dispute, but he wants to make known the enormous consequences of a production shutdown. Any stoppage, he says, carries the gravest possibility of trouble, would add to the hazards of our armed forces and other combat men in contact with the enemy. Mr. Lovett said that when the President first called on him for an estimate of what might happen if the steel mills were shut down, he told Mr. Truman this could result in tragedy and disaster, would aggravate a degree of risk that is excessive right now. Mr. Lovett spoke to the Senate Labor Committee as the steel dispute cropped up in another Senate committee, in the House, the courts, and the White House.

The Senate Judiciary subcommittee heard a representative of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce say that the President violated several articles of the Constitution in seizing the steel industry. And Lambert H. Miller of the National Association of Manufacturers told the committee that if the President's inherent powers were carried to a logical conclusion, the President, in either peace or war, would be an actual dictator.

In the House, approval was given today for a study by its Labor Committee of the Wage Stabilization Board. Republican Representative Allen said he believes the board favors labor. House leader McCormick says the whole investigation is an attack on labor.

In the Federal Court, Theodore Kiendl, who says he represents seventy per cent of the steel industry, said that the Government is trying to foist a wage increase on the industry. The steel lawyer argued, "if the Government puts a wage increase or the union shop into effect in the mills, it will cause almost incalculable damage to the industry."

The President, at a news conference, said his seizure of the steel mills must be regarded against the gravity of the present world emergency, the necessity for us having strong armed forces, and he pointed out to correspondents how he has acted in the past under the inherent powers of his office. He spoke of what he did in the Berlin airlift, how we entered the war in Korea. He said once when Yugoslavia threatened to take over Trieste, he ordered our Mediterranean fleet into near-by waters; he ordered General Eisenhower, then Chief of Staff, to send three divisions of our troops to northern Italy. There was no march on Trieste. Then the President said that, in 1946, when Russian troops were in Iran, he gave Stalin an ultimatum to get his troops out. Under persistent questioning, Mr. Truman insisted that the word "ultimatum" was proper. He said he sent it thru channels, gave Stalin a day certain to remove his troops. The Russians did get out, the President said, because we were then in a position to meet the situation in this area. A few hours later a White House secretary told reporters there were some technical discrepancies in what the President had said. But Secretary Roger Tubby said, "the gist of the President's remarks were sound and right." Actually, the whole business of an ultimatur to Stalin was not new. For one thing, it was not an ultimatum. Tubby said the President had used that word in a non-technical, layman sense.

What actually had happened was this: On March 6th of 1946, we sent the Russians a note, made it public the next day, expressing our honest hope that they'd remove their troops from Iran. We also said we could not remain indifferent to continued Soviet occupation of Iran. This was sent thru channels, was not a personal note from Mr. Truman to Stalin.

As for the steel case itself, the President smiled at suggestions in the House of Representatives that he be impeached. He said, "that's political. The Republicans have a right to try it." He said he had a pretty good defense. The President said that he has twice asked Congress for advice on how to meet this steel emergency, and all he gets is talk that he has done wrong, that he ought to be impeached. The President said he has been abused for what he has done, but he's not the first President to be abused and he knows how to take it.

Mr. Truman also told reporters that there's been a lot of "hooey" - that was his word - about the possible seizure of press and radio. Last week at a news conference he was asked if he thought he could seize newspapers and radio stations. He replied: "Under circumstances similar to those in the steel dispute, the President of the United States has to act, has to do whatever is best for the country." Today Mr. Truman said the thought of seizing press and radio never occurred to him: it's difficult to imagine the Government taking such a step. In New York today the American Newspaper Publisher's Association censured the President for seizing steel and declared it would "resist and defeat" any similar move against the press by any President. There were four dissenting votes.

Here in Washington, Daniel C. Gainey, the manager of Stassen Headquarters, announced the closing of the local office here an announced his view that General Eisenhower has the best chance to win the Republican nomination, but he said he is not counting Stassen out of the race.

The President sent Congress a message, saying in part, "civil defense is equally as important as our armed forces, but not one American city has made adequate preparations for enemy attack." He accused Congress of being penny wise and pound foolish toward civil defense. He appealed for the full 600 million he has asked for civil defense this year.

House investigators were told today that Joseph Noonan, the former Collector of Internal Revenue, collected a fee of just under $25,000 in stock for three or four telephone calls. The investigators said the calls were made on behalf of Brown & Bigelow, a St. Paul firm. The firm eventually received a tax ruling that saved it some $700,000.

The Missouri River leveled off at Kansas City today, with no major damage to the industrial areas. River Forecaster Corkhill says, "this is just about it; the weather outlook is bright, and we're beginning to see the daylight."

In Korea, Communist reporters are again hinting that a new development may crop up at the truce talks.

General Ridgway, who closes his occupation headquarters in Japan on Monday, pledges that Japan can and will be defended against any attack.

In Berlin, 25,000 Communist youths started a "peace" rally at the West Berlin boundary. Fourteen were arrested.

And at Jackson, Michigan, the convicts of cell block 15 have released the eight guards they held as hostages and the prisoners have given themselves up. Then they were marched off to a steak and ice cream dinner, apparently a sort of victory dinner for the prison reforms they had been promised, after five days of mutiny, in the course of which one prisoner was killed and ten wounded.

After about four days here in Washington, this reporter has become a political expert. It is necessary, in order to engage in conversation at almost any level in this town. The process is not particularly difficult. You just select your candidate and then think up all the cliches and perhaps a few reasons why he can be elected. You're obliged to admit with an air of tolerance that he may not be the perfect man, but he can be elected. And that's all that matters. If he loses a primary, well, then he did better than you expected; and anyway, primaries don't count. But if he wins - well, that's a trend, highly significant; the grass roots have spoken and the people will not be denied.

Then, of course, there is the other kind of expert. He concentrates on thinking up reasons why none of the candidates can win. That, of course, leaves him in a low-pressure area, or sort of vacuum. But it does qualify him as an expert for conversational purposes.

Most people would probably agree that Mr. Truman is a political export, but he said today he has no candidate - at this time. He repeated that phrase twice. The President has also said that primaries are eyewash, and we are forced to go along with him. Observe the record and the experts. Senator Taft's great organization and Eisenhower's great popular appeal, and right now there is a spread of less then twenty-five delegates pledged between the two of them, and some of those delegates may not stay pledged.

In Pennsylvania General Eisenhower wins the popularity contest by a wide margin, but the delegates are just about evenly divided between the two men. Also in Pennsylvania, General MacArthur, who is not a candidate, got fifty-five hundred votes. Governor Earl Warren, who was a candidate, got but three thousand. Senator Estes Kefauver has shaken many hands, has traveled many miles thruout the land, and he has, roughly, half the pledged delegates that Averell Harriman has, because New York gave Harriman eighty-eight delegates, all in one big lump.

The experts here around Washington who attempt to instruct you will tell you things like this: Now, this is a fine man, but unfortunately he's too old. Now, here is an excellent candidate, but unfortunately he comes from the South. This man might make it, but he lacks charm and presence. There is no shortage of candidates, but the experts can elect or destroy any one of them or the whole lot. I do observe, however, that the experts, professionals and amateurs alike, are reluctant to risk much folding money. Observe too that there is a deplorable lack of political stories in circulation. However, there is sound reason for confidence and, indeed, optimism. The party, whichever one you choose, will be saved. We shall rise to meet the challenge of world leadership. The budget will be balanced. There will be clean and competent government. The ship of state will not be without a rudder. Regardless of the horse, it will get across the stream. And all this will come to pass because in due course the whole thing will be taken out of the hands of the experts and settled by the people. But it still seems rather too bad that Democrats and Republicans alike don't really have anything to say about selecting their party's candidate.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: We were speaking a moment ago about political experts - and on the subject of experts Aesop once said: "How can anyone pretend to foretell the affairs of others, when they cannot foresee their own?" And Cicero had a word for those who were occasionally right, for whatever reason. He said: "Who is there, if he shoots at a mark all day, will not occasionally hit the white?"

Good Night and Good Luck!

Friday - April 25, 1952

This is the news:

The government today authorized the steel industry to ask for a price boost averaging three dollars a ton.(effective the first of May)/Price Chief Arnall says studies made by his office, indicate the companies are not entitled to a bigger raise./And for the first time an industry official has suggested what the steel companies would like./Clarence B. Randall, president of Inland Steel, says that if the government gives the steelworkers a raise of 17 and a half cents an hour..(the highest wage offer made by the industry before negotiations collapsed).then the industry would want a price increase of five and a half dollars a ton.

In the federal court in Washington, Judge David A. Pine has taken under advisement industry arguments to ban any government wage increase to the steel workers..and to return the mills to their owners./Today, Assistant Attorney General Holmes Baldridge argued:"It is our position that the President is accountable only to the country.. and that the decisions of the President are conclusive."He said: the Constitution limits the legislative and judicial branches of the government, but it does not limit the executive branch..the President./Mr. Baldridge told the court:

there is not one instance on the record, where a federal court has stopped the president from carrying out an executive power.. the courts cannot interfere with the president. To this the industry lawyers replied: " this is shocking.. a royal perogative..where are the limits.. its contrary to democratic principles." And Judge Pine asked [redacted] Mr. Baldridge:"Suppose the President, in the public interest, requires the seizure of your home. Do you contend the courts cannot stop him?" Mr. Baldridge said he would rather not answer that. And Charles Tuttle, attorney for Armco steel said:"To say that the president, is in effect, the steward of the nation, implies that the people of the nation are wards of the steward." He called this case the most serious "issue that the country has faced in a century."

A number of present and former top military officials made known their views today against [redacted] eceonomy moves, when aimed at the military. Lieut. General Whitehead, former commander of the Continental air command, says the Defense Department has made "a terrible mistake", in deciding to stretch out the build-up of our air force. He told a Senate committee that when he resigned, nine months ago, an enemy attack on this country would have succeeded

"beyond the finest hopes of its commanders."

Air Force Secretary Finletter says House cuts in the military budget, if approved by the Senate, would increase the chances of war, and reduce our chances of winning a war.

The chief of Naval operations, Admiral Fechteler, says the refusal of Congress to approve funds for a second super-aircraft carrier is "an unnecessary curtailment of our military air potential." He says the Navy offered to reduce other construction projects, if it could go ahead with the new carrier. But the House specifically banned the use of any funds to get the carrier started.

And a House investigating committee says it has evidence of "improper relationships" between high-ranking government officials, and some companies that sell spare automotive parts to the government. No names are mentioned.

The Navy reports that thirty sailors were killed off Korea on Monday when an explosion occurred in a gun turret on the cruiser St. Paul. (the worst naval disaster of the Korean war) Enemy guns were not firing at the St. Paul --BUT WE WERE FIRING AT THEM-- when the explosion occurred. All 30 victims were killed by asphixiation due to burning gases.

In Korea today, the Communists broke off secret talks on exchanging war prisoners..after we announced that we would return less than half the enemy prisoners we hold. A few hours later we suggested a Sunday meeting of the highest-officers on each Side. Our command has not explained just what it proposes to do or say.

Navy Secretary Kimball, speaking in Detroit, urges more aid to the Chinese Nationalists on Formosa "to make them more able to fight."

In London, Prime Minister Churchill told the British people that they can win peace and prosperity in three or four years, if they work hard and help improve Britain's financial position.

In West Germany, Socialist Leader Kurt Schumacher wants the western powers to meet with the Russians immediately..(on the Soviet proposal to unite all Germany.)

And the State Department says we are going to resume military aid to Iran. Because the Iranians have pledged to "resist aggression and strengthen their defensive capabilities."

In Washington, the House of Representatives has voted to wipe out all racial barriers to American citizenship in our immigration laws. If approved by the Senate, this law would make all Asiatics eligible for naturalization. At present the law excludes Japanese, Indonesians, Burmese, Siamese and some people of the Pacific islands, from citizenship.

The Republican campaign leaders seem to be quite some votes apart on the comparative strength of their candidates. Here's today's political news: The New York Times says Harold Stassen feels he has accomplished the main objective of his campaign. That was: to stop the Taft bandwagon.

David Ingalls, the Taft campaign manager, says this interview proves that Stassen has been just a stalking horse.. a "hatchet man" for Eisenhower. Mr. Ingalls claims that Taft now has 300 delegates behind him.. with less than half of all convention delegates chosen.

Senator Taft himself predicts that on the first ballot at Chicago he expects 650 votes... 47 more than he needs for the nomination. Again the Senator called on General Eisenhower to make his views on all issues known to the people.

And the Eisenhower campaign manager, Senator Lodge, says the General will do just that... although he will not "hook a private car on to the back of a train for a whistle stop tour." Lodge claims that the recent primaries, the polls and the sounding of opinion by newspapers show that Eisenhower is "the party's best vote-getter..and a winner.

And Labor Secretary Tobin, a Democrat, says his party is not interested in a mystery man.. and "won't be satisfied with a smile or a good military record, or a knack for kissing babies."

Edward R. Murrow: April 25, 1952. 7.45 p.m

The Missouri River is still falling at Kansas City; (the danger appears to be past there.) The feeling along the Mississippi seems to be that the worst is over. / Governor Beardsley of Iowa has asked the President to name all the areas bordering the Mississippi as disaster areas. / After a tour of the Dubuque area he said: "The industrial flooding there was the worst I have ever seen.

The news despatches report that the Missouri down-stream from Kansas City is spreading out over fertile farmland. There is, of course, no drama to this, except for the people who own the farms, and who may miss one crop or possibly two.

In Washington, the House slashed a hundred and twenty-eight million dollars from the proposed flood control funds. / The President appealed to the Senate to restore the cut made by the House. He said: "There is no economy in spending less than we can afford on ~~XXX~~ our efforts to stop these disastrous floods." / He said his proposal for a total of six hundred million dollars for this purpose was a minimum; that many desirable projects for flood control had been put off, or eliminated, because of our heavy armament expenditures. / Mr. Truman said the cuts proposed by the ~~XXXXXXX~~ House would lose us far more than would be saved in terms of dollars and ~~XXX~~ cents.

There is of course no way of telling what the Senate will do, but the President was probably right when he said there wouldn't be any question about it if the Senators could walk through the devastation that floods leave behind.

The rich top soil carried away by the Missouri, the upper Mississippi the Red River of the north isn't going to be replaced. If the four dams under construction on the upper Missouri had been finished, there wouldn't have been any damage on the main stem of the Missouri this year. The House cut would stop work on two of these dams completely, and slow down the other two. One thing is sure: if all the Senators lived along the Missouri they would either vote to restore the cut or they wouldn't be Senators after the next election.

We have our troubles with floods, politicians, steel and a host of other matters; in addition to all these there is a shortage of good political stories. In Germany under the Nazis, in England under the bombs, it was often possible to judge the temper of the people by the stories they told. Here are two now making the rounds in the satellite countries of Eastern Europe - being bootlegged so to speak. They may give some clue as to the climate of opinion there. # An Austrian and a Czech meet at their common frontier. The Austrian says: "How're things?" The Czech replies: "Oh, we have plenty of work." Says the Austrian: "What do you do?" The Czech replies: "We make pots from clay, and sell them to Denmark." "That's fine; what do you get for the pots?" "We get butter", says the Czech. "That's a fair trade", replies the Austrian. But the Czech says: "Not so good, because we sell the butter to Hungary." "But what do you get for the butter", asks the ~~XXXXXXX~~ Austrian. And the reply comes back: "We get geese from Hungary." "Well", remarks the Austrian, "that's good, too." And the Czech replies: "Not so; because we then sell the Hungarian geese to the Soviet Union." And then the Austrian wants to know: "But what do you get from the Soviet Union for your geese?" And the Czech answers: "We get more clay to make more pots".

There is another Iron Curtain story coming from every satellite country, concerning a famous Russian geneticist, who is said to have cross-bred a cow and a giraffe. The resulting animal has such a long neck that it eats in Hungary, or Bulgaria, or Rumania, and is milked in Russia.

Flood controll is urgent business

~~Nothing could be~~ of ~~greater urgency than the matter of flood control.~~ Yet, as Paul Sears once remarked:"How far must suffering and misery go, before we see that even in the day of vast cities and powerful machines, the good earth is our mother, and that if we destroy her, we destroy ourselves." There is no cheap or easy solution. But H.H. Hart gave the alternative when he said:"If man cheats the earth, the earth will cheat man." -

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

FRIDAY - APRIL 25, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Government today authorized the steel industry to ask for a price boost averaging three dollars a ton (effective the first of May). Price Chief Arnall says studies made by his office, indicate the companies are not entitled to a bigger raise. And for the first time an industry official has suggested what the steel companies would like. Clarence B. Randall, president of Inland Steel, says that if the Government gives the steelworkers a raise of 17 and a half cents an hour, (the highest wage offer made by the industry before negotiations collapsed), then the industry would want a price increase of five and a half dollars a ton.

In the federal court in Washington, Judge David A. Pine has taken under advisement industry arguments to ban any government wage increase to the steel workers, and to return the mills to their owners. Today, Assistant Attorney General Holmes Baldridge argued: "It is our position that the President is accountable only to the country, and that the decisions of the President are conclusive." He said: the Constitution limits the legislative and judicial branches of the Government, but it does not limit the executive branch....the President. Mr. Baldridge told the court: there is not one instance on the record, where a federal court has stopped the President from carrying out an executive power.....the courts cannot interfere with the President. To this the industry lawyers replied: "This is shocking....a royal perogative....where are the limits....its contrary to democratic principles." And Judge Pine asked Mr. Baldridge: "Suppose the President, in the public interest, requires the seizure of your home. Do you contend the courts cannot stop him?" Mr. Baldridge said he would rather not answer that. And Charles Tuttle, attorney for Armco steel said: "To say that the President is, in effect, the steward of the nation, implies that the people of the nation are wards of the steward." He called this case the most serious "issue that the country has faced in a century."

A number of present and former top military officials made known their views today against economy moves when aimed at the military. Lieut. General Whitehead, former commander of the Continental Air Command, says the Defense Department has made "a terrible mistake," in deciding to stretch out the buildup of our Air Force. He told a Senate committee that when he resigned, nine months ago, an enemy attack on this country would have succeeded "beyond the finest hopes of its commanders."

Air Force Secretary Fineletter says House cuts in the military budget, if approved by the Senate, would increase the chances of war, and reduce our chances of winning a war.

The chief of Naval operations, Admiral Fechteler, says the refusal of Congress to approve funds for a second super-aircraft carrier is "an unnecessary curtailment of our military air potential." He says the Navy offered to reduce other construction projects if it could go ahead with the new carrier. But the House specifically banned the use of any funds to get the carrier started.

And a House investigating committee says it has evidence of "improper relationships" between high-ranking government officials and some companies that sell spare automotive parts to the Government. No names are mentioned.

The Navy reports that thirty sailors were killed off Korea on Monday when an explosion occurred in a gun turret on the cruiser St. Paul, (the worst naval disaster of the Korean war). Enemy guns were not firing at the St. Paul, but we were firing at them when the explosion occurred. All 30 victims were killed by asphixiation due to burning gases.

In Korea today, the Communists broke off secret talks on exchanging war prisoners, after we announced that we would return less than half the enemy prisoners we hold. A few hours later we suggested a Sunday meeting of the highest officers en each side. Our command has not explained just what it proposes to do or say.

Navy Secretary Kimball, speaking in Detroit, urges more aid to the Chinese Nationalists on Formosa "to make them more able to fight."

In London, Prime Minister Churchill told the British people that they can win peace and prosperity in three or four years, if they work hard and help improve Britain's financial position.

In West Germany, Socialist Leader Kurt Schumacher wants the western powers to meet with the Russians immediately, (on the Soviet proposal to unite all Germany).

And the State Department says we are going to resume military aid to Iran. Because the Iranians have pledged to "resist aggression and strengthen their defensive capabilities."

In Washington, the House of Representatives has voted to wipe out all racial barriers to American citizenship in our immigration laws. If approved by the Senate, this law would make all Asiatics eligible for naturalization. At present the law excludes Japanese, Indonesians, Burmese, Siamese and some people of the Pacific islands from citizenship.

The Republican campaign leaders seem to be quite some votes apart on the comparative strength of their candidates. Here's today's political news: The New York Times says Harold Stassen feels he has accomplished the main objective of his campaign. That was - to stop the Taft bandwagon.

David Ingalls, the Taft campaign manager, says this interview proves that Stassen has been just a stalking horse - a "hatchet man" for Eisenhower. Mr. Ingalls claims that Taft now has 300 delegates behind him, with less than half of all convention delegates chosen.

Senator Taft himself predicts that on the first ballot at Chicago he expects 650 votes - 47 more than he needs for the nomination. Again the Senator called on General Eisenhower to make his views on all issues known to the people.

And the Eisenhower campaign manager, Senator Lodge, says the General will do just that although he will not "hook a private car on to the back of a train for a whistle stop tour." Lodge claims that the recent primaries, the polls and the sounding of opinion by newspapers show that Eisenhower is "the party's best vote-getter - and a winner."

And Labor Secretary Tobin, a Democrat, says his party is not interested in a mystery man, and "won't be satisfied with a smile or a good military record or a knack for kissing babies."

The Missouri River is still falling at Kansas City; the danger appears to be past there. The feeling along the Mississippi seems to be that the worst is over. Governor Beardsley of Iowa has asked the President to name all the areas bordering the Mississippi as disaster areas. After a tour of the Dubuque area he said: "The industrial flooding there was the worst I have ever seen."

The news despatches report that the Missouri down-stream from Kansas City is spreading out over fertile farmland. There is, of course, no drama to this, except for the people who own the farms and who may miss one crop or possibly two.

In Washington, the House slashed a hundred and twenty-eight million dollars from the proposed flood control funds. The President appealed to the Senate to restore the cut made by the House. He said: "There is no economy in spending less than we can afford on our efforts to stop these disastrous floods." He said his proposal for a total of six hundred million dollars for this purpose was a minimum; that many desirable projects for flood control had been put off or eliminated because of our heavy armament expenditures. Mr. Truman said the cuts proposed by the House would lose us far more than would be saved in terms of dollars and cents. There is of course no way of telling what the Senate will do, but the President was probably right when he said there wouldn't be any question about it, if the Senators could walk through the devastation that floods leave behind.

The rich top soil carried away by the Missouri, the upper Mississippi, the Red River of the north isn't going to be replaced. If the four dams under construction on the upper Missouri had been finished, there wouldn't have been any damage on the main stem of the Missouri this year. The House cut would stop work on two of these dams completely, and slow down the other two. One thing is sure: if all the Senators lived along the Missouri, they would either vote to restore the cut or they wouldn't be Senators after the next election.

We have our troubles with floods, politicians, steel and a host of other matters; in addition to all these there is a shortage of good political stories. In Germany under the Nazis, in England under the bombs, it was often possible to judge the temper of the people, by the stories they told. Here are two now making the rounds in the staellite countries of Eastern Europe - being bootlegged so to speak. They may give some clue as to the climate of opinion there.

An Austrian and a Czech meet at their common frontier. The Austrian says: "How're things?" The Czech replies: "Oh, we have plenty of work." Says the Austrian: "What do you do?" The Czech replies: "We make pots from clay and sell them to Denmark." "That's fine; what do you get for the pots?" "We get butter", says the Czech. "That's a fair trade", replies the Austrian. But the Czech says: "Not so good, because we sell the butter to Hungary." "But what do you get for the butter.", asks the Austrian. And the reply comes back: "We get geese from Hungary." "Well", remarks the Austrian, "that's good, too." And the Czech replies: "Not so; because we then sell the Hungarian geese to the Soviet Union." And then the Austria wants to know: "But what do you get from the Soviet Union for your geese?" And the Czech answers: "We get more clay to make more pots."

There is another Iron Curtain story coming from every satellite country, concerning a famous Russian geneticist, who is said to have cross-bred a cow and a giraffe. The resulting animal has such a long neck that it eats in Hungary, or Bulgaria, or Rumania, and is milked in Russia.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Flood control is urgent business. Yet, as Paul Sears once remarked: "How far must suffering a misery go before we see that even in the day of vast cities and powerful machines, the good earth is our mother, and that if we destroy her, we destroy ourselves." There is no cheap or easy solution. But H. H. Hart gave the alternative when he said: "If man cheats the earth, the earth will cheat man."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Monday - April 28, 1952

This is the news:

General Ridgeway WILL replace General Eisenhower as commander of the North Atlantic pact armed forces. General Greunther, now chief of staff to General Eisenhower, will stay in his job..under Ridgeway. #

General Mark Clark, now commander of the army ground forces, will replace General Ridgeway in Tokyo. Members of the North Atlantic Council unanimously approved the President's selection of Ridgeway to succeed Eisenhower on June first. The President says he's confident Generals Ridgeway and Greutnher will make an outstanding team.. he feels Ridgeway is particularly qualified for the duties at Shape... And General Eisenhower says the Ridgeway-Greutnther team "is the finest combination the American services can produce for the European command. Ridgeway and Greunther are good friends." General GREUNTHER calls the choice of Ridgeway "admirable".. says he will be delighted to serve with him.. there will be no strain in their relationship. And British Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery says he is delighted to serve under Ridgeway. In Tokyo today, General Ridgeway said he is leaving his Far East command with great regret.. He said he will pray for guidance in his new duties.

The announcement of Ridgeway's transfer from Tokyo to Paris came soon after the Japanese peace treaty went into effect.. after almost seven years of occupation..ten and a half years after Pearl Harbor. Prime Minister Yoshida calls it "a magnanimous peace, unparalled in history." The President says he's confident Japan will play a full part in the defense of the free world against Communist Imperialism. The Soviet Union says the treaty violates the Cairo..Potsdam..and Yalta agreements, and accuses us of converting Japan into "a bridgehead in preperation for a new war in the Far East." The Japanese Foreign Office says the Soviet Union is plotting "to make Japan a second Korea."

In Washington today, Republican leaders in the House decided to wait for a court decision in the steel dispute..before trying to push various measures to censure or impeach the President for seizing the industry. And the President has taken two opportunities to make clear his view on the powers of the President under the constiution. First he wrote a letter saying:"the executive powers are limited by the provisions of the Constiution, particularly those that protect the rights of individuals." And today he told visiting Senator Humphrey of Minnesota that he is strongly committed to support the Constiution.. that his whole record in public life has been in support and defense of the Constiution. Last week, Assitant Attorney General Baldridge said there is no Constiutional limitation on the president.

Charles Wilson, the former defense mobilizer, writes in U.S. News and World Report that he resigned because the President gave in to C.I.O. pressure.. and wrecked Wilson's effort to make a compromise steel settlement. Mr. Wilson says he planned a "little" price increase for industry".. and "something very considerably less" than the 26 cents an hour package raise, recommended by the Wage Stabilization Board.

~~D.A. Duley, the president of the United States Chamber of Commerce said today that corruption in Washington and the seizure of private businesses are natural outgrowths of what he called "ever-swollen bureaucracy."~~

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted today to cut one billion dollars from the seven billion 900-million the President asked for the military and economic aid program. The committee wants a cut of 12 and a half per cent in each item in the Mutual Assictance Bill.

Army Secretary Pace says charges have been filed against

Major General Robert W. Grow whose personal ~~dairy~~ diary fell into Communist hands. The Army will determine whether General Grow should face a court martial. In his diary he said we should attack Russia "as soon as possible" and "by hitting below the belt."

The Navy reported today that 176 men are missing and presumed lost aboard the destroyer-mine sweeper Hobson. She was cut in two and sank within four minutes, Saturday night, in a collission with the aircraft carrier Wasp. Capt. McCaffrree, the commander of the Wasp, which weighs 25 times as much as the destroyer did, said the Hobson was hit at a time when the Wasp's engines were backing at emergency speed.

The Supreme Court ruled today.. six to three.. that public school children may be dismissed early, to attend religious classes outside school buildings. The ruling, which could effect two million children, was made in a case upholding New York's "released time" program... This provides for children to be dismissed early on the request of their parents. (Other youngsters who do not attend religious classes remain in school for their regular studies.)

CBS RADIO DIVISION

E. R. MURROW

Monday, April 28, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 P.M.

MURROW: In Massachussetts, tomorrow, both Senator Taft and General Eisenhower will be trying to win the 38 delegates running in the Republican primary. My colleague, Edward P. Morgan, has been spending some time in Boston. Ed, how do things look in Massachussets?

MORGAN: The only positive observation I'll risk tonight, Ed, is that the weather up here is perfectly foul. For the last 4-days solid it has been raining and the outlook is for more drizzle tonight. All of which moved my taxi driver, obviously not a native son, to wonder why when they had the whole new world to choose from, the Pilgrims had to pick Massachussets to settle in.

The politicians however consider the commonwealth an attractive place in any weather. Eisenhower and Taft backers are outdoing each other with fullsome comments and competition for the State's 38 delegates to the Republican convention. The Democratic contest for a 32-vote slate is a tea party, and not the historic Boston kind, compared to the (indistinct) hassle in the GOP camp.

Coming into this situation from the outside, a stranger catches the feeling of lively but pregnant confusion. The excitement stems partly from the fact that for the first primary in nearly 20-yrs. Massachussetts voters can indicate their individual preferences for President. The expectancy seems to come from an awareness, a troubled kine of awareness, perhaps, that this election year is really a crucial one.

As for the outcome, Ed, you know how much predictions are worth. The best sum up of the so called expert opinion appears to be this: The result will more or less repeat New Jersey. That is, Gen. Eisenhower should capture a majority of the delegates and win the popularity contest, which incidentally is a write in on all sides for all hands.

One seasoned politician figures Taft may get as many as 12 delegates, that if he got more it would be an upset and the senatorcould claim a moral victory.

An Eisenhower success would give the general a strong bloc of eastern states and haul him almost exactly even with Senator Taft in the number of pledged delegates. Which arouses speculation about another general, Douglas MacArthur. Against his professed wishes, there are MacArthur slates entered in 3 congressional districts. They aren't expected to do much Tuesday, but talk in what might be gratuitously termed 'important circles' persists that MacArthur is so determined to prevent Eisenhower's nomination that he may emerge at the convention in July as a candidate himself.

Incredibly enough, the Republicans haven't carried a Presidential election in Massachusetts since the Coolidge days of 1924. No wonder the battle for a winner this time is high pitched. Against the Old Guard such figures as Senators Lodge and Saltonstall and Congressman Herter have pinned their political fortunes on Ike. Significantly, that Bay State Republican power in Congress, Representative Joe Martin, hasn't openly picked his Presidential preference.

In the bargaining at Chicago, Democratic fortunes will be pretty much in the strong young hands of Governor Dever, though a good-sized popularity write-in tomorrow for Senator Kefauver is by no means inconceivable.

Above the political hurly-burly, the aristocratic city of Boston rises to re-emphasize her urban sophistication. Taverns and bars, the city fathers rule, won't have to close tomorrow even though it's election day.

MURROW: In Florida, Senator Dick Russell, a candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination, said today that if he's elected President ....

(30)

In Massachusetts tomorrow, both Senator Taft and General Eisenhower will by trying to win the [redacted] 38 delegates running in the Republican primary. My colleague Edward P. Morgan has been spending some time in Boston. Ed, how do things look in Massachusetts?

(3 mins return cue:

"wont have to close tomorrow even tho its election day"

In Florida, Senator Russell, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, said today that if he's elected president he would balance the budget by 1954..and keep it in balance.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People says General Eisenhower "will have to do a lot of talking before we can say 'we like Ike'."

The General, saying goodbye to British troops in Germany today, told them not to act like "haughty conquerors" in Germany. He said they are guardians of an outpost of western civilization.

And in London, Queen Elizabeth made it known that her coronation will take place on June second..next year.

Edward R. Murrow: April 28, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

Last Night

~~Today~~, for the first time in two months, the chief negotiators met for truce talks in Korea. They talked for a little more than an hour, agreed that the whole thing should be off the record. Then the enemy suggested an indefinite postponement, or recess; (they'll let us know when they want to start talking again.) This sort of thing has now been going on for about nine-and-a-half months. Our spokesman, Brigadier-General Bill Nuckols, says we proposed "an over-all solution". He said the meeting was held in secret in order to prevent it being used for propaganda purposes. And General Nuckols found it necessary to deny that this was a "sell-out".

The three issues that have been in dispute for several months are exchange of prisoners, the Communist right to build airfields, and the participation of Russia as a neutral observer. Since we have proposed an "over-all solution", we must have said something we hadn't said before. It can be assumed that we offered concessions in the matter of the construction of airfields, and probably on Russian participation. The issue of the airfields was never really of first-rate importance anyway. If there had been an armistice, and if the Communists had started building air bases, we couldn't have stopped them - short of starting the war again.

Our information is that we are standing firm in our determination not to send back those prisoners who are not willing to go. (This is a policy we have never followed in any previous war.)

Our "over-all solution" would appear to be something in the nature of an ultimatum, in non-technical layman's language, of course. # The enemy is considerably stronger now than he was when the talks began; he is in a position to launch and sustain a massive offensive, and can do it without much warning. Our over-all solution is an effort to force a showdown. # Our allies don't want a bigger war in Asia; we don't know whether the enemy does or not, but we ought to know in a matter of days which it is to be. # This has been an indecisive war, and even if we get a full-scale armistice, it will stop the killing, but it will not alter or determine the struggle that continues wherever the communists and the free worlds meet. We are clearly approaching some sort of climactic point in Korea, but in the world struggle that point is somewhere off in the distance.

Tomorrow's primary [redacted] year. The importance of the primary -(particularly the write-in)- is in giving the voter a chance to speak his mind. But as Dr. Robert McMurray once said [redacted]w:"Opinion is like water. It flows easily downhill, but it takes a lot of pressure to pump it up." The past records of primary voting also bear out Gen. Marshall's observation that "there are many who deplore, but few who are willing to act."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

MONDAY - APRIL 28, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

General Ridgway will replace General Eisenhower as commander of the North Atlantic Pact armed forces. General Gruenther, now chief of staff to General Eisenhower, will stay in his job - under Ridgway. General Mark Clark, now commander of the army ground forces, will replace General Ridgway in Tokyo. Members of the North Atlantic Council unanimously approved the President's selection of Ridgway to succeed Eisenhower on June first. The President says he's confident Generals Ridgway and Gruenther will make an outstanding team; he feels Ridgway is particularly qualified for the duties at SHAPE. And General Eisenhower says the Ridgway-Gruenther team "is the finest combination the American services can produce for the European command. Ridgway and Gruenther are good friends." General Gruenther calls the choice of Ridgway "admirable"; says he will be delighted to serve with him; there will be no strain in their relationship. And British Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery says he is delighted to serve under Ridgway. In Tokyo today, General Ridgway said he is leaving his Far East command with great regret. He said he will pray for guidance in his new duties.

The announcement of Ridgway's transfer from Tokyo to Paris came soon after the Japanese peace treaty went into effect - after almost seven years of occupation - ten and a half years after Pearl Harbor. Prime Minister Yoshida calls it "a magnanimous peace, unparalled in history." The President says he's confident Japan will play a full part in the defense of the free world against Communist Imperialism. The Soviet Union says the treaty violates the Cairo, Potsdam, and Yalta agreements, and accuses us of converting Japan into "a bridgehead in preparation for a new war in the Far East." The Japanese Foreign Office says the Soviet Union is plotting "to make Japan a second Korea."

In Washington today. Republican leaders in the House decided to wait for a court decision in the steel dispute before trying to push various measures to censure or impeach the President for seizing the industry. And the President has taken two opportunities to make clear his view on the powers of the President under the Constitution. First, he wrote a letter saying: "The executive powers are limited by the provisions of the Constitution, particularly those that protect the rights of individuals." And today he told visiting Senator Humphrey of Minnesota that he is strongly committed to support the Constitution - that his whole record in public life has been in support and defense of the Constitution Last week, Assistant Attorney General Baldridge said there is no Constitution limitation on the President.

Charles Wilson, the former defense mobilizer, writes in U.S. News and World Report that he resigned because the President gave in to C.I.O. pressure, and wrecked Wilson's effort to make a compromise steel settlement. Mr. Wilson says he planned a "little" price increase for industry, and "something very considerably less" than the 26 cents an hour package raise recommended by the Wage Stabilization Board.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted today to cut one billion dollars from the seven billion 900-million the President asked for the military and economic aid program. The committee wants a cut of 12 and a half per cent in each item in the Mutual Assistance Bill.

Army Secretary Pace says charges have been filed against Major General Robert W. Grow, whose personal diary fell into Communist hands. The Army will determine whether General Grow should face a court martial. In his diary he said we should attack Russia "as soon as possible" and "by hitting below the belt."

The Navy reported today that 176 men are missing and presumed lost aboard the destroyer-mine sweeper Hobson. She was cut in two and sank within four minutes, Saturday night, in a collission with the aircraft carrier, Wasp.

Capt. McCaffrree, the commander of the Wasp, which weighs 25 times as much as the destroyer did, said the Hobson was hit at a time when the Wasp's engines were backing at emergency speed.

The Supreme Court ruled today - six to three- that public school children may be dismissed early to attend religious classes outside school buildings. The ruling, which could effect two million children, was made in a case upholding New York's "released time" program. This provides for children to be dismissed early on the request of their parents. (Other youngsters who do not attend religious classes remain in school for their regular studies.)

In Massachusetts tomorrow, both Senator Taft and General Eisenhower will be trying to win the 38 delegates running in the Republican primary. My colleague Edward P. Morgan has been spending some time in Boston. Ed, how do things look in Massachusetts?

MORGAN: The only positive observation I'll risk tonight, Ed, is that the weather up here is perfectly foul. For the last 4-days solid, it has been raining and the outlook is for more drizzle tonight. All of which moved my taxi driver, obviously not a native son, to wonder why when they had the whole new world to choose from, the Pilgrims had to pick Massachussets to settle in.

The politicians however consider the commonwealth an attractive place in any weather. Eisenhower and Taft backers are outdoing each other with full comments and competition for the State's 38 delegates to the Republican convention. The Democratic contest for a 32-vote slate is a tea party, and not the historic Boston kind, compared to the hassle in the GOP camp.

Coming into this situation from the outside, a stranger catches the feeling of lively but pregnant confusion. The excitement stems partly from the fact that for the first primary in nearly 20-years, Massachusetts' voters can indicate their individual preferences for President. The expectancy seems to come from an awareness, a troubled kine of awareness, perhaps, that this election year is really a crucial one.

As for the outcome, Ed, you knlw how much predictions are worth. The brst sum up of the so called expert opinion appears to be this: The result will more or less repeat New Jersey. That is, Gen. Eisenhower should capture a majority of the delegates and win the popularity contest, which incidentally is a write in on all sides for all hands.

One seasoned politician figures Taft may get as many as 12 delegates, that if he got more it would be an upset and the senator could claim a moral victory.

An Eisenhower success would give the general a strong bloc of eastern states and haul him almost exactly even with Senator Taft in the number of pledged delegates. Which arouses speculation about another general, Douglas MacArthur. Against his professed wishes, there are MacArthur slates entered in 3 congressional districts. They aren't expected to do much Tuesday, but talk in what might be gratuitously termed 'important circles' persists that MacArthur is so determined to prevent Eisenhower's nomination that he may emerge at the convention in July as a candidate himself.

Incredibly enough, the Republicans haven't carried a Presidential election in Massachusetts since the Coolidge days of 1924. No wonder the battle for a winner this time is high pitched. Against the Old Guard such figures as Senators Lodge and Saltonstall and Congressman Herter have pinned their political fortunes on Ike. Significantly, that Bay State Republican power in Congress, Representative Joe Martin, hasn't openly picked his Presidential preference.

In the Bargaining at Chicago, Democratic fortunes will be pretty much in the strong young hands of Governor Dever, though a good-sized popularity write-in tomorrow for Senator Kefauver is by no means inconceivable.

Above the political hurly-burly, the aristocratic city of Boston rises to re-emphasize her urban sophistication. Taverns and bars, the city fathers rule, won't have to close tomorrow even though it's election day.

MURROW: In Florida, Senator Russell, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, said today that if he's elected president, he would balance the budget by 1954 and keep it in balance.

[illegible]

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People says General Eisenhower "will have to do a lot of talking, before we can say 'we like Ike'."

The General, saying goodby to British troops in Germany today, told them not to act like "haughty conquerors" in Germany. He said they are guardians of an outpost of western civilization.

And in London, Queen Elizabeth made it know that her coronation will take place on June second - next year.

Last night, for the first time in two months, the chief negotiators met for truce talks in Korea. They talked for a little more than an hour, agreed that the whole thing should be off the record. Then the enemy suggested an indefinite postponement, or recess; they'll let us know when they want to start talking again. This sort of thing has now been going on for about nine-and-a-half months. Our spokesman, Brigadier-General Bill Nuckols, says we proposed "an over-all solution." He said the meeting was held in secret in order to prevent it being used for propaganda purposes. And General Nuckols found it necessary to deny that this was a "sell-out".

The three issues that have been in dispute for several months are exchange of prisoners, the Communist right to build airfields, and the participation of Russia as a neutral observer. Since we have proposed an "over-all solution", we must have said something we hadn't said before. It can be assumed that we offered concessions in the matter of the construction of airfields, and probably on Russian participation. The issue of the airfields was never really of first-rate importance anyway. If there had been an armistice, and if the Communists had started building air bases, we couldn't have stopped them - short of starting the war again.

Our information is that we are standing firm in our determination not to send back those prisoners who are not willing to go. This is a policy we have never followed in any previous war.

Our "over-all solution" would appear to be something in the nature of an ultimatum, in non-technical layman's language, of course. The enemy is considerably stronger now than he was when the talks began; he is in a position to launch and sustain a massive offensive, and can do it without much warning. Our "over-all solution" is an effort to force a showdown. Our allies don't want a bigger war in Asia; we don't know whether the enemy does or not, but we ought to know in a matter of days which it is to be. This has been an indecisive war, and even if we get a full-scale armistice, it will stop the killing, but it will not alter or determine the struggle that continues wherever the communists and the free world meet. We are clearly approaching some sort of climactic point in Korea, but in the world struggle that point is somewhere off in the distance.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: The importance of the primary, (particularly the write-in), is in giving the voter a chance to speak his mind. But as Dr. Robert McMurray once said: "Opinion is like water. It flows easily downhill, but it takes a lot of pressure to pump it up." The past records of primary voting also bear out Gen. Marshall's observation that "There are many who deplore but few who are willing to act."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Tuesday - April 29, 1952

This is the news:

Federal Judge David A. Pine ruled today that the President acted illegally, when he seized the nation's steel mills three weeks ago today. Almost immediately after the decision was made known, C.I.O. steelworkers started to set up picket lines around plants in South Chicago, PITTSBURGH, and Gary, Indiana. ~~The president~~ UNION PRESIDENT, Phil Murray, said his union members now have no alternative "but to cease work immediately." Union leaders say their walkout will be effective by midnight.

Judge Pine's ruling, in Washington, was against the government's major contentions. The government had argued that the President has inherent powers to seize the steel industry in an emergency. Judge Pine says this claim is an "utter fallacy." Under Article Two of the Constiution he could not find any powers giving the President the right to seize the mills. He said this is the fundamental issue in the case: whether or not seizure is authorized by law. And he finds: "There is no express grant of power in the Constiution, authorizing the President to direct this seizure. There is no grant of power from which it reasonably can be implied. There is no enactment of Congress authorizing it."

Judge Pine went on: "With due repesect to our great President, his statements do not comport with our recognized theory of government, but with a theory with which our government of laws and not men is constantly at war."

The government had claimed that other Presidents..in other years..had taken important actions under their "inherent powers." Judge Pine says : several illegal acts "do not sanctify those committed thereafter."

The government had argued that never had a federal court ordered a stop to an administrative act of a President.. that the courts are powerless to nullify a President's executive action. Judge Pine says: the defendent in this case is Commerce Secretary Sawyer, who is running the industry for the government. And Judge Pine points out that many times the Supreme Court has issued injunctions against the actions of officers of the Executive branch of the government.. when these actions ARE contrary to the Constiution or unauthorized by it or any specific law.

The government had claimed that the President could properly seize the steel industry at this time, ~~because of the labor-management dispute,~~ due to the fact that the nation is now in the midst of an international emergency. Judge Pine says: if the steelworkers should strike..with the "awful results" that might bring to the nation.. it would still be less injurious to the public than another harm.... the harm that would come from "timorous judicial recognition that there is some claim to an unlimited and unrestrained executive power."

This, Judge Pine feels, would "undermine public confidence in the very edifice of our government as it is known under the Constiution."

The judge asked the attorneys for the steel companies involved in this case to submit their "language" for a temporary injunction.."with all due speed."

Before the attorneys could act, the C.I.O. steelworkers started walking out of their plants. President Phil Murray issued a statement saying:"Judge Pine's decision ousting the government from possession of the steel mills leaves members of the union with no alternative ~~but~~ BUT to cease work immediately in the absence of collective bargaining contracts."

Mr. Murray says the cease-work orders are going out from his Pittsburgh headquarters as fast as possible. In the Cleveland, Chicago and Pittsburgh areas, district leaders of the union followed through. [redacted]

[redacted]

Industry spokesman feel that Judge Pine's order is a complete vindication of their position.. but they know that a government appeal to a higher court can be expected. T.F. Patton, vice president of Republic Steel, spoke for many industry leaders when he said: "The court decision shows that Truman's move was wholly illegal, and beyond the power of the presidency. I am happy that the court has stated unequivoccaly that the Constiution binds the Executive, as well as the Legislative and Judiciary branches of the government.." [redacted]

With thise view many members of Congress..Republicans, as well as some Democrats..appear to be in complete agreement. House Republican Leader Martin..for example.. said of the Pine decision: "Those of us who believe the Constiution is the great protector, will now breathe a little easier." Senator Maybank..Democrat from South Carolina..was informed that the steelworkers were walking off their jobs. He said: "There are some things worse than strikes. If that's the price we have to pay to preserve our constiution and the American way of life, we'll pay it." Many members of Congress called on the President to use that provision of the Taft-Hartley act which calls for an 80-day colling off period.

Acting Attorney General Philip B. Perlman told reporters: "We don't know yet what we are going to do."

Actually, until Judge Pine signs the injunction order.. probably tomorrow.. the government will continue in technical control of the steel plants.

As a result of the seizure of the steel industry, the House now has before it ten resolutions urging an investigation of the President's action.. and six congressional committees have been working on various angles connected with the seizure.

Interior Secretary Chapman said today that a threatened strike of C.I.O. oil workers..scheduled to start at midnight.. "could be most serious." Mr. Chapman says oil is essential to our defense program.. but he does not think the government will seize the industry if the strike starts.

In Germany today, two Soviet jet fighters attacked an Air France commercial plane in the allied air corridor to Berlin. The Russians fired canon and machinegun bullets.. wounded four of the 17 persons in the French plane before it could hide under a cloud cover. The pilot of the plane says the Soviet jets made four or five passes at his D.C. 4. The three western powers have written a stern note protesting this "unwarranted attack"..but they are having trouble finding a competent Russian officer to deliver it to.

Pan American reports that one of its Stratocruisers, with 50 persons aboard, is missing somewhere over northern Brazil. The plane was on its way from Beunos Aires to New York. Pan Am officials say army, navy and Brazilian aircraft have joined the hunt for the stratocruiser.

D.7

In Korea today, for a second day, allied negotiators are waiting for a Communist reply to their secret formula for completing an armistice arrangement. There is no word from the enemy on when they want to meet again.

In Washington, the Treasury Department has announced a new savingsbond program..interest rates will be raised all along the line. The familiar Series E defense bonds.. held by most individuals.. will be continued. Interest rates for those who HOLD them a full ten years will be raised from two-point-nine to three per cent.

Republican Senator Williams of Delaware charges that the Democrats have been financing some of their campaign expenditures "out of the treasury", by making tax concessions to some party contributors. Senator Williams says Richard J. Reynolds of Winston-Salem...Marshal Field of Chicago, and David A. Schulte of New York, have been allowed to write off as "non-business bad debts" 90 per cent of the 410-thousand dollars they have contributed to the Democratic party in New York state.

In today's Massachusetts presidential primary, General Eisenhower has taken a slight early lead over Senator Taft. There are more than 17-hundred precincts in the state. On the basis of reports from 28 of them, the write-in vote so far is:

Eisenhower: 1704

Taft: 1196

Edward R. Murrow: April 29, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

This reporter is unskilled in the law, but it would appear that what Judge Pyne said today was in essence a legalistic refinement of that old American slogan: "There ought to be a law". The Judge couldn't find, in the Constitution, or in any act of Congress, anything that said the President could seize private property. The issue is the same, whether that private property is a steel mill or a wheelbarrow. His Honor didn't say that the steel companies had acted like statesmen, or like Robber Barons; that the union does or doesn't deserve the raise; that the Wage Stabilization Board's recommendations were wise or unwise; none of those questions was before him. He just had to decide whether the seizure was legal or whether it wasn't. # There has been substantial testimony by Defense Secretary Lovett, the President and others as to the gravity of the situation that confronts us, and the danger to the nation that would result from a steel stoppage. But Judge Pyne contends that no matter how serious the results, the law does not allow the President to do what he did.

The President has conceded that he is not above the law, and will abide by a Court's decision. Judge Pyne doesn't have the last word. The Government can apply for a stay to the Circuit Court of Appeals, and the question can finally reach the Supreme Court, where it could be settled.

President Truman faces a first-class dilemma. He can, in theory, invoke the Taft-Hartley Law, which he hates so much. That would mean the steelworkers couldn't strike for eighty days.// He can press urgently for the necessary legal steps to get the question before the Supreme Court.// Or he can divulge more than he has so far of the desperate crisis we confront if steel is stopped; and then throw the whole thing into the lap of Congress, saying in effect: Now we've got a steel strike - you decide what to do.

Phil Murray, head of the steelworkers, is committed to get for his men what the Wage Stabilization Board granted, or bring them out on strike. The steel industry says it can't absorb the pay increase, and is prepared to take a strike instead. There is trouble enough to go around. But our system provides a solution. The Supreme Court can decide the matter of the President's constitutional powers. And the dispute between the steel industry and the labor union will finally be settled where every similar dispute has been resolved - around the bargaining table.

Today's decision by the courts, that the President's seizure of the steel industry is illegal, will undoubtedly be appealed. But for the time being at least, it would seem that Judge Pine was saying, in effect, what Cicero said many years ago: "No power ought to be above the laws." But another Roman - ~~Livy~~ Livius - observed the inevitable result of any court action when he said: "No law is entirely convenient for everyone."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

TUESDAY - APRIL 29, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Federal Judge David A. Pine ruled today that the President acted illegally, when he seized the nation's steel mills three weeks ago today. Almost immediately after the decision was made known, C.I.O. steelworkers started to set up picket lines around plants in South Chicago, Pittsburgh, and Gary, Indiana. Union president, Phil Murray, said his union members now have no alternative "but to cease work immediately." Union leaders say their wolkout will be effective by midnight.

Judge Pine's ruling, in Washington, was against the government's major contentions. The Government had argued that the President has inherent powers to seize the steel industry in an emergency. Judge Pine says this claim is an "utter fallacy." Under Article Two of the Constitution, he could not find any powers giving the President the right to seize the mills. He said this is the fundamental issue in the case: whether or not seizure is authorized by law. And he finds: "There is no express grant of power in the Constitution, authorizing the President to direct this seizure. There is no grant of power from which it reasonably can be implied. There is no enactment of Congress authorizing it." Judge Pine went on: "With due respect to our great President, his statements do not comport with our recognized theory of government, but with a theory with which our government of laws, and not men, is constantly at war."

The Government had calimed that other Presidents, in other years, had taken important actions under their "inherent powers." Judge Pine says: several illegal acts "do not sanctify those committed thereafter."

The Government had argued that never had a federal court ordered a stop to an administrative act of a President: that the courts are powerless to nullify a President's executive action. Judge Pine says: the defendent in this case is Commerce Secretary Sawyer, who is running the industry for the Government. And Judge Pine points out that many times the Supreme Court has issued injunctions against the actions of officers of the Executive branch of the Government, when these actions are contrary to the Constitution, or unauthorized by it, or any specific law.

The Government had calimed that the President could properly seize the steel industry at this time, due to the fact that the nation is now in the midst of an international emergency. Judge Pine says: if the steelworkers should strike, with the "awful results" that might bring to the nation, it would still be less injurious to the public than another harm - the harm that would come from "timorous judicial recognition that there is some claim to an unlimited and unrestrained executive power."

This, Judge Pine feels, would "undermine public confidence in the very edifice of our Government, as it is known under the Constitution."

The Judge asked the attorneys for the steel companies involved in this case to submit their "language" for a temporary injunction, "with all due speed."

Before the attorneys could act, the C.I.O. steelworkers started walking out of their plants. President Phil Murray issued a statement saying: "Judge Pine's decision, ousting the Government from possession of the steel mills, leaves members of the union with no alternative but to cease work immediately in the absence of collective bargaining contracts." Mr. Murray says the cease-work orders are going out from his Pittsburgh headquarters as fast as possible. In the Cleveland, Chicago, and Pittsburgh areas, district leaders of the union followe through.

Industry spokesmen feel that Judge Pine's order is a complete vindicatio of their position, but they know that a Government appeal to a higher court can be expected. T. F. Patton, vice president of Republic Steel, spoke for many industry leaders when he said: "The court decision shows that Truman's move was wholly illegal and beyond the power of the presidency. I am happy that the court has stated unequivocally that the Constitution binds the Executive as well as the Legislative and Judiciary branches of the Government."

With this view many members of Congress, Republicans as well as some Democrats, appear to be in complete agreement. House Republican Leader Martin, for example, said of the Pine decision: "Those of us who believe the Constitution is the great protector, will now breathe a little easier." Senator Maybank, Democrat from South Carolina, was informed that the steelworkers were walking off their jobs. He said: "There are some things worse than strikes. If that's the price we have to pay to preserve our constitution and the American way of life, we'll pay it." Many members of Congress called on the President to use that provision of the Taft-Hartley act, which calls for an 80-day cooling-off period,

Acting Attorney General Philip B. Perlman told reporters: "We don't know yet what we are going to do."

Actually, until Judge Pine signs the injunction order, probably tomorrow the Government will continue in technical control of the steel plants.

As a result of the seizure of the steel industry, the House now has before it ten resolutions urging an investigation of the President's action, and six congressional committees have been working on various angles connected with the seizure.

Interior Secretary Chapman said today that a threatened strike of C.I.O. oil workers, scheduled to start at midnight, "could be most serious." Mr. Chapman says oil is essential to our defense program, but he does not think the Government will seize the industry, if the strike starts.

In Germany today, two Soviet jet fighters attacked an Air France commercial plane in the allied air corridor to Berlin. The Russians fired canon and machinegun bullets; wounded four of the 17 persons in the French plane, before it could hide under a cloud cover. The pilot of the plane says the Soviet jets made four or five passes at his D.C. 4. The three western powers have written a stern note protesting this "unwarranted attack", but they are having trouble finding a competent Russian officer to deliver it to.

Pan American reports that one of its Stratocruisers, with 50 persons aboard, is missing somewhere over northern Brazil. The plane was on its way from Buenos Aires to New York. Pan American officials say army, navy, and Brazilian aircraft, have joined the hunt for the stratocruiser.

In Korea today, for the second day, allied negotiators are waiting for a Communist reply to their secret formula for completing an armistice arrangement. There is no word from the enemy on when they want to meet again.

In Washington, the Treasury Department has announced a new savingsbond program: interest rates will be raised all along the line. The familiar Series E defense bonds, held by most individuals, will be continued. Interest rates for those who hold them a full ten years, will be raised from two-point-nine to three per cent.

Republican Senator Williams of Delaware charges that the Democrats have been financing some of their campaign expenditures "out of the treasury" by making tax consessions to some party contributors. Senator Williams says Richard J. Reynolds of Winston-Salem, Marshal Field of Chicago, and David A. Schulte of New York, have been allowed to write-off as "non-business bad debts", 90 per cent of the 410-thousand dollars they have contributed to the Democratic party in New York state.

In today's Massachusetts presidential primary, General Eisenhower has taken a slight early lead over Senator Taft. There are more than 17-hundred precincts in the state. On the basis of reports from 28 of them, write-in vote so far is: Eisenhower 1704 - Taft 1196.

This reporter is unskilled in the law, but it would appear that what Judge Pine said today was in essence a legalistic refinement of that old American slogan: "There ought to be a law." The Judge couldn't find, in the Constitution or in any act of Congress, anything that said the President could seize private property. The issue is the same, whether that private property is a steel mill or a wheelbarrow. His Honor didn't say that the steel companies had acted like statesmen or like robber barons; that the union does or doesn't deserve the raise; that the Wage Stabilization Board's recommendations were wise or unwise; none of those questions was before him. He just had to decide whether the seizure was legal or whether it wasn't. There has been substantial testimony by Defense Secretary Lovett, the President and others as to the gravity of the situation that confronts us, and the danger to the nation that would result from a steel stoppage. But Judge Pine contends that no matter how serious the results, the law does not allow the President to do what he did.

The President has conceded that he is not above the law, and will abide by a Court decision. Judge Pine doesn't have the last word. The Government can apply for a stay to the Circuit Court of Appeals, and the question can finally reach the Supreme Court, where it could be settled.

President Truman faces a first-class dilemma. He can, in theory, invoke the Taft-Hartley Law, which he hates so much. That would mean the steelworkers couldn't strike for eighty days. He can press urgently for the necessary legal steps to get the question before the Supreme Court. Or he can divulge more than he has so far of the desperate crisis we confront if steel is stopped; and then throw the whole thing into the lap of Congress, saying in effect: Now we've got a steel strike - you decide what to do.

Phil Murray, head of the steelworkers, is committed to get for his men what the Wage Stabilization Board granted, or bring them out on strike. The steel industry says it can't absorb the pay increase, and is prepared to take a strike instead. There is trouble enough to go around. But our system provides a solution. The Supreme Court can decided the matter of the President's constitutional powers. And the dispute between the steel industry and the labor union will finally be settled where every similar dispute has been resolved - around the bargaining table

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Today's decision by the courts, that the President's seizure of the steel industry is illegal, will undoubtedly be appealed. But for the time being at least, it would seem that Judge Pine was saying, in effect, what Cicero said many years ago: "No power ought to be above the laws." But another Roman, Livius, observed the inevitable result of any court action when he said: "No law is entirely convenient for everyone."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Wednesday - April 30, 1952

This is the news:

The government tonight is again in technical possession of the nation's steel industry. The Court of Appeals in Washington (by a five to four decision) decided to "stay" an order issued earlier by Federal Judge Pine. Judge Pine, who yesterday ruled government seizure of the industry illegal, EARLIER today signed an order returning the mills to their proper private owners. [redacted]. It was this order that the Appeals court laid aside. The court specified that the government has until Firday afternoon to ask the Supreme Court for a review of the case. In making an appeal for this order, the acting attorney general, Philip Perlman, told the court: the steelworkers strike is catastrophic... 95 per cent of the industry is shut down... this means a loss of 300-thousand tons of steel aday. He said: "every minute, every second counts." And Perlman promised that if the Appeals Court held up the Pine order, the government would go "right to work to get the men back" to their jobs. [redacted] Assistant Attorney General Baldridge told the court the government might [redacted] seek an injunction to force the return of the steelworkers.

Phil Murray, the president the Steelworkers, had no comment today either on the Court of Appeals order..or the government's suggestion that it would seek an injunction to get the steelworkers back on their jobs.

[redacted]

~~In the Congress, new bills were introduced to take care of the seizure of vital industries in the future. And Republican Congressmen called on the President to use that provision of the Taft-Hartley law which is supposed to keep the industry working for an 80-day "cooling off" period. House Republican leader Martin said the President's refusal to use the Taft-Hartley law "has only increased demands that he be impeached."~~

Republican Representative Buffett of Nebraska said TODAY THAT he hopes Congress gets so angry over the way the government had handled the steel dispute that it lets wage and price controls die.."even if this is an election year."

And John A. Stephens, vice president of U.S. Steel, told a Senate committee that "on the basis of" his experience in the steel dispute Congress should permit all WAGE & PRICE controls to expire at the end of June. He said the Wage Stabilization Board's recommendations in the steel case make it clear that "there is no longer any control over wages."

Another major strike started at midnight last night when some 90-thousand oil workers started walking off their jobs in refineries, on pipeline operations, and distribution plants. The strikers, from C.I.O, A.F of L and independent unions, closed down the industry's facilities in an orderly fashion. They are demanding a 25 cents an hour wage increase. Union officials estimate that 44 per cent of the nation's daily refinery capacity is affected by the strike. ~~There appear to be large stockpiles of petroleum fuel storage supplies on hand. So motorists and transportation lines may not feel any real fuel shortage for several weeks. During the day the Federal Mediation office reported one agreement reached in Indiana, but union officials say this is not so.~~

Defense Secretary Lovett told the Senate Appropriations committee today that if the Senate approves a House cut of six billions in the defense budget our defense program will be "affected seriously." The house has voted to limit military spending this year to 46-billion dollars. Mr. Lovett testified that this means we might have to demobilize "a substantial part of our armed forces." It would halt or delay production of at least thirty-five hundred planes...31-hundred tanks.

It would mean a two-year delay in getting the Navy to "satisfactory combat readiness." Mr. Lovett says this reduction in military funds could be a "possibly critical blow" to the defense of the country. One of its immediate affects would be "to raise questions about our ability to maintain the troops presently deployed in Europe, and those in combat in the Far East." The Secretary says the House bill, if approved by the Senate, "would be like cutting off our right arm to save the cost of one sleeve in our coat." ~~He asked the Senators not to be lulled by Russia's phoney peace propaganda into slackening the pace of our defense buildup. In the course of his testimony, Secretary Lovett also revealed that in the four year period ending June 30, 1954, defense spending is expected to reach 163 billion dollars... that almost two thirds of our present national debt of 259 billions.~~

~~The Senate Foreign Relations Committee today approved a one billion dollar cut in the funds the President requested for military and economic aid to our allies. And several Republicans, including Senator Taft, plan to try to cut another 900 million from the present 6-billion 900 million dollar bill.~~

In Korea today, our Sabrejets shot down six enemy Migs, and damaged four others. There is no report on our losses..if any. Our negotiators are still waiting for a Communist reply to the proposals we have made for settling the truce negotiations.

The Pentagon reports another 299 casualties in Korea last week. The total now is 107, 965.

The almost complete results of yesterday's Massachusetts presidential primary are now in. General Eisenhower received 246-thousand write-in votes, to 106-thousand for Senator Taft. And the General received almost half as many votes as Senator Kefauver did in the Democratic race. Eisenhower won 69 per cent of the vote.. more votes than all other (CANDIDATES) in both the Republican and Democratic races combined. He won 27 of the 28 delegate seats contested yesterday; Senator Taft got the other one. Senator Taft says he is "somewhat disappointed" by the result..blames it on Massachusetts Democrats, who voted in the Republican primary. The General's supporters say that Taft had looked to the Massachusetts race as "a fair test" between himself and Eisenhower. The General..in Paris today.. said the results are "an overpowering sort of thing." He told reporters:"It has begun to look kind of serious."

19.

In Berlin today, the western allies made their second protest in two days against the attack by two Soviet fighter planes on an Air France commercial plane. They say "the attack was contrary to all standards of civilized behavior".. call it "outrageous and brutal."

Britain's top Labor leaders.. the party's National Executive.. today urged the Western countries to accept Russia's demand for immediate Big Four talks, on elections for Germany.

Isreal celebrated its fourth anniversary as Prime Minister Ben Gurion warned that Russia is hostile to Isreal.

And in Brazil, bad weather has forced a temporary cancellation of the search for the Pan American Constellation, that disappeared yesterday with 50 persons aboard.

Edward R. Murrow: April 30, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

According to the latest unofficial tabulations -(that's the only kind that exist)- Senator Taft and General Eisenhower stand just about even in terms of delegates pledged, each candidate having about 270. / The man who gets the nomination will need 604. / As of right now, in spite of the optimistic predictions of their campaign managers, it does not appear that either man will arrive in Chicago with enough delegates to nominate him on the first or second ballot. / The Eisenhower high command will face some very tough decisions when their candidate comes home in June. So long as he is abroad he can continue to select those letters he will answer, as he did when he implied that he would support state control of Tidelands Oil. (After all, the Texas delegation could conceivably be decisive.) / Other letters the General can ignore, or answer by saying that he has not had ample opportunity to inform himself.

Senator Taft's managers do not face this difficulty, because the Senator's stand on all subjects has been stated repeatedly, although at times he appears to stand on both sides of the same question. / Nevertheless, the Senator is prepared to take on all comers. / The problem that confronts the Eisenhower camp is how best to employ and exploit the undoubted talents of their candidate once he comes home. This is both a personal and a political problem. In the purely political sense, each time the General says anything on civil rights, federal aid to education, the Taft-Hartley Law or any other matter of domestic interest, he is in danger of losing support; because so long as he remains silent, on these and similar issues, a considerable number of people will believe or hope that he agrees with them. General Eisenhower's campaign managers appear determined to keep him above the battle, in the area of broad generalizations calculated to offend the smallest number of people. Much of his time will undoubtedly be spent in what is called "meeting the boys". Which is another way of saying, discussing with the leaders of powerful delegations, what will happen when and if the General is nominated and elected. This is not to suggest that there is anything reprehensible about a candidate's silence or evasiveness before a nominating convention. (These tactics have been used before and sometimes they have worked.)

The General's managers, some of them self-appointed, ~~XXXX~~ confront another problem in deciding what to do with the General after his return. This arises from the fact that General Eisenhower, like everyone else, is the prisoner of his own experience. And by that I do not mean to imply that he is equipped with what is loosely termed "the military mind". But the fact is that for the past twelve years General Eisenhower has been treated with great deference and respect by the representatives of both radio and press, a much greater degree of deference than is normally accorded a presidential candidate. # And during recent months at his headquarters it has become noticeable that he does not suffer questioners and questions as gladly as once he did. | An increasing note of impatience, if not irritability, has become apparent. | Reporters can be a downright nuisance to a busy man beset by many problems and conflicting advice. | And yet during the war, and after it, until he actively entered politics, General Eisenhower dealt with reporters with great skill, enjoyed their respect and admiration, and still does. There must be an explanation for this change in attitude. I would suggest that it is this: for the past twelve years the General has been served by an able staff; questions that he had to decide came up to him in an orderly, well-prepared military fashion. The alternatives were presented lucidly and with logic. And no one has accused him of failing to make the decisions. || But for the past few months he has been pushed and pulled, hammered at and pleaded with, advised and counter-advised, urged to stay abroad, urged to come home, asked to make this speech, and counselled at the same time to be silent. And all in an area where his training and experience have ill equipped him for the quick, sure decisions he is accustomed to make in the field of military affairs. There are so many Generals in General Eisenhower's political army, and as the delegate situation stands now, it would seem that one of their most difficult decisions is to decide what he shall do and say during those thirty days before the Convention.

Men in public life are ~~[illegible]~~aware of that old legal phrase:"whatever you say may be held against you." Consequently there are occasions when it's wise not to say anything. It was La Rochefoucauld who once remarked:"There is an eloquent silence which serves sometimes to approve, sometimes to condemn." But Josh Billings put it more precisely when he said:"If a man is right he can't be too radical. And if he is wrong, he can't be too conservative."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM

WEDNESDAY - APRIL 30, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Government tonight is again in technical possession of the nation's steel industry. The Court of Appeals in Washington, (by a five to four decision), decided to "stay" an order issued earlier by Federal Judge Pine. Judge Pine, who yesterday ruled government seizure of the industry illegal, earlier today signed an order returning the mills to their proper private owners. It was this order that the Appeals Court laid aside. The Court specified that the Government has until Friday afternoon to ask the Supreme Court for a review of the case. In making an appeal for this order, the acting attorney general, Philip Perlman, told the Court: the steelworkers strike is catastrophic - 95 per cent of the industry is shut down - this means a loss of 300-thousand tons of steel a day. He said: "Every minute, every second counts." And Perlman promised that if the Appeals Court held up the Pine order, the Government would go "right to work to get the men back" to their jobs. Assistant Attorney General Baldridge told the Court the Government might seek an injunction to force the return of the steelworkers.

Phil Murray, the president of the steelworkers, had no comment today either on the Court of Appeals order, or the Government's suggestion that it would seek an injunction to get the steelworkers back on their jobs.

Republican Representative Buffett of Nebraska said today that he hopes Congress gets so angry over the way the Government had handled the steel dispute, that it lets wage and price controls die, "even if this is an election year."

And John A. Stephens, vice president of U.S. Steel, told a Senate committee that "on the basis of" his experience in the steel dispute, Congress should permit all wage and price controls to expire at the end of June. He said the Wage Stabilization Board's recommendations in the steel case make it clear that "there is no longer any control over wages."

Another major strike started at midnight last night when some 90-thousand oil workers started walking off their jobs in refineries, on pipeline operations, and distribution plants. The strikers, from C.I.O., A.F. of L. and independent unions, closed down the industry's facilities in an orderly fashion. They are demanding a 25 cents an hour wage increase. Union officials estimate that 44 per cent of the nation's daily refinery capacity is affected by the strike.

Defense Secretary Lovett told the Senate Appropriations committee today that if the Senate approves a House cut of six billions in the defense budget, our defense program will be "affected seriously." The house has voted to limit military spending this year to 46-billion dollars. Mr. Lovett testified that this means we might have to demobilize "a substantial part of our armed forces." It would halt or delay production of at least thirty-five hundred planes, 31-hundred tanks. It would mean a two year delay in getting the Navy to "satisfactory combat readiness." Mr. Lovett says this reduction in military funds could be a "possibly critical blow" to the defense of the country. One of its immediate affects would be "to raise questions about our ability to maintain the troops presently deployed in Europe, and those in combat in the Far East." The Secretary says the House bill, if approved by the Senate, "would be like cutting off our right arm to save the cost of one sleeve in our coat."

In Korea today, our Sabre jets shot down six enemy MIGs, and damaged four others. There is no report on our losses - if any. Our negotiators are still waiting for a Communist reply to the proposals we have made for settling the truce negotiations.

The Pentagon reports another 299 casualties in Korea last week. The total now is 107,965.

The almost complete results of yesterday's Massachusetts presidential primary are now in. General Eisenhower received 246-thousand write-in votes to 106-thousand for Senator Taft. And the General received almost half as many votes as Senator Kefauver did in the Democratic race. Eisenhower won 69 per cent of the vote; more votes than all other candidates in both the Republican and Democratic races combined. He won 27 of the 28 delegate seats contested yesterday; Senator Taft got the other one. Senator Taft says he is "somewhat disappointed" by the result; blames it on Massachusetts Democrats, who voted in the Republican primary. The General's supporters say that Taft had looked to the Massachusetts race as "a fair test" between himself and Eisenhower. The General, in Paris today, said the results are "an overpowering sort of thing." He told reporters: "It has begun to look kind of serious."

In Berlin today, the western allies made their second protest in two days against the attack by two Soviet fighter planes on an Air France commercial plane. They say "the attack was contrary to all standards of civilized behavior"; call it "outrageous and brutal."

Britain's top Labor leaders, the party's National Executive, today urged the Western countries to accept Russia's demand for immediate Big Four talks on elections for Germany.

Israel celebrated its fourth anniversary as Prime Minister Ben Gurion warned that Russia is hostile to Israel.

And in Brazil, bad weather has forced a temporary cancellation of the search for the Pan American Constellation that disappeared yesterday with 50 persons aboard.

According to the latest unofficial tabulations - (that's the only kind that exist) - Senator Taft and General Eisenhower stand just about even in terms of delegates pledged, each candidate having about 270. The man who gets the nomination will need 604. As of right now, in spite of the optimistic predictions of their campaign managers, it does not appear that either man will arrive in Chicago with enough delegates to nominate him on the first or second ballot. The Eisenhower high command will face some very tough decisions when their candidate comes home in June. So long as he is abroad, he can continue to select those letters he will answer, as he did when he implied that he would support state control of Tidelands Oil. (After all, the Texas delegation could conceivably be decisive.) Other letters the General can ignore, or answer by saying that he has not had ample opportunity to inform himself.

Senator Taft's managers do not face this difficulty, because the Senator's stand on all subjects has been stated repeatedly, although at times he appears to stand on both sides of the same question. Nevertheless, the Senator is prepared to take on all comers. The problem that confronts the Eisenhower camp is how best to employ and exploit the undoubted talents of their candidate once he comes home. This is both a personal and a political problem. In the purely political sense, each time the General says anything on civil rights, federal aid to education, the Taft-Hartley Law or any other matter of domestic interest, he is in danger of losing support; because so long as he remains silent, on these and similar issues, a considerable number of people will believe or hope that he agrees with them. General Eisenhower's campaign managers appear determined to keep him above the battle, in the area of broad generalizations calculated to offend the smallest number of people. Much of his time will undoubtedly be spent in what is called "meeting the boys - which is another way of saying, discussing with the leaders of powerful delegations what will happen when and if the General is nominated and elected. This is not to suggest that there is anything reprehensible about a candidate's silence or evasiveness before a nominating convention. (These tactics have been used before and sometimes they have worked.)

The General's managers, some of them self-appointed, confront another problem in deciding what to do with the General after his return. This arises from the fact that General Eisenhower, like everyone else, is the prisoner of his own experience. And by that I do not mean to imply that he is equipped with what is loosely termed "the military mind." But the fact is that for the past twelve years General Eisenhower has been treated with great deference and respect by the representatives of both radio and press, a much greater degree of deference than is normally accorded a presidential candidate. And during recent months, at his headquarters, it has become noticeable that he does not suffer questioners and questions as gladly as once he did. An increasing note of impatience, if not irritability, has become apparent. Reporters can be a downright nuisance to a busy man beset by many problems and conflicting advice. And yet during the war, and after it, until he actively entered politics, General Eisenhower dealt with reporters with great skill, enjoyed their respect and admiration, and still does. There must be an explanation for this change in attitude. I would suggest that it is this: for the past twelve years, the General has been served by an able staff; questions that he had to decide came up to him in an orderly, well-prepared military fashion. The alternatives were presented lucidly and with logic. And no one has accused him of failing to make the decisions. But for the past few months, he has been pushed and pulled, hammered at and pleaded with, advised and counter-advised, urged to stay abroad, urged to come home, asked to make this speech, and counselled at the same time to be silent. And all in an area where his training and experience have ill equipped him for the quick, sure decisions, he is accustomed to make in the field of military affairs. There are so many Generals in General Eisenhower's political army, and as the delegate situation stands now, it would seem that one of their most difficult decisions is to decide what he shall do and say during those thirty days before the convention.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Men in public life are of that old legal phrase: "Whatever you say may be held against you." Consequently, there are occasions when it's wise not to say anything. It was La Rochefoucauld who once remarked: "There is an eloquent silence which serves sometimes to approve, sometimes to condemn." But Josh Billings put it more precisely when he said: "If a man is right, he can't be too radical. And if he is wrong, he can't be too conservative." Good Night and Good Luck!

Thursday - May 1, 1952 MM

This is the news:

The President said today that he will take "every possible action" to get the steel dispute settled. | At a newsconference, Mr. Truman told reporters he will go along with whatever decision the Supreme Court hands down in the dispute. | He has no ambiition to be a dictator.. all he wants to do is keep the country running, and keep steel in production. | The President refused to suggest any particular moves he might make to get steel PRODUCTION GOING AGAIN!

The federal court of appeals in Washington TODAY voted five to four against preventing Secretary of Commerce Sawyer from raising the wages of the steelworkers. (while the government is running the mills) | And Sawyer told reporters: he is not going to take any "precipitate" action. | He says union, industry, government all are "in a revolving door at the moment, we are neither coming or going out." | Mr. Sawyer believes union and industry should try again to negotiate their differences; ~~he has no specific recommendations. He feels Congress should pass a law giving the Administration "a clear legal basis" for dealing with such situation as the steel dispute.~~ And he thinks there is "enough lee-way on both prices and wages to bring about an agreement.

But Price Stabilizer Arnall says he would okay a price increase of more than three dollars a ton only if "directed" to do so by the President, or the Congress. He says once the Administration offered the industry a $4.50 a ton increase..but he opposed it.

~~Former Defense Mobilizer Wilson has told a Senatecommittee that he told the President, before Wilson resigned, that he would prefer a steel strike rather than agree to a 26 cents an hour wage increase package for the steelworkers.~~

Mr. Truman said today that he's been informed that the nation-wide oilworkers strike is near a settlement. But union spokesmen say there is no ground for such optomism. The government today issued an order to prevent hoarding of gasoline and other petroleum products in 17 eastern states, and the District of Columbia. Industry sources and government officials estimate that the nation now has about a 45-day supply of gasoline.

The President had something to say about politics at today's news conference. For one thing, he said that even if the Democrats nominate him for another term..he will not run. He was asked about a published report that General Eisenhower is a "sick man." The President said:

The general is in perfect health and perfectly fine..he's as fine a man as ever walked..he's just finding out what happens to a presidential candidate. And Mr. Truman said this report about Ike being "sick" is mild compared to what he'll have to face later on. Again the President said that Governor Stevenson of Illinis is a good man..would make a fine president. And he said Connecticut's Senator McMahon, who announced today that he's a presidential candidate, is qualified for the job. Mr. Truman said: it looks like now we are going to get some good candidates.

McMahon, at a newsconference here in New York, described himself as a liberal democrat..said he is not seeking the vice presidency.. cannot engage in a widespread campaign because of his work in the Senate.

The State Department today banned travel by Americans to Russia, Poland, Romania, Albania and Bulgaria. You have to have "legitimate reasons" before the Department will approve a passport for trips to these countries. No travel is permitted to China, Hungary and Czechoslovakia..under an old ruling.

The Department also reports that Ambassador Briggs in Czechoslovakia yesterday talked with Correspondent William Otis... (the first time any American official has seen Otis since he was arrested more than a year ago). Ambassador Briggs says that Otis appears to be in good health, and says he is [redacted]. Otis says he has received mail from his wife..some dental care.. and is allowed to read and write in his Czechoslovak prison. The ambassador met with him for 30-minutes in Prague Police Headquarters.. [redacted]

In Korea the Communists are now ready to reply to our proposal for a truce agreement. The meeting gets under way in a fewhours.

There was no major air or ground activitiy in Korea on this May Day. But in Tokyo, some 20-thousand Communist-led rioters touched off Japan's worst riot since the end of the last war..the first in which American property was damaged. An estimated 300-thousand Japanese had gathered in a downtown park to hear May Day speeches, when the Communist-led rioters started to yell:"Yankees, go home." They broke up the meeting.. started making speeches of their own.. attacked the police.. threw two American sailors into the moat surrounding the Emperors palace. Then they formed a parade, eight to ten abreast, and marched downtown. They overturned ten American automobiles and burned them... Latest reports say one Japanese was killed...an estimated 500 injured. The Foreign Office ~~again~~ has apologized to American officials...says today's demonstration was not an expression of the Japanese people...on this third day of their new independence.

Moscow had a quiet May Day celebration..the big military parade.. and a speech by Marshal Govorov attacking "American barbarians." Berlin,too, was quiet.

~~In Washington, the House passed a 722-million dollar agriculture department appropriation, after refusing to cut it at all. This is the first of eight appropriation bills to go through the House without a cut..reductions in other bills have averaged nine and a half per cent.~~

Out in Nevada, the Atomic Energy Commission set off another atomic explosion..the 17th.

Daniel Tobin, president of the A.F. of L. teamsters, says the Administration is giving labor "the worst run-around he has ever seen."

And Pan American reports that its missing Stratocruiser has been sighted in a marshy jungle deep in the interior of Brazil.

There was no sign of life. The plane, with 50 persons, has been missing since Tuesday.

Edward R. Murrow: May 1, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

This is May Day - (a time for dancing about the Maypole) - and since 1889, when it was declared a holiday by the International Socialist Congress, a day for Labor to demonstrate and orate. | Without Socialist affiliation, or subversive intent, this laborer would honor ~~XXXX~~ tradition, by talking a little about the fields in which he labors - Radio and Television.

This is the only country in the world where two such powerful instruments of communication could have been permitted to develop and expand with so little government control. | This fact places a unique and heavy responsibility upon those who direct and control these instruments, those who are licensed to operate them. | They cannot abdicate, or assign that responsibility to a sponsor, an advertising agency or an individual. They are legally and morally responsible for every word spoken, and every picture transmitted over their facilities. Just as it requires more than newsprint and presses to make a great newspaper, so it requires more than a camera or a microphone to provide reliable news and information. | These two media, radio and television, are powerful, they can sell goods, and we are in a sense a nation of salesmen. They are profitable, and we respect profits. ~~XXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXX~~ But these two instruments have an obligation that transcends both selling and profit-making; it is to inform. And the sources of information are being choked. In much of the world it is no longer possible for an honest reporter to report. In our part of the world, the mimeographed hand-out gradually replaces the old-fashioned interview. The President, by executive order, creates security officers in every government department and agency, authorized to suppress or release information. The Speaker of the House of Representatives bans all cameras and microphones from public hearings by House committees. Radio and Television make only a feeble protest, or none at all.

Too many of us are enthralled by television's proven ability to entertain and sell. Its value as an instrument of information depends upon access to the source of information. Neither camera nor microphone, in and of themselves, will make us politically sophisticated. They may combine to make us less literate. There is no guarantee that the most impartial television camera will enable the citizen to sort out with certainty the statesmen from the charlatans. There is indeed some danger that we may come to give our political allegiance to the man with the proper degree of muscle tension, well-matched eyes and persuasive voice.

It is possible to edit and distort, with lights and cameras as well as with a red pencil or a rubber stamp marked "Top Secret". It must be the constant concern of those transmitting information by television to avoid, so far as is humanly possible, any man-made curves in the mirror they hold up to current events.

This reporter pretends no knowledge of either the limits or capabilities of television, or for that matter radio. But the mechanical nature of the instruments involved preclude the possibility of their doing the thinking and the deciding for the individual. They cannot, separately or together, dull or deaden the pains of responsibility. They can, if properly used, supply and illuminate information upon which responsible opinion may be based.

There rests upon the veritable handful of people who control these two instruments a truly frightening responsibility. Both Radio and Television are a combination of show business, advertising, news and many other ingredients. In the field of news and information, editorial decisions must be made with great speed. There is seldom time for much deliberation. The future power and influence of these two means of communication will be determined by the calibre and integrity of the men who control them, and by the vigilance and criticism of the citizens to whom they address themselves. Those who control these facilities have but a temporary franchise granted by the government on behalf of the people.

If they fail to meet this greatest challenge in the history of mass communication, they will have destroyed the world's greatest, free-est and potentially most powerful and persuasive method of communication. I do not suggest that this is going to happen, for the alternative is government control. But as a worker, on May Day - the traditional time for workers to speak their piece - I do believe that those who own and direct these facilities should concern themselves increasingly with nourishing, improving and refining their output of news and information. No similar group of men in the whole history of communications ever had greater responsibility or opportunity.

Radio and television are - and will continue to be - a powerful force in the dissemination of news. For this very reason a ~~certain~~ high degree of care and caution is required. Two good guideposts for both industries to follow, are these observations by Aristotle and C.C. Colton: "All men desire by nature to know...and he that shortens the road to knowledge, lengthens life."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY - MAY 1, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EDT

This is the news:

The President said today that he will take "every possible action" to get the steel dispute settled. At a newsconference, Mr. Truman told reporters he will go along with whatever decision the Supreme Court hands down in the dispute. He has no ambition to be a dictator; all he wants to do is keep the country running, and keep steel in production. The President refused to suggest any particular moves he might make to get steel production going again.

The Federal Court of Appeals in Washington today voted five to four against preventing Secretary of Commerce Sawyer from raising the wages of the steelworkers....while the Government is running the mills. And Sawyer told reporters: he is not going to take any "precipitate" action. He says union, industry, government - all are "in a revolving door at the moment; we are neither coming or going out." Mr. Sawyer believes union and industry should try again to negotiate their differences. And he thinks there is "enough lee-way on both prices and wages to bring about an agreement. But Price Stabilizer Arnall says he would okay a price increase of more than three dollars a ton only if "directed" to do so by the President or the Congress. He says once the Administration offered the industry a $4.50 a ton increase, but he opposed it.

Mr. Truman said today that he's been informed that the nation-wide oil-workers strike is near a settlement. But union spokesmen say there is no ground for such optimism. The Government today issued an order to prevent hoarding of gasoline and other petroleum products in 17 eastern states and the District of Columbia. Industry sources and government officials estimate that the nation now has about a 45-day supply of gasoline.

The President had something to say about politics at today's news conference. For one thing, he said that even if the Democrats nominate him for another term, he will not run. He was asked about a published report that General Eisenhower is a "sick man". The President said: The General is in perfect health and perfectly fine; he's as fine a man as ever walked; he's just finding out what happens to a presidential candidate. And Mr. Truman said this report about Ike being "sick" is mild compared to what he'll have to face later on. Again the President said the Governor Stevenson of Illinois is a good man: would make a fine president. And he said Connecticut's Senator McMahon, who announced today that he's a presidential candidate, is qualified for the job. Mr. Truman said: it looks like now we are going to get some good candidates.

McMahon, at a newconference here in New York, described himself as a liberal democrat: said he is not seeking the vice presidency: cannot engage in a widespread campaign because of his work in the Senate.

The State Department today banned travel by Americans in Russia, Poland, Romania, Albania, and Bulgaria. You have to have "legitimate reasons" before the Department will approve a passport for trips to these countries. No travel is permitted to China, Hungary and Czechoslovakia - under an old ruling.

The Department also reports that Ambassador Briggs in Czechoslovakia yesterday talked with Correspondent William Otis - the first time any American official has seen Otis since he was arrested more than a year ago. Ambassador Briggs says that Otis appears to be in good health, and says he is. Otis says he has received mail from his wife, some dental care, and is allowed to read and write in his Czechoslovak prison. The ambassador met with for 30-minutes in Prague Police Headquarters.

In Korea the Communists are now ready to reply to our proposal for a truce agreement. The meeting gets under way in a few hours.

There was no major air or ground activity in Korea on this May Day. But in Tokyo, some 20-thousand Communist-led rioters touched off Japan's worst riot since the end of the last war - the first in which American property was damaged. An estimated 300-thousand Japanese had gathered in a downtown park to hear May Day speeches, when the Communist-led rioters started to yell: "Yankees, go home." They broke up the meeting, started making speeches of their own, attacked the police, threw two American sailors into the moat surrounding the Emperors palace Then they formed a parade, eight to ten abreast, and marched downtown. They overturned ten Americans automobiles and burned them. Latest reports say one Japanese was killed: an estimated 500 injured. The Foreign Office has apologized to American officials: says today's demonstration was not an expression of the Japanese people on this third day of their new independence.

Moscow had a quiet May Day celebration: the big military parade, and a speech by Marshal Govorov attacking "American barbarians". Berlin, too, was quiet.

Out in Nevada, the Atomic Energy Commission set off another atomic explosion - the 17th.

Daniel Tobin, president of the A.F. of L. teamsters, says the Administration is giving labor "the worst run-around he has ever seen."

And Pan American reports that its missing Stratocruiser has been sighted in a marshy jungle deep in the interior of Brazil. There was no sign of life. The plane, with 50 persons, has been missing since Tuesday.

This is May Day - a time for dancing about the Maypole - and since 1889, when it was declared a holiday by the International Socialist Congress, a day for Labor to demonstrate and orate. Without Socialist affiliation, or subversive intent, this laborer would honor tradition by talking a little about the fields in which he labors - Radio and Television.

This is the only country in the world where two such powerful instruments of communication could have been permitted to develop and expand with so little government control. This fact places a unique and heavy responsibility upon those who direct and control these instruments, those who are licensed to operate them. They cannot abdicate, or assign that responsibility to a sponsor, an advertising agency or an individual. They are legally and morally responsible for every word spoken and every picture transmitted over their facilities. Just as it requires more than newsprint and presses to make a great newspaper, so it requires more than a camera or a microphone to provide reliable news and information. These two media, radio and television, are powerful, they can sell goods, and we are in a sense a nation of salesmen. They are profitable, and we respect profits. But these two instruments have an obligation that transcends both selling and profit-making; it is to inform - and the sources of information are being choked. In much of the world it is no longer possible for an honest reporter to report. In our part of the world, the mimeographed handout gradually replaces the old-fashioned interview. The President, by executive order, creates security officers in every government department and agency, authorized to suppress or release information. The Speaker of the House of Representatives bans all cameras and microphones from public hearings by House committees. Radio and Television make only a feeble protest, or none at all.

Too many of us are enthralled by television's proven ability to entertain and sell. Its value as an instrument of information depends upon access to the source of information. Neither camera nor microphone, in and of themselves, will make us politically sophisticated. They may combine to make us less literate. There is no guarantee that the most impartial television camera will enable the citizen to sort out with certainty the statesmen from the charlatans. There is indeed some danger that we may come to give our political allegiance to the man with the proper degree of muscle tension, well-matched eyes and persuasive voice.

It is possible to edit and distort, with lights and cameras as well as with a red pencil or a rubber stamp marked "Top Secret". It must be the constant concern of those transmitting information by television to avoid, so far as is humanly possible, any man-made curves in the mirror they hold up to current events.

This reporter pretends no knowledge of either the limits or capabilities of television, or for that matter radio. But the mechanical nature of the instruments involved preclude the possibility of their doing the thinking and the deciding for the individual. They cannot, separately or together, dull or deaden the pains of responsibility. They can, if properly used, supply and illuminate information upon which responsible opinion may be based.

There rests upon the veritable handful of people who control these two instruments, a truly frightening responsibility. Both Radio and Television are a combination of show business, advertising, news and many other ingredients. In the field of news and information, editorial decisions must be made with great speed. There is seldom time for much deliberation. The future power and influence of these two means of communication will be determined by the calibre and integrity of the men who control them, and by the vigilance and criticism of the citizens to whom they address themselves. Those who control these facilities have but a temporary franchise granted by the Government on behalf of the people. If they fail to meet this greatest challenge in the history of mass communication, they will have destroyed the world's greatest, free-est and potentially most powerful and persuasive method of communication. I do not suggest that this is going to happen, for the alternative is government control. But as a worker, on May Day - the traditional time for workers to speak their piece - I do believe that those who own and direct these facilities should concern themselves increasingly with nourishing, improving and refining their output of news and information. No similar group of men in the whole history of communications ever had greater responsibility or opportunity.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Radio and television are - and will continue to be - a powerful force in the dissemination of news. For this very reason, a high degree of care and caution is required. Two good guideposts for both industries to follow are these observations by Aristotle and C. C. Colton: "All men desire by nature to know." And "He that shortens the road to knowledge, lengthens life."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Friday - May 2, 1952

This is the news:

The C.I.O. steelworkers have called off their strike--(at the request of the president.) Many steelworkers reported back for work on the late afternoon shifts. U.S. Steel, and the Great Lakes Steel Corporation refused to call their workers back, until they have more definite assurances on just how long they will stay. Phil Murray, the union president, says he expects all of his people to go back to work. Mr. Murray and the six steel company presidents invited to meet with the President in Washington tomorrow, have all accepted. Murray is impressed that the President has called in the steel presidents "the men who make decisions." There are some in Washington who believe that the President would not have called both sides to the White House unless he was prepared to bring about a successful settlement of the dispute.

Both the government and the industry told their troubles to the Supreme Court today. The industry wants the court to uphold Judge Pine's ruling that seizure was illegal.. that the President does not have unlimited powers.. that IT faces the prospect of "irreperable damages" if the government holds ITS plants. The government..on the other hand.. contends that Judge Pine made mistakes in his ruling.. that he should not have called the seizure illegal.. that it's of crucial importance to the nation to keep the mills operating. The government also said, very carefully, that is is not arguing "in any sense from expediency, nor do we urge that the President posses unlimited powers."

The C.I.O. entered a brief saying that the Supreme Court should permit the government to operate the mills, and permit the government to raise the wages of the steelworkers. Otherwise, say the Steelworkers, if the government cannot raise wages, union members would be in the middle, "left holding the bag."

Another legal view came today from the Appeals Court which, by a five to four vote, ordered a stay in Judge's Pine decision. The majority here says there "is a serious question as to the correctness of the Pine ruling...(that the President lacked authority, utterly and completely, to seize the mills.) This court found an 1871 decision by the Supreme Court that says, in effect, the government may seize any private property, in peace or war, if its a cse of extreme necessity.. immediate or impending public danger...providing the government shows that an emergency does exist.

While the legal briefs and opinions were being presented, Price Stabilizer Arnall told a House committee: the steel industry feels it has "the country over a barrel and intends to extort their price increase or wreck the eceonomy." And Economic Stabilizer Putnam says that before CHARLES WILSON resigned as defense mobilizer, He was willing to grant the industry a $7.50 price increase, if the workers settled for a little less than the 26 cents an hour over-all wage increase, recommended by the Wage Stabilization Board.

On the basis of TODAY'S end of the steel strike, the Stock Market here in New York made what the Associated Press describes as "the strongest advance in more than five years." It added an estimated two billion dollars to the total value of all securities listed on the exchange.

The oilworkers strike went through another day with the air force and the government showing increasing concern. The Air Force says it is cutting down on all flying outside of Korea..Orders have gone out limiting flying to the minimum required for training.. essential command missions, and absolutely essential administrative flights. The Petroleum Administration for Defense says it will issue orders limiting all flying next week... because of the "precarious position" of the supply of aviation gasoline. An oil refining company official in Texas says rationing of wholesalers may begin in the Gulf area in about a week. Some Chicago gas stations today limited motorists to five gallons.

The Air Force has offered Lt. Verne Goodwin the opportunity of resigning.."for the good of the service." Goodwin RECENTLY was sentenced to two years in prison at hard labor for refusing to fly.

The army chief of staff, General Collins, told a House committee: we do not have a single regular army division at home to replace or reinforce our forces in Korea..that's why the President had to order many National Guadrsmen to serve on active duty for an additional nine months.

General Mark Clark, who is to succeed General Ridgeway as our far eastern commander, conferred with the President today. Later, he told reporters he thinks he has "a difficult task" AHEAD of him. He said he would do everything possible to bring about "an honorable armistice in Korea."

The armistice negotiators meet again in a few hours from now. Their conference is still being conducted in secret. Yesterday they met with enemy negotiarors for 78 minutes. Presumably the Communists turned down our proposals for a general settlement..or offered plans of their own. Admiral Joy, our chief negotiator, told reporters: "I regret that I have no comment to make."

Our Sabrejets today "probably" shot down one enemy Mig. And the Navy says two of our destroyers were damaged slightly by enemy shore batteries in a gun duel that went on all Wednesday afternoon. There is no word of any casualties in what the navy calls " the longest ship-to-shore artillery duel of the Korean war."

In Tokyo, Premier Yoshida told his people by radio: a nation that depends on a foreign power for its defense and "lacks the courage and determination to defend itself"--is not qualified to be an independent nation. He said he does not want to rush Japanese re-armament before there is evidence of such "courage and determination" from the Japanese people.

General Ridgeway today called yesterday's May Day riot in Tokyo "the well-known trade-mark of ruthless communism.. clearly of alien inspiration." And our new ambassador, Robert Murphy, said the riots were "more of the same" type of Russian-inspired demonstrations, he has seen in European cities.

In West Germany today, General Eisenhower met for two and a half hours with Channecellor Adenauer. Later the General told reporters: the western allies and west Germany are on the verge "of an era of great development and better understanding in peace and security." He said he and Adenauer "found themselves in agreement on one specific point.. that the young people of Europe deserve a better break than our generation."

In Washington, supporters of the General and leaders of the Taft campaign traded taunts and challenges. Wes Roberts, executive director of the Eisenhower campaign, said the General has won six delegates in Missouri. This, he said, is significant because after the Massachusetts primary the Taft forces claimed the Middle West was their stronghold. In the Taft headquarters, Lou Guylay, said the Eisenhower supporters are "high bred phonies...." who are using "one-day Republicans" to win delegates. Guylay charges that the Eisenhower supporters are running what he called "a deceitful campaign" by openly and brazenly inviting Democrats to vote in the Republican primaries. He said that in the next few weeks the Taft campaigners are.. as he put it.."going to drive them into the dirt and show them up for the phonies they are, including their candidate."

And David Ingalls, the Taft campaign manager, says Eisenhower supporters are using "new dealers, fair dealers, pseudo-Republicans and undercover Democrats" to help win primary votes.

A Senate committe was told today that Clovis D. Walker, an agriculture department official, gave confidential information to an Egyptian who sold the government 37 million dollars worth of Cotton last year. Harold Mesibov, a special agent in the Production and Marketing Administration, says Walker and the Egyptian exchanged a number of messages "possibly in code." Walker, who is the government's top cotton procurement official, denied this under oath.. he said he never knowingly supplied a friend with any confidential government information.

Edward R. Murrow: May 2, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

Tomorrow, seventeen three-year-old colts will run a mile-and-a-quarter around the track at Churchill Downs. About a hundred thousand people will watch the event, and no one knows how many million will see it on television. The weather forecast is threatening, with showers predicted, (though perhaps after the race.) Hill Gail is the favorite; Gift Silver will not run.

We are unable to talk with authority about horse races, but their resemblance to politics is unmistakeable. A few years ago we reported the words of Mark Twain on how to harness a horse. Mr. Twain said he was not an expert in horses, didn't speak with assurance, but could always tell which was the front end of a horse; (beyond that his art was not above the ordinary). Tonight, in response to public demand (must have been six or seven letters), here again is Mark Twain's description of how to harness a horse, continental fashion:

"The man stands up the horses, on each side of the thing that projects from the front end of the wagon, and then, throws the tangled mess of gear on top of the horses, and passes the thing that goes forward, through a ring and hauls it aft, and passes the other thing through the other ring and hauls it aft, on the other side of the other horse, opposite to the first one, after crossing them and bringing the loose end back, and then buckles the other thing underneath the horse, and takes XXXXXXX another thing and wraps it around the thing I spoke of before, and puts another thing over each horse's head, with broad flappers to it, to keep the dust out of his eyes, and puts the iron thing in his mouth for him to grit his teeth on, uphill, and brings the ends of those things aft over his back, after buckling another one around under his neck, to hold his head up, and hitching another thing on a thing that goes over his shoulders, to keep his head up when he is climbing a hill, and then takes the slack of the thing which I mentioned a while ago, and fetches it aft, and makes it fast to the thing that pulls the wagon, and hands the other thing up to the driver, to steer with. I have never buckled up a horse myself", said Twain, "but I do not think we do it that way."

Two hundred years before Mark Twain was born - and ever dreamed of writing about the ~~saddling~~ harnessing of a horse - George Herbert observed:"The horse thinks one thing, and he that saddles him another." And for those, anxious to make a quick turnover on tomorrow's Derby, some consolation may be found in these words by David Dodge - [redacted] regardless of the outcome. Said Dodge:"You never accumulate, if you don't speculate!"

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY - MAY 2, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The C.I.O. steelworkers have called off their strike at the request of the President. Many steelworkers reported back for work on the late afternoon shifts. U.S. Steel and the Great Lakes Steel Corporation refused to call their workers back until they have more definite assurances on just how long they will stay. Phil Murray, the union president, says he expects all of his people to go back to work. Mr. Murray and the six steel company presidents invited to meet with the President in Washington tomorrow, have all accepted. Murray is impressdd that the President has called in the steel presidents, "the men who make decisions." There are some in Washington who believe that the President would not have called both sides to the White House unless he was prepared to bring about a successful settlement of the dispute.

Both the Government and the industry told their troubles to the Supreme Court today. The industry wants the court to uphold Judge Pine's ruling that seizure was illegal: that the President does not have unlimited powers: that it faces the prospect of "irreparable damages" if the Government holds its plants. The Government, on the other hand, contends that Judge Pine made mistakes in his ruling: that he should not have called the seizure illegal: that it's of crucial importance to the nation to keep the mills operating. The Government also said, very carefully, that it is not arguing "in any sense from expediency nor do we urge that the President posses unlimited powers."

The C.I.O. entered a brief saying that the Supreme Court should permit the Government to operate the mills, and permit the Government to raise the wages of the steelworkers, Otherwise, say the steelworkers, if the Government cannot raise wages, union members would be in the middle, "left holding the bag."

Another legal view came today from the Appeals Court which, by a five to four vote, ordered a stay in Judge's Pine decision. The majority here says there "is a serious question as to the correctness" of the Pine ruling - that the President lacked authority, utterly and completely, to seize the mills. This court found an 1871 decision by the Supreme Court that says, in effect, the Government may seize any private property, in peace or war, if its a case of "extreme necessity.....immediate or impending public danger", providing the Government shows that an emergency does exist.

While the legal briefs and opinions were being presented, Price Stabilizer Arnall told a House committee: the steel industry feels it has "the country over a barrel, and intends to extort their price increase or wreck the economy." And Economic Stabilizer Putnam says the before Charles Wilson resigned as Defense Mobilizer, he was willing to grant the industry a $7.50 price increase, if the workers settled for a little less than the 26 cents an hour over-all, recommended by the Wage Stabilization Board.

On the basis of today's end of the steel strike, the Stock Market here in New York made what the Associated Press describes as "the strongest advance in more than five years." It added an estimated two billion dollars to the total value of all securities listed on the exchange.

The oilworkers strike went through another day with the Air Forde and the Government showing increasing concern. The Air Force says it is cutting down on all flying outside of Korea. Orders have gone out limiting flying to the minimum required for training, essential command missions, and absolutely essential adminstrative flights. The Petroleum Administration for Defense says it will issue orders limiting all flying next week because of the "precarious position" of the supply of aviation gasoline. An oil refining company official in Texas says rationing of wholesalers may begin in the Gulf area in about a week. Some Chicago gas stations today limited motorists to five gallons.

The Air Force has offered Lt. Verne Goodwin the opportunity of resigning "for the good of the service." Goodwin recently was sentenced to two years in prison at hard labor for refusing to fly.

The army chief of staff, General Collins, told a House committee: we do not have a single regular army division at home to replace or reinforce our forces in Korea; that's why the President had to order many National Guardsmen to serve on active duty for an additional nine months.

General Mark Clark, who is to succeed General Ridgway as our Far-Eastern Commander, conferred with the President today. Later, he told reporters he thinks he has "a difficult task" ahead of him. He said he would do everything possible to bring about "an honorable armistice in Korea."

The armistice negotiators meet again in a few hours from now. Their conference is still being conducted in secret. Yesterday they met with enemy negotiators for 78 minutes. Presumably the Communists turned down our proposals for a general settlement, or offered plans of their own. Admiral Joy, our chief negotiator, told reporters: "I regret that I have no comment to make."

Our Sabre jets today "probably" shot down one enemy MIG. And the Navy says two of our destroyers were damaged slightly by enemy shore batteries, in a gun duel that went on all Wednesday afternoon. There is no word of any casualties in what the Navy calls "the longest ship-to-shore artillery duel of the Korean war."

In Tokyo, Premier Yoshida told his people by radio: a nation that depends on a foreign power for its defense and "lacks the courage and determination to defend itself, "is not qualified to be an independent nation. He said he does not want to rush Japanese re-armament befoer there is evidence of such "courage and determination" from the Japanese people.

General Ridgway today called yesterday's May Day riot in Tokyo, "the well-known trade-mark of ruthless communism....clearly of alien inspiration. And our new ambassador, Robert Murphy, said the riots were "more of the same" type of Russian-inspired demonstrations, he has seen in European sities.

In West Germany today, General Eisenhower met for two and a half hours with Chancellor Adenauer. Later the General told reporters: the western allies and west Germany, are on the verge "of an era of great development and better understanding in peace and security." He said he and Adenauer "found themselves in agreement on one specific point: that the young people of Europe deserve a better break than our generation."

In Washington, supporters of the General and leaders of the Taft campaign traded taunts and challenges. Wes Roberts, executive director of the Eisenhower dampaign, said the General has won six delegates in Missouri. This, he said, is significant because after the Massachusetts primary the Taft forces claimed the Middle West was their stronghold. In the Taft headquarters, Lou Guylay, said the Eisenhower supporters are "high bred phonies", who are using "one-day Republicans" to win delegates. Guylay charges that the Eisenhower supporters are running what he called "a deceitful campaign" by openly and brazenly inviting Democrats to vote in the Republican primaries. He said that in the next few weeks, the Taft campaigners are, as he put it, "going to drive them into the dirt, and show them up for the phonies they are, including their candidate."

And David Ingalls, the Taft campaign manager, says Eisenhower supporters are using "New Dealers, Fair Dealers, pseudo-Republicans and undercover Democrats" to help win primary votes.

A Senate committee was told today that Clovis D. Walker, an agriculture department official, gave confidential information to an Egyptian, who sold the Government 37 million dollars worth of Cotton last year. Harold Mesibov, a special agent in the Production and Marketing Administration, says Walker and the Egyptian exchanged a number of messages "possibly in code." Walker, who is the government's top cotton procurement official, denied this under oath; he said he never knowingly supplied a friend with any confidential government information.

Tomorrow, seventeen three-year-old colts will run a mile-and-a-quarter around the track at Churchill Downs. About a hundred thousand people will watch the event, and no one knows how many million will see it on television. The weather forecast is threatening with showers predicted, (although perhaps after the race).

Hill Gail is the favorite; Gift Silver will not run.

We are unable to talk with authority about horse races, but their resemblance to politics is unmistakeable. A few years ago we reported the words of Mark Twain on how to harness a horse. Mr. Twain said he was not an expert in horses, didn't speak with assurance, but could always tell which was the front end of a horse; (beyond that, his art was not above the ordinary). Tonight, in response to public demand, (must have been six or seven letters), here again is Mark Twain's description of how to harness a horse, continental fashion:

"The man stands up the horses on each side of the thing that projects from the front end of the wagon, and then, throws the tangled mess of gear on top of the horses, and passes the thing that goes forward, through a ring and hauls if aft, and passes the thing through the other ring and hauls it aft, on the other side of the other horse, opposite to the first one, after crossing them and bringing the loose end back, and then buckles the other thing underneath the horse, and takes another thing and wraps it around the thing I spoke of before, and puts another thing over each horse's head with broad flappers to it, (to keep the dust out of his eyes), and puts the iron thing in his mouth for him to grit his teeth on, uphill, and brings the ends of those things aft over his back, after buckling another one around under his neck to hold his head up, and hitching another thing on a thing that goes over his shoulders, to keep his head up when he is climbing a hill and then takes the slack of the thing which I mentioned a while ago, and fetches it aft, and makes it fast to the thing that pulls the wagon, and hands the other thing up to the driver, to steer with. I have never buckled up a horse myself," said Twain, "but I do not think we do it that way."

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Two hundred years before Mark Twain was born - and ever dreamed of writing about the harnessing of a horse - George Herbert observed: "The horse thinks one thing, and he that saddles him another." And for those, anxious to make a quick turnover on tomorrow's Derby, some consolation may be found in these words by David Dodge - regardless of the outcome. Said Dodge: "You never accumulate if you don't speculate."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Monday - May 5, 1952

This is the news:

General Collins, the army chief of staff, said today that important types of ammunition have been rationed in Korea...because World War Two stocks are almost gone... and "production still does not equal normal battle expenditures." [redacted] Collins and other members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff were urging [redacted] A SENATE COMMITTEE to reject a House decision to limit military expenditures to 46-billions. In a few minutes I'd like to review the testimony by General Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs.

In Korea today, allied fighter-bombers again attacked enemy railroad lines..the truce negotiarors met for 11 minutes, and scheduled another meeting.. and the Chinese Communist radio broadcast what it called "confessions" by two American flyers. The airmen are said to have admitted dropping germ-filled bombs in North Korea.

The Senate today voted to send the six billion 900 million dollar foreign aid bill to its Armed Services Committee, for further study. The Foreign Relations committed had studied the bill for two months.

~~Chairman Connally of the Foreign Relations Committee said sending the bill to Armed Services was an "affront" and "almost an insult to his group." But Republican Senator Bridges said that if the bill passes in its present form it would be impossible to balance the budget this year.~~

More steel mills went back into operation today as the White House, INDUSTRY, and C.I.O. steelworkers, had nothing to say about the dispute.

~~Irving S. Olds, chairman of the Board of Directors, told his stockholders the President sided with labor and against the industry "without regard for actual facts."~~

The striking C.I.O. oil workers made it clear today that they would be willing to settle their strike against the industry for an 18.5 cents an hour raise. (previously they had demanded 25 cents an hour.) The government announced that it has no plans to ration motor fuel.. although supplies are running low in some midwestern areas. A limit on the use of aviation gasoline goes into effect tomorrow.

The President today asked Congress to set-up a system of federal insurance against flood damage..backed by a billion and a half dollar fund. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation would issue policies.

Joseph Nunan, Junior, former commissioner of Internal Revenue, told a House committee today: he accepted no outside fees while he was the tax commissioner. He refused to explain where he got the cash for several private investments. Nunan said the committee was doing him "irreperable and unjustified" harm.. because he is being investigated by a grand jury.. and might be indicted for a possible crime. He did not elaborate.

Another House committee...investigating the Justice Department.. heard today from James M. McInerney, chief of the department's criminal division. He said that both former Attorney General Mc Grath and former Corruption Investigator Newbold Morris knew , before Morris was appointed, that Morris was under investigation in connection with the sale of surplus tankers. Both Mc Grath and Morris have testified that they did not know the Justice Department was looking into the transaction.

~~Federal Judge [illegible] Mc Grath, told a Senate committee that [illegible] as attorney general he will "expose and prosecute corruption" in government wherever he finds it.~~

Clovis D. Walker resigned today as director of the Agriculture Department's cotton branch. He had been accused of leaking trade secrets to an Egyptian cotton broker. Walker said he is not guilty of any "willful wrongdoing", but he said there might be some evidence that indicated "some indiscretion."

~~The Federal Reserve Board today dropped a credit program that was designed to encourage lending institutions to make loans only for defense or essential civilian purposes.~~

Senator McCarthy today was supposed to take pre-trial testimony from Senator Benton, against whom he has filed a two million dollar slander suit. But Benton refused to answer any questions because McCarthy insisted on recording the answers on tape. Benton's attorney wanted to rely on five stenographers to take down the record; McCarthy insisted on using the tape machine in addition to the stenographers.

~~In Paris today, John Foster Dulles said we should warn~~ Communist China that we will strike back if there is any further Chinese aggression in Asia.

~~General Gruenther just back from a four-day consultation with General Eisenhower says Eisenhower will not make a pre-convention campaign for the Republican presidential nomination. Gruenther accepted the sense of getting out and stumping. He said General Eisenhower~~

[redacted] AND former Governor Mickelson of South Dakota, who HAS conferred with Gen. Eisenhower IN PARIS, says the general feels farmers must be protected from disaster.. might need government subsidies to underwrite their prices.

Another general.. Albert Wedemeyer.. today became president of a national Taft for president committee. He said General MacArthur and many others urged him to take the job. General Wedemeyer says Senator Taft: "is neither an isolationist nor an internationalist..he is a realist."

Ohio and Florida hold their presidential primary elections tomorrow. In the Ohio Republican race Senator Taft is opposed only by Harold Stassen. In Florida's Democratic primary, the candidates are Senator Russell of Georgia and Senator Kefauver of Tennessee. My colleague Edward P. Morgan has been covering part of that campaign.. and is now in Miami. Ed, how do you size things up tonight?

(2.30 ending

"and the outcome is really in doubt"

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Monday, May 5, 1952
7:45-8:00 p.m.

MURROW: ..... In Florida's Democratic primary, the candidates are Senator Russell, of Georgia, and Senator Kefauver, of Tennessee. My colleague, Edward P. Morgan, has been covering part of that campaign and is now in Miami.

Ed, how do you size things up tonight?

MORGAN: Ed, Florida has a first-class argument on its hands and it doesn't involve the California Chamber of Commerce. There are national ramifications to the Democratic presidential fight here between Tennessee's Senator Kefauver and Georgia's Senator Russell. The Republicans have no candidate in this contest. Technically, in tomorrow's popularity poll, the voters simply indicate the man they'd like to see the Democratic nominee for President. Their choice won't legally bind Florida's twenty-four delegates to the national convention in Chicago, but these delegates won't be chosen until a second primary, three weeks from now, and Tuesday's outcome may indicate decisively whose the twenty-four will be.

From the start, Russell has emphasized that he is a national, not a sectional, candidate. If he should falter in his own deep south in his first primary test, it might prove fatal. A bad licking in Florida could finish Kefauver, too, but should he win he might stampeded Alabama and North Carolina to join his growing herd of northern delegates. By ordinary measurements, Senator Dick, as Russell's followers address him, is the favorite. Northwest Florida is often called, without disrespect, an extension of Georgia's hog and hominy belt. Moreover, Florida's entire congressional delegation, two Senators and six Representatives, plus the Governor, have all come out for Russell, but ordinary measurements don't apply. Behind the beguilingly soft southern accents of the two gentlemanly Senators lies a cocklebur of contention over ticklish issues. Crime, for instance, once a major industry in this State.

Both candidates denounce it, but Kefauver has so adroitly stressed the crusadings of his Senate Committee that he seems at times to be running less against Senator Russell than against the Governor, Fuller Warren, whose current popularity is not exactly spectacular.

There is the piercing nettle, too, of minority groups, not only the Negroes, but Latin, Jewish, and other elements. Many of them pin their welfare to the FEPC, the Fair Employment issue. Kefauver appears to favor a bolder approach to this problem than does Russell. The minority vote will figure importantly in tomorrow's results and so, presumably, will the unknown influence of ex-Senator Claude Pepper, a New Dealer, who has just endorsed Kefauver despite the curious fact that he already had friends on the Russell slate. The campaign was hot enough before Pepper got into it. Now, things are coming to a boil and the outcome is really in doubt.

Ed.trans.-A.A.Cardiff (30)

The Pulitzer Prize Committee made its annual awards today: The St. Louis Post Dispatch was honored for exposing corruption in the internal revenue department. John M. Hightower of the Associated Press, [redacted] Anthony Leviero of the New York Times and George de Carvalho of the San Fransisco Chronicle were honored for newspaper work. The committee chose Herman Wouk's "The Caine [redacted] Mutiny".. [redacted] Oscar Handlin's "The Uprooted" and Merlo J. Pusey's biography of "Charles Evans Hughes" for its literary prizes. Joseph's Kramm's play "The Shrike" won the drama award.

Edward R. Murrow: May 5, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

The House of Representatives cut six billion dollars from the military budget, for the year starting July 1st. / Today General Omar Bradley, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, pled with the Senate Committee to restore the cut. / And in so doing the General revealed the real mainspring, and pivot, of our military planning. / He explained that magical date, 1954, as the critical period, in our relations with the Soviet Union. This is a date often mentioned, but never before officially explained. / General Bradley explained it on the basis of "our best Intelligence", and his nine-page document was about as sombre a military estimate as this reporter has ever seen.

General Bradley said: "If we are allowed any time for preparedness after the next two or three years, I think we will be lucky." / The General's choice of 1954 as the flash point, was based upon these considerations: Russian atomic progress, as a result of what they learned from the Germans and from the British traitor Klaus Fuchs, should be faster than our own progress during our first five-year period.

The Russians produced enormous quantities of weapons in 1946 and 1947, and then cut back their military production. If this huge backlog of guns, armor and aircraft are to be used, before they become obsolete, the Russians will have to use them in 1954 and '55.

The Russians have made great progress in rebuilding and increasing their industrial capacity; also in re-locating key industries behind the Urals. They have increased their mobility and fire power, and their production of jet aircraft. General Bradley implied that by 1954 their stockpiles, their reserves, and their industrial capacity will be in a condition where the Russians might risk war, under conditions most favorable to themselves. And he reminds us that they have stated, that war with the free nations is inevitable, in their theory.

Another reason for choosing the date 1954 as a critical one, is the General's belief that if the plans for the defense of Western Europe even "partly succeed," the chance of anyone overrunning Europe will begin to decrease after 1954.

Also after 1954 our production of new weapons, the ability of Western Europe to help defend itself, will narrow the gap that now exists between Russian capabilities, and those of the free world.

It is true, historically, that no General is ever satisfied with the men, money or metal at his disposal, in peace or war. But it is necessary to remember that General Bradley's statement today - without precedent in our peacetime history - is based upon what he repeatedly called "our best Intelligence", which means the sum total of every scrap of information we have been able to collect regarding Russian production, training, intentions and military capability. Of necessity today's statement must give the Russians certain information regarding our long-range planning. (Clearly that risk was taken in an effort to restore the six billion-dollar cut.) This was no case of a General asking for more men and more guns. The statment was cleared by the White House and by Defense Secretary ~~XXXXX~~ Lovett. And it is probably the most eloquent document yet produced indicating the seriousness of the situation that confronts us. We have been warned in an extraordinarily serious and revealing fashion. It's now up to the Senate.

The price of preparing for war - in the hope of preserving the peace - is not cheap. But in matters such as this there can be no cheap or easy way out. It would seem that Gen. Bradley, in presenting his case for prepardness, fits Publilius Syrus' observation that:"the wise man guards against the future as if it were the present." For as Sir Thomas Overbury once remarked:"They are wisest,who even in the likelihood of good,provide for ill."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY - MAY 5, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

General Collins, the army chief of staff, said today that important types of ammunition have been rationed in Korea, because World War Two stocks are almost gone and "production still does not equal normal battle expenditures." Collins and other members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff were urging a Senate committe to reject a House decision to limit military expenditures to 46-billions. In a few minutes I'd like to review the testimony by General Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs.

In Korea today, allied fighter-bombers again attacked enemy railroad lines; the truce negotiators met for 11 minutes and scheduled another meeting; the Chinese Communist radio broadcast what it called "confessions" by two American flyers. The airmen are said to have admitted dropping germ-filled bombs in North Korea.

The Senate today voted to send the six billion 900 million dollar foreign aid bill to its Armed Services Committee for further study. The Foreign Relations committed had studied the bill for two months.

More steel mills went back into operation today as the White House, industry, and C.I.O. steelworkers had nothing to say about the dispute.

The striking C.I.O. oil workers made it clear today that they would be willing to settle their strike against the industry for an 18.5 cents an hour raise - (previously they had demanded 25 cents an hour). The Government announced that it has no plans to ration motor fuel, although supplies are running low in some midwestern areas. A limit on the use of aviation gasoline goes into effect tomorrow.

The President today asked Congress to set-up a system of federal insurance against flood damage, backed by a billion and a half dollar fund. The

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation would issue policies.

Joseph Nunan, Junior, former commissioner of Internal Revenue, told a House committee today: he accepted no outside fees while he was the tax commissioner. He refused to explain where he got the cash for several private investments. Nunan said the committee was doing him "irreparable and unjustified" harm, because he is being investigated by a grand jury and might be indicted for a possibl crime. He did not elaborate.

Another House committee, investigating the Justice Department, heard today from James M. McInerney, chief of the department's criminal division. He said that both former Attorney General McGrath and former corruption investigator Newbold Morris knew, before Morris was appointed, that Morris was under investigatio in connection with the sale of surplus tankers. Both McGrath and Morris have testified that they did not know the Justice Department was looking into the transactior

Clovis D. Walker resigned today as director of the Agriculture Department's cotton branch. He had been accused of leaking trade secrets to an Egyptian cotton broker. Walker said he is not guilty of any "willful wrongdoing" but he said there might be some evidence that indicated "some indiscretion."

Senator McCarthy today was supposed to take pre-trial testimony from Senator Benton, against whom he has filed a two million dollar slander suit. But Benton refused to answer any questions because McCarthy insisted on recording the answers on tape. Benton's attorney wanted to rely on five stenographers to take down the record. McCarthy insisted on using the tape machine in addition to the stenographers.

In Paris today, John Foster Dulles said we should warn Communist China that we will strike back if there is any further Chinese aggression in Asia.

And former Governor Mickelson of South Dakota, who has conferred with General Eisenhower in Paris, says the general feels farmers must be protected from disaster: might need government subsidies to underwrite their prices.

Another general, Albert Wedemeyer, today became president of a national Taft for president committee. He said General MacArthur and many others urged him to take the job. General Wedemeyer says Senator Taft "is neither an isolationist nor an internationalist; he is a realist."

Ohio and Florida hold their presidential primary elections tomorrow. In the Ohio Republican race Senator Taft is opposed only by Harold Stassen. In Florida's Democratic primary, the candidates are Senator Russell of Georgia and Senaotr Kefauver of Tennessee. My colleague Edward P. Morgan has been covering part of that campaign and is now in Miami. Ed, how do you size things up tonight?

MORGAN: Ed, Florida has a first-class argument on its hands and it doesn't involve the California Chamber of Commerce. There are national ramifications to the Democratic presidential fight here between Tennessee's Senator Kefauver and Georgia's Senator Russell. The Republicans have no candidate in this contest. Technically, in tomorrow's popularity poll, the voters simply indicate the man they'd like to see the Democratic nominee for President. Their choice won't legally bind Florida's twenty-four delegates to the national convention in Chicago, but these delegates won't be chosen until a second primary, three weeks from now, and Tuesday's outcome may indicate decisively whose the twenty-four will be.

From the start, Russell has emphasized that he is a national, not a sectional, candidate. If he should falter in his own "deep south" in his first primary test, it might prove fatal. A bad licking in Florida could finish Kefauver, too, but should he win he might stampeded Alabama and North Carolina to join his growing herd of northern delegates. By ordinary measurements, Senator Dick, as Russell's followers address him, is the favorite. Northwest Florida is often called, without disrespect, an extension of Georgia's hog and hominy belt. Moreover, Florida's entire congressional delegation, two Senators and six Representatives, plus the Governor, have all come out for Russell, but ordinary mdasurements don't apply. Behind the beguilingly soft southern accents of the two gentlemanly Senators lies a cocklebur of contention over ticklish issues. Crime, for instance; once a major industry in this State. Both candidates denounce it, but Kefauver has so adroitly stressed the crusadings of his Senate Committee that he seems at times to be running less against Senator Russell than against the Governor, Fuller Warren, whose current popularity is not exactly spectacular.

There is the piercing nettle, too, of minority groups, not only the Negroes, but Latin, Jewish, and other elements. Many of them pin their welfare to the FEPC, the Fair Employment issue. Kefauver appears to favor a bolder approach to this problem than does Russell. The minority vote will figure importantly in tomorrow's results and so, presumably, will the unknown influence of ex-Senator Claude Pepper, a New Dealer, who has just endorsed Kefauver despite the curious fact that he already had friends on the Russell slate. The campaign was hot enough before Pepper got into it. Now, things are coming to a boil, and the outcome is really in doubt.

The Pulitzer Prize Committee made its annual awards today. The St. Louis Post Dispatch was honored for exposing corruption in the Internal Revenue Department. John M. Hightower of the Associated Press, Anthony Leviero of the New York Times, and George de Carvalho of the San Francisco Chronicle were honored for newspaper work. The committee chose Herman Wouk's "The Caine Mutiny", Oscar Handlin's "The Uprooted", and Merle J. Pusey's biography of "Charles Evans Hughes" for its literary prizes. Joseph Kramm's play "The Shrike" won the drama award.

The House of Representatives cut six billion dollars from the military budget, for the year starting July 1st. Today General Omar Bradley, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, pled with the Senate Committee to restore the cut. And in so doing the General revealed the real mainspring, and pivot, of our military planning. He explained that magical date, 1954, as the critical period in our relations with the Soviet Union. This is a date often mentioned, but never officially explained. General Bradley explained it on the basis of "our best Intelligence", and his nine-page document was about as sombre a military estimate as this reporter has ever seen.

General Bradley said: "If we are allowed any time for preparedness after the next two or three years, I think we will be lucky." The General's choice of 1954 as the flash point was based upon these considerations: Russian atomic progress, as a result of what they learned from the Germans and from the British traitor Klaus Fuchs, should be faster than our own progress during our first five-year period.

The Russians produced enormous quantities of weapons in 1946 and 1947, and then cut back their military production. If this huge backlog of guns, armor and aircraft are to be used before they become obsolete, the Russians will have to use them in 1954 and 1955.

The Russians have made great progress in rebuilding and increasing their industrial capacity; also in re-locating key industries behind the Urals. They have increased their mobility and fire power, and their production of jet aircraft. General Bradley implied that by 1954 their stockpiles, their reserves, and their industrial capacity will be in a condition where the Russians might risk war - under conditions most favorable to themselves. And he reminds us that they have stated, that war with the free nations is inevitable, in their theory.

Another reason for choosing the date 1954 as a critical one, is the General's belief that if the plans for the defense of Western Europe even "partly succeed," the chance of anyone overrunning Europe will begin to decrease after 1954.

Also after 1954, our production of new weapons, the ability of Western Europe to help defend itself, will narrow the gap that now exists between Russian capabilities, and those of the free world.

It is true, historically, that no general is ever satisfied with the men, money or metal at his disposal in peace or war. But it is necessary to remembe that General Bradley's statement today - without precedent in our peacetime history - is based upon what he repeatedly called "our best Intelligence", which means the sum total of every scrap of information we have been able to collect regarding Russian production, training, intentions and military capability. Of necessity today's statement must give the Russians certain information regarding our long-range planning. (Clearly that risk was taken in an effort to restore the six billion-dollar cut.) This was no case of a general asking for more men and more guns. The statement was cleared by the White House, and by Defense Secretary Lovett. And it is probably the most eloquent document yet produced indicating the seriousness of the situation that confronts us. We have been warned in an extraordinarily serious and revealing fashion. It's now up to the Senate.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: The price of preparing for war - in the hope of preserving the peace - is not cheap. But in matters such as this, there can be no cheap or easy way out. It would seem that General Bradley, in presenting his case for preparedness, fits Publilius Syrus' observation that "The wise man guards against the future as if it were the present." For as Sir Thomas Overbury once remarked: "They are wisest, who even in the likelihood of good, provide for ill."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Tuesday - May 6, 1952

This is the news:

The Wage Stabilization Board today asked the nation's striking oil workers to go back to work..and to send representatives to Washington on Tuesday, to resume collective bargaining with the industry. The oil workers..90-thousand of them..say they will be in Washington Tuesday..they'll let the board know "as soon as possible", whether they will go back to work before then. The industry has not yet replied. Today was the seventh day of the strike, which has cut the nation's oil refining capacity by one third. A thirty per cent cut on commercial and private aviation gas, went into effect today. And the Air Force in Europe says that as "a conservation measure" it has eliminated all but essential flying.

There were no MAJOR developments in the steel dispute. Philip Murray called members of the Steelworkers executive board to a private meeting in Philadelphia tomorrow. And U.S. Steel announced that Irving S. Olds has resigned as chairman of the board. Benjamin Fairless, the steel president, will take over the additional job of board chairman.

Former Defense Mobilizer Wilson told a House committee today that the President left him on a limb by changing his mind after he had told Wilson to work out a compromise in the steel dispute. Wilson recommends that the Wage Stabilization Board be stripped of its power to recommend settlements in labor disputes referred to the board. He says the Board's recommendations in the steel case would give the workers three times more than they had coming to them under the Board's rules.

Federal Judge Mc Granery, nominated by the president to be attorney general, went under severe questioning by a Senate committee today. With the members insiting on yes or no answers, Mc Granery said: the President should exhaust his powers under law, before claiming any inherent powers... he believes the President has the right to do "any and all things to preserve the life, liberty and property" of the citizens.. but the President is bound by the Constiution, and the law, the same as the rest of us. Mc Granery also indicated that he does not approve of the Attorney General deciding what organizations should be labelled subversive; he thinks its "pretty high-handed to leave this up to one individual.." would prefer that Congress set the standards.

In Philadelphia, Federal Judge Welsh has decided that the law that requires gamblers to buy a 50-dollar tax stamp, is unconstiutional. He called it a police measure and not a tax bill. He also ruled out that provision of the law which requires gamblers to be witnesses against themselves and informers against others.

Stabilization officials say they are going to appeal to the Supreme Court a ruling which may have the effect of raising prices on all types of consumer goods..including food. Yesterday, a U.S. Emergency Court of Appeals ruled that under the Capehart Amendment to the controls law, wholesalers and retailers are entitled to seek price increases. Stabilizaion officials had contended that the Capehart Amendment applied only to manufacturers and processors. James Durham, assistant counsel for the price office, says if this ruling stands the agency would have to grant price increases to all wholesalers and retailers who could prove they are entitled to them.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee today voted to cut more than a billion dollars FROM military and economic aid to Europe. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has agreed on a similar reduction in all foreign areas. The House committee cuts would apply only to Europe. It approved in full the Administration's requests for the

the Middle East.. Far East and Latin America.

[redacted]

In Florida and Ohio today election officials reported record-breaking TURNOUTS in the presidential primaries in each state. But very few returns are available at the moment: two PRECINCTS in Florida give Senator Russell 20 votes to one for Senator Kefauver in the Democratic race. In Ohio, Republicans are voting for Senator Taft or Harold Stassen.. no write-ins are permitted.

The Army said today that hand grenades and some types of cartridges are being rationed to front line troops in Korea. But overall supplies of ammunition are described as "plentiful." A special communique from the Far East Command says ammunition is being rationed to save money and to maintain reserves "as a matter of normal military precaution." Yesterday, Army Chief of Staff Collins told a Senate committee "important" types of ammunition are being rationed because production is not up to normal battle expenditures.

In Korea today, our forces engaged the enemy in an artillery duel... our planes cut [redacted] main Communist railroad line in North Korea at 118 places. The Chinese Communist radio says the truce talks "appear to be entering the most crucial deadlock since they began." [redacted] And General Van Fleet says "apparently the reds don't want an armistice and have not wanted an armistice." The General told reporters: "We can either out-fight them or out-sit them."

A Senate committee reported today that more than five million dollars worth of goods have been stolen from our army in Korea. Most of it has gone into the Korean [redacted] black market. The committee says the army has recovered about two million dollars worth of stolen goods.

Edward R. Murrow: May 6, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

Today the North Atlantic Council agreed to guarantee Germany's security, provided Germany agrees to come to the aid of the other members of the North Atlantic Pact in case they are attacked. / This guarantee of course will apply only after agreement has been reached on the establishment of a European Army. / The target date for the signing of the agreements with Germany is May 20th, and as the date approaches the prospects fade. / The Germans are in a buyer's market, militarily and economically; and like a prudent housewife they are in no hurry, but are shopping around. There is plenty of handwriting on the wall to show that the West Germans are increasingly aware of the strength of their position and their indispensibility to any adequate defense of Western Europe. / Here are a few signs on the wall.

Today the Lower House of the German Parliament voted unanimously to wipe out all restrictions on trade with the communist world. / We and our allies have been trying to control that trade in respect to critical materials. / The German Parliament concluded that these embargos merely served to cripple the Western nations, especially Germany, in attempting to balance their foreign trade. The German vote was unanimous; they can't put it into effect immediately, but eventually the Germans are going to trade with the East, just as the Japanese are going to trade with the mainland of Asia, because they must do so in order to survive.

Here's another sign on the wall. The President of the Soviet zone of Germany says he will set up his own army if Western Germany starts to re-arm. This is no idle threat; he already has nearly seventy thousand men in military formations - the cadre's for 15 divisions, once the Russians deliver the arms and establish a draft.

Another sign on the German wall. Two of the three Parties forming the present coalition government, under Chancellor Adenauer, have said they will not agree to go along with the West in re-arming, unless they get complete sovereignty. This means, among other things, the elimination of all occupation costs. Here's an example of what they mean. The British have about a hundred thousand troops in Germany; most of the maintenance, supply and non-combatant work for this force, is done by about forty thousand German civilians. They are paid by the German Government. The French and ourselves have similar German civilian forces at our disposal. The Germans say if they're going to be partners on an equal basis, they aren't going to continue to pay for this civilian labor.

Yet another sign on the German wall. They have adopted their old National Anthem, the traditional Deutschland Lied. This act underscores the process of Germany's return to conscious nationhood - the need for national symbols, as an outward expression of national strength and self-confidence. The German Government had been trying for years to popularize a new anthem, but it didn't work, so they went back to the old one.

There is no sure sign of any break in tradition, or in traditional policy and aspirations, on the part of the Germans. Their participation in a European Defense community is still a long way off. They have played the role of middleman, in this struggle of East against West before, and they continue to do it with considerable skill. #

In Czechoslovakia our propagandists have demonstrated considerable skill, (something which they have not always managed to do). This week is the seventh anniversary of the "liberation" of Czechoslovakia from the Germans - big communist celebrations. The government printed hundreds of thousands of what were called "liberty postcards", to honor the occasion. The Communist Party ordered all Czechs to buy at least three of these postcards and send them, with best wishes, to government officials, Party leaders, inventors, agitators, champion milkers, tractor drivers and all the other personnel of the Communist

State. At this point Radio Free Europe entered the picture, laid down a barrage of broadcasts urging all Czechs to buy as many postcards as they could afford, send them to all local and national communist leaders, and to sign all the cards with the surname "Svoboda", which means freedom in the Czech language. Czechoslovakian letter-carriers are delivering literally hundreds of thousands of these postcards signed "Karl Svoboda", "Jan Svoboda", "Maria Svoboda". The Svobodas have clogged the mails; the Communist leaders can't stop it because they ordered it in the first place. This whole episode serves to re-emphasize the traditional Czech desire for freedom, and to remind those communists who receive the cards that they are known and are being watched.

It's a minor propaganda jackpot for the Czech underground and Radio Free Europe, but it doesn't bring the day of liberation appreciably nearer.

It would seem that the Germans - ~~once~~ Twice our enemy - are now setting a price for their friendship...and are listening to all offers. In their bargaining they appear to be following this advice once given by William Scarborough:"Use the little, to get the big; throw a brick to get a gem." And about the best we can do at the moment is follow the advice Abraham Lincoln's father gave him: "If you make a bad bargain, hug it all the tighter."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY - MAY 6, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Wage Stabilization Board today asked the nation's striking oil workers to go back to work and to send representatives to Washington on Tuesday to resume collective bargaining with the industry. The oil workers, (90-thousand of them), say they will be in Washington Tuesday: they'll let the board know "as soon as possible" whether they will go back to work before then. The industry has not yet replied. Today was the seventh day of the strike, which has cut the nation's oil refining capacity by one third. A thirty per cent cut on commercial and private aviation gas went into effect today. And the Air Force in Europe says that as "a conservation measure" it has eliminated all but essential flying.

There were no major developments in the steel dispute. Philip Murray called members of the steelworkers executive board to a private meeting in Philadelphia tomorrow. And U.S. Steel announced that Irving S. Olds has resigned as chairman of the board. Benjamin Fairless, the steel president, will take over the additional job of board chairman.

Former Defense Mobilizer Wilson told a House committee today that the President left him on a limb by changing his mind after he had told Wilson to work out a compromise in the steel dispute. Wilson recommends that the Wage Stabilization Board be stripped of its power to recommend settlements in labor disputes referred to the board. He says the Board's recommendations in the steel case would give the workers three times more than they had coming to them under the Board's rules.

Federal Judge McGranery, nominated by the president to be attorney general, went under severe questioning by a Senate committee today. With the members insisting on yes or no answers, McGranery said: the President should exhaust his powers under law before claiming any inherent powers; he believes the President has the right to do "any and all things to preserve the life, liberty and property" of the citizens, but the President is bound by the Constitution and the law, the same as the rest of us. McGranery also indicated that he does not approve of the Attorney General deciding what organizations should be labelled subversive; he thinks it's "pretty high-handed to leave this up to one individual": would prefer that Congress set the standards.

In Philadelphia, Federal Judge Welsh has decided that the law that requires gamblers to buy a 50-dollar tax stamp is unconstitutional. He called it a police measure and not a tax bill. He also ruled out that provision of the law which requires gamblers to be witnesses against themselves and informers against others.

Stabilization officials say they are going to appeal to the Supreme Court a ruling which may have the effect of raising prices on all types of consumer goods - including food. Yesterday, a U.S. Emergency Court of Appeals ruled that under the Capehart Amendment to the controls law, wholesalers and retailers are entitled to seek price increases. Stabilization officials had contended that the Capehart Amendment applied only to manufacturers and processors. James Durham, assistant counsel for the price office, says if this ruling stands, the agency would have to grant price increases to all wholesalers and retailers who could prove they are entitled to them.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee today voted to cut more than a billion dollars from military and economic aid to Europe. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has agreed on a similar reduction in all foreign areas. The House Committee cuts would apply only to Europe. It approved in full the Administration's requests for the Middle East, Far East and Latin America.

In Florida and Ohio today, election officials reported record-breaking turnouts in the presidential primaries in each state. But very few returns are available at the moment: two precincts in Florida give Senator Russell 20 votes to one for Senator Kefauver in the Democratic race. In Ohio, Republicans are voting for Senator Taft or Harold Stassen: no write-ins are permitted.

The Army said today that hand grenades and some types of cartridges are being rationed to front line troops in Korea. But overall supplies of ammunition are described as "plentiful". A special communique from the Far East Command says ammunition is being rationed to save money and to maintain reserves, "as a matter of normal military precaution." Yesterday, Army Chief of Staff Collins, told a Senate Committee "important" types of ammunition are being rationed, because production is not up to normal battle expenditures.

In Korea today, our forces engaged the enemy in an artillery duel. Our planes cut a main communist railroad line in North Korea at 118 places. The Chinese Communist radio says the truce talks "appear to be entering the most crucial deadlock since they began." And General Van Fleet says "apparently the Reds don't want an armistice and have not wanted an armistice." The General told reporters: "We can either out-fight them, or out-sit them."

A Senate committee reported today that more than five million dollars worth of goods have been stolen from our army in Korea. Most of it has gone into the Korean black market. The committee says the army has recovered about two millio dollars worth of stolen goods.

Today the North Atlantic Council agreed to guarantee Germany's security, provided Germany agrees to come to the aid of the other members of the North Atlantic Pact in case they are attacked. This guarantee of course will apply only after agreement has been reached on the establishment of a European Army. The target date for the signing of the agreements with Germany is May 20th, and as the date approaches the prospects fade. The Germans are in a buyer's market, militarily and economically; and like a prudent housewife, they are in no hurry but are shopping around. There is plenty of handwriting on the wall to show that the West Germans are increasingly aware of the strength of their position and their indispensibility to any adequate defense of Western Europe. Here are a few signs on the wall.

Today the Lower House of the German Parliament voted unanimously to wipe out all restrictions on trade with the communist world. We and our allies have been trying to control that trade in respect to critical materials. The German Parliament concluded that these embargoes merely served to cripple the Western nations, especially Germany, in attempting to balance their foreign trade. The German vote was unanimous; they can't put it into effect immediately, but eventually the Germans are going to trade with the East, just as the Japanese are going to trade with the mainland of Asia, because they must do so in order to survive.

Here's another sign on the wall. The President of the Soviet zone of Germany says he will set up his own army if Western Germany starts to re-arm. This is no idle threat; he already has nearly seventy thousand men in military formations - the cadre for 15 divisions once the Russians deliver the arms and establish a draft.

Another sign on the German wall. Two of the three Parties forming the present coalition government, under Chancellor Adenauer, have said they will not agree to go along with the West in re-arming, unless they get complete sovereignty. This means, among other things, the elimination of all occupation costs. Here's an example of what they mean. The British have about a hundred thousand troops in Germany; most of the maintenance, supply and non-combatant work for this force, is done by about forty thousand German civilians. They are paid by the German Government. The French and ourselves have similar German civilian forces at our disposal. The Germans say if they're going to be partners on an equal basis, they aren't going to continue to pay for this civilian labor.

Yet another sign on the German wall. They have adopted their old National Anthem, the traditional Deutschland Lied. This act underscores the process of Germany's return to conscious nationhood - the need for national symbols as an outward expression of national strength and self-confidence. The German Government had been trying for years to popularize a new anthem, but it didn't work, so they went back to the old one.

There is no sure sign of any break in tradition, or in traditional policy and aspirations on the part of the Germans. Their participation in a European Defense community is still a long way off. They have played the role of middleman in this struggle of East against West before, and they continue to do it with considerable skill.

In Czechoslovakia our propagandists have demonstrated considerable skill, (something which they have not always managed to do). This week is the seventh anniversary of the "liberation" of Czechoslovakia from the Germans - big communist celebrations. The government printed hundreds of thousands of what were called "liberty postcards", to honor the occasion. The Communist Party ordered all Czechs to buy at least three of these postcards and send them, with best wishes, to government officials, Party leaders, inventors, agitators, champion milkers, tractor drivers and all the other personnel of the Communist State. At this point Radio Free Europe entered the picture, laid down a barrage of broadcasts urging all Czechs to buy as many postcards as they could afford, send them to all local and antional communist leaders, and to sign all the cards with the surname "Svoboda", which means freedom in the Czech language. Czechoslovakian letter-carriers are delivering literally hundreds of thousands of these postcards signed "Karl Svoboda", "Jan Svoboda", "Maria Svoboda". The "Svobodas" have clogged the mails; the Communist leaders can't stop it, because they ordered it in the first place. This whole episode serves to re-emphasize the traditional Czech desire for freedom, and to remind those communist who receive the cards that they are known and are being watched.

It's a minor propaganda jackpot for the Czech underground and Radio Free Europe, but it doesn't bring the day of liberation appreciably nearer.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a monont with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: It would seem that the Germans - twice our enemy - are now setting a price for their friendship, and are listening to all offers. In their bargaining they appear to be following this advice once given by William Scarborough: "Use the little to get the big; throw a brick to get a gem." And about the best we can do at the moment is follow the advice Abraham Lincoln's father gave him: "If you make a bad bargain, hug it all the tighter."

Good Night and Good Luck.

Wednesday - May 7, 1952

This is the news:

We have offered the Communists in Korea "a clear, final and irrevocable" proposal for an armistice agreement. They've turned it down. Our proposal contains three parts. We do not want Russia on any neutral armistice inspection team. Assistant Secretary of State Hickerson says the Communists finally agreed to that. We agree to the enemy demand that he be permitted to build and repair airfields in North Korea. The third item concerns prisoners of war. We want the Communists to return to us the 12-thousand United Nations prisoners they hold. We will exchange 70-thousand North Korean and Chinese prisoners that we hold. But We will not force another 58-thousand enemy soldiers to go back north, because they say they don't want to. The Communists refused to accept this prisoner of war proposal. We ENDED [redacted] today's truce meeting saying, in effect: there is nothing left to discuss.. the next move is up to you. The Communists insisted on another meeting..in a few hours from now. We agreed.

[redacted] General Ridgeway says: "our position is one from which we cannot and shall not retreat." Admiral Joy told the Communists our proposals are "irrevocable." The President, noting enemy objections to our prisoner exchange plan, says: We will not buy an armistice in Korea "by turning over human beings for slaughter and slavery".. that would be repugnant to the fundamental moral and humaniatrian principles which underlie our action in Korea. To return by force prisoners who do not want to go back to North Korea and China "would result in misery and bloodshed, to the eternal dishonor of the United States and the United Nations." The President makes it clear that General Ridgeway's final terms have his support "without qualification." He says the three parts must be considered in their entirety.

British Foreign Secretary Eden spoke to the House of Commons along the same lines; we cannot give up the principle of "voluntary" repatriation of war prisoners.. we cannot make any concession on this..

[redacted]

Deputy Defense Secretary William C. Foster told reporters in Washington: all of our United Nations allies have approved the plan. There will be no further concessions: we we are willing to discuss details with the enemy. We have carefully considered a number of alternatives in case the Communists refuse to accept. We have considered a naval blockade of China.. attacks on the Chinese mainland. There is no final decision.

Secretary of State Acheson calls the proposals fair and reasonable. And Mr. Acheson told reporters we consider Russia's charge, that we are using germ warfare in Korea, "an international crime...not only an indication of their intentions." The Secretary says Moscow insists she wants peace, but for month after month the Russians have been pouring out a campaign of hate against America and Americans.

The Pentagon says we suffered another 207 casualties in Korea last week. The total is now 108, 172. Allied planes today again attacked enemy railroad lines in North Korea. There was minor patrol action on the front. The negotiators meet again in a few hours.

In Washington today, the Federal Reserve Board suspended controls over the installment buying of automobiles, radios, television sets, household appliances and furntiure. Beginning immediately there will be no restrictions on how much you must pay as a down payment..no restrictions on the time period in which you must pay off the full purchase price. A board spokesman says the controls are being suspended because the stocks of goods are high...buying is moderate.. and the public has been saving a very large part of its income.

The striking oil workers agreed today to give the armed forces all the fuel they need. But they turned down a government plea to go back to work. A spokesman said: "We have no alternative but to continue our strike."

~~Phil Murray, president of the C.I.O. steelworkers met with his unions executive committee. Later he told reporters the steel industry is using millions of dollars of taxpayers money for advertisements to catsigate Murray and his associates.~~

Three big railroad unions--the engineers, conductors and firemen--said today they will ask the supreme court to rule on the government's seizure of the railroads..at the same session, next Monday, when the court hears arguments on the President's seizure of the steel industry. The railroads were seized under a 1916 law. The steel industry was seized under what the Administration calls the "inherent powers" of the president.

Defense Secretary Lovett today gave partial endorsement to a bill that would permit the Congres, or the President, to send to the courts any strikes in vital industries. The courts would operate the industry as long as necessary. Mr. Lovett said the bill appears "sound"..would allow the government "to move fast." But he said it appears unfair to labor because it would freeze wages and working conditions but put no freeze on prices or profits. [redacted]

[redacted]

Nathan Feinsinger, the chairman of the Wage Stabilization Board, told Congress today: if the board is stripped of its power to make recommendations in labor disputes.. Congress may expect a wave of serious strikes and industrial "chaos."

Manly Fleischman resigned today as defense production administrator. The president named Henry H. Fowler to succeed him. Fowler is now national production administrator.

The Senate has passed a bill that gives the federal government the power to enforce safety measures in coal mines.. (at present the states enforce mine safety.)

[redacted]

Senator Taft won a complete victory in yesterday's ohio primary.. all 56 Republican delegates. Harold Stassen, his only opponent, didn't win any. Taft AGAIN predicts [redacted] that he'll be nominated on the first ballot at Chicago..says he "never will be headed now".. although "there are still bitter word battles ahead." Senator Kefauver split the state's Democratic delegates with the state Democratic committee. Kefauver had delegates enetered in 31 races.. he won 27 of them. He says that this victory, coupled with the showing he made in Florida, "practically assures my nomination in Chicago."

Kefauver lost the Florida popularity contest to Senator Russell of Georgia.... by 5k-thousand votes. It was the first primary race he HAS lost in the seven he has entered. Senator Russell says Florida Democrats "rejected the candidacy of the leading Congressional advocate of the proposed Atlantic Union."

Here in New York, Bookie Harry Gross testified at a police departmental trial, that he was shaken down for 20-thousand dollars in political contributions by James J. Moran, a pal of former Mayor O'Dwyer. Gross says he gave Moran 5-thousand dollars in 1945.. and 15-thousand in 1949. Moran is now serving time in prison for shaking down fuel oil installers when he was O'dwyer's first deputy fire commissioner. [redacted] Gross named almost 70 other policeman FROM INSPECTOR DOWN, who took graft to protect the 27 bookie rooms he ran in this city.

In Berlin, the Communist rulers of East Germany tonight sent a cable to Stalin telling him that they are forming an army to defend the Soviet zone of Germany against what they call "aggression."

Edward R. Murrow: May 7, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

In Korea we fought the communists for more than a year, ~~and~~ then the fighting died down and we argued with them for almost as long. Neither side won either on the field of battle or in the conference tents. We have now announced, in the most solemn terms and apparently with the agreement and consent of our allies, that under no circumstances will we send back those Chinese and North Korean prisoners we hold who are unwilling to go back.

There comes a time in any negotiation between nations when one side or the other says: "Here we stand; on this issue we will not compromise; we have studied the consequences of failure and are prepared to face them." In this case we have adopted a policy from which we cannot now retreat. The Communists maintain a position from which it will be difficult if not impossible for them to retreat. The result could be a cessation of the truce talks, but a continuation of the relatively inactive military stalemate. Or it could be the mounting of a massive communist offensive, which they are capable of doing, and a renewal of full-scale slaughter. It is unlikely that we will undertake a full-blown offensive, for neither we nor our allies seek an extension or ~~XXXXXXXXXX~~ enlargement of a war on the mainland of Asia.

Before making this decision we must have carefully weighed, together with our allies, the alternatives and the possible consequences of the action.

- the prospect of leaving the 12 thousand of U.N. prisoners now in communist hands there indefinitely. We must have looked at our casualty lists of well over a hundred thousand, and faced squarely the possibility that that number might be doubled or trebled in renewed fighting in an area where fighting cannot be decisive in the world-wide conflict between communist aggression and the free world.

We hold 128 thousand of Chinese and North Korean prisoners of war. They were taken in the field, with a gun in their hands. 58 thousand of them now say they will not willingly return to China or North Korea. We are prepared to face a resumption of full-scale fighting, the continued imprisonment of our boys held by the enemy, rather than send them back. It is probable that this issue would never have arisen in this acute form had we not agreed to exchange lists of prisoners of war. But that was done and the issue is now joined.

We have given consideration to attacks against the Chinese mainland, and to a naval blockade, which implies that we may resort to these measures if the communists refuse this final offer. They have asked for another meeting. In view of the nature and virulence of their propaganda - in view of the fact that the acceptance of our terms would involve their admission that 60,000 of their soldiers taken by us were unwilling to go home again, it is difficult to see how the communists can accept. Whether it is continued talk, or just continued military stalemate, or the taking up of the offensive by the communists - any one of these courses of action might well suit Russian grand strategy, because none of the three would damage substantially the Soviet Union, which after all is the principal enemy. The pinning down of such considerable American forces, the continued drain upon our economy, fit their pattern.

We have made one decision, but each decision begets another; for if the negotiations are broken off we must then decide what to do next, (unless of course the communists take the decision out of our hands by launching an offensive.) The initiative and the ability to determine suddenly whether the world returns to war continues to rest, as it has since 1946, with the Soviet Union.

In any sort of negotiations, when both sides stand firm, their positions are predicated on certain calculated risks. In situations such as these, it is good to follow this bit of advice by ~~Luc de~~ Vauvenargues:"We must expect everything and fear everything from time and men." For in war, as in peace, it's pretty much as E.J. Hardy once said:"It is the unexpected that constantly happens."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

WEDNESDAY - MAY 7, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

We have offered the Communists in Korea "a clear, final and irrevocable proposal for an armistice agreement. They've turned it down. Our proposal contains three parts. We do not want Russia on any neutral armistice inspection team. Assistant Secretary of State Hickerson says the Communists finally agreed to that. We agree to the enemy demand that he be permitted to build and repair airfields in North Korea. The third item concerns prisoners of war. We want the Communists to return to us the 12-thousand United Nations prisoners they hold. We will exchange 70-thousand North Korean and Chinese prisoners that we hold. But, we will not force another 58-thousand enemy soldiers to go back north, because they say they don't want to. The Communists refused to accept this prisoner-of-war proposal. We ended today's truce meeting saying, in effect: there is nothing left to discuss; the next move is up to you. The Communists insisted on another meeting in a few hours from now. We agreed.

General Ridgway says: "Our position is one from which we cannot and shall not retreat." Admiral Joy told the Communists our proposals are "irrevocable The President, noting enemy objections to our prisoner exchange plan, says: We will not buy an armistice in Korea "by turning over human beings for slaughter and slavery": that would be repugnant to the fundamental moral and humanitarian principles which underlie our action in Korea. To return by force prisoners who do not want to go back to North Korea and China, "would result in misery and bloodshed to the eternal dishonor of the United States and the United Nations." The President makes it clear that General Ridgway's final terms have his support "without qualification." He says the three parts must be considered in their entirety.

British Foreign Secretary Eden spoke to the House of Commons along the same lines; we cannot give up the principle of "voluntary" repatriation of war prisoners; we cannot make any concession on this.

Deputy Defense Secretary William C. Foster told reporters in Washington: all of our United Nations allies have approved the plan. There will be no further concessions: we are willing to discuss details with the enemy; we have carefully considered a number of alternatives in case the Communists refuse to accept; we have considered a naval blockade of China - attacks on the Chinese mainland. There is no final decision.

Secretary of State Acheson calls the proposals fair and reasonable. And Mr. Acheson told reporters we consider Russia's charge that we are using germ warfare in Korea "an international crime.....not only an indication of their intentions." The Secretary says Moscow insists she wants peace but for month after month the Russians have been pouring out a campaign of hate against America and Americans.

The Pentagon says we suffered another 207 casualties in Korea last week. The total is not 108,172. Allied planes today again attacked enemy railroad lines in North Korea. There was minor patrol action on the front. The negotiators meet again in a few hours.

In Washington today, the Federal Reserve Board suspended controls over the installment buying of automobiles, radios, television sets, household appliances and furniture. Beginning immediately there will be no restrictions on how much you must pay as a down payment - no restrictions on the time period in which you must pay-off the full purchase price. A board spokesman says the controls are being suspended because the stocks of goods are high, buying is moderate, and the public has been saving a very large part of its income.

The striking oil workers agreed today to give the armed forces all the fuel they need. But they turned down a government plea to go back to work. A spokesman said: "We have no alternative but to continue our strike."

Three big railroad unions, the engineers, conductors, and firemen, said today they will ask the Supreme Court to rule on the government's seizure of the railroads at the same session, next Monday, when the Court hears arguments on the President's seizure of the steel industry. The railroads were seized under a 1916 law. The steel industry was seized under what the Administration calls the "inherent powers" of the President.

Defense Secretary Lovett today gave partial endorsement to a bill that would permit the Congress or the President to send to the courts any strikes in vital industries. The courts would operate the industry as long as necessary. Mr. Lovett said the bill appears "sound": would allow the Government "to move fast." But he said it appears unfair to labor, because it would freeze wages and working conditions but put no freeze on prices or profits.

Nathan Feinsinger, the chairman of the Wage Stabilization Board, told Congress today: if the board is stripped of its power to make recommendations in labor disputes, Congress may expect a wave of serious strikes and industrial "chaos".

Manly Fleischman resigned today as defense production administrator. The President named Henry H. Fowler to succeed him. Fowler is now national production administrator.

The Senate has passed a bill that gives the federal government the power to enforce safety measures in coal mines. At present, the states enforce mine safety.

Senator Taft won a complete victory in yesterday's Ohio primary - all 56 Republican delegates. Harold Stassen, his only opponent, didn't win any. Taft again predicts that he'll be nominated on the first ballot at Chicago: says he "never will be headed now", although "there are still bitter word battles ahead." Senator Kefauver split the state's Democratic delegates with the state Democratic committee. Kefauver had delegates entered in 31 races: he won 27 of them. He says that this victory, coupled with the showing he made in Florida, "practically assures my nomination in Chicago."

Kefauver lost the Florida popularity contest to Senator Russell of Georgia by 51-thousand votes. It was the first primary race he has lost in the seven he has entered. Senator Russell says Florida Democrats "rejected the candidacy of the leading Congressional advocate of the proposed Atlantic Union."

Here in New York, Bookie Harry Gross testified at a police departmental trial, that he was shaken down for 20-thousand dollars, in political contributions by James J. Moran, a pal of former Mayor O'Dwyer. Gross says he gave Moran 5-thousand dollars in 1945, and 15-thousand in 1949. Moran is now serving time in prison for shaking down fuel oil installers when he was O'Dwyer's First Depute Fire Commissioner. Gross named almost 70 other policemen, from Inspector down, who took graft to protect the 27 bookie rooms he ran in this city.

In Berlin, the Communist rulers of East Germany tonight sent a cable to Stalin telling him that they are forming an army to defend the Soviet zone of Germany against what they call "aggression."

In Korea, we fought the communist for more than a year, then the fighting died down and we argued with them for almost as long. Neither side won either on the field of battle or in the conference tents. We have now announced, in the most solemn terms and apparently with the agreement and consent of our allies, that under no circumstances will we send back those Chinese and North Korean prisoners we hold who are unwilling to go back.

There comes a time in any negotiation between nations when one side or the other says: "Here we stand; on this issue, we will not compromise; we have studied the consequences of failure and are prepared to face them." In this case, we have adopted a policy from which we cannot now retreat. The result could be a cessation of the truce talks, but a continuation of the relatively inactive military stalemate. Or it could be the mounting of a massive communist offensive, which they are capable of doing, and a renewal of full-scale slaughter. It is unlikely that we will undertake a full-blown offensive, for neither we, nor our allies, seek an extension or enlargement of a war on the mainland of Asia.

Before making this decision we must have carefully weighed, together with our allies, the alternatives and the possible consequences of the action - the prospect of leaving the 12-thousand of U.N. prisoners now in communist hands there indefinitely. We must have looked at our casualty lists of well over a hundred thousand, and faced squarely the possibility that that number might be doubled or trebled in renewed fighting in an area where fighting cannot be decisive, in the world-wide conflict between communist aggression and the free world.

We hold 128-thousand of Chinese and North Korean prisoners of war. They were taken in the field, with a gun in their hands. 58-thousand of them now say they will not willingly return to China or North Korea. We are prepared to face a resumption of full-scale fighting, the continued imprisonment of our boys held by the enemy, rather than send them back. It is probable that this issue would never have arisen in this acute form had we not agreed to exchange lists of prisoners of war. But that was done and the issue is now joined.

We have given consideration to attacks against the Chinese mainland and to a naval blockade, which implies that we may resort to these measures if the communists refuse this final offer. They have asked for another meeting. In view of the nature and virulence of their propaganda - in view of the fact that the acceptance of our terms would involve their admission that nearly 60-thousand of their soldiers taken by us were unwilling to go home again, it is difficult to see how the communists can accept. Whether it is continued talk, or just continued military stalemate, or the taking up of the offensive by the communists - any one of these courses of action might well suit Russian grand strategy, because none of the three would damage substantially the Soviet Union, which after all is the principal enemy. The pinning down of such considerable American forces, the continued drain upon our economy, fit their pattern.

We have made one decision, but each decision begets another; for if the negotiations are broken off we must then decide what to do next, (unless of course the communists take the decision out of our hands by launching an offensive). The initiative, and the ability to determine suddenly whether the world returns to war, continues to rest, as it has since 1946, with the Soviet Union.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: In any sort of negotiation, when both sides stand firm, their positions are predicated on certain calculated risks. In situations such as these, it is good to follow this bit of advice by Luc de Vauvenargues: "We must expect everything and fear everything from time and men." For in war, as in peace, it's pretty much as E. J. Hardy once said: "It is the unexpected that constantly happens."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Thursday - May 8, 1952

This is the news:

Communist prisoners of war in Korea have seized Brigadier General Francis T. Dodd. They are holding him in their prison camp on Koje island, southwest of Pusan, (the scene of three riots in three months). The army in Korea tells us very little of what happened. It says General Dodd, the commander of the prison camp, was forcibly seized yesterday afternoon. #

He and another officer had been conferring with Communist leaders at the gate to one of the compounds. The two officers were forced into the compound. The other officer managed to escape and negotiating for his own release. THE ARMY HAS received a note from the General indicating he is unharmed. The Communists have ignored demands for his immediate release. That's all the 8th army tells us. Correspondents in Tokyo are not being permitted to fly to the island. There are no details on just how the two officers were seized.. on whether the Communist prisoners have GUNS.. on what they want in return for the general's release.. And there is no indication whether there was any shooting or new rioting on the island.. or on what we plan to do next. At last report there were an estimated 70-thousand prisoners on Koje with some 750 American soldiers guarding them.

The Fifth Air Force in Korea says its planes and those of the Marines today carried out the heaviest air attack of the Korean war. It was a dawn to dusk attack, by fighter-bombers, on Suan, a big supply base, 35 miles southeast of Pyongyang. A Communique says our planes "tore the Communist supplies to shreds.".. at least 165 supply buildings were in ruins.. 81 others damaged.

General Ridgway made his farewell visit to the allied negoitators at Munsan today. (He was accompanied by his successor General Mark Clark.)

The negotiators are scheduled to hold another meeting with the Communists. At today's meeting we called for an "indefinite" recess, but the enemy wanted another session. They accused us of refusing to "reason and negotiate." We told them: "our position should be clear by this time." A United Nations spokesman says "we are in an impregnable position..on the offensive."

On Formosa today, Admiral Radford, commander of our Pacific fleet, told reporters that the Russians have an estimated 80 submarines in the Pacific. The admiral says they could be "a considerable threat "in a general war.

In Washington, committes from the House and Senate agreed on a bill that would give a four per cent, cost-of-living pay increase, to all persons in the armed forces. The bill would also raise food and rent allowances 14 per cent. The compromise would cost the government an estimated half billion dollars a year.

The House today passed two bills that would boost veterans benefits payments. They'll cost an estimated 200 million dollars a year.

The President was 68 years old today. He told reporters he feels like 28.. and after he leaves the White House in January he's going to spend 10 years having a good time..doing as he pleases. Mr. Truman also said that the world situation is very grave. He SAID: Congressional plans to cut his defense budget.. and current labor-management disputes in the steel and oil industries are "right down Stalin's alley." He said we can avoid a third world war if Congress gives the defense DEPARTMENT all it needs and and if we keep our production level very high. Mr. Truman says he is working very hard to get a settlement of the oil dispute..is hopeful of early success. But a C.I.O. union leader says "we intend to intensify the strike." And today the government banned the delivery of aviation gasoline to civilian consumers and re-sellers who have more than a three-day supply on hand.

The government also removed its ban on the shipment of steel from warehouses.

The Justice Department says the government has agreed to pay eight and a half million dollars to settle claims growing out of seizure of the trucking industry in the midwest in 1944. The late President Roosevelt seized 91 trucking firms during a strike. The companies asked for compensation for the use of their equipment and for a wage increase the government gave the drivers.

Joseph Curran, a vice president of the C.I.O., told a House committee today that the Smith anti-strike bill "is as viciously anti-labor a bill as has ever been introduced in Congress." The bill would permit the courts to act as receivers and operate both union and plants in some strikes.

The House has passed a bill that gives federal approval to fair trade laws in 45 states. These laws permit retailers and manufacturers to agree on minimum prices for merchandise.

Senator Russell said today that suggesstions that he might lead a rebel southern Democratic party are "a smokescreen..to brand him as a sectional candidate for president."

National Production Administrator Henry Fowler says he is consdering lifting the ban on the production of color television sets. (He may make a decision in about a week.)

Admiral E.L. Cochrane, United states maritime administrator, told the House today: in the past 18 months we "had, at sea, the greatest merchant marine of any period in our history, short of actual war." He said the number of cargo ships, in the active merchant marine, was more than doubled in strength by taking ships from reserves.

Here in New York today, Bookie Harry Gross testified that this city's former chief police inspector, and former chief of detectives, both accepted graft from him. He said that in ten years in the ganbling business he was not raided once... his one million dollars a year in protection money, brought him "good protection." Gross says William Whalen, the former detective chief, was on his payroll for 250-dollars a month. He says he gave former Chief Inspector Flath a few hundred dollars.. Gross also testified that high ranking police officers: removed records of his gambling operations from police files.. tipped him off to police transfers.. told him the auto licenses of automobiles being used by investigators.

The State Department said today that it would not be surprised, if the Russians chose to unveil the secret army they have been organizing for several years in their zone of Germany.

And FRANCO has told the United States she needs almost half a billion dollars to fulfill her committments to western defense this year.

Edward R. Murrow: May 8, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

General Eisenhower has responded to a question put to him by Senator Tom Connally. The Senator had asked the General's opinion on the Foreign Aid Bill, (nearly eight billion dollars.) Senate and House Committees have agreed to cut one billion dollars from it. General Eisenhower's reply was most cautious; but he said a reduction of a billion dollars would be "heavily and seriously felt;" a cut of more than a billion would create such difficulties that a drastic revision of the whole program might have to be made.

Senator Taft disagrees with General Eisenhower, says he would vote to cut foreign aid another billion. He doesn't think a cut of two billion would endanger the defense of Europe; is against this "foolish spending of money on foreign aid."

This difference of opinion on this matter of foreign aid, between the two leading contenders for the Presidency, might be regarded as only a preliminary skirmish; presumably the range will close after General Eisenhower's return. # David Schoenbrun cables me from Paris that the General is getting his first real taste of what it's like to be a presidential candidate, and he's not liking it very much. The volume of cables and telephone calls from the United States has gone up to a couple of dozen a day. The General's Public Relations staff, unaccustomed to dealing with politicians and well-meaning friends, is being run ragged trying to cope with what they call "a hot shot file" - very important people who can't be offended but whom the General simply refuses to see or talk to. A group of top British editors came over but couldn't see him. The General's old friend, Bernard Baruch, sent through a personal message saying that he had to see Eisenhower urgently, and would fly over for only a thirty-minute talk. The General had to turn him down. Danish, Italian, and Norwegain editors and diplomats have all been turned away although they had previous appointments.

One of the worst headaches of all are the cables from home saying: "Am flying to see Eisenhower, arriving tomorrow". These arrive almost hourly from editors and politicos who are determined to batter the door down. The General is doing everything he can to remain strictly military until he comes home, and refers to all this hullaballoo about all his personal plans and arrangements as "a circus". Newsmen in Paris have warned him that this is strictly a one-ring affair, not to be compared with the real circus that will surround him when he comes home.

It is unlikely that any candidate has ever received such a volume of well-meant but conflicting advice. The only public appearance definitely scheduled so far is the General's speech in Abilene, Kansas, on June 4th.

There will probably be a couple of others, but where and when hasn't been determined.

There's a note tonight from behind the Iron Curtain which indicates that the communists in Hungary have decided how to take over the largest Protestant Church in that country, the Evangelical Lutherans. / A few days ago the Deputy Minister of Popular Culture - Propaganda, that is - was solemnly installed as the general lay superintendent of the Lutheran Church. / In his inaugural address he said religious freedom was only possible in the Soviet Union. / The churches must arouse Christians of the world against American bacteriological warfare in Korea. [The Hungarian churches are really being co-ordinated.] The theme for January was that there is no difference between Stalin's doctrine and the Sermon on the Mount. The February theme was Communist Party discipline, (and the need for achieving same.) / March was devoted to farmers; they must accomplish the Agricultural Plan. / The sermon for April was that the Americans are preventing world peace, and thereby represent anti-Christ.

This situation has produced this common comment amongst Hungarians - "We used to go to church to hear Holy Gospel / and then return home to read the editorials in the newspapers. But now we go to church to hear the editorials, and then return home to read Holy Scripture."

Those in public life, are under continual pressures from all sides. And once in a while, at the risk of offending someone, they have to say no. Baltasar Gracian set down a pretty good rule when he said:"To know how to refuse, is as important as to know how to consent. A gilded no often gives more satisfaction than a dry yes." And for Generals as well as Senators, those words by George Meade would seem appropriate:"There's nothing so consoling as to find that others troubles are at least as great as ones own."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY - MAY 8, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Communist prisons of war in Korea have seized Brigadier General Frances T. Dodd. They are holding him in their prison camp on Koje Island, southwest of Pusan, (the scene of three riots in three months). The Army in Korea tells us very little of what happened. It says General Dodd, the commander of the prison camp was forcibly seized yesterday afternoon. He and another officer had been conferring with communist leaders at the gate to one of the compounds. The two officers were forced into the compound. The other officer managed to escape. The Army has received a note from the General indicating he is unharmed and negotiating for his own release. The communists have ignored demands for his immediate release That's all the 8th Army tells us. Correspondents in Tokyo are not being permitted to fly to the island. There are no details on just how the two officers were seize on whether the communist prisoners have guns: on what they want in return for the general's release. And there is no indication whether there was any shooting or new rioting on the island or on what we plan to do next. At last report, there were an estimiated 70-thousand prisoners on Koje with some 750 American soldiers guarding them.

The Fifth Air Force in Korea says its planes, and those of the Marines, today carried out the heaviest air attack of the Korean war. It was a dawn to dusk attack by fighter-bombers on Suan, a big supply base, 35 miles southeast of Pyongya A communique says our planes "tore the communist supplies to shreds": at least 165 supply buildings were in ruins - 81 others damaged.

General Ridgway made his farewell visit to the allied negotiators at Munsan today. (He was accompanied by his successor General Mark Clark).

The negotiators are scheduled to hold another meeting with the communists At today's meeting we called for an "indefinite" recess, but the enemy wanted another session. They accused us of refusing to "reason and negotiate." We told them: "Our position should be clear by this time." A United Nations spokesman says "We are in an impregnable position...on the offensive."

On Formosa today, Admiral Radford, commander of our Pacific fleet, told reporters that the Russians have an estimated 80 submarines in the Pacific. The Admiral says they could be "a considerable threat" in a general war.

In Washington, committees from the House and Senate agreed on a bill that would give a four per cent cost-of-living pay increase to all persons in the armed forces. The bill would also raise food and rent allowances 14 per cent. The compromise would cost the Government an estimated half billion dollars a year.

The House today passed two bills that would boost veterans benefits payments. They'll cost an estimated 200 million dollars a year.

The President was 68 years old today. He told reporters he feels like 28, and after he leaves the White House in January, he's going to spend 10 years having a good time doing as he pleases. Mr. Truman also said that the world situation is very grave. He said congressional plans to cut his defense budget and current labor-management disputes in the steel and oil industries, are "right down Stalin's alley." He said we can avoid a third World War if Congress gives the Defense Department all it needs, and if we keep our production level very high. Mr. Truman says he is working very hard to get a settlement of the oil dispute: is hopeful of early sucdess. But a C.I.O. union leader says: "We intend to intensify the strike." And today the Government banned the delivery of aviation gasoline to civilian consumers and re-sellers who have more than a three-day supply on hand.

The Government also removed its ban on the shipment of steel from warehouses.

The Justice Department says the Government has agreed to pay eight and a half million dollars to settle claims growing out of seizure of the trucking industry in the midwest in 1944. The late President Roosevelt seized 91 trucking firms during a strike. The companies asked for compensation for the use of their equipment and for a wage increase the Government gave the drivers.

Joseph Curran, a vice president of the C.I.O., told a House committee today that the Smith anti-strike bill "is as viciously anti-labor a bill as has ever been introduced in Congress." The bill would permit the courts to act as receivers, and operate both union and plants in some strikes.

The House has passed a bill that gives federal approval to fair trade laws in 45 states. These laws permit retailers and manufacturers to agree on minimum prices for merchandise.

Senator Russell said today that suggestions that he might lead a rebel southern Democratic party are "a smokescreen....to brand him as a sectional candidate for president."

National Production Administrator, Henry Fowler, says he is considering lifting the ban on the production of color television sets. (He may make a decisio in about a week.)

Admiral E. L. Cochrane, United States Maritime Administrator, told the House today that in the past 18 months, we "had at sea, the greatest merchant marine of any period in our history, short of actual war." He said the number of cargo ships in the active Merchant Marine was more than doubled in strength by ships from reserves.

Here in New York today, Bookie Harry Gross testified that this city's former chief police inspector and former chief of detectives, both accepted graft from him. He said that in ten years in the gambling business, he was not raided once; his one million dollars a year in protection money, brought him "good protection." Gross says William Whalen, the former detective chief, was on his payroll for 250-dollars a month. He says he gave former Chief Inspector Flath a few hundred dollars. Gross also testified that high ranking police officers removed records of his gambling operations from police files, tipped him off to police transfers, told him the auto licenses of automobiles being used by investigators.

The State Department said today that it would not be surprised if the Russians chose to unveil the secret army they have been organizing for several years in their zone of Germany.

And Franco has told the United States she needs almost half a billion dollars to fulfill her committments to western defense this year.

General Eisenhower has responded to a question put to him by Senator Tom Connally. The Senator has asked the General's opinion on the Foreign Aid Bill, (nearly eight billion dollars). Senate and House Committees have agreed to cut one billion dollars from it. General Eisenhower's reply was most cautious; but he said a reduction of a billion dollars would be "heavily and seriously felt"; a cut of more than a billion would create such difficulties that a drastic revision of the whole program might have to be made.

Senator Taft disagress with General Eisenhower, says he would vote to cut foreign aid another billion. He doesn't think a cut of two billion would endanger the defense of Europe; is against this "foolish spending of money on foreign aid."

This difference of opinion on this matter of foreign aid, between the two leading contenders for the Presidency, might be regarded as only a preliminary skirmish; presumably the range will close after General Eisenhower's return. David Schoonbrun cables me from Paris that the General is getting his first real taste of what it's like to be a presidential candidate, and he's not liking it very much. The volume of cables and telephone calls from the United States has gone up to a couple of dozen a day. The General's Public Relations staff, unaccustomed to dealing with politicians and well-meaning friends, is being run ragged, trying to cope with what they call "a hot shot file" - very important people who can't be offended but whom the General simply refuses to see or talk to. A group of top British edit came over, but couldn't see him. The General's old friend, Bernard Baruch, sent through a personal message saying that he had to see Eisenhower urgently, and would fly over for only a thirty-minute talk. The General had to turn him down. Danish, Italian, and Norwegain editors and diplomats have all bec turned away, although they had previous appointments.

One of the worst headaches of all are the cables from home saying: "Am flying to see Eisenhower, arriving tomorrow." These arrive almost hourly, from editors and politicos who are determined to batter the door down. The General is doing everything he can to remain strictly military until he comes home, and refers to all this hullaballoo about all his personal plans and arrangements as "a circus". Newsmen in Paris have warned him that this is strictly a one-ring affair, not to be compared with the real circus that will surround him when he comes home.

It is unlikely that any candidate has ever received such a volume of well-meant but conflicting advice. The only public appearance definitely scheduled so far is the General's speech in Abilene, Kansas, on June 4th. There will probably be a couple of others, but where and when hasn't been determined.

There's a note tonight from behind the Iron Curtain which indicates that the communists in Hungary have decided how to take over the largest Protestant Church in that country, the Evangelical Lutherans. A few days ago the Deputy Minister of Popular Culture - Propaganda, that is - was solemnly installed as the general lay superintendent of the Lutheran Church. In his inaugural address he said religious freedom was only possible in the Soviet Union. The churches must arouse Christians of the world against American bacteriological warfare in Korea. (The Hungarian churches are really being co-ordinated.) The theme for January was that there is no difference between Stalin's doctrine and the Sermon on the Mount. The February theme was Communist Party discipline, (and the need for achieving same). March was devoted to farmers; they must accomplish the Agricultural Plan. The sermon for April was that the Americans are preventing world peace, and thereby represent anti-Christ.

This situation has produced this common comment amongst Hungarians: "We used to go to church to hear Holy Gospel, and then return home to read the editorials in the newspapers. But now we go to church to hear the editorials, and then return home to read Holy Scripture."

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Those in public life are under continual pressures from all sides, And once in a while, at the risk of offending someone, they have to say no. Baltasar Gracian set down a pretty good rule when he said: "To know how to refuse, is as important as to know how to consent. A gilded no often gives more satisfaction than a dry yes."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Friday - May 9, 1952

This is the news:

General Ridgeway has told General Van Fleet, our 8th army commander in Korea, to take whatever action is necessary...use whatever force is required, to secure the release of Brigadier General Francis T. Dodd. #

General Dodd has now spent a third night as a prisoner of the Communists, in our own prisoner of war camp on Koje Island. General Van Fleet flew to the island today. He later told reporters: we will use force if necessary, to get General Dodd's release. He is confident he will be released without harm. General Ridgeway said the Communist prisoners want telephones hooked up to the various compounds on Koje..so they can organize themselves. They want writing paper, a hospital representative, and some other things. General Van Fleet did not enlarge on Ridgeway's report . But Van Fleet says we will not give in to the "unreasonable demands" of the prisoners. Van Fleet has informed the Communists, through officers on Koje, that General Dodd is no longer the commander of their camp.. he is now just another United Nations soldier. Dodd is talking to our officers by telephone. But we have not been able to discover just where he is being held, in the compound that holds six thousand men. It now appears that General Dodd and Lieut. Col. Wilbur Raven of New Jersey, were talking with communist leaders when they were seized. A mob of prisoners surrounded them. Colonel Wilbur was near a post..held on to it..kicked and fought his way free. General Dodd had no such opportunity. General Van Fleet has started an investigation to find out why our guards did not rush into the compound to try to rescue Dodd, after his capture on Wednesday afternoon. No correspondents have been permitted to go to Koje. The army says the situation there is tense. Back in Tokyo and in Seoul, the correspondents are wondering; just what the army has done to get Dodd released.. just what the General has been telling us over his telphone.. just what the army has been telling General Dodd.

Communist jets attacked our F-80 Shooting Stars some 30 miles south of the Yalu river today. We report that the comparatively slow F-80's damaged a fast Mig. There is no report on how our planes made out.

There was no progress at the truce talks. But another meeting was scheduled after Admiral Joy told the Communists:"The firmness and finality of our position, should be unmistakably clear to you. I have nothing else to say."

Army Secretary Pace says the ammunition situation in Korea is "relatively easy"..because of the reduced scale of operations during the past six months.

The United States, Britain and France, today asked Russia to [redacted] hurry up with an answer to our note of almost two months ago, suggesting a streamlined peace treaty with Austria. The State Department says Russia's eagerness for a treaty with Germany, and reluctance for a treaty with Austria, should be obvious to everyone.

The United States and Britain today gave the Italians wider administrative powers in the allied zone of Trieste.

Six west European nations..including western Germany.. today signed the draft of a treaty for a European army. It would pool more than a million [redacted] fighting men from France, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg and 400-thousand Germans. The treaty becomes binding only after it has been ratified by each Parliament, and signed by the six foreign ministers. The army commander will be French Marshal Juin.

In Denver today, O. A. Knight, leader of 90-thousand striking oil workers, says the union men are "madder than ever, and won't go back to work without a settlement." Knight accuses the Wage Stabilization Board of prolonging the walkout.. not understanding the situation. Unofficial government statistics show that the strikers have closed refineries and gasoline plants that normally produce one-third of the nation's capacity.

Three railroad brotherhoods..the engineers, firemen, and conductors today asked the Supreme Court to rule on the legality of the government's seziure of the railroads in 1950.

Price Chief Ellis Arnall today asked Congress for a quick change in the price control laws.. (to prevent higher food prices) He wants Congress, specifically, to exclude the "sellers" of merchandise from the Capehart amendmnt to the law. This gives "manufacturers" and "processors" of goods the right to add certain increased costs to their retail prices. A recent court decision makes it possible for sellers to profit by the amendment.

The Senate has passed and sent to the President two bills that increase veterans benefit payments by [redacted] 202-million dollars a year. They are designed to keep up with the increased cost of living.

The Senate Judiciary Committee today voted eight to four to approve the President's nomination of Federal Judge McGrannery to succeed Howard Mc Grath as attorney general. Republican Senator Ferguson says he intends to carry his fight against McGrannery to the Senate floor.

Edward R. Murrow: May 9, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

Occasionally, but not very often, in this news business, one encounters a current quotation about politics that is so challenging, and at the same time ambiguous, as to cause the mind to stretch itself a little. That happened to this reporter today. Joe Curran, a Vice President of the CIO was asked, by a politically-minded Congressman, how to eliminate politics from labor disputes. Mr. Curran replied: "How are you going to do that? I think there's politics even in handling a baby." This opens up a rather interesting area for speculation about both babies and politicians. Does it follow that a baby cradled in the left arm, will turn out to be a Left Winger? Will the baby who is not amenable to discipline, grow up to be a maverick, and refuse to follow any Party line? Will the toddler who is unusually destructive of furniture and glassware, consistently vote against all conservation measures when he reaches maturity? Will the baby that is rocked in his cradle grow up to rock the political boat?

There was a time when the art of kissing babies was regarded as a political asset. But it is now possible, what with television, that a baby kissed in public - if it be done with a degree of skill and familiarity - might arouse jealousy in the hearts of countless mothers - who can vote.

Mr. Curran contends that there's politics even in handling a baby. A baby can be pacified with a rattle, a politician made happy by applause. If a baby gets what he wants he makes agreeable noises - so does the politician. A baby demands attention; without attention a politician withers. The infant reaches out and grabs for what he wants, and is without any appreciation of financial considerations, or the meaning of money. The baby, being unable to articulate, believes that volume of sound is as effective as logic.

Certainly it is necessary to develop the art of compromise in handling a baby.

These observations serve to illustrate that this reporter's knowledge of babies and politicians is not above the ordinary; but it would seem that Joe Curran had a point, (and it is regrettable that the Congressman did not cross-question him at length upon this subject.)

But if there is politics in handling a baby, there is also politics in handling money - particularly big money. Yesterday General Eisenhower said that the proposed cut of one billion dollars in the Mutual Security Bill would be "heavily and seriously" felt in Europe. Today in Oslo, he said he believes "reasonable cuts can be made without fatal results." He said he couldn't give exact figures but he felt that there would always be room for give and take where such large sums are involved.

Senator Taft takes issue with General Eisenhower by saying that he would cut another billion out of the Bill - accused Paul Hoffman, a leading Eisenhower supporter, of being "the country's biggest spender in history, outside of the Military Department." According to Senator Taft, two other Eisenhower men - Senators Lodge and Duff - have been against economy on every issue. Senator Taft wants General Eisenhower to state his position on all issues after he comes home, and to describe the method of campaigning he would adopt if nominated. The Senator doesn't believe the General will be nominated, for he says he'll have about half of the twelve hundred delegates when the Convention opens in Chicago.

Another Republican, Senator Wiley, today urged his Party to support the Mutual Security Bill. He said most Republicans are "not willing to sacrifice this republic in order to win an election." The passage of the Bill would be another resounding demonstration of bi-partisan foreign policy. Senator Wiley said: "We Republicans have been fully consulted in the formulation of this program. We are eager to have our country play its historic role; and we are not going to allow any consideration as regards an election year or electioneering to blind our eyes to our paramount responsibility." According to Senator Wiley those Republicans who oppose a bi-partisan foreign policy are a minority within a minority, and it is not they who speak for the Party.

There we have three statements by distinguished Republican politicians - Eisenhower, Taft and Wiley - on the subject of the Mutual Security Bill. And we have also Joe Curran's statement that there's "politics even in handling a baby." The real question, of course, the mystery that must remain unsolved, if we are to survive, is how babies grow up to become either Republicans or Democrats. This is a slow and mysterious process; and so long as no one controls this whole complex of the impact of impressions, fact and fantasy upon those who are progressing from babyhood to full-fledged Democrats or Republicans, we shall probably manage to muddle along somehow. There is no reliable evidence that any baby is born a Republican or a Democrat; and I suppose it's the duty of parents, schools, newspapers and radio to do what they can to see to it that as the babies mature - begin to imitate their elders - they have an opportunity to make up their own minds.

We were speaking of politics and babies. And it may be that in politics - as in everything else - Thomas Fuller was right when he said:"Our whole life is but a greater and longer childhood." Publilius Syrus once remarked: "By reason, not by force, is youth to be mastered." In a Democracy...in an election year...that's a pretty fair motto: "By reason, not by force."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY - MAY 9, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

General Ridgway has told General Van Fleet, our 8th Army Commander in Korea, to take whatever action is necessary: use whatever force is required to secure the release of Brigadier General Francis T. Dodd. General Dodd has now spent a third night as a prisoner of the communists in our own prisoner of war camp on Koje Island. General Van Fleet flew to the island today. He later told reporters: we will use force if necessary to get General Dodd's release. He is confident he will be released without harm. General Ridgway said the communist prisoners want telephones hooked up to the various compounds on Koje so they can organize themselves. They want writing paper, a hospital representativ and some other things. General Van Fleet did not enlarge on Ridgway's report. But Van Fleet says we will not give in to the "unreasonable demands" of the prisoners. Van Fleet has informed the communists, through officers on Koje, that General Dodd is no longer the commander of their camp; he is now just another United Nations soldier. Dodd is talking to our officers by telephone, but we have not been able to discover just where he is being held in the compound that holds six thousand men. It now appears that General Dodd and Lieut. Col. Wilbur Raven of New Jersey were talking with communist leaders when they were seized. A mob of prisoners surrounded them. Colonel Wilbur was near a post, held on to it, kicked and fought his way free. General Dodd had no such opportunity. General Van Fleet has started an investigation to find out why our guards did not rush into the compound to try to rescue Dodd after his capture on Wednesday afternoon. No correspondents have been permitted to go to Koje. The Army says the situation there is tense. Back in Tokyo and in Seoul, the correspondents are wondering; just what the army has done to get Dodd released; just what the General has been telling us over his telephone; just what the Army has been telling General Dodd.

Communist jets attacked our F-80 Shooting Stars some 30 miles south of the Yalu River today. We report that the comparatively slow F-80's damaged a fast MIG. There is no report on how our planes made out.

There was no progress at the truce talks. But another meeting was scheduled after Admiral Joy told the communists: "The firmness and finality of our position should be unmistakably clear to you. I have nothing else to say."

Army Secretary Pace says the ammunition situation in Korea is "relatively easy" because of the reduced scale of operations during the past six month

The United States, Britain, and France, today asked Russia to hurry up with an answer to our note of almost two months ago suggesting a streamlined peace treaty with Austria. The State Department says Russia's eagerness for a treaty with Germany and reluctance for a treaty with Austria, should be obvious to everyone.

The United States and Britain today gave the Italians wider administrative powers in the allied zone of Trieste.

Six west European nation, including western Germany, today signed the draft of a treaty for a European Army. It would pool more than a million fighting men from France, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg and 400-thousand Germans. The treaty becomes binding only after it has been ratified by each Parliament, and signed by the six foreign ministers. The Army Commander will be French Marshal Juin.

In Denver today, O. A. Knight, leader of 90-thousand striking oil workers says the union men are "madder than ever and won't go back to work without a settlement." Knight accuses the Wage Stabilization Board of prolonging the walkout - not understanding the situation. Unofficial government statistics show that the strikers have closed refineries and gasoline plants that normally produce one-third of the nation's capacity.

Three railroad brotherhoods, the engineers, firemen, and conductors, today asked the Supreme Court to rule on the legality of the government's seizure of the railroads in 1950.

Price Chief Ellis Arnall today asked Congress for a quick change in the price control laws, (to prevent higher food prices). He wants Congress, specifically, to exclude the "sellers" of merchandise from the Capehart amendment to the law. This gives "manufacturers" and "processors" of goods the right to add certain increased costs to their retail prices. A recent court decision makes it possible for sellers to profit by the amendment.

The Senate has passed and sent to the President two bills that increase veterans benefit payments by 202-million dollars a year. They are designed to keep up with the increased cost of living.

The Senate Judiciary Committee today voted eight to four to approve the President's nomination of Federal Judge McGrannery to succeed Howard McGrath as Attorney General. Republican Senator Ferguson says he intends to carry his fight against McGrannery to the Senate floor.

Occasionally, but not very often, in this news business, one encounters a current quotation about politics that is so challenging and at the same time ambiguous as to cause the mind to stretch itself a little. That happendd to this reporter today. Joe Curran, a Vice President of the CIO was asked by a politically-minded Congressman, how to eliminate politics from labor disputes. Mr. Curran replied: "How are you going to do that? I think there's politics even in handling a baby." This opens up a rather interesting area for speculation about both babies and politicians. Does it follow that a baby cradled in the left arm will turn out to be a Left Winger? Will the baby who is not amenable to discipline grow up to be a maverick, and refuse to follow any Party line? Will the toddler who is unusually destructive of furniture and glassware consistently vote against all conservation measures when he reaches maturity? Will the baby that is rocked in his cradle grow up to rock the political boat?

There was a time when the art of kissing babies was regarded as a political asset. But it is now possible, what with television, that a baby kissed in public - if it be done with a degree of skill and familiarity - might arouse jealousy in the hearts of countless mothers - who can vote.

Mr. Curran contends that there's politics even in handling a baby. A baby can be pacified with a rattle, a politician made happy by applause. If a baby gets what he wants he makes agreeable noises - so does the politician. A baby demands attention; without attention, a politician withers. The infant reaches out and grabs for what he wants, and is without any appreciation of financial considerations, or the meaning of money. The baby, being unable to articulate, believes that volume of sound is as effective as logic.

Certainly it is necessary to develop the art of compromise in handling a baby.

These observations serve to illustrate that this reporter's knowledge of babies and politicians is not above the ordinary, but it would seem that Joe Curran had a point, (and it is regrettable that the Congressman did not cross-question him at length upon this subject).

But if there is politics in handling a baby, there is also politics in handling money - particularly big money. Yesterday General Eisenhower said that the proposed cut of one billion dollars in the Mutual Security Bill, would be "heavily and seriously" felt in Europe. Today in Oslo, he said he believes "reasonable cuts can be made without fatal results." He said he couldn't give exact figures but he felt that there would always be room for give and take where such large sums are involved.

Senator Taft takes issue with General Eisenhower, by saying that he would cut another billion out of the Bill - accused Paul Hoffman, a leading Eisenhower supporter, of being "the country's biggest spender in history, outside of the Military Department." According to Senator Taft, two other Eisenhower men - Senator Lodge and Duff - have been against economy on every issue. Senator Taft wants General Eisenhower to state his position on all issues after he comes home, and to describe the method of campaigning he would adopt if nominated. The Senator doesn't believe the General will be nominated, for he says he'll have about half of the twelve hundred delegates when the Convention opens in Chicago.

Another Republican, Senator Wiley, today urged his Party to support the Mutual Security Bill. He said most Republicans are "not willing to sacrifice this Republic in order to win an election." The passage of the Bill would be another resounding demonstration of bi-partisan foreign policy. Senator Wiley said: "We Republicans have been fully consulted in the formulation of this program. We are eager to have our country play its historic role; and we are not going to allow any consideration as regards an election or electioneering to blind our eyes to our paramount responsibility." According to Senator Wiley, those Republicans who oppose a bi-partisan foreign policy are a minority within a minority, and it is not they who speak for the Party.

There we have three statements by distinguished Republican politicians - Eisenhower, Taft and Wiley - on the subject of the Mutual Security Bill. And we have also Joe Curran's statement that there's "politics even in handling a baby. The real question, of course, the mystery that must remain unsolved, if we are to survive, is how babies grow up to become either Republicans or Democrats. This is a slow and mysterious process; and so long as no one controls this whole complex of the impact of impressions, fact, and fantasy upon those who are progressing from babyhood to full-fledged Democrats or Republicans, we shall probably manage to muddle along somehow. There is no reliable evidence that any baby is born a Republican or a Democrat; and I suppose it's the duty of parents, schools, newspapers, and radio to do what they can to see to it that as the babies mature - begin to imitate their elders - they have an opportunity to make up their own minds.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today," Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: We were speaking of politics and babies. And it may be that in politic - as in everything else - Thomas Fuller was right when he said: "Our whole life is but a greater and longer childhood." Publilius Syrus once remarked: "By reason not by force, is youth to be mastered." In a Democracy, in an election year, that' a pretty fair motto: "By reason, not by force."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Monday - May 12, 1952

This is the news:

The Supreme Court today started hearing arguments in the steel dispute.

John W. Davis, for the industry, argued that in seizing the mills the President has asserted a "kingly prerogative"... was a mere trespasser.. had no lawful authority.. instead of using the available Taft-Hartley law he "proclaimed a law of his own and then proceeded to execute it."

For the government, Acting Attorney General Perlman, said the President had not only a right, but a duty, to seize the mills..keep production unbroken. He said "the facts are uncontradicted that the country was facing not merely an emergency, but a threat to its very existence." He said the President acted not alone under the Constiution, but also the powers and duties conferred on him by many acts of congress and treaties: the North Atlantic pact, foreign aid, the korean war, defense alliances in the Pacific. But he acknowledged that seizure was undertaken without authority from any "specific " law. The Justices, who offered few questions to Mr. Davis, spent much time questioning Mr. Perlman.

We are indebted to the regularly assigned correspondents at the Supreme Court for news of what happened today. In a few minutes I'll try to describe WHAT WE HEARD & SAW IN THE COURT.

Here in Washington there are reports that the President may use the Taft-Hartley law, unless the 13 day oil strike is settled soon. Tomorrow, union and industry leaders meet with the Wage Stabilization Board. In Britain today, commercial airplane service was cut or eliminated.. both British and American officials have asked all nations to conserve their aviation gasoline supplies.

In Korea, our truce negotiarors were subjected to what Admiral Joy, our chief negotiator, calls "one of the most viesious propaganda blasts we've ever heard." Admiral Joy says:"The Communists told us in effect, that unless we intend to disrupt the meetings, they would insist on meeting every day and would, in effect, use these meetings overtly for propaganda."

The Communists can be expected to use for their propaganda purposes the concessions their prisoners on Koje island, have won in return for the release of Brigadier General Dodd. General Mark Clark, the new commander in the Far East, says they are minor concessions.."unadulterated blackmail".. given under durress.. And General Clark says:"Any committments made as a result of such demands should be interpreted accordingly."

Brigadier General Colson, who replaced Dodd as commander of the camp on Koje, says this is what the Communist prisoners wanted..and what we agreed to. First: we acknowledge that prisoners have been killed.. in the future they can all expect "humane treatment" according to international law.. we will do everything possible to eliminate bloodshed and violence. We refused the enemy's demand for voluntary reptriation of prisoners..because that matter is before the truce negotiarors. We promised, that with the release of General Dodd, there will be nomm more forcible screening of prisoners of war. (to determine whether they would go home after an armistice.) We also promise that there will be no more re-arming of prisoners of war at this camp. (The army does not explain what this "rearming of prisoners" means.) We also agree to permit the prisoners on Koje to organize a sort of central committee, representing all prisoners.

General Dodd himself has issued a statement saying: the Communists threatened to kill him if the 8th army tried to rescue him by force.. he mm is convinced the threat of force had an effect in getting him released. He was told that the Communists had a [redacted] detailed plan for seizing him. Neither General Dodd or officials at Koje..where correspondents were permitted to go today..would answer any questions.

General Ridgeway left Tokyo by plane today for m Washington and his new assignment as commander of the North Atlantic armed forces.

[redacted]

[redacted] Senate committee--investigating whether there are grounds for expelling Senator Mc Carthy--was told today that at the time the Senator was paid 10-thousand dollars by the Lustron Corporation, Lustron was losing about a half million dollars a month. The Senator wrote a book on housing for the company. He contends [redacted] Lustron was "a flourishing concern" at the time.

The House of Representatives today approved an investigation of radio and television programs.. and another ~~investigation~~ of books, magazines and comic publications. Both resolutions were sponsored by Representative Gathings, Arkansas Democrat, who SAID THERE ARE too many murder and violence shows on radio and television and "immoral, obscene or otherwise offensive matter in printed form." Apparently, newspapers will not be investigated. Both actions were approved by voice votes with 31 of the 435 members of the House present to vote. ~~Representative Gathings says he has [illegible] "[illegible]"~~

The radio and television networks says "we have always maintained the highest standards of good taste and decency."

The Supreme Court building here in Washington is nearer to a Cathedral than any legal building this reporter has ever seen...//.White marble.-cost nine million.-the corridors are so wide you could drive a tank down them..with a jeep travelling on either side,...your footsteps pursue you down those wide alleyways lined with white marble,//.Its a place where even visiting school children lower their voices without being told,//.You have heard the phrase,."the majesty of the law.",but in that building, you feel, and sense it,...//.There is a solemn permanence about the place,..Red velvet drapes.-.red carpets.-.functionaires in black suits and black ties.-.low voices,..If you reach your seat,.and dont sit down immediately, you are admonished in well modulated tones to do so.//.Promptly at twelve noon today, the crier shouted something about "drawing near",..I heard him say,."God save the United States and this Honorable court,"./The nine Justices came in thru the red chrtains..and sat down behind their long continous desk,..About sixty lawyers were admitted to practice before the court,.(a sort of assembly line affair). They were sworn in in two groups,..The nine Justices didnt pay much attention,.. chatted amongst themselves,/.Then Chief Justice Vinson read a few decisions..They may have been important.-.I couldnt hear them,..I could have stood to "draw nearer still", though I was halfway down the chamber,...A reporter nerby remarked,."they should wire this barn for sound",..Then John W. Davis aged seventy nine stood up behind the lecturn and started talking about the Presidents seizure of the steel industry...He was against it...told the whole story in a steady calm voice, his long delicate fingers caressing the side of the lecturn,..The Justices seemed only mildly interested,..There were only two or three questions addressed to the man who was Democratic candidate for president in twenty four.His per oration rolled round the pillars and bounced off the roof,.but this reporter couldnt grasp the words.No Bishop or Cardinal could hold his audience in this great legal Cathedral because they couldnt hear him.The members of the public,(there is room for only about three hundred and fifty) strained their ears,leaning forward,..The standees in the back were six deep and steady, but they couldnt hear much either.....A page boy-in black-brought Justice Black a glass of water,.Justice Frankfurter bit his tongue like a small boy as he underlined something in a book,..Justice Clarke rubbed his eyes,.Chief Justice Vinson held his second chin in the palm of his left hand,.A page boy brought Justice Douglass a book..

Mr Davis slapped the back of his right hand into the palm of his left,.and his steady voice,never hunting for a word, pursued itself around the great pillars and bounced off the ceiling-and was lost,..Mr Davis sat down.The Solicitor General, Mr Perlman,stood up to argue the government's case,.His delivery was more hesitant; his echoes met each other coming back around the third pillar,.."Inherent power" ran into "Taft Hartley," and both were smothered by "grave national crisis," which was in hot pursuit.// Justice Frankfurter asked a question,..gave the audience his profile while asking it, and after the answer, gave the full face view with a slight, reserved, and vastly judicial smile.// He quoted Dr. Johnson about something, but I couldnt get it.// Justice Jackson and Mr Perlman engaged in some aparently good natured exchange, but so far as this reporter is aware, it might have had to do with the fourth race at Pimlico.// Justice Clarke smoothed back his graying hair.. and Justice Douglass scratched his, and said to Perlmann,"..I don't see where this argument is getting you,"..that sentence bounced off the pillar opposite me, and I caught PART OF it...Seemed Mr Perlman was having a rough time,..(but who could be sure).// Justice Frankfurter bounced one off the opposite wall, and it sounded like,"How do you expect us to decide how bad the crisis was or is,"// Perlman said something about affidavits from the Defense Department,// Justice Douglass wanted to know something about whether the President could seize Wheat, too,.. Mr Perlman didnt appear to think highly of this question, but I shall have to read the transcript to find out what he said in reply.// Promptly at two, the gavel banged; the Judges barged out thru the red curtains. Half hour recess. Mr Perlman took up where he left off...more questions,..The Judges on the bench looked like the trustees of some philanthropic foundation, with Mr Perlman asking for an appropriation.// The sixteen year old page boys behind the bench looked as though they w uld like to get back to their comic books, or out on the ball field. // The audience, and even the lawyers, tight packed inside the bar, looked as though they would like to hear what was going on in this historic case. // The acoustics in that chamber would be a disgrace to a first year student of architecture. A properly edited recording of todays proceedings would have contributed something to the publics understanding of a complex and vital issue, but the Court permits no microphones. // ~~But~~ It could at least arrange, that those fortunate enough to attend proceedings, might be able to tell-roughly-whats going on. It ~~is not disrespectfull of the dignity of the court to report that there~~ are ~~justices on the bench willing to play to the audience...small as it is~~ ... ~~They~~ are the permanent legal princes, watch politicians, presidents, -- SENATORS -- generals, come and go. // They are SOMETIMES the law and for life. but their proceedings sound as though they were conducted in a barrell. // Its impressive, but would be much more so if their Honors, and opposing council, could be heard. Pantomime is better in a theatre.

// The Justices of the Court

Wendell Wilkie might have been talking about the ~~current constitutional battle~~ situation today, when he said.."Our way of living together in America is a strong, but delicate fabric.// It is made up of many threads, woven over many centuries, by the patience and sacrafice of countless liberty loving men and women./ Let us not tear it asunder./. For no man knows, once it is destroyed, when or where, man will find its protective warmth again....

good night and good luck...

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY - MAY 12, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Supreme Court today started hearing arguments in the steel dispute. John W. Davis, for the industry, argued that in seizing the mills, the President has asserted a "kingly prerogative"....was a mere trespasser....had no lawful authority. Instead of using the available Taft-Hartley law, he "proclaimed a law of his own and then proceeded to execute it." For the Government, Acting Attorney General Perlman, said the President had not only a right, but a duty, to seize the mills - keep production unbroken. He said: "The facts are uncontradicted that the country was facing not merely an emergency, but a threat to its very existence." He said the President acted not alone under the Constitution, but also the powers and duties conferred on him by many acts of Congress and treaties - the North Atlantic Pact, foreign aid, the Korean war, defense alliances in the Pacific. But he acknowledged that seizure was undertaken without authority from any "specific" law. The Justices, who offered few questions to Mr. Davis, spent much time questioning Mr. Perlman. We are in debted to the regularly assigned correspondents at the Supreme Court for news of what happened today. In a few minutes, I'll try to describe what we heard and saw in the court.

Here in Washington, there are reports that the President may use the Taft-Hartley law unless the 13 day oil strike is settled soon. Tomorrow, union and industry leaders meet with the Wage Stabilization Board. In Britain today, commercial airplane service was cut or eliminated. Both British and American officials have asked all nations to conserve their aviation gasoline supplies.

In Korea, oru truce negotiators were subjected to what Admiral Joy, our chief negotiator, calls "one of the most vicsious propaganda blasts we've ever heard." Admiral Joy says: "The Communists told us, in effect, that unless we intend to disrupt the meetings, they would insist on meeting every day and would, in effect, use these meetings overtly for propaganda."

The communists can be expected to use for their propaganda purposes the concessions their prisoners on Koje Island have won in return for the release of Brigadier General Dodd. General Mark Clark, the new commander in the Far East, says they are minor concessions....."unadulterated blackmail"....given under durress. And General Clark says: "Any commitments made as a result of such demands should be interpreted accordingly." Brigadier General Colsen, who replaced Dodd as commander of the camp on Koje, says this is what the communist prisoners wanted, and what we agreed to. First: we acknowledge that prisoners have been killed; in the future, they can all expect "humane treatment" according to International Law; we will do everything possible to eliminate bloodshed and violence. We refused the enemy's demand for voluntary repatriation of prisoners, because that matter is before the truce negotiators. We promised that with the release of General Dodd, there will be mo more forcible screening of prisoners of war to determine whether they would go home after an armistice. We also promise that there will be no more re-arming of prisoners of war at this camp. (The Army does not explain what this "rearming of prisoners" means.) We also agree to permit the prisoners on Koje to organize a sort of central committee representing all prisoners.

General Dodd himself has issued a statement saying the communists threatened to kill him if the 8th Army tried to rescue him by force. He is convinced the threat of force had an effect in getting him released. He was told that the communists had a detailed plan for seizing him. Neither General Dodd or officials at Koje (where correspondents were permitted to go today), would answer any questions.

General Ridgway left Tokyo by plane today for Washington, and his new assignment as commander of the North Atlantic Armed Forces.

A Senate committee, investigating whether there are grounds for expelling Senator McCarthy, was told today that at the time the Senator was paid

10-thousand dollars by the Lustron Corporation, Lustron was losing about a half million dollars a month. The Senator wrote a book on housing for the company. He contends Lustron was "a flourishing concern" at the time.

The House of Representatives today approved an investigation of radio and television programs, and another of books, magazines and comic publications. Both resolutions were sponsored by Representative Gathings, Arkansas Democrat, who said there are too many murder and violence shows on radio and television, and "immoral, obscene or otherwise offensive matter in printed form." Apparently, newspapers will not be investigated. Both actions were approved by voice votes with 31 of the 435 members of the House presnet to vote. The radio and television networks say: "We have always maintained the highest standards of good taste and decency."

The Supreme Court building here in Washington is nearer to a Cathedral than any legal building this reporter has ever seen. White marble - cost nine million - the corridors are so wide you could drive a tank down them with a jeep traveling on either side. Your footsteps pursue you down those wide alleyways lined with white marble. It's a place where even visiting school children lower their voices without being told. You have heard the phrase, "the majesty of the law," but in that building, you feel, and sense it. There is a solemn permanence about the place: red velvet drapes - red carpets - functionaires in black suits and black ties - low voices. If you reach your seat, and don't sit down immediately you are admonished in well modulated tones to do so.

Promptly at twelve noon today, the crier shouted something about "drawing near." I heard him say: "God save the United States and this Honorable Court." The nine Justices came in through the red curtains and sat down behind their long continuous desk. About sixty lawyers were admitted to practice before the Court: (sort of assembly line affair). They were sworn in in two groups. The nine Justices didn't pay much attention: chatted amongst themselves. Then Chief Justice Vinson read a few decisions. They may have been important - I couldn't hear them. I could have stood to "draw nearer still," though I was halfway down the chamber. A reporter nearby remarked: "They should wire this barn for sound." Then John W. Davis aged seventy nine stood up behind the lecturn and started talking about the Presidents seizure of the steel industry. He was against it: told the whole story in a steady calm voice, his long delicate fingers caressing the side of the lecturn. The Justices seemed only mildly interest ed. There were only two or three questions addressed to the man who was Democratic candidate for president in twenty four. His per oration rolled round the pillars and bounced off the roof, but this reporter couldn't grasp the words. No Bishop or Cardinal could hold his audience in this great legal Cathedral because they couldn't hear him. The members of the public, (there is room for only about three hundred and fifty), strained their ears, leaning forward. The standees in the back were six deep and steady, but they couldn't hear much either.

A page boy - in black - brought Justice Black a glass of water. Justice Frankfurter bit his tongue like a small boy as he underlined something in a book. Justice Clarke rubbed his eyes. Chief Justice Vinson held his second chin in the palm of his left hand. A page boy brought Justice Douglas a book. Mr. Davis slapped the back of his right hand into the palm of his left, and his steady voice, never hunting for a word, pursued itself around the great pillars and bounced off the ceiling - and was lost. Mr. Davis sat down. The Solicitor General, Mr. Perlman, stood up to argue the government's case. His delivery was more hesitant; his echoes met each other coming back around the third pillar, "Inherent power" ran into "Taft-Hartley", and both were smothered by "grave national crisis", which was in hot pursuit. Justice Frankfurter asked a question, gave the audience his profile while asking it, and after the answer, gave the full face view with a slight, reserved, and vastly judicial smile. He quoted Dr. Johnson about something, but I couldn't get it. Justice Jackson and Mr. Perlman engaged in some apparently good natured exchange, but so far as this reporter is aware, it might have had to do with the fourth race at Pimlico. Justice Clarke smoothed back his graying hair, and Justice Douglas scratched his, and said to Perlman: "I don't see where this argument is getting you." That sentence bounced off the pillar opposite me, and I caught part of it. Seemed Mr. Perlman was having a rough time, (but who could be sure!) Justice Frankfurter bounced one off the opposite wall, and it wounded like: "How do you expect us to decide how bad the crisis was or is?" Perlman said something about affidavits from the Defense Department. Justice Douglas wanted to know something about whether the President could seize wheat, too. Mr. Perlman didn't appear to think highly of this question, but I shall have to read the transcript to find out what he said in reply.

Promptly at two the gavel banged: the Judges barged out through the red curtains. Half hour recess. Mr. Perlman took up where he left off - more questions. The Judges on the bench looked like the trustees of some philanthropic foundation, with Mr. Perlman asking for an appropriation. The sixteen-year-old page boys behind the bench looked as though they would like to get back to their comic books, or out on the ball field. The audience, and even the lawyers, tight packed inside the bar, looked as though they would like to hear what was going on in this historic case. (The acoustics in that chamber would be a disgrace to a first year student of architecture.) A properly edited recording of todays proceedings would have contributed something to the publics understanding of a complex and vital issue, but the Court permits no microphones. It could at least arrange, that those fortunate enough to attend proceedings, might be able to tell - roughly - what's going on.

The Justices of the Supreme Court are the permanent legal princes: watch politicians, presidents, senators, generals come and go. They are sometimes the law - and for life - but their proceedings sound as though they were conducted in a barrell. It's impressive, but would be much more so if their Honors, and opposing council, could be heard. Pantomime is better in a theatre.

This is Ed Murrow....I'll be back in a moment with the Word For Today."

Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Wendell Wilkie might have been talking about the situation today when he said: "Our way of living together in America is a strong, but delicate fabric. It is made up of many threads, woven over many centuries by the patience and sacrafice of countless liberty loving men and women. Let us not tear it asunder. For no man knows, once it is destroyed, when or where man will find its protective warmth again."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Tuesday - May 13, 1952

This is the news:

Supreme Court Justice Jackson indicated today that the court may delay its decision on the steel dispute. As the court completed hearing arguments from all sides, Mr. Justice Jackson. (speaking for himself.). said the case cannot be decided "in the light of one day's discussion." And he is against issuing a decision quickly. with written opinions to be made public later.

The industry's attorney, John W. Davis, said today that the steel people could suffer damage up to 300-millions as the result of seizure. The acting attorney general, Philip Perlman.. called this fantastic. Mr. Perlman argued today that we are at war.. (even if the President disclaims it.) And he said the steel industry has not suffered any damage by seizure..but if it does, it can claim damage in the courts.

Philip Murray, the president of the C.I.O. steelworkers, told the union's convention in Philadelphia today: the industry broke the rules of the game set-up by the government.. by refusing to accept the pay boost recommended by the Wage Stabilization Board. Murray said "They are not going to get away with it.. we are not going to allow it."

George W. Armstrong, Junior, an industry member of the Wage Stabilization Board, today told a House committee that the Board recommended to the President ten days ago that the Taft-Hartley act be used in the oil strike. Mr. Armstrong [redacted] wants the Board to deal exclusively with wage stabilization..with no power to work on labor disputes. The Senate Banking Committee TODAY voted to strip the board of power to recommend settlements in labor disputes.

Today the Wage Board met with the oil strikers and industry leaders and told them: the strike "can be" settled by collective bargaining. The board is going to hold informal discussions with both sides.

O.A. Knight, one of the union leaders, says there is no need to use the Taft-Hartley injunction provision against the strikers, because their strike is not a national emergency..they are supplying oil for the Korean war. But today: British commercial ~~planes~~ airlines announced further cuts in their schedules.. government officials in Malaya cut their flights.. and India is reported to be planning a similar saving of aviation fuel. Interior Secretary Chapman says "there is a major dislocation" of petroleum supplies in many areas of this country.

General Ridegway..on his way to Washington, and then his new assignment in Paris, arrived in San Fransisco today. He told reporters that any repudiation of the terms we agreed on to get General Dodd released by Communist prisoners on Koje island "could have a very grave effect" on the Korean truce negotiations. General Ridgeway believes that the whole incident is part of the Communist plan to embarrass and destroy the United Nations through world opinion..he expects them to use it for propaganda purposes.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff in Washington have cabled General Clark in Tokyo for more information surrounding the capture and release of General Dodd. The Defense Department doesn't like the terms we agreed on to get him out. The Department says the words used indicate that we will stop killing prisoners. STOP treating them badly..re-arming them..and forcing them to be screened. The Department says we never have done any of these things. The only prisoners killed were victims of riots they started.

General Dodd has been re-assigned to 8th army headquarters. General Colson, his replacement at Koje, has gone back to his post as chief of staff at First Corps. And the new prison commander will be Brigadier General Boatner of New Orleans. He has been assistant commander of the Second division.. a veteran officer in the China-India-Burma theater in the last war.. a general who knows the Chinese and speaks the Chinese language.

At today's truce meeting our delegates listened to more communist propaganda. Admiral Joy told them they're trying to widen the breach between the two sides.

In the air, our Sabrejets destroyed four enemy Migs.

~~In Washington, Democratic Senators Lehman and Mc Carran argued bitterly over a new immigration bill. Senator Lehman said the bill, from Mc Carran's judiciary committee, is strikingly similar to the basic racial philosophy of the Nazis.. full of a philosophy of fear, suspicion and distrust of foreigners outside this country and aliens in it. Senator Mc Carran said he has been the target of criticism and condemnation of those who would, by reason of their red adherence, destroy this country and this government internally." Lehman said this was a "disturbing position to take on the Senate floor.~~

IN WASHINGTON,

The Senate committee investigating Senator McCarthy was told today that the Lustron Corporation "got its moneys worth", when it paid Mc Carthy 10-thousand dollars for an article on housing. The testimony came from Carl G. Strandlund, former president of Lustron, which borrowed 37 and a half million dollars from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation before going bankrupt.

W. Averell Harriman said today that as far as he's concerned General Eisenhower has made his stand on political issues "quite clear." Harriman, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, says Eisenhower did this when he said: "My views are similar to the views of the Republican party."

In Wilmington, North Carolina, 10 former Ku Klux Klansmen were found guilty of kidnapping and conspiracy. Four were given suspended sentences. Six were sentenced to from two to five years in prison.

Some members of the Senate Armed Srevices Committee have started a move to cut an additional 400-million dollars from the foreign aid bill. It has already been reduced by one billion....the Senators concerned, want to cut it to a maximum of six and a half billion. While the Congress considers reduction and restrictions in this program, a nonpartisan committee of private citizens has made a substantial study of the program, under the chairmanship of President James B. Conant of Harvard. We have asked Mr. Conant to give you his views on the matter durin8

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Tuesday, May 13, 1952
7:45-8:00 p.m.

MURROW: Some members of the Senate Armed Services Committee have started a move to cut an additional four hundred million dollars from the foreign aid bill. It has already been reduced by one billion. The Senators concerned want to cut it to a maximum of six-and-a-half billion. While theCongress considers reduction and restrictions in this program, a nonpartisan committee of private citizens has made a substantial study of the program under the chairmanship of President James B. Conant of Harvard. We have Mr. Conant to give you his views on the matter during the next few minutes.

CONANT: I am speaking tonight as Chairman of the Committee on the present danger, a nonpartisan group formed some eighteen months ago. We organized to urge the importance of providing adequate defense for the United States in a time of great danger. This danger has not passed nor lessened, therefore, it is of the utmost importance, we believe, to continue without let-up the defense plans approved by Congress last year. This means adequate appropriations for the United States Defense Department and sufficient funds for the mutual security program. It is about the support of the mutual security program that I wish to say a few words tonight.

Virtually, all our responsible military leaders agree that the defense ofEurope by ground forces, supported by tactical airpower, is essential for the security of the United States. The only way this defense can be built up is to provide arms for the troops being raised by the European nation The United States' share in a three-year plan was considered by Congress last year and the first installment was approved by the passage of the Mutual Security Act. The second installment is now under consideration. The question is -- shall we go through with our part of the plan or shall we, by cutting appropriations, serve notice on the world that we are uncertain as to our determination? This is a matter of vital importance to every citizen of this nation for until the defenses of Europe are secure the danger to this country remains acute. Until we can be confident that the Russians cannot overrun the Continent, the threat of a third world war hangs over us. We are arming, not to initiate a war but to preserve the peace.

European strength can be developed only if this country provides sufficient funds to support the really great military effort Europe is now making. The money thus spent must be regarded as part of our own defense expenditure. It provides military power at a fraction of the cost that would be involved if the same power were developed here at home. For example: the annual maintenance cost of an infantry division in the United States is about a hundred and sixty million dollars as compared with fifty million dollars for a European division of roughly equal strength. We pay all of the former and at most a small part of the latter. The money to be appropriated in the bill now before the Senate is not truly for foreign aid but for security, security for the free world, security for the United States. Adequate defense can be built if the Congress will show that the leadership of the United States remains unshaken.

MURROW: That was President James B. Conant, of Harvard, discussing certain aspects of the mutual security program.

Ed.trans.-A.A.Cardiff (30)

the next few minutes:

(return cue: ...leadership of the United States remains unshaken."

Pres. James B. Conant, of Harvard - Mutual Security Program.

After a delay of more than a month, the Western Allies, the United States, Britain and France, have answered a Russian Note. / The Russians wanted a four-power commission to discuss the future of Germany. / Our reply says we will join in four-power talks on the unification of Germany, if the Kremlin agrees to free elections throughout both zones of Germany. / We insist that an impartial commission make a study to determine whether really free elections could be held in Berlin, and in the communist, and western-occupied portions of Germany. / After that commission reported, the representatives of the Big Four would sit down and talk, and try to reach agreement on holding free elections. / All four nations would have to agree that any German government formed after the elections, would be free and independent. / We rejected a Russian proposal that Germany be banned from making any alliances with either the East or West. / We say that until these things are done, there's no use talking about a peace treaty with Germany. / We say we're ready to start talking, as soon as it is clearly apparent that it is also the intention of the Soviet Government to avoid the fruitless discussions of the past."

This latest exchange leaves us just about where we were. The Russians have refused to permit a U.N. inspection team to enter their zone of Germany to study the possibility of holding free elections. About the only thing that has happened in the five weeks that have elapsed since the Russian proposal is that the communists have had that much time to put a lot of propaganda hay in the barn, by continuing to pose as the real advocates of German unity, independence, and the withdrawal of armies of occupation. Time is of course required to co-ordinate the policies of three great nations - the British, the French and ourselves - particularly when the question involves a problem as difficult and delicate as the future of Germany. But in this case, since our answer says substantially what we have said before, it would seem that all three Foreign Offices moved with even less speed and determination than usual. The communists had a clear propaganda field for five weeks, while we thought up an answer which could have been hammered out in a long week end.

In the war of words timing is an important factor. ~~And th~~ ~~suggests that~~ And we are not always quick on the draw. In matters of propaganda, it's pretty much as La Bruyere once said:"Those who make the worst use of their time, are the first to complain of its shortness." In matters of mutual security, these words by Sir John Lubbock would seem appropriate:"Time is often said to be money. But it can be more. It can be life itself."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY - MAY 13, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Supreme Court Justice Jackson indicated today that the Court may delay its decision on the steel dispute. As the Court completed hearing arguments from all sides, Mr. Jackson, (speaking for himself), said the case cannot be decided "in the light of one day's discussion." And he is against issueing a decision quickly, with written opinions to be made public later. The industry's attorney, John W. Davis, said today that the steel people could suffer damag up to 300-millions as the result of seizure. The Acting Attorney General, Philip Perlman, called this fantastic. Mr. Perlman argued today that we are at war even if the President disclaims it. And he said the steel industry has not suffered any damage by seizure, but if it does, it can claim damages in the courts.

Philip Murray, the president of the CIO steelworkers, told the union's convention in Philadelphia today: the industry broke the rules of the game set-up by the Government by refusing to accept the pay boost recommended by the Wage Stabilization Board. Murray said: "They are not going to get away with it; we are not going to allow it."

George W. Armstrong, Junior, an industry member of the Wage Stabilization Board, today told a House committee that the Board recommended to the President ten days ago that the Taft-Hartley act be used in the oil strike. Mr. Armstrong wants the Board to deal exclusively with wage stabilization - with no power to work on labor disputes. The Senate Banking Committee today voted to strip the Board of power to recommend settlements in labor disputes.

Today the Wage Board met with the oil strikers and industry leaders and told them: the strike "can be" settled by collective bargaining. The Board is going to hold informal discussions with both sides.

O. A. Knight, one of the union leaders, says there is no need to use the Taft-Hartley injunction provision against the strikers, because their strike is not a national emergency; they are supplying oil for the Korean war. But today, British commercial airlines announced further cuts in their schedules, government officials in Malaya cut their flights, and India is reported to be planning a similar saving of aviation fuel. Interior Secretary Chapman says "There is a major dislocation" of petroleum supplies in many areas in this country.

General Ridgway, on his way to Washington, and then his new assignment in Paris, arrived in San Francisco today. He told reporters that any repudiation of the terms we agreed on to get General Dodd released by communist prisoners on Koje Island, "could have a very grave effect" on the Korean truce negotiations. General Ridgway believes that the whole incident is part of the communist plan to embarrass and destroy the United Nations through world opinion; he expects them to use it for propaganda purposes.

The Joint Chiefs of Staff in Washington have cabled General Clark in Tokyo for more information surrounding the capture and release of General Dodd. The Defense Department doesn't like the terms we agreed on to get him out. The Department says the words used indicate that we will stop killing prisoners, stop treating them badly, re-arming them, and forcing them to be screened. The Department says we never have done any of these things. The only prisoners killed were victims of riots they started.

General Dodd has been re-assigned to 8th Army headquarters. General Colson, his replacement at Koje, has gone back to his post as chief of staff at First Corps. And the new prison commander will be Brigadier General Boatner of New Orleans. He has been Assistant Commander of the Second Division; a veteran officer in the China-India-Burma theater in the last war; a general who knows the Chinese and speaks the Chinese language.

At today's truce meeting our delegates listened to more communist propaganda. Admiral Joy told them they're trying to widen the breach between the two sides.

In the air, our Sabre jets destroyed four enemy MIGs.

In Washington, the Senate committee investigating Senator McCarthy was told today that the Lustron Corporation "got its moneys worth," when it paid McCarthy 10-thousand dollars for an article on housing. The testimony came from Carl G. Strandlund, former president of Lustron, which borrowed 37 and a half million dollars from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation before going bankrupt.

W. Averell Harriman said today that as far as he's concerned, General Eisenhower has made his stand on political issues "quite clear." Harriman, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, says Eisenhower did this when he said: "My views are similar to the views of the Republican party."

In Wilmington, North Carolina, 10 former Ku Klux Klansmen were found guilty of kidnapping and conspiracy. Four were given suspended sentences. Six were sentenced to from two to five years in prison.

Some members of the Senate Armed Services Committee have started to move to cut an additional 400-million dollars from the Foreign Aid Bill. It has already been reduced by one million; the Senators concerned want to cut it to a maximum of six and a half billion. While the Congress considers reduction and restrictions in this program, a non-partisan committee of private citizens has made a substantial study of the program, under the chairmanship of President James B. Conant of Harvard. We have asked Mr. Conant to give you his views on the matter during the next few minutes.

CONANT: I am speaking tonight as Chairman of the "Committee on the Present Danger" a nonpartisan group formed some eighteen months ago. We organized to urge the importance of providing adequate defense for the United States in a time of great danger. This danger has not passed nor lessened; therefore, it is of the utmost importance, we believe, to continue without letup the defense plans approved by Congress last year. This means adequate appropriations for the United States Defense Department and sufficient funds for the mutual security program. It is about the support of the mutual security program that I wish to say a few words tonight.

Virtually, all our responsible military leaders agree that the defense of Europe by ground forces, supported by tactical airpower, is essential for the security of the United States. The only way this defense can be built up is to provice arms for the troops being raised by the European nations. The United States' share in a three-year plan was considered by Congress last year, and the first installment was approved by the passage of the Mutual Security Act. The second installment is now under consideration. The question is - shall we go through with our part of the plan or shall we, by cutting appropriations, serve notice on the world that we are uncertain as to our determination? This is a matter of vital importance to every citizen of this nation for until the defenses of Europe are secure, the danger to this country remains acute. Until we can be confident that the Russians cannot overrun the Continent, the threat of a third World War hangs over us. We are arming, not to initiate a war, but to preserve the peace.

European strength can be developed only if this country provides sufficient funds to support the really great military effort Europe is now making. The money thus spent must be regarded as part of our own defense expenditure. It provides military power at a fraction of the cost that would be involved if the same power were developed here at home. For example: the annual maintenance cost of an infantry division in the United States is about a hundred and sixty million dollars as compared with fifty million dollars for a European division of roughly equal strength. We pay all of the former and at most a small part of the latter. The money to be appropriated in the bill now before the Senate is not truly for foreign aid but for security - security for the free world, security for the United States. Adequate defense can be built if the Congress will show that the leadership of the United States remains unshaken.

MURROW: That was President James B. Conant, of Harvard, discussing certain aspects of the mutual security program.

After a delay of more than a month, the Western Allies, the United States, Britain and France, have answered a Russian Note. The Russians wanted a four-power commission to discuss the future of Germany. Our reply says we will join in four-power talks on the unification of Germany, if the Kremlin agrees to free elections throughout both zones of Germany. We insist that an impartial commission make a study to determine whether really free elections could be held in Berlin, and in the communist and western-occupied portions of Germany. After that commission reported, the representatives of the Big Four would sit down and talk, and try to reach agreement on holding free elections. All four nations would have to agree that any German government formed after the elections would be free and independent. We rejected a Russian proposal that Germany be banned from making any alliances with either the East or West. We say that until these things are done, there's no use talking about a peace treaty with Germany. We say we're ready to start talking "as soon as it is clearly apparent that it is also the intention of the Soviet Government to avoid the fruitless discussions of the past."

This latest exchange leaves us just about where we were. The Russians have refused to permit a U. N. inspection team to enter their zone of Germany to study the possibility of holding free elections. About the only thing that has happened in the five weeks that have elapsed since the Russian proposal, is that the communists have had that much time to put a lot of propaganda hay in the barn, by continuing to pose as the real advocates of German unity, independence, and the withdrawal of armies of occupation. Time is of course required to co-ordinate the policies of three great nations - the British, the French and ourselves - particularly when the question involves a problem as difficult and delicate as the future of Germany. But in this case, since our answer says substantially what we have said before, it would seem that all three Foreign Offices moved with even less speed and determination than usual. The communists had a clear propaganda field for five weeks, while we thought up an answer which could have been hammered out in a long week end.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: In the war of words, timing is an important factor. And we are not always quick on the draw. In matters of propaganda, it's pretty much as La Bruyere once said: "Those who make the worst use of their time, are the first to complain of its shortness." In matters of mutual security, these words by Sir John Lubbock would seem appropriate: "Time is often said to be money. But it can be more. It can be life itself."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Wednesday — May 14, 1952

This is the news:

The C.I.O. Steelworkers, in convention in Philadelphia, voted today to strike, if they do not get a prompt and satisfactory wage increase from the steel industry. I'd like to review the remarks of some of the speakers at today's convention in a few minutes.

The Wage Stabilization Board decided today to allow up to 15 cents an hour increases, for the 90-thousand striking oil workers. Industry members dissented..wanted a ten cents an hour maximum. The Board did not offer the 15 cents as a recommendation..just a ceiling. The strikers originally had talked about a 25 cents an hour raise..then dropped to 18 cents an hour. After the Board made its announcement today strike-leaders called on all oil companies "interested in ending the strike," to start bargaining immediately with local unions. There are some experts in Washington, who think the Wage Board's 15-cents-an hour ceiling may result in quick settlements. Today in Paris, representatives of 15 major international airlines agreed to cut their schedules..to conserve fuel supplies.

In Korea today, the Communist truce negotiators started talking about the Koje island prisoner of war camp. (just as Defense officials had predicted they would.) The enemy negotiators, who have made it clear they want to continue daily meetings, so they can try to sell their propaganda, emphasized the concessions made to secure the release of General Dodd. And they chose the very points which had upset the Defense Department.. the statement that there would "no longer" be bloodshed..that there would be humane treatment "in the future."

General Clark, in Tokyo, had a session with General Dodd and General Colsen who made the deal that secured Dodd's release. So-called "informed sources" says Clark "verbally reprimanded" both generals.. but his headquarters in Tokyo has said nothing about the meeting.

Republican Senator Bridges WANTS A Senate investigation of what he calls "this disgraceful affair." He says Colson's concessions were made to order for enemy propaganda. He can't understand how a soldier who can attain the rank of general could be "a partner to the stupidity of getting captured and then granting the demands."

~~The Chinese Communist radio dug up yet another propaganda charge today. They say last month an allied plane dropped one poison gas bomb and fired 100 gas artillery shells into North Korea. We have consistently denied the use of any gas in the Korean war.~~

The Pentagon reports that another 241 men were casualties in Korea last week. The total casualty list is now: 108, 413.

The House Veterans Committee today approved [redacted] A [redacted] "G.I. Bill of Rights", for veterans of the Korean war. Its [redacted] estimated to cost a half ~~million~~ billion dollars the first year.. and one billion dollars a year after that. The bill would give eligible veterans up to 36 months of schooling... up to 300-dollars in mustering-out pay, and government-guaranteed loans on homes, farms and businesses. This would benefit all persons in unfirom from June 27 of 1950..the day our troops entered Korea..to a termination date to be set later by Congress or the President.

Housing Administrator Raymond Foley says its quite possible that the government may soon relax its credit controls on new houses costing more than 12-thousand dollars. The present regulation X requires a down payment of at least 50 per cent on houses costing 25-thousand dollars or more.

A move in the Senate Armed Services Committee to cut another 400-million dollars from the foreign aid bill, lost today by one vote. So the bill the committee has been considering. (it calls for just under 7 billions). now goes back to the Senate floor.

Carl G. Strandlund, the former president of the Lustron Corporation, told a Senate committee today that he was "worried" when he paid Senator McCarthy 10-thousand dollars for an article on housing. He was afraid of some implications that might be drawn from the deal. ~~Senator Monroney, Oklahoma Democrat, told the committee he still doesn't know whether the payment to McCarthy was a legitimate fee or an unethical payment to McCarthy who was "the number one man in housing matters" in the Congress at the time.~~

The primary election returns from West Virginia indicate that Senator Taft has won 14 of the state's 16 Republican delegates. One went to General Eisenhower..one is undecided. Taft's headquarters says this puts him "within striking distance of a first ballot victory" at Chicago. His manager, David Ingalls says: "No other candidate in history has gone to a convention with as many votes.. "such a clesr cut mandate" from the rank and file of Republican voters.

A vice president of the American federation of Labor.. George M. Harrison.. today announced his support of Averell Harriman for the Democratic presidential nomination. Harrison is also president of the Railway Clerks.

Secretary of State Acheson said today the western powers are determined "to maintain our position in Berlin, and to assist and protect the interests of the people" of the western sector of the city. Shortly after he told this to reporters in Washington, the Russians lifted a seven-day ban they had imposed on allied military patrols, who travel from Berlin through the Soviet zone of Germany to the western zone. Mr. Acheson said this ban, and recent statements by East German leaders--threatening action if the West Germans join the Western defense alliance.. "represent the other side of the peace and unity coin, which is being put forward in such a determined way by the Soviet-Communist side."

In Tunisia, French guards have taken up posts outside the summer placae of the Bay of Tunis.. because he has refused to sign a decree for martial law in all Tunisia. The French have also put under armed guard and former premier and three former Tunisian cabinet members.

Edward R. Murrow: May 14, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

"No contract, no work." "We cannot and will not continue indefinitely to work in 1952 for 1950 wages and working conditions. Our case is just; we ask only that which is our due; we ask for no more; we will take no less." These were some of the phrases that set off a big demonstration by delegates to the C.I.O. steelworkers convention in Philadelphia today.. They voted unanimously to call a new strike if the industry fails to grant a satisfactory wage increase, and promptly. #

Two administration spokesmen backed the Union demand - Vice President Barkley hoped the Union would "come out with a victory to which it is entitled." Mr. Barkley emphasized that he wasn't talking about the legal issues of the seizure, nor was he talking as Vice President. But he said: "Our Government has not sought to do a special favor for Labor; was trying to provide justice and equality for the laboring man in the solution of his problems."

Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin told the steelworkers that he didn't feel any obligation to be impartial; he was "behind the Union, heart and soul and spirit." The Union had accepted the recommendations of the Wage Stabilization Board; the steel industry wouldn't. The steel industry could have paid the wage increases out of what Mr. Tobin called their "fabulous profits."

Everybody talked about the public interest, including Jim Griffin of Youngstown, Ohio, who said: "No matter what the Supreme Court decides, there'll be another round. We may get slugged in the jaw, but after the Supreme Court has its inning, we will get up off the floor and whip the hell out of the steel industry, in the public interest."

Mr. Bernard Baruch also had something to say about the public interest today. He didn't blame the steelworkers for seeking higher wages, to meet the rise in living costs. He didn't blame the steel companies, for wanting to raise their prices, to meet their increased costs. But he did blame the Government, for a piecemeal approach to mobilization. Mr. Baruch contended that everything should have been frozen quickly - wages and prices - at the levels prevailing just before the fighting began. He contended that only in that way could we have achieved a standard of equity and justice - protected the common interests of all of us - and prevented pressure groups, either industry or labor, from benefitting at the expense of the whole nation. When the Korean war began Mr. Baruch predicted what would happen unless everything were frozen, and it would appear that he is in the process of being proved right.

Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas also had something to say about labor unions today. He was speaking to the convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, which voted to send a message of support to the C.I.O. steelworkers. Justice Douglas told the clothing workers that this country in its Foreign Aid Program, "should support the peasants instead of the landlords." He said this country is now supporting corrupt, reactionary governments abroad, wasting the wealth of this country, by pouring monies into governments that are vicious; that we are attempting to underwrite the status quo, to keep things as they are. Justice Douglas, who has considerable first-hand experience with the Middle East and Asia, said: "In those areas you are either for the landlords, or you are for the peasants. Our technical aid programs will be of little value in saving that part of the world from Soviet imperialism, unless they are backed by social and political ideas. Freedom and justice and opportunity are the things the people in the Middle East and Asia want." He thought they also needed union know-how, and he advised that labor unions send leaders to Asia and the Middle East, "to show people there the democratic way of organizing and promoting their thoughts."

There are at least three elements discernible throughout the Middle East and Asia. The first is a great appetite for change. The second, a growing belief that independence and sovereignty are attainable. And the third, that misery and poverty have not been clamped upon the country by some omnipotent being, but can be eliminated. It is the appetite for change, the demand for a little more food, that the communists seek to capture and control.

It seems to this reporter that Justice Douglas is probably right in suggesting that labor union leaders, properly trained and selected, might be able to persuade people in these areas that they can achieve their objectives with our help, in spite of the corrupt reactionary and unrepresentative governments that we now support.

~~At the steelworkers' convention~~, Vice President Barkley and Labor Secretary Tobin left little doubt as to the administration's sentiments in the steel dispute. But perhaps they were doing nothing more than following this bit of advice from Plato, ~~who contended~~:"It is good to sometimes wash away the salt-water taste with a fresh-water discourse." In any event, neither Barkley nor Tobin went along with Shakespeare's line from Hamlet:"Give it an understanding, but no tongue."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

WEDNESDAY - MAY 14, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The CIO Steelworkers, in convention in Philadelphia, voted today to strike, if they do not get a prompt and satisfactory wage increase from the steel industry. I'd like to review the remarks of some of the speakers at today's convention in a few minutes.

The Wage Stabilization Board decided today to allow up to 15 cents an hour increases for the 90-thousand striking oil workers. Industry members dissented: wanted a ten cents an hour maximum. The Board did not offer the 15 cents as a recommendation - just a ceiling. The strikers originally had talked about a 25 cents an hour raise, then dropped to 18 cents an hour. After the Board made its announcement today, strike-leaders called on all oil companies "interested in ending the strike", to start bargaining immediately with local unions. There are some experts in Washington, who think the Wage Board's 15-cents-an-hour ceiling may result in quick settlements. Today in Paris, representatives of 15 major international airlines agreed to cut their schedules....to conserve fuel supplies.

In Korea today, the communist truce negotiators started talking about the Koje Island prisoner-of-war camp, (just as Defense officials had predicted they would). The enemy negotiators, who have made it clear they want to continue daily meetings so they can try to sell their propagands, emphasized the concessions made to secure the release of General Dodd. And they chose the very points which had upset the Defense Department - the statement that there would "no longer" be bloodshed - that there would be humane treatment "in the future".

General Clark, in Tokyo, had a session with General Dodd and General Colsen who made the deal that secured Dodd's release. So-called "informed sources" says Clark "verbally reprimanded" both generals, but his headquarters in Tokyo has said nothing about the meetings.

Republican Senator Bridges wants a Senate investigation of what he calls "this disgraceful affair." He says Colson's concessions were made to order for enemy propaganda. He can't understand how a soldier who can attain the rank of general could be "a partner to the stupidity of getting captured, and then granting the demands."

The Pentagon reports that another 241 men were casualties in Korea last week. The total casualty list is now: 108,413.

The House Veterans Committee today approved a "G.I. Bill of Rights" for veterans of the Korean war. It's estimated to cost a half billion dollars the first year, and one billion dollars a year after that. The bill would give eligible veterans up to 36 months of schooling, up to 300-dollars in mustering-out pay, and government-guaranteed loans on homes, farms and businesses. This would benefit all persons in uniform from June 27 of 1950 - the day our troops entered Korea - to a termination date to be set later by Congress or the President.

Housing Administrator Raymond Foley says it's quite possible that the Government may soon relax its credit controls on new houses costing more than 12-thousand dollars. The present regulation X requires a down payment of at least 50 per cent on houses costing 25-thousand dollars or more.

A more in the Senate Armed Services Committee to cut another 400-million dollars from the Foreign Aid Bill, lost today by one vote. So the bill the committee has been considering, (it calls for just under 7 billions), now goes back to the Senate floor.

Carl G. Strandlund, the former president of the Lustron Corporation, told a Senate committee today that he was "worried" when he paid Senator McCarthy 10-thousand dollars for an article on housing. He was afraid of some implications that might be drawn from the deal.

The primary election returns from West Virginia indicate that Senator Taft has won 14 of the state's 16 Republican delegates. One went to General Eisenhower - one is undecided. Taft's headquarters says this puts him "within striking distance of a first ballot vistory" at Chicago. His manager, David Ingalls says: "No other candidate in history has gone to a convention with as many votes.....such a clear cut mandate" from the rank and file of Republican voters.

A vice president of the American Federation of Labor, George M. Harrison today announced his support of Averell Harriman for the Democratic presidential nomination. Harrison is also president of the Railway Clerks.

Secretary of State Acheson said today the western powers are determined "to maintain our position in Berlin, and to assist and protect the interests of the people" of the western sector of the city. Shortly after he told this to reporters in Washington, the Russians lifted a seven day ban they had imposed on allied military patrols, who travel from Berlin through the Soviet zone of Germany to the western zone. Mr. Acheson said this ban, and recent statements by East German leaders, threatening action if the West Germans join the Western Defense Allieance, "represent the other side of the peace and unity coin, which is being put forward in such a determined way by the Soviet-Communist side."

In Tunisia, French guards have taken up posts outside the summer place of the Bay of Tunis, because he has refused to sign a decree for martial law in all Tunisia. The French have also put under armed guard a former premier and three Tunisian cabinet members.

"No contract, no work." "We cannot and will not continue indefinitely to work in 1952 for 1950 wages and working conditions. Our case is just...we ask only that which is our due...we ask for no more...we will take no less." These were some of the phrases that set off a big demonstration by delegates to the C.I.O. steelworkers convention in Philadelphia today. They voted unanimously to call a new strike if the industry fails to grant a satisfactory wage increase, and promptly.

Two administration spokesmen backed the Union demand - Vice President Barkley hoped the Union would "come out with a victory to which it is entitled".

Mr. Barkley emphasized that he wasn't talking about the legal issues of the seizure, bir was ge takjubg as Vice President. But he said: "Our Government has not sought to do a special favor for Labor...was trying to provide justice and equality for the laboring man in the solution of his problems."

Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin told the steelworkers that he didn't feel any obligation to be impartial; he was "behing the Union, heart and soul and spirit." The Union had accepted the recommendations of the Wage Stabilization Board; the steel industry wouldn't. The steel industry could have paid the wage increases out of what Mr. Tobin called their "fabulous profits."

Everybody talked about the public interest, including Jim Griffin of Youngstown, Ohio, who said: "No matter what the Supreme Court decides, there'll be another round. We may get slugged in the jaw, but after the Supreme Court has its innerg, we will get up off the floor and whip the hell out of the steel industry, in the public interest."

Mr. Bernard Baruch also had something to say about the public interest today. He didn't blame the steelworkers for seeking higher wages, to meet the rise in living costs. He didn't blame the steel companies, for wanting to raise their prices, to meet their increased costs. But he did blame the Government for a piecemeal approach to mobilization. Mr. Baruch contended that everything should have been frozen quickly - wages and prices - at the levels prevailing just before the fighting began. He contended that only in that way could we have achieved a standard of equity and justice - protected the common interests of all of us - and prevented pressure groups, either industry or labor, from benefiting at the expense of the whole nation. When the Korean war began Mr. Baruch predicted what would happen unless everything were frozen, and it would appear that he is in the process of being proved right.

Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas also had something to say about labor unions today. He was speaking to the convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, which voted to send a message of support to the C.I.O.

steelworkers. Justice Douglas told the clothing workers that this country in its Foreign Aid Program, "should support the peasants instead of the landlords." He said this country is now supporting corrupt, reactionary governments abroad, wasting the wealth of this country by pouring monies into governments that are vicious; that we are attempting to underwrite the status quo, to keep things as they are. Justice Douglas, who has considerable first-hand experience with the Middle East and Asia, said: "In those areas you are either for the landlords, or you are for the peasants. Our technical aid programs will be of little value in saving that part of the world from Soviet imperialism, unless they are backed by social and political ideas. Freedom and justice and opportunity are the things the people in the Middle East and Asia want." He thought they also needed union know-how, and he advised that labor unions send leaders to Asia and the Middle East, "to show people there the democratic way of organizing and promoting their thoughts."

There are at least three elements discernible throught the Middle East and Asia. The first is a grdat appetite for change. The second, a growing belief that independence and sovereignty are attainable. And the third, that misery and poverty have not been clamped upon the country by some omnipotent being, but can be eliminated. It is the appetite for change, the demand for a little more food, that the communists seek to capture and control.

It seems to this reporter that Justice Douglas is probably right in suggesting that labor union leaders, properly trained and selected, might be able to persuade people in these areas that they can achieve their objectives with our help, in spite of the corrupt reactionary and unrepresentative governments that we now support.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Vice President Barkley and Labor Secretary Tobin left little doubt as to the administration's sentiments in the steel dispute. But perhaps they were doing nothing more than following this bit of advice from Plato; "It is good to sometimes wash away the salt-water taste with a fresh-water discourse." In any event, neither Barkley nor Tobin went along with Shakespeare's line from Hamlet: "Give it an understanding, but no tongue."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Thursday - May 15, 1952

This is the news:

General Mark Clark says the agreement we made with Communist war prisoners, to secure the release of Brigadier General Dodd, "has no validity whatsoever". I should like to review the whole case of Dodd and the Koje island prisoners, in a few minutes.

In Washington, [redacted] O.A. Knight, president of the C.I.O. oil workers, said he's calling off the strike of 90-thousand workers...if the oil companies sign contracts agreeable to the unions involved. Government officials predict a quick end to the 16-day strike.

Phil Murray, the president of the C.I.O. steelworkers, says his union members are in no mood to "compromise anymore, with anybody." And Democratic Senator Humphrey of Minnesota told the union convention today: the steel dispute is part of big industry's grand strategy to kill economic controls, and have its own way in America. Humphrey called this "a power play", to kill once and for all, the liberal gains of the past 20 years. Here in New York, Economic Stabilizer Putnam says the industry's propaganda campaign is one that even Goebbels might envy. He said the steel industry is trying to confuse the public.. failed to bargain on a single one of a hundred union demands. Putnam says the issue is this: "can the steel companies hand the consumers and taxpayers a bigger bill for steel and lay responsibility at the doorstep of the workers right to a wage increase."

Defense officials are WORRIED ABOUT a threatened strike at the General Electric plant at Lockland, Ohio..which produces 47 per cent of all jet engines now used in Korea. The C.I.O. and A.F. of L. unions there want a wage increase the union shop and other benefits. General Electric says IT will not make a deal on the union shop, AND IS prepared if necessary "to take a strike." The Defense Department says a one-day strike would be "catastrophic."

Congress today approved and sent to the President a bill that would give all members of the armed forces a four per cent cost of living pay increase.. plus a 14 per cent increase in allowances for food and quarters. In the House the vote was 333 to nothing. All six members present in the Senate voted for it.

The House passed a bill that would permit all Congressmen to deduct from their income taxes, all expenses incurred while in Washington. They also approved a 900-dollar a year allowance for office space in their home districts, when no space is available in federal buildings.

The House committee investigating the Justice Department, says Ernest Branham, an official of the anti-trust division, was "intimidated or mentally horesewhipped" because he recommended prosecution in certain cases. The committee, now holding secret hearings, did not say who intimidated Branham.

The President said today that charges that his farm program is socialistic..is just bunk. He told Department of Agriculture employes: in 1932, less than 58 per cent of the nation's farms were owned by the people who worked them; today 75 per cent of the farms are owned by those who operate them. Mr. Truman [redacted] said: "We don't want peasants in this country.. we want landowners, who can hold their heads up and talks to bankers and industrialists, as equals." The President promised to make a whistle-stop campaign for the Democratic presidential candidate. And later he told reporters: it would be an honor for him to be a convention delegate from Missouri. if he goes to the convention, it will be after the candidates are nominated. Mr. Truman also said, in response to a question, that there's not a word of truth in Governor Dewey's recent charges, that the Administration "rigged" farm prices, just before the 1948 election. [redacted].

The Democratic Convention Committee today chose Governor Paul Devers of Massachusetts to make the keynote speech. Sam Rayburn, speaker of the house, will be permanent chairman, as he was at the 1948 convention.

Another Democrat..Governor Byrnes of South Carolina--said in Mississippi today: unless the south can get sympathetic consideration from the National party, Democrats or Republicans, it can turn to the support of a third party. [redacted]

The Senate committee investigating Senator McCarthy received a letter today saying the committee was trying to "assassinate a Senator's character, and political career, by innuendo and foul play." The committee quickly called as a witness the man who wrote the letter..

Clark Wideman, a Columbus, Ohio, real estate broker. Wideman said [redacted] it was typed in McCarthy's office.. and he didn't intend to embarrass the committee or criticize it in any form.

The Navy says the keel on this nation's first atomic-powered submarine will be laid next month..(at the Electric Boat Company plant in Connecticut.)

The National Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters says a House investigation of radio and television would "upset our traditional American freedom of speech concept."

Gordon McLendon, president of the 365-station Liberty Broadcasting System says the system is suspending operations because it is unable to obtain major league baseball broadcasting rights.

In Detroit today, Virgil Trucks of Detroit, pitched a no-hit game and beat Washington, one to nothing.

In Yugoslavia, Marshal Tito's government announced that it is tightening its grip on the zone it controls in Trieste...(a week after the United States and Britain gave the Italians new administrative powers in their zone of Trieste.)

Edward R. Murrow: May 15, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

The story of prisoners of war on Koje Island has become so confused, that it might be useful to go back to the beginning. | On May 9th, it was announced that Brigadier General Dodd, Commandant of the prisoners camp, was captured, under circumstances that have not yet been officially explained. | Ridgway told Van Fleet to take whatever action was necessary, including force. | Brigadier General Colson was ordered to take over Dodd's command, and was given - and this is important - "full authority and command to handle the situation". | The Army did what it always does when it doesn't know what to do, clamped down strict censorship; no correspondents permitted on the Island. | On May 10th Van Fleet said: "We have granted the communists minor concessions; will never yield to any unreasonable demands." | Also on May 10th, ~~XXXXXX~~ Dodd was released, after being held for 78 hours. On May 12th, it is disclosed that Brigadier General Colson agreed to no more compulsory screening; communists would have the right to organize within the compounds; there would be "humane" treatment in the future. | General Mark Clark didn't like this, neither did the Defense Department. | Clarification was requested. || May 13th, Clark said Colson acted on his own initiative, and under great duress. Colson was relieved of his command; Brigadier ~~XXXXXX~~ Boatner was appointed to succeed him.

May 15th - that's today - General Clark says Colson's agreement has no validity whatsoever; he had no authority to accept demands based on "vicious and false charges." General Clark repudiates the whole deal, although it had been stated earlier that Colson had been given "full authority and command to handle the situation."

Today at the truce talks the communists said their prisoners were subjected to ~~GX~~ poison gas, germ warfare and atomic bomb experiments. We say this is ridiculous and preposterous. A considerable number of Congressmen and Senators want an investigation.

Brigadier General Boatner, commanding on Koje, at last report, says discipline will be enforced; there will be no favors; prisoners ~~XXX~~ have been treated too leniently; the Colson agreement has no authority; the whole affair was prepared for propaganda purposes.

Also today, General Clark's headquarters denies that Generals Dodd and Colson were "verbally reprimanded." But Presumably they were not given medals.

The communists moved, just when the command was being shifted from Ridgway to Clark, and at a time when the prisoner of war issue dominated the conversations at Panmunjom. They captured one of our Generals, which shouldn't happen. Another General signed a paper, having been given full "authority and command to handle the situation;"---XXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXX a paper implying that we have been guilty of serious abuses against prisoners of war. That General was replaced and repudiated by his superior officers. That's what the record shows, so far as it has been revealed.

A cable received tonight from our correspondent Bob Pierpoint, who has recently been on Koje, reports that communist flags fly above several compounds; that a U.N. officer told him that there isn't anything we can do about it because to tear them down would mean a fight, a lot of people killed and wounded. The communists inside the compound see to it that no non-communists get near enough the outer gate to fall into our hands. (They do their own screening.) The communist prisoners are themselves holding non-communist prisoners. We sit on the outside looking in, letting the communists run everything themselves. Pierpoint reports that communication between the various compounds on Koje and between the prison camp and the outside world seems to be excellent. One U.N. officer stated bluntly that the inter-compound communication system run by the communists is better than our own. Whenever a work detail goes outside the compound local civilians flock around to barter and pass messages.

The communist-controlled compounds forcibly resisted any attempts to screen their prisoners, to determine who would or would not like to go home. That touched off the first bloody riots of last February. As the peace talks began to pivot more and more on prisoners of war we began once more trying to ask the prisoners to choose sides. Pierpoint reports that those inside Compound number 76, where General Dodd was captured, have never been asked which side they would choose; (and that that is true of at least some of the other compounds.) The communists were apparently desperate to avoid revealing the number of non-communists they hold within the compounds they control.

An American General, having been given full authority and command to handle the situation, agreed among other things that there would be no more forcible screening of prisoners. That agreement has been repudiated. Probably it should never have been made in the first place. But however you read the facts so far revealed, they do not add up to a very brilliant chapter in American military history.

The Koje Island incident, and ~~its repurcussions~~, would seem to underline an observation made a long time ago by the Roman historian Tacitus: "The proper qualities of a general are judgement, and deliberation." Of course hindsight is always easier than foresight, but a man who understood military thinking - a man named Napoleon - pretty well summed up the situation when he said: "The greatest general, is he who makes the fewest mistakes."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY - MAY 15, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

General Mark Clark says the agreement we made with communist war prisoners to secure the release of Brigadier General Dodd, "has no validity whatsoever". I should like to review the whole case of Dodd and the Koje Island prisoners in a few minutes.

In Washington, O. A. Knight, president of the C.I.O. oil workers, said he's calling off the strike of 90-thousand workers if the oil companies sign contracts agreeable to the unions involved. Government officials predict a quick end to the 16-day strike.

Phil Murray, the president of the C.I.O. steelworkers, says his union members are in no mood to "compromise anymore with anybody." And Democratic Senator Humphrey of Minnesota told the union convention today: the steel dispute is part of big industry's grand strategy to kill economic controls and have its own way in America. Humphrey called this "a power play" to kill once and for all the liberal gains of the past 20 years. Here in New York, Economic Stabilizer Putnam says the industry's propaganda campaign is one that even Goebbels might envy. He said the steel industry is trying to confuse the public - failed to bargain on a single one of a hundred union demands. Putnam says the issue is this: "Can the steel companies hand the consumers and taxpayers a bigger bill for steel and lay responsibility at the doorstep of the workers right to a wage increase."

Defense officials are worried about a threatened strike at the General Electric plant at Lockland, Ohio, which produces 47 per cent of all jet engines now used in Korea. The C.I.O. and A.F. of L. unions there want a wage increase, the union shop and other benefits. General Electric says it will not make a deal on the union shop, and is prepared, if necessary, "to take a strike." The Defense Department says a one-day strike would be "catastrophic."

Congress today approved and sent to the President a bill that would give all members of the armed forces a four per cent cost of living pay increase, plus a 14 per cent increase in allowances for food and quarters. In the House the vote was 333 to nothing. All six members present in the Senate voted for it.

The House passed a bill that would permit all Congressmen to deduct from their income taxes, all expenses incurred while in Washington. They also approved a 900-dollar a year allowance for office space in their home districts when no space is available in federal buildings.

The House committee investigating the Justice Department, says Ernest Branham, an official of the anti-trust division, was "intimidated or mentally horeswhipped," because he recommended prosecution in certain cases. The committee, now holding secret hearings, did not say who intimidated Branham.

The President said today that charges that his farm program is socialistic is just bunk. He told Department of Agriculture employees: in 1932, less than 58 per cent of the nation's farms were owned by the people who worked them; today 75 per cent of the farms are owned by those who operate them. Mr. Truman said: "We don't want peasants in this country.....we want landowners who can hold their heads up and talk to bankers and industrialists as equals." The President promised to make a whistle-stop campaign for the Democratic presidential candidate. And later he told reporters it would be an honor for him to be a convention delegate from Missouri; if he goes to the convention, it will be after the candidates are nominated. Mr. Truman also said, in response to a question, that there's not a word of truth in Governor Dewey's recent charges, that the Administration "rigged" farm prices, just before the 1948 election.

The Democratic Convention Committee today chose Governor Paul Devers of Massachusetts to make the keynote speech. Sam Rayburn, Speaker of the House, will be permanent chairman, as he was at the 1948 convention.

Another Democrat, Governor Byrnes of South Carolina, said in Mississipp today: unless the South can get sympathetic consideration from the Nationsl party, Democrats or Republicans, it can turn to the support of a third party.

The Senate committee investigating Senator McCarthy received a letter today saying the committee was trying to "assissinate a Senator's character and political career by innuendo and foul play." The committee quickly called as a witness the man who wrote the letter, Clark Wideman, a Columbus, Ohio, real estate broker. Wideman said it was typed in McCarthy's office, and he didn't intend to embarrass the committee or criticize it in any form.

The Navy says the keel on this nation's first atomic-powered submarine, will be laid next month at the Electric Boat Company plant in Connecticut.

The National Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters says a House investigation of radio and television would "upset our traditional American freedom of speech concept.

Gordon McLendon, president of the 365-station Liberty Broadcasting System, says the system is suspending operations because it is unable to obtain major league baseball broadcasting rights.

In Detroit today, Virgil Trucks of Detroit, pitched a no-hit game and beat Washington, one to nothing.

In Yugoslavia, Marshal Tito's government announced that it is tightening its grip on the zone it controls in Trieste - a week after the United States and Britain gave the Italians new administrative powers in their zone of Trieste.

The story of prisoners of war on Koje Island has become so confused, that it might be useful to go back to the beginning. On May 9th, it was announced that Brigadier General Dodd, Commandant of the prisoners camp, was captured, under circumstances that have not yet been officially explained. Ridgway told Van Fleet to take whatever action was necessary, including force. Brigadier General Colson was ordered to take over Dodd's command, and was given - and this is important - "full authority and command to handle the situation." The Army did what it always does when it doesn't know what to do - clamped down strict censorship; no correspondents permitted on the Island. On May 10th, Van Fleet said: "We have granted the communists minor concessions; will never yield to any unreasonable demands." Also on May 10th, Dodd was released after being held for 78 hours. On May 12th, it is disclosed that Brigadier General Colson agreed to no more compulsory screening; communists would have the right to organize within the compounds; there would be "humane" treatment in the future. General Mark Clark didn't like this, neither did the Defense Department. Clarification was requested. May 13th, Clark said Colson acted on his own initiative, and under great duress. Colson was relieved of his command; Brigadier Boatner was appointed to succeed him. May 15th - that's today - General Clark says Colson's agreement has no validity whatsoever; he had no authority to accept demands based on "vicious and false charges." General Clark repudiates the whole deal, although it had been stated earlier that Colson had been given "full authority and command to handle the situation."

Today at the truce talks, the communists said their prisoners were subjected to poison gas, germ warfare and atomic bomb experiments. We say this is ridiculous and preposterous. A considerable number of Congressmen and Senators want an investigation.

Brigadier General Boatner, commanding on Koje, at last report, says discipline will be enforced; there will be no favors; prisoners have been treated too leniently; the Colson agreement has no authority; the whole affair was prepared for propaganda purposes.

Also today, General Clark's headquarters denies that Generals Dodd and Colson were "verbally reprimanded". But presumably, they were not given medals.

The communists moved just when the command was being shifted from Ridgway to Clark, and at a time when the prisoner of war issue dominated the conversations at Panmunjom. They captured one of our Generals, which shouldn't happen. Another General signed a paper, having been given full "authority and command to handle the situation," a paper implying that we have been guilty of serious abuses against prisoners of war. That General was replaced and repudiated by his superior officers. That's what the record shows, so far as it has been revealed.

A cable received tonight from our correspondent Bob Pierpoint, who has recently been on Koje, reports that communist flags fly above several compounds that a U.N. officer told him that there isn't anything we can do about it because to tear them down would mean a fight, a lot of people killed and wounded. The communists prisoners are themselves holding non-communist prisoners. We sit on the outside looking in, letting the communists run everything themselves. Pierpoint reports that communication between the various compounds on Koje, and between the prison camp and the outside world seems to be excellent. One U.N. officer stated bluntly that the inter-compound communication system run by the communists is better than our own. Whenever a work detail goes outside the compound local civilians flock around to barter and pass messages.

The communist-controlled compounds forcibly resisted any attempts to screen their prisoners, to determine who would or would not like to go home. That touched off the first bloody riots of last February. As the peace talks began to pivot more and more on prisoners of war, we began once more trying to ask the prisoners to choose sides. Pierpoint reports that those inside Compound number 76, where General Dodd was captured, have never been asked which side they would choose; (and that that is true of at least some of the other compounds). The communists were apparently desperate to avoid revealing the number of non-communists they hold within the compounds they control.

An American General, having been given "full authority and command" to handle the situation, agreed, among other things, that there would be no more forcible screening of prisoners. That agreement has been repudiated. Probably it should never have been made in the first place. But however you read the facts so far revealed, they do not add up to a very brilliant chapter in American militar history.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: The Koje Island incident would seem to underline an observation made a long time ago by the Roman historian Tacitus: "The proper qualities of a general are judgement, and deliberation." Of course, hindsight is always easier than foresight, but a man who understood military thinking - a man named Napoleon - pretty well summed up the situation when he said: "The greatest general is he who makes the fewest mistakes."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Friday - May 16, 1952

This is the news:

Defense Secretary Lovett said today: "Anyone who makes a statement that the United Nations or this government has used bacteriological warfare or poison gas..lies in his teeth." Mr. Lovett, commenting on Communist charges that we are using germs and poison gas in Korea, pointed out to reporters that frequently the Communists charge to others, things they are preparing to do. He said if the Russians use poison gas or germ warfare, "They'll wish they had never been born." The secretary called the charges levelled against us at Panmunjom and elsewhere: "abomninable and malicious falsehoods.. an appaling act." But he said we must continue the talks in Korea.. "we just should not arbitrarily pick up our marbles and go home." As for the incident at the Koje prisoner of war camp, Secretary Lovett says he's using every ounce of his self-restraint to wait for all the facts.. any comment he might make now could not be printed, unless newspapers were printed on asbestos. The defense department has given top priority to its investigation.

On Koje today, we doubled or tripled our guards..built new sandbagged pillboxes armed them with machine guns.. and we're manning them day and night.

At today's truce talks, the Communists repeated their charge that we mistreat prisoners. Admiral Joy told the enemy: we will not engage in propaganda.. we want an armistice.

In Washington today the House ignored Defense Department objections and voted to give the Marine Corps a voice on the Joint Chiefs of Staff. The vote was 253 to 32. The bill now goes to the Senate which has voted to make the commandant of Marines an "advisor" to the Joint Chiefs. #

House tax investigators today introduced bills to elminate claims for large business and entertainment expenses..without records to prove it. Another calls for taxpayers to report the nature and sources of their gross income. Another would ban political contributions that are charged off as "loans."

The C.I.O. Steel Workers closed their Philadelphia convention today with Phil Murray accusing Commerce Secretary Sawyer of an "unthinkable degree of bias." Sawyer had written Murray that not all steelworkers took proper care of mill equipment, during their recent three day strike. Murray [redacted] TOLD THE UNION" Sawyer is "no friend of yours."

Elmer E. Walker, a labor member of the Wage Stabilization Board, told a House committee today, the attack on the Board is a cover-up for "the actual objectives of the National Association of Manufacturers-and its confederates..namely, the destruction of trade unionism."

One new agreement was reached in the oil industry today as many negotiators across the country started working on a settlement of the strike.

The Senate has passed and sent to the White House a bill to give coastal states the title to oil-rich submerged lands. (The President vetoed a similar bill in 1946.)

A House committee today approved an increase of at least five dollars a month for persons who now get Old Age and Survivors insurance, under the Social Security System. Persons who retire in the future would get up to 5-dollars a month more than now.

Walter M. Royal, Junior, a publicity officer in the Housing and Home Finance Agency, told a Senate committee today that about a dozen federal employes helped Senator McCarthy write the article on housing, which he sold for ten thousand dollars. Mr. Royal testified the government employes did not write the article.. but furnished facts and figures for it.

The Meat Industry today asked Congress to abolish price controls because they have made meat prices "higher than they ~~would~~ otherwise would have been."

Two members of the President's Airport Commission, say that they believe the Newark airport is now safe for use. The commission says all airports and airplanes can be made safer.. but not much can be done to make planes less noisy.

The Civil Aernautics Board says the plane that crashed at Elizabeth..near the Newark field.. ~~[illegible]~~ killing 33 persons last February, went down because of the accidental reversing of a propeller.

In London today, General Eisenhower told reporters, after a two-day visit to Britain: unity and spiritual strength are more important to the free world than tanks, guns, planes and ships. ~~The General said Indo China, Malaya and Korea are not only directly and indirectly important to the business of building up forces in Europe but they are just as much tactical phases of the great struggle against a monolithic dictatorship that we are now engaged in."~~ The General says he plans to arrive in Washington on June 1..the day he retires as allied supreme commander.

In Berlin today, East German communists called West Germany's Chancellor Adenauer a traitor..for cooperating with the western allies. They are calling for "armed national forces" as the best way to "maintain peace."

In Oregon today, voting is still in progress in the state's presidential primary contests. My colleague Edward P. Morgan has been covering that campaign for us. Ed, what do the experts think:

(2;30 ending..

there is a note of uncertainty about the outcome.)

CBS RADIO DIVISION

E. R. MURROW

Friday, May 16, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 P.M.

MURROW: In Oregon, today, voting is still in progress in the state's Presidential primary contests. My colleague, Edward P. Morgan, has been covering that campaign for us.

Ed, what do the experts think?

MORGAN: Well, Ed, ruling out this reporter as an expert at the outset, the feeling has been that Oregon would go for Eisenhower. At the beginning of the campaign that was almost without qualification. There was even very confident talk that the general might sweep all 18 of the delegates to the Republican convention. Then some plain and fancy hedging set in and now with the close of the polls still several hours away, the prospects of an Eisenhower victory - while still definitely there mind you - have been trimmed a little.

Thereare two reasons for this. First, machinations of the supporters of Senator Taft. The general is formally and fully entered in this race; his name is on the ballot. The senator's is not. Under Oregon law, delegates to the Chicago convention are generally bound to support the candidate getting the most popular votes today. But, sharp-eyed Taft people found some fine print in the books under which they're trying quite legally to capture for the senator as many as half a dozen delegates by getting them unto the ballot by petition unpledged. This maneuver has deepened the now stark campaign bitterness between the Taft and Eisenhower camps. The second limiting factor is some 200-odd pounds of California governor labelled 'Earl Warren,' who sort of tiptoed up behindthis Eisenhower Taft commotion without much warning.

For 9-days with his wife and 2 of his blond daughters, he has been hoping around the state from east to west and north to south, in an aeroplane, and observers will be surprised if his quiet, friendly campaign manner doesn't produce for him a firm second-place showing behind Ike.

On the Democratic ticket, it should be just about all

Kefauver despite some loyal votes for Illinois' Governor Adlai Stevenson and Justice Douglas, both running against their wishes.

The reason that we haven't yet got a single return even from the prompt hamlet of Shaniko up on the Columbia River, is that the law conscientiously says that such divulgence before all polls close might influence voters elsewhere.

It's been a fine, blossom-laden Spring day, and despite the fact that the Chinook salmon are running (indistinct), Ed, the balloting is heading toward a possible record turnout.

A couple of fay footnotes if you like. A man from the town of Rhododendron says if the citizens make him a state senator he'll put two-toned whistles on all Diesel locomotives. And the city of Portland is voting on a tax to help support its symphony orchestra.

Like the Presidential race, there's a note of certainty about the outcome.

(30)

ed. trans. P. O.

Edward R. Murrow: May 16, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

General Douglas MacArthur has made two speeches in Michigan within the past twenty-four hours. Last night, before a joint session of the Michigan Legislature, and today from the steps of the City Hall in Detroit, before a crowd estimated at 25 thousand. Both speeches produced great applause, and throngs cheered the General on his drive from Lansing to Detroit. Michigan, together with Pennsylvania represents the crucial area of conflict between General Eisenhower and Senator Taft for the Republican nomination.

General MacArthur's speeches covered familiar territory, and in an earlier day could have been summarized by the phrase: "Turn the rascals out." He said: "There is no politics in me, or none intended in what I say. But we have strayed far indeed from the course of constitutional liberty - to fiscal instability, political insecurity, and moral jeopardy at home, and to universal doubt abroad. Government has become to arbitrary - too many controls; an artificially induced psychosis of war hysteria. Talk of imminent threat to our national security through the application of external force is pure nonsense - everywhere the long arm of foreign influence dominates and controls, even against our own national interests. Our will, our courage, our initiative seem almost paralyzed."

And then ~~XXX~~ General MacArthur added something new - a warning about the "emergence upon the American scene of the ugly threat of a military state. Republics and democracies have generally lost their liberties, by way of passing from a civilian to a quasi-military status. It would be a tragic development indeed if this generation was forced to look to the rigidity of military dominance and discipline to redeem it from the tragic failure of a civilian administration."

Although MacArthur named no names he was clearly saying: "Turn the rascals out, and beware of Eisenhower. It would seem that General MacArthur's opinion regarding military men in high office has changed. On March 9, 1948, he said he would not shrink from becoming President, if called by the American people, but did not actively seek or covet any office. One month later, on April 9, after a poor showing in the Wisconsin primary, General MacArthur said he was still available. In those days, four years ago, there was about as much political activity in General MacArthur's headquarters in Tokyo as there has been recently in General Eisenhower's headquarters outside Paris. General MacArthur contends that those who objected to his campaigning against the Administration while in uniform do so from "narrow minded petulance."

It appears that this year, in both the Republican and Democratic Parties, many will be called but only two will be chosen. And General MacArthur has served clear notice that he will do what he can to prevent General Eisenhower from being chosen. This ought to enliven the proceedings considerably.

In a political year, men and motives are not always easy to evaluate, but time hasn't changed things very much. Many years ago, Will Rogers said: "I hope I never get so old, that I can't peek behind the scenes and see the amount of politics that's mixed before it is dished out to the people as pure statesmanship. Politics is the best show in America, and I'm going to keep on enjoying it, so on with the show."

Good Night and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY - MAY 16, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Defense Secretary Lovett said today: "Anyone who makes a statement that the United Nations or this government has used bacteriological warfare or poison gas lies in his teeth." Mr. Lovett, commenting on communist charges that we are using germs and poeson gas in Korea, pointed out to reporters that frequently the communists charge to others things they are preparing to do. He said if the Russians use poison gas or germ warfare, "They'll wish they had never been born." The Secretary called the charges levelled against us at Panmunjom and elsewhere "abominable and malicious falsehoods....appaling act." But he said we must continue the talks in Korea; "we just should not arbirarily pick up our marbles and go home." As for the incident at the Koje prisoner-of-war camp, Secretary Lovett says he's using every ounce of his self-restraint to wait for all the facts; any comment he might make now could not be printed unless newspapers were printed on asbestos. "The Defense Department has given top priority to its investigation."

On Koje today, we doubled or tripled our guards, built new sandbagged pillboxes, armed them with machine guns, and we're manning them day and night.

At today's truce talks, the communists repeated their charge that we mistreat prisoners. Admiral Joy told the enemy; we will not engage in propaganda....we want an armistice.

In Washington today the House ignored Defense Department objections and voted to give the Marine Corps a voice on the Joint Chiefs of Staff. The vote was 253 to 32. The bill now goes to the Senate which has voted to make the commandant of Marines an "advisor to the Joint Chiefs.

House tax investigators today introduced bills to eliminate claims for large business and entertainment expenses without records to prove it. Another calls for taxpayers to report the nature and sources of their gross income.

Another would ban political contributions that are charged off as loans."

The CIO steelworkers closed their Philadelphia convention today with Phil Murray accusing Commerce Secretary Sawyer of an "unthinkable degree of bias." Sawyer had written Murray that not all steelworkers took proper care of mill equipment during their recent three day strike. Murray told the union: Sawyer is "no friend of yours."

Elmer E. Walker, a labor member of the Wage Stabilization Board, told a House committee today, the attack on the Board is a cover-up for the "actual objectives of the National Association of Manufacturers and its confederates - namely, the destruction of trade unionism."

One new agreement was reached in the oil industry today as many negotiators across the country started working on a settlement of the strike.

The Senate has passed and sent to the White House a bill to give coastal states the title to oil rich submerged lands. (The President vetoed a similar bill in 1946.)

A House committee today approved an increase of at least five dollars a month for persons who now get Old Age and Survivors insurance under the Social Security System. Persons who retire in the future would get up to 5-dollars a month more than now.

Walter M. Royal, Junior, a publicity officer in the Housing and Home Finance Agency, told a Senate committee today that about a dozen federal employees helped Senator McCarthy write the article on housing, which he sold for ten thousand dollars. Mr. Royal testified the government employees did not write the article, but furnished facts and figures for it.

The Meat Industry today asked Congress to abolish price controls because they have made meat prices "higher than they otherwise would have been."

Two members of the President's Airport Commission, say that they believe the Newark airport is now safe for use. The Commission says all airports and airplanes can be made safer, but not much can be done to make planes less noisy

The Civil Aeronautics Board says the plane that crashed at Elizabeth, near the Newark field, killing 33 persons last February, went down because of a propeller.

In London today, General Eisenhower told reporters, after a two day visit to Britain: unity and spiritual strength are more important to the free world than tanks, guns, planes and ships. The General says he plans to arrive in Washington on June 1 - the day he retires as allied Supreme Commander.

In Berlin today, East German communists called West Germany's Chancellor Adenauer a traitor for cooperating with the western allies. They are calling for "armed national forces" as the best way to "maintain peace."

In Oregon today, voting is still in progress in the state's presidential primary contests. My colleague Edward P. Morgan has been covering that campaign for us. Ed, what do the experts think:

MORGAN: Well, Ed, ruling out this reporter as an expert at the outset, the feeling has been that Oregon would go for Eisenhower. At the beginning of the campaign that was almost without qualification. There was even very confident talk that the General might sweep all 18 of the delegates to the Republivan Convention. Then some plain and fancy hedging set in and now with the close of the polls still several hours away, the prospects of an Eisenhower victory - while still definitely there, mind you, have been trimmed a little.

There are two reasons for this. First, machinations of the supporters of Senator Taft. The General is formally and fully entered in this race; his name is on the ballot. The Senator's is not. Under Oregon law, delegates to the Chicago convention are generally bound to support the candidate getting the most popular votes today. But, sharp-eyed Taft people found some fine print in the books under which they're trying quite legally to capture for the Senator as many as half a dozen delegates by getting them unto the ballot by petition unpledged. This maneuver has deepened the now stark campaign bitterness between the Taft and Eisenhower camps. The second limiting factor is some 200-odd pounds of California governor labelled 'Earl Warren,' who sort of tiptoed up behind this Eisenhower Taft commotion without much warning.

For 9-days with his wife and 2 of his blond daughters, he has been hoping around the state from east to west and north to south, in an aeroplane, and observers will be surprised if his quiet, friendly campaign manner doesn't produce for him a firm second-place showing behind Ike.

On the Democratic ticket, it should be just about all Kefauver despite some loyal votes for Illinois' Governor Adlai Stevenson and Justice Douglas, both running against their wishes.

The reason that we haven't yet got a single return even from the prompt hamlet of Shaniko up on the Columbia River, is that the law conscientiously says that such divulgence before all polls close might influence voters elsewhere.

It's been a fine, blossom-laden spring day, and despite the fact that the Chinook salmon are running, Ed, the balloting is heading toward a possible record turnout.

A couple of fay footnotes if you like. A man from the town of Rhododendron says if the citizens make him a state senator, he'll put two-toned whistles on all Diesel locomotives. And the city of Portland is voting on a tax to help support its symphony orchestra.

Like the Presidential race, there's a note of certainty about the outcome.

MURROW: General Douglas MacArthur has made two speeches in Michigan within the past twenty-four hours. Last night, before a joint session of the Michigan Legislature, and today from the steps of theCity Hall in Detroit, before a crowd estimated at 25 thousand. Both speeches produced great applause, and throngs cheered the General on his drive from Lansing to Detroit. Michigan, together with Pennsylvania, represents the crucial area of conflict between General Eisenhower and Senator Taft for the Republican nomination.

General MacArthur's speeches covered familiar territory, and in an earlier day could have been summarized by the phrase: "Turn the rascals out." He said: "There is no politics in me, or none intended in what I say. But we have strayed far indeed from the course of constitutional liberty - to fiscal instability political insecurity, and moral jeopardy at home, and to universal doubt abroad. Government has become to arbitrary - too many controls; an artificially induced psychosis of war hysteria. Talk of imminent threat to our national security through the application of external force is pure nonsense - everywhere the long arm of foreign influence.dominates and controls, even against our own national interests. Our will, our courage, our initiative seem almost paralyzed."

And then General MacArthur added something new - a warning about the "emergence upon the American scene of the ugly threat of a military state. Republics and democracies have generally lost their liberties, by way of passing from a civilian to a quasi-military status. It would be a tragic development indeed if this generation was forced to look to the rigidity of military dominance and discipline to redeem it from the tragic failure of a civilian administration."

Although MacArthur named no names he was clearly saying: "Turn the rascals out, and beware of Eisenhower." It would seem that General MacArthur's opinion regarding military men in high office has changed. On March 9, 1948, he said he would not shrink from becoming President, if called by theAmerican people, but did not actively seek or covet any office. One month later, on April 9, after a poor showing in the Wisconsin primary, General MacArthur said he was still available. In those days, four years ago, there was about as much political activity in General Eisenhower's headquarters outside Paris. General MacArthur contends that those who object to his campaigning against the Administration while in uniform do so from "narrow minded petulance."

It appears that this year, in both the Republican and Democratic Parties, many will be called but only two will be chosen. And General MacArthur has served clear notice that he will do what he can to prevent General Eisenhower from being chosen. This ought to enliven the proceedings considerably.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: In a political year, men and motives are not always easy to evaluate, but time hasn't changed things very much. Many years ago, Will Rogers said: "I hope I never get so old, that I can't peek beind the scenes and see the amount of politics that's mixed before it is dished out to the people as pure statesmanship. Politics is the best show in America, and I'm going to keep on enjoying it, so on with the show."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Monday - May 19, 1952

This is the news:

Admiral Joy, our chief negotiator at Panmunjom, says the Communists there are now lying..denying that they ever agreed to the screening of prisoners of war. Joy told the Communists today that they started objecting to the screening of prisoners only when they found out that a majority of the prisoners did not want to return to China or North Korea.

On Koje island today, the newly arrived 187th airborne regimental COMBAT team marched past the Communist compounds..to make their presence known to the war prisoners. General Boatner, the new commander on the island, says he expects "minor disorders".. but he's confident they can be handled without bloodshed.

General Ridgeway arrived in Washington today. He refused to comment on the incidents at Koje..said he expects to report to his superiors on what has been happening in the Far east, AND learn about his new assignment at Shape headquarters in Europe.

The British announced today that their businessmen in China have decided they can no longer do business with the Communists. They are prepared to close down their operations.. valued at 840-million dollars...and salvage what they can. The British businessmen say they have been forced to operate their businesses at a loss.. pay arbitrary tax demands.. employ labor they don't need, or want. They are also inconvenienced by the difficulty of getting permission to enter or leave Communist China. The British government, which will continue to maintain diplomatic relations with Peiping, will ask the Chinese for two things: to make it easy for the British businessmen to close down their businesses.. and to make it easier for them to get exit visas to get out.

In Washington today, Acting Defense Mobilizer Steelman says he has given representatives of the railroads, and representatives of three railroad unions, a proposal for settling their long dispute. Mr. Steelman wants an answer by midnight. The government has been running the railroads since it took them over in 1949 to prevent a threatened strike.

Three more airlines here and abroad, announced new cuts today in their service. (because of the oil strike) And there were more signs that the strike is ending. Ten thousand employes of the Sinclair Oil Company voted to go back to work, while their leaders work out a new contract based on a 15 cents an hour increase. #

The government today issued a price order that will mean an increase of one to two cents a can, in many stores, for popular canned vegetables, fruits and fruit juices. Another order suspends price controls on raw cotton and almost all textiles..including those made of wool, cotton and synthetic fibers. This is not EXPECTED to have much affect on consumer items because these goods have been selling below ceilings.

The government reported today that Washington, D.C. is the most expensive place to live for a family of four. (more costly than in any other of 33 large cities) Milwaukee is next... then Richmond..Atlanta and Los Angeles. The least expensive city for a family of four is New Orleans.

The House today voted against a bill that would increase federal old age insurance payments by five dollars a month. Those in favor of the bill say it would relieve the hardships of old people who are faced with rising prices. Those against the bill objected to the authority it would give the Federal Security Administrator to determine qualifications for disability payments. Many agree with the American Medical Association contention that this would open the way for "socialized medicine."

The Senate today defeated an attempt to send the controversial Immigration Bill back to committee. Senator Douglas of Illinois says it does not adequately protect the rights of individuals scheduled for deportation.. and discriminates against people from southern and eastern Europe in favor of those from northern and western Europe.

Two Republican Senators, Ferguson of Michigan and Watkins of Utah, today challenged the fitness of Judge McGranery to become attorney general. They say his integrity, ability and veracity are "most questionable." The Senate Judiciary Committee has approved the nomination. It must now be approved by the Senate.

Clifford Odets, the playwright, told a House committee today that he was a Communist party member for nine months in 1935. He says he quit because he couldn't respect his fellow members on "a cultural basis."

Edward R. Murrow: May 19, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

It is my inclination if not my duty to report certain recent events which in combination affect everyone interested in what's going on in this country or the world. Last September, by an Executive Order, the President authorized and directed every government department and agency to create its own security officer, that officer to be empowered to classify and de-classify information; that is to label it "Secret" or release it for publication. This was an unprecedented move in our peacetime history. Newspaper publishers protested vigorously; broadcasters were less vehement in their objections.

Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn, on his own authority, banned all microphones and cameras from open public hearings held by House committees. He refused to discuss, elaborate upon, or defend his decision.

Item three: about a week ago the House of Representatives, by a voice vote, with only 31 of the total membership of 435 present voted a new investigation to examine the extent to which radio and television programs contain immoral or otherwise offensive matter, or place improper emphasis upon crime, violence and corruption. And further, the committee is to make recommendations about laws that may be required to eliminate offensive and undesirable radio and television programs. That resolution was introduced by Representative Gathings, Democrat of Arkansas.

That brings us up to today. Senator Pat McCarran, Chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, introduced a Bill to bar from all Senate committees radio microphones, television cameras and still photographers. This would ~~resolution, by Speaker Rayburn's ruling,~~ apply to open, public hearings to which the general public and newspaper reporters with pencil and paper are admitted. Senator McCarran said his resolution follows a recommendation of the American Bar Association. # What follows is one reporter's comment upon these recent developments.

In combination they represent both a threat of censorship and a denial of the right of television and of radio to employ the tools of their trade - the microphone and the camera - to disseminate information. And let it be said right here that the newspapers have protested rather more vigorously than either radio or television against these prohibitions. # So far as the opinion of the Lawyers of the American Bar Association is concerned, I would suggest that their opinion on this subject carries, or should carry precisely as much weight as a group of doctors, plumbers or steelworkers. In the absence of any specific law their credentials on the matter of news and information are as good but no better than those of any other organized group in the community.

Remember, this ban against cameras and microphones in House Committee hearings, and the proposed one against Senate hearings, applies to open, public meetings. I don't care whether it's MacCarthy attacking, Owen Lattimore defending, Acheson explaining foreign policy, Lovett defending a Defense appropriation XXX -- I would rather hear the Relevant excerpts of their testimony in their own voices, than to read it or hear it after it has filtered through the minds of reporters and editors, whether in newspapers or on radio. (No politician or witness has yet claimed that his own voice misquoted him.)

Whenever the government of the day, or the opposition desire to advocate or urge legislation or action upon the country, they request and receive radio and television time, (although there is nothing in the law requiring the networks to provide that time) But when Broadcasters, desire to show Congressional committees in action, the freeze is on so far as the House is concerned, and the McCarran Bill will do the same thing for public hearings by Senate committees. If the McCarran Bill is passed and is not fought through to the Supreme Court, the radio and television companies will be negligent - derelict in their duty both to themselves and those who depend upon them for information. There was a time when the widespread use of print was regarded as a danger to the established order of the day. But it couldn't be suppressed. The same will be true of these newfangled gadgets, radio and television. It's only a question of time.

As for the House investigation into the effect of radio and television on juvenile delinquency, loose morals and crime, and also a study of books, magazines and pamphlets, to be followed by recommendations for legislation, this personal comment is offered. There is material on radio, television and in print that is an offense to both the eye and the ear. There are great opportunities and an urgent need for improved content and maturity. But there exists no compulsion to read, look or listen. When Congress attempts to legislate on matters of taste, improper emphasis - what is offensive and undesirable - then it is only another short step to increasing controls over what the individual may say, and how he may act.

As one who has had some experience with government-controlled radio and press, I should prefer to take my chances with the sometimes raucous occasional bad taste and too frequently sensational method of disseminating news and information that we now have; for under this system, as a citizen

I can take it or leave it alone - have a wide variety to choose from - and can complain or agitate for change with some hope of success. # It is, I believe, in the national interest necessary for us to turn over a substantial amount of what we earn to the government. But it is not necessary, and it is not safe to turn over to the government increased control over what we may read, see and hear. What is required is more information, more widely spread, regarding what our government is doing; and that is the thing that is in danger.

Murrow: May 19, 1952. WORD FOR TODAY

We cannot safely turn over to the government control or undue influence over any means of communication. As Thomas Jefferson said: "It is an axiom in my mind that our liberties can never be safe except when they are in the hands of the people themselves." And each new law proposed should be measured against this sentence from Horace: "How lightly, how often do we sanction a law unjust to ourselves."

Goodnight and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY - MAY 19, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Admiral Joy, our chief negotiator at Panmunjom, says the communists there are now lying, denying that they ever agreed to the screening of prisoners of war. Joy told the communists today that they started objecting to the screenin of prisoners only when they found out that a majority of the prisoners did not want to return to China or North Korea.

On Koje Isaldn today, the newly arrived 187th airborne regimental combat team marched past the communist compounds to make their presence known to the war prisoners. General Boatner, the new commander on the Island, says he expects "minor disorders", but he's confident they can be handled without bloodshed.

General Ridgway arrived in Washington today. He refused to comment on the incidents at Koje: said he expects to report to his superiors on what has been happening in the Far East, and learn about his new assignment at SHAPE headquarters in Europe.

The British announced today that their businessmen in China have decided they can no longer do business with the communists. They are prepared to close down their operations - valued at 840-million dollars - and salvage what they can. The British businessmen say they have been forced to operate their businesses at a loss, pay arbitrary tax demands, employ labor they don't need or want. They are also inconvenienced by the difficulty of getting permission to enter or leave communist China. The British Government, which will continue to maintain diplomatic relations with Peiping, will ask the Chinese for two things: to make it easy for the British businessmen to close down their businesses, and to make it easier for them to get exit visas to get out.

In Washington todah, Acting Defense Mobilizer Steelman says he has given representatives of the railroads and representatives of three railroad unions a proposal for settling their long dispute. Mr. Steelman wants an answer by midnight. (The Government has been running the railroads since it took them over in 1949 to prevent a threatened strike.)

Three more airlines here and abroad announced new cuts today in their service, because of the oil strike. And there were more signs that the strike is ending. Ten thousand employees of the Sinclair Oil Company voted to go back to work while their leaders work out a new contract based on a 15 cents an hour increase.

The Government today issued a price order that will mean an increase of one to two cents a can, in many stores, for popular canned vegetables, fruits, and fruit juices. Another order suspends price controls on raw cotton and almost all textiles, including those made of wool, cotton and synthetic fibers. This is not expected to have much affect on consumer items because these goods have been selling below ceilings.

The Government reported today that Washington, D.C. is the most expensive place to live for a family of four: more costly than in any other of 33 large cities. Milwaukee is next, then Richmond, Atlanta and Los Angeles. The least expensive city for a family of four is New Orleans.

The House today voted against a bill that would increase federal old age insurance payments by five dollars a month. Those in favor of the bill, say it would relieve the hardships of old people who are faced with rising prices. Those against the bill objected to the authority it would give the Federal Securit Administrator to determine qualifications for disability payments. Many agree with the American Medical Association contention that this would open the way for "socialized medicine."

The Senate today defeated an attempt to send the controversial Immigration Bill back to committee. Senator Douglas of Illinois says it does not adequately protect the rights of individuals scheduled for deportation, and discriminates against people from southern and eastern Europe in favor of those from northern and western Europe.

Two Republican Senators, Ferguson of Michigan and Watkins of Utah, today challenged the fitness of Judge McGranery to become Attorney General. They say his integrity, ability and veracity are "most questionable." The Senate Judiciary Committee has approved the nomination. It must nowbe approved by the Senate.

Clifford Odets, the playwright, told a House committee today that he was a Communist Party member for nine months in 1935. He says he quit because he couldn't respect his fellow members on "a cultural basis."

It is my inclination, if not my duty, to report certain recent events which in combination affect everyone interested in what's going on in this country or the world. Last September, by an Executive Order, the President authorized, and directed, every government department and agency to create its own security officer, that officer to be empowered to classify and de-classify information; that is to label it "Secret" or release it for publication. This was an unprecedented move in our peacetime history. Newspaper publishers protested vigorously; broadcasters were less vehement in their objections.

Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn, on his own authority, banned all microphones and cameras from open public hearings held by House committees. He refused to discuss, elaborate upon, or defend his decision.

Item three: about a week ago, the House of Representatives, by a voice vote, with only 31 of the total membership of 435 present, voted a new investigation to examine the extent to which radio and television programs contain immoral or otherwise offensive matter, or place improper emphasis upon crime, violence, and corruption. And further, the committee is to make recommendations about laws that may be required to eliminate offensive and undesirable radio and television programs. That resolution was introduced by Representative Gathings, Democrat of Arkansas.

That brings us up to today. Senator Pat McCarran, Chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, introduced a Bill to bar from all Seante committees, radio microphones, television cameras, and still photographers. This would apply to open, public hearings, to which the general public and newspaper reporters with pencil and paper are admitted. Senator McCarran said his resolution follows a recommendation of the American Bar Association. What follows is one reporter's comment upon these recent developments.

In combination, they represent both a threat of censorship, and a denial of the right of television and of radio to employ the tools of their trade - the microphone and the camera - to disseminate information. And let it be said right here, that the newspapers have protested rather more vigorously than either radio or television against these prohibitions. So far as the opinion of the lawyers of the American Bar Association is concerned, I would suggest that their opinion on this subject carries, or should carry precisely as much weight as a group of doctors, plumbers, or steelworkers. In the absence of any specific law, their credentials on the matter of news and information are as good but no better than those of any other organized group in the community.

Remember, this ban against cameras and microphones in House Committee hearings, and the proposed one against Senate hearings, applies to open, public meetings. I don't care whether it's McCarthy attacking, Owen Lattimore defending, Acheson explaining foreign policy, Lovett defending a Defense appropriation — I would rather hear the relevant excerpts of their testimony in their own voices, than to read it or hear it after it has filtered through the minds of reporters and editors, whether in newspapers or on radio. (No politician or witness has yet claimed that his own voice misquoted him.)

Whenever the government of the day, or the opposition, desire to advocate or urge legislation or action upon the country, they request and receive radio and television time, (although there is nothing in the law requiring the networks to provide that time). But when broadcasters desire to show Congressional committees in action, the freeze is on, so far as the House is concerned, and the McCarran Bill will do the same thing for public hearings by Senate committees. If the McCarran Bill is passed, and is not fought through to the Supreme Court, the radio and television companies will be negligent - derelict in their duty, both to themselves and those who depend upon them for information. There was a time when the widespread use of print was regarded as a danger to the established order of the day. But it couldn't be suppressed. The same will be true of these newfangled gadgets, radio and television. It's only a question of time.

As for the House investigation into the effect of radio and television on juvenile delinquency, loose morals and crime, and also a study of books, magazines, and pamphlets, to be followed by recommendations for legislation, this personal comment is offered. There is material on radio, television, and in print, that is an offense to both the eye and the ear. There are great opportunities and an urgent need for improved content, and maturity. But there exists no compulsion to read, look or listen. When Congress attempts to legislate on matters of taste, improper emphasis - what is offensive and undesirable - then it is only another short step to increasing controls over what the individual may say, and how he may act.

As one who has had some experience with government-controlled radio and press, I should prefer to take my chances with the sometimes raucous, occasion bad taste, and too frequently sensational, method of disseminating news and information that we now have - for under this system, as a citizen I can take it or leave it alone - have a wide variety to choose from - and can complain or agitate for change with some hope of success. It is, I believe, in the national interest, necessary for us to turn over a substantial amount of what we earn to the government. But it is not necessary, and it is not safe, to turn over to the government, increased control over what we may read, see and hear. What is required is more information, more widely spread, regarding what our government is doing; and that is the thing that is in danger.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: We cannot safely turn over to the government control or undue influence, over any means of communication. As Thomas Jefferson said: "It is an axiom in my mind that our liberties can never be safe, except when they are in the hands of the people themselves." And each new law proposed whould be measured against this sentence from Horace: "How lightly, how often, do we sanction a law unjust to ourselves."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Tuesday - May 20, 1952

This is the news:

Communist prisoners of war are still making trouble on Koje island.. and in Pusan. The Army reports that some 400 women prisoners made demands on us at Koje.. but quickly changed their minds. At Pusan, we definitely determined that the Koje prisoners have been using the PRISONER OF WAR hospital as a message center. We wanted to transfer some of the prisoners who work at this prison hospital. They refused & STARTED A SIT DOWN STRIKE. General Boatner gave them 15 minutes to appear for a conference. They didn't show up. Boatner sent our troops in, and for three hours they fought the Communist prisoners, until they had taken all 150 RING-LEADERS we wanted.. and moved them away. One prisoner was killed in the fighting.. 85 were INJURED..one of our soldiers was injured. Apparently there was no shooting.

At Panmunjom, the Communist negotiarors continue to use the recent events at Koje, as a base for their propaganda attacks. Today, Admiral Joy, our chief negotiator, told them again, that we will not back down from our final proposal on exchanging war prisoners. Joy said today's session brought on "the most viscious, degrading propaganda" since the truce talks started ten months ago.

The President is still hopeful of an armistice in Korea. At West Point today..celebrating the 150th anniversary of the military academy, Mr. Truman said: he believes we are on the way to preserving freedom without the frightful cost of another war. He believes there may be an armistice in Korea..but he warns that we must be prepared for treachery, or another Communist attack. He says that as a result of Korea the free world is infinitely better prepared to defend itself, than it was two years ago. The President says the Communists failed in Korea: failed to shatter the United Nations.. failed to win a cheap victory..to seize control of South Korea..or to frighten and break the will of free men. And all free countries--he said--have learned, that when they stand up and fight against aggression, when they fight for right, they will not be deserted by the United Nations. Mr. Truman said our defense program has made good progress. And he spoke of an atomic artillery piece that has been developed and tested, and "will have to be reckoned with in the future." The President took the occassion of his visit to West Point to pin another oak-leaf cluster..signifying a third Distinguished Service Mdeal..on General Ridegway. The citation praised the General's magnificent leadership of United Nations forces in Korea.

Mr. Truman today signed a bill that will give pay raises to the three and a half million men and women in unfirom. The raises will come to four per cent for all personnel... and allowances for food and rent will go up 14 per cent. This will cost an extra 484-million dollars a year.

Defense Secretary Lovett told a Congressional committee that if the military budget is held down to 46-billions.. (six billions under what the military wants..) the only honest thing to do is to demobilize "a substantial part of our defense forces."

John Foster Dulles, former State Department adviser, says the President endangered the free world when he said, in a Saturday speech, that American voters are becoming frightened at the possibility of having a Republican president. Mr. Dulles says if the prospect of a Republican president scares our own voters, it should scare our allies even more, and hearten our enemies abroad.

The Senate today voted to confirm James P. McGranery as attorney general. The vote, after a seven weeks delay, was 52 to 18.

Three railroad unions today asked the White House for clairification of its plan for settling their dispute with The nation's railroads.

Secretary of Labor Tobin says if the Supreme Court rules that the President's seizure of the steel industry was illegal, Congress should pass an emergency law giving the President power to seize defense industries..and approving his action in the steel dispute.

In Nevada, the scheduled 18th atomic bomb test explosion failed to come off today...due to some trouble in the wiring devices used for the test.

Senator Kefauver said today he is opposed to Senator McCarran's proposal to ban radio, television and still cameras from Senate hearings. Kefauver said:"There should be the widest possible dissemination of committee hearings.. so long as it does not discommode the witness or interfere with orderly procedure." Senator Morse of Oregon says the Mc Carran plan "would have the effect of leading us further down the road toward star chamber proceedings in Senate investigations."

The Department of Agriculture says it has filed almost 8-million dollars in claims against 131 warehousemen, in connection with shortages of government-owned commodities during the past five years.

In the Netherlands today, General Eisenhower corrected the Dutch premier who said Eisenhower "aspires to the highest office the United States can bestow." The General said he "aspires to no public office.." and will only accept out of a sense of duty. Then the General spoke to chaplains of the NATO organization. He told them: "Although I am an avowed almost fanatical Protestant, I would like to say that no one can fail to be uplfited by how the Holy Father, the Pope, has led such a fight against the Communists."

In West Germany, Socialists have forced a special meeting of the German parliament for Friday in an effort to block the allied-west German peace contract which is scheduled to be signed in Bonn on Monday.

Edward R. Murrow: May 20, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

The truce negotiations in Korea have now been in progress for about ten months. Both sides must by now have just about exhausted their vocabulary of abuse and invective. The negotiations have been conducted in secret and in public, and about three weeks ago, after prolonged secret negotiations, we announced that we had made our final, irrevocable offer. The sticking point remained the question of prisoners of war - our refusal to return those Chinese and North Korean prisoners who said they didn't want to go home. Then, thanks to a couple of generals named Dodd and Colson we handed the communists a big propaganda club, and they have been beating us with it ever since. They make no pretense of wanting to negotiate, but demand a meeting every day, which they use as a propaganda sounding-board. We are apparently unwilling to break off the talks, for fear the enemy will accuse us of refusing to continue the negotiations.

On the ground, both sides are well dug in, holding defensive positions, but in the propaganda warfare we are definitely on the defensive; and there appears to be no compelling reason why the communists should not continue these tactics indefinitely.

The communists in Malaya would also appear to be able to continue their guerilla, hit-and-run war with British forces, for a long time to come.

That so-called emergency, or undeclared war, has been going on for almost four years. They took to the jungle in June of 1948, announcing they would disrupt the economy of the country and seize power in the subsequent chaos. At that time, four years ago, the British authorities in Malaya, estimated that the actual communist gunmen, numbered between four and five thousand. Unknown thousands of Chinese in Malaya supported them, secretly, either because of racial sympathy, or because they were undeclared communists.

After four years of fighting, the British estimate of the number of active guerillas hasn't changed. They still say there are between four and five thousand. But the British authorities in Malaya say that during this four-year period, three thousand guerillas have been killed, nine hundred captured, seven hundred and twenty surrendered. (It's impossible for the British to give any accurate estimate of the number of guerillas wounded who later died in some jungle hideout.) But the figures only add up one way; they started with about five thousand men; roughly five thousand have been killed or captured; and still they have about five thousand guerillas operational. The explanation is both simple and important. In Malaya, as in French Indo-China, the communists recruit their combat replacements from among their sympathetic clansmen or secret supporters.

Communist recruiting in Malaya has always been limited by two factors: the number of weapons available for jungle combat squads; and facilities in the jungle for sheltering and feeding the gunmen.

During this same period of four years the casualty figures suffered by British security forces and the civilian population give a realistic picture of the struggle in Malaya. Guerillas at any time anywhere never stand and fight; they hit and run; and they hit at the softest targets; (that generally means civilians) And that's what has been happening in Malaya. In the last four years the British Ghurka and Malay army units have lost only about 350 killed, and about 600 wounded. The Malayan police force, which was expanded too quickly for adequate training, has been an easier mark than the regular military units. So the guerillas have hit them more often. The police have lost about a thousand men killed, and 800 wounded. The civilians, of all races in Malaya, are of course an easier mark than either the military or the police. And the communists have killed some 21 hundred civilians; 12 hundred have been wounded; and 540 civilians are listed as missing, which in this sort of vicious little war generally means they are dead.

So at the end of ten months of negotiations in Korea we find both sides stronger than they were, with the enemy on the propaganda offensive. At the end of four years of bitter jungle guerilla warfare in Malaya, the casualties on both sides are about even; but in spite of the number of guerillas killed and captured their striking force, according to British estimates, remains just about what it was four years ago.

The figures I have quoted on Malaya came from a private source, but I believe them to be entirely reliable. Those figures, plus the experience in Indo-China, plus our experience in Korea, should give pause to those who think there is any easy or quick solution to this conflict that smolders or flames all round the edges of the new Russian Empire.

CUES FOR MIDDLE COMMERCIAL ON TAPE

MURROW SHOW

MURROW: This is Ed Murrow

"I'll be back in a moment with the word for today.....now, here is our special guest, Mr. Lee Warren James, Chairman of the Trustees of the National Safety Council."

RETURN CUE:

"...aware of our responsibilities and confident of our future."

We were talking of war. And in Malaya as in Korea, it may be as Von Clausewitz once observed:"War is merely the continuation of politics by other means." ~~Whatever the case, Louis Pasteur was right when he said: "War is never a solution, a war is an aggravation."~~ And in the end, with all the sacrifice and suffering war entails, men and nations eventually are forced to agree with Emerson:"The real and lasting victories are those of peace and not of war."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Tuesday, May 20, 1952
7:45-8:00 p.m.

MURROW: ..... Now, here is our special guest, Mr. Lee Warren James, Chairman of the Trustees of the National Safety Council.

JAMES: I am here to present the National Safety Council's Public Interest Award for exceptional service to safety for 1951 to the American Oil Company. The judges for this award were especially impressed with the extent and success of the Company's "I'm Just a Steering Wheel" campaign and with its radio appeals for safety. Congratulations, President Herschel (?) C. Smith. You can be proud of the public spirit of your Company.

SMITH: Thank you, Mr. James. Our Company has been a member of the National Safety Council for twenty-five years. Coincidentally, this recognition of our safety efforts in our 1951 advertising is our twenty-fifth safety award. We're proud of it and proud that our 1951 advertising also won Freedom Foundation's first prize. To you, Mr. James, and to our listeners everywhere, we pledge American Oil Company's continued advertising support in the cause of safety and in the cause of our country. As our name implies, we are an American oil company, proud of our past, aware of our responsibilities, and confident of our future.

Ed.trans.-A.A.Cardiff (30)

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Tuesday, May 20, 1952
7:45-8:00 p.m.

MURROW: ..... Now, here is our special guest, Mr. Lee Warren James, Chairman of the Trustees of the National Safety Council.

JAMES: I am here to present the National Safety Council's Public Interest Award for exceptional service to safety for 1951 to the American Oil Company. The judges for this award were especially impressed with the extent and success of the Company's "I'm Just a Steering Wheel" campaign and with its radio appeals for safety. Congratulations, President Herschel C. Smith. You can be proud of the public spirit of your Company.

SMITH: Thank you, Mr. James. Our Company has been a member of the National Safety Council, for twenty-five years. Coincidentally, this recognition of our safety efforts in our 1951 advertising is our twenty-fifth safety award. We're proud of it and proud that our 1951 advertising also won Freedom Foundation's first prize. To you, Mr. James, and to our listeners everywhere, we pledge American Oil Company's continued advertising support in the cause of safety and in the cause of our country. As our name implies, we are an American oil company, proud of our past, aware of our responsibilities, and confident of our future.

Ed.trans.-A.A.Cardiff (30)

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY - MAY 20, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Communist prisoners of war are still making trouble in Koje Island - and in Pusan. The Army reports that some 400 women prisoners made demands on us at Koje, but quickly changed their minds. At Pusan, we definitely determined that the Koje prisoners have been using the prisoner of war hospital as a message center. We wanted to transfer some of the prisoners who work at this prison hospital. They refused and started a sit down strike. General Boatner gave them 15 minutes to appear for a conference. They didn't show up. Boatner sent our troops in, and for three hours they fought the communist prisoners, until they had taken all 150 ring-leaders we wanted and moved them away. One prisoner was killed in the fighting, 85 were injured, one of our soldiers was injured. Apparent there was no shooting.

At Panmunjom, the communist negotiators continue to use the recent events at Koje as a base for their propaganda attacks. Today, Admiral Joy, our chief negotiator, told them again, that we will not back down from our final proposal on exchanging war prisoners. Joy said today's session brought on "the most viscious, degrading propaganda" since the truce talks started ten months ago.

The President is still hopeful of an armistice in Korea. At West Point today, celebrating the 150th anniversary of the military academy, Mr. Truman said: he believes we are on the way to preserving freedom without the frightful cost of another war. He believes there may be an armistice in Korea, but he warns that we must be prepared for treachery, or another communist attack. He says that as a result of Korea the free world is infinitely better prepared to defend itself, than it was two years ago. The President says the communists failed in Korea - failed to shatter the United Nations - failed to win a cheap victory, to seize control of South Korea, or to frighten and break the will of free men. And all free countries, he said, have learned, that when they stand up and fight against aggression, when they fight for right, they will not be deserted by the United Nations. Mr. Truman said our defense program has made good progress. And he spoke of an atomic artillery piece that has been developed and tested and "will have to be reckoned with in the future." The President took the occassion of his visit to West Point to pin another oak leaf cluster - signifying a third Distinguished Service Medal - on General Ridgway. The citation praised the General's "magnificent leadership of United Nations' forces in Korea."

Mr. Truman today signed a bill that will give pay raises to the three and a half million men and women in uniform. The raises will come to four per cent for all personnel, and allowances for food and rent will go up 14 per cent. This will cost an extra 484-million dollars a year.

Defense Secretary Lovett told a Congressional committee that if the military budget is held down to 46-billions, (six billions under what the military wants), the only honest thing to do is to demobilize "a substantial part of our defense forces."

John Foster Dulles, former State Department adviser, says the President endangered the free world when he said, in a Saturday speech, that American voters are becoming frightened at the possibility of having a Republican president. Mr. Dulles says if the prospect of a Republican president scares our own voters, it should scare our allies even more, and hearten our enemies abroad.

The Senate today voted to confirm James P. McGranery as attorney general. The vote, after a seven weeks delay, was 52 to 18.

Three railroad unions today asked the White House for clairification of its plan for settling their dispute with the nation's railroads.

Secretary of Labor Tobin says if the Supreme Court rules that the President's seizure of the steel industry was illegal, Congress should pass an emergency law giving the President power to seize defense industries, and approving his action in the steel dispute.

In Nevada, the scheduled 18th atomic bomb test explosion failed to come off today, due to some trouble in the wiring devices used for the test.

Senator Kefauver said today he is opposed to Senator McCarran's proposal to ban radio, television and still cameras from Senate hearings. Kefauver said: "There should be the widest possible dissemination of committee hearings, so long as it does not discommode the witness or interfere with orderly procedure." Senator Morse of Oregon says the McCarran plan "would have the effect of leading us further down the road toward star chamber proceedings in Senate investigations."

The Department of Agriculture says it has filed almost 8-million dollars in claims against 131 warehousemen, in connection with shortages of government-owned commodities during the past five years.

In the Netherlands today, General Eisenhower corrected the Dutch premier, who said Eisenhower "aspires to the highest office the United States can bestow." The General said he "aspires to no public office," and will only accept out of a sense of duty. Then the General spoke to chaplains of the NATO organization. He told them: "Although I am an avowed, almost fanatical Protestant I would like to say that no one can fail to be uplifted by how the Holy Father, the Pope, has led such a fight against the communists."

In West Germany, Socialists have forced a special meeting of the German parliament for Friday in an effort to block the allied-west German peace contract, which is scheduled to be signed in Bonn on Monday.

The truce negotiations in Korea have now been in progress for about ten months. Both sides must by now have just about axhausted their vocabulary of abuse and invective. The negotiations have been conducted in secret, and in public, and about three weeks ago, after prolonged secret negotiations, we announced that we had made our final, irrevocable offer. The sticking point remained the question of prisoners of war, (our refusal to return those Chinese and North Korean prisoners who said they didn't want to go home). Then, thanks to a couple of generals named Dodd and Colson, we handed the communists a big propaganda club, and they have been beating us with it ever since. They make no pretense of wanting to negotiate, but demand a meeting every day, which they use as a propaganda sounding-board. We are apparently unwilling to break off the talks, for fear the enemy will accuse us of refusing to continue the negotiations.

On the ground, both sides are well dug in, holding defensive positions but in the propaganda warfare we are definitely on the defensive; and there appears to be no compelling reason why the communists should not continue these tactics indefinitely.

The communists in Malaya would also appear to be able to continue their guerilla, hit-and-run war with British forces, for a long time to come. That so-called emergency, or undeclared war, has been going on for almost four years. They took to the jungle in June of 1948, announcing they would disrupt the economy of the country and seize power in the subsequent chaos. At that time, four years ago, the British authorities in Malaya, estimated that the actual communist gunmen, numbered between four and five thousand. Unknown thousands of Chinese in Malaya supported them, secretly, either because of racial sympathy, or because they were undeclared communists.

After four years of fighting, the British estimate of the number of active guerillas hasn't changed. They still say there are between four and five thousand. But the British authorities in Malaya say that during this four-year period, three thousand guerillas have been killed, nine hundred captured, seven hundred and twenty surrendered. (It's impossible for the British to give any accurate estimate of the number of guerillas wounded who later died in some jungle hideout.) But the figures only add up one way; they started with about five thousand men; roughly five thousand have been killed or captured; and still they have about five thousand guerillas operational. The explanation is both simple and important. In Malaya, as in French Indo-China, the communists recruit their combat replacements from among their sympathetic clansmen or secret supporters. Communist recruiting in Malaya has always been limited by two factors: the number of weapons available for jungle combat squads; andfacilities in the jungle for sheltering and feeding the gunmen.

During this same period of four years, the casualty figures suffered by British security forces, and the civilian population give a realistic picture of the struggle in Malaya. Guerillas at any time anywhere never stand and fight; they hit and run; and they hit at the softest targets: (that generally means civilians). And that's what has been happening in Malaya. In the last four years, the British, Ghurka, and Malayan army units have lost only about 350 killed, and about 600 wounded. The Malayan police force, which was expanded too quickly for adequate training, has been an easier mark than the regular military units. So the guerillas have hit them more often. The police have lost about a thousand men killed, and 800 wounded. The civilians, of all races in Malaya, are of course an easier mark than either the military or the police. And the communists have killed some 21 hundred civilians; 12 hundred have been wounded; and 540 civilians are listed as missing, which in this sort of vicious little war generally means they are dead.

So at the end of ten months of negotiations in Korea, we find both sides stronger than they were, with the enemy on the propaganda offensive. At the end of four years of bitter jungle guerilla warfare in Malaya, the casualties on both sides are about even; but in spite of the number of guerillas killed and captured, their striking force, according to British estimates, remains just about what it was four years ago.

The figures I have quoted on Malaya came from a private source, but I believe them to be entirely reliable. Those figures, plus the experience in Indo-China, plus our experience in Korea, should give pause to those who think there is any easy or quick solution to this conflict that smolders or flames all round the edges of the new Russian Empire.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word for Today." Now, here is our special guest, Mr. Lee Warren James, Chairman of the Trustees of the National Safety Council."

JAMES: AWARD TO AMOCO

MURROW: We were talking of war, and in Malaya, as in Korea, it may be as Von Clausewitz once observed: "War is merely the continuation of politics by other means." And in the end, with all the sacrifice and suffering war entails, men and nations, eventually are forced to agree with Emerson: "The real and lasting victories are those of peace and not of war."

Good Night and Good Luck!

50 copies

Wednesday - May 21, 1952

This is the news:

General Ridgeway says the Russians have been building up their military strength in the Far East during the past 12 months. HE SAYS: This, and the increase of Communist strength in other Asiatic areas, is a "significant fact, that has received careful attention in Washington and at Far East headquarters in Tokyo." In a secret talk to Senators, and at a newsconference, General Ridgeway had this to say: Its significant that the Russians have replaced their propeller planes with jets in the far east..significant that they have built new airfields and [redacted] improved old ones. As for Korea: General Ridgeway says the enemy now has a greater offensive potential, than at any time in the past...if they try an offensive it will be beaten back with tremendous losses. Senator Russell quotes the General as having said in the secret meeting with Senators, that he feels we lack the strength to try to drive the Communists out of North Korea. He doesn't [redacted] advocate any ultimatum. He is not in favor of bombing Manchurian bases. The General feels that the chances are not too bright for an immediate armistice in Korea. We've recorded for you a portion of what General Ridgeway had to say about our final truce offer:

(1;10 return cue: "all of which are utter lies)

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Wednesday, May 21, 1952
7:45-8:00 P.M.

MURROW: ... We've recorded for you a portion of what General Ridgway had to say about our final truce offer.

RIDGWAY: I would like to point out the fairness and reasonableness of the package offer we have made at Panmunjom. The United Nations Command screening, made with the full knowledge and tacit agreement of the Communist negotiators, was an effort to separate as accurately as possible the prisoners-of-war who wanted to be repatriated from those who would violently resist repatriation. U.N.C. personnel doing the screening were those who knew the Chinese and Korean language, and the questioned asked determined definitely the preference of each P.O.W. The embarrassment of the Communists over the results of this screening reveals in dramatic terms the real nature of the Communist tyranny. Despite the offer of the United Nations Command to permit a rescreening of the P.O.Ws. held by it, the Communists have ignored it and have loosed a propaganda campaign of unprecedented violence even for them. The United Nations Command and the United States particularly have been accused of every imaginable crime: gas warfare, biological warfare, atrocities, and inhuman treatment of prisoners-of-war - all of which are utter lies.

MURROW: Both in his public and private meetings today, General Ridgway offered little information on the prisoner-of-war disturbances on Koje Island.

-30-

Ediphone trans./ES

Both in his public and private meetings today, General Ridgeway offered little information on the prisoner of war disturbances on Koje island. He did say: the Communists have murdered some non-Communist prisoners in our camps.. they are carrying out a reign of terror.. many are fanatics.. they have a very strong underground.. and possibly secret radio communications.

From Koje today, came word that a Chinese prisoner was killed by an allied [redacted] soldier on Saturday. The prisoner refused to be searched, sat down and began to shout. An allied soldier thought the prisoner was about to attack him..fired two shots and killed the prisoner. (This was the [redacted] fourth reported incident in five days.)

Again at Panmunjom, the Communist negotiators used the news from Koje, and the demonstration at Pusan [redacted] FOR their propaganda [redacted]. General Nam Il accuses us [redacted] OF planning to herd all prisoners into the 8th army to serve as "cannon fodder." He says the Pusan riot is proof..to him..that we murder prisoners. Admiral Joy, in his next to last session as our chief negotiator, (he's coming home to be superintendent at Annapolis.) Admiral Joy told Nam Il: he is guilty of "crass hypocrisy..his charges are designed to generate enmity and block an armistice."

The Pentagon reports that we suffered another 294 casualties in Korea last week....The total now is 108,707.

In Washington today the Senate Banking Committee voted to continue price and wage controls through next March... to continue rent controls, and allocation powers, until the end of June 1953. The committee also voted to replace the present Wage Stabilization Board with one composed entirely of public members. (no labor and no industry representatives.) The Board would also be deprived of power to recommend settlements in labor disputes. The American Federation of Labor has threatened to boycott any such board, that does not have labor representatives.

The Senate today rejected a proposed subsitute to the immigration bill. Senator Lehman, New York democrat, described the bill as one that would be "dangerous to the security of the country and its civil rights laws."

The House opened debate on foreign aid with Chairman Richards, of the Foreign Affairs Committee, saying that if the House refuses to approve almost 7-billions in aid to our allies, it may be throwing away "the best chance to avoid" another war. Richards says our European allies next year will have about four million soldiers and will produce about three and a half billion dollars worth of weapons.

A Senate committee today opened an investigation of government censorship. It called on members of the working press to file complaints against the President's recent security order.

Secretary of Agriculture Brannon today accused Congress of creating the conditions for the grain storage scandals. And Republican Senator Aiken of Vermont accused "somebody" of playing a dirty trick on farmers.. forcing the price of BRAIN down a billion dollars...in 1948.

Lillian Hellman, author of such plays as "The Childrens Hour" and "The Little Foxes", told a House committee today that she is not now a member of the Communist party..and has not been in the past two years. She refused to answer other questions because she doesn't want to bring "bad trouble" on past associates.

Here in New York today, John Garfield, the actor, died of a heart attack. He was 39 years old.

The F.B.I. says it has arrested Gloria Dale, a nightclub singer in New York, and two Rhode Island men..and charged them with the 100-thousand dollar robbery at the Quonset, Rhode Island, naval station early in March.

The anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith says a violent anti-semitic smear campaign is being directed against General Eisenhower. The League says at least 20 so-called "hate merchants" are at the same time accusing Eisenhower of being "a secret Roman Catholic."

In Paris today, the general was awarded France's highest military decoration. And all reporters were barred from NATO headquarters while he made a farewell address to secretaries, typists and others who work at headquarters. Eisenhower will turn over his command to General Ridgeway on May 30th.

Edward R. Murrow: May 21, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

President Truman stood in the White House rose garden today and said that "next to a child's mother, the greatest influence on his character and his growth into a good citizen, is his teacher." Mr. Truman paid tribute to all teachers, including his own, and said: "One of the reasons this is the greatest republic in the world has been due to the teachers, who take young minds and train them to be citizens as they should be." (The President's remarks were made in congratulating Mrs. Geraldine Jones of Santa Barbara, California, who had been selected as "Teacher of the Year".)

Mr. Truman's ~~remarks~~ words about the influence of the teacher were probably correct, but he might have expanded his remarks. He might have said that in Mississippi schoolteachers receive an average of one thousand, four hundred and sixty-two dollars per year. And that's an increase over what they had a year ago. He might have said that we are short of classrooms, short of teachers; that at least a quarter-of-a-million children are going to school in basements, rented store buildings, and other quarters not suited for school purposes. The President might have reminded us that in 1930 we were spending about 3 percent of our national income for schools. In 1932, during the depression we were spending a little more than 5 percent of our national income. And last year we were spending about 2½ percent of our national income for schools. Less in proportion than we were in 1930. This can hardly be regarded as progress.

Eager young broadcasters are frequently told that it's a mistake to use too many figures. (The listener can't hold them in his mind.) And in these days the broadcaster may confuse millions with billions. Nevertheless let us try a few more figures. In 1949 our total expenditure for public schools, including new buildings, amounted to about five billion dollars. In that same year we spent almost as much [redacted] for tobacco. We spent almost eight billion dollars for alcoholic beverages (that's about three billion more than we spent for public schools). We spent almost half as much for admission to amusements, as we did to support our public school system. Somehow we don't seem to have our priorities right. We are still operating under a system where the child who happens to be born in what might be called a "poor state" is going to get a less good education, than the child who is born in a state where revenues are higher.

Teachers, like the rest of us, work for a living. But generally more is expected of teachers than is required of the ordinary workman. There is a tendency on the part of parents to assign their responsibilities to the teacher. The teacher is expected to lead a more exemplary existence than is required of other citizens of the community. In ethics and morals the teacher must be a first-class citizen. But in terms of economics, of income, the teacher occupies a second-class position. There is a lot of evidence to indicate that teachers behave pretty much like other mortals. Communities that pay good salaries and offer good conditions of work are generally able to keep their teachers and get new ones and good ones. In communities where salaries are low and conditions unfavorable, there is a teacher shortage, both of quantity and of quality. Well prepared teachers go where the rewards and the opportunities are best.

It seems to me that the average citizen can do but little to influence or control directly many of the major issues that plague this minor planet. He doesn't know how many atom bombs we have or should have. He can't decide what the Russians are going to do. He can't measure the importance of a billion dollars more or less in the military budget. But he can recognize that we haven't got enough good schools, staffed with enough competent and well-paid teachers. About that he can do something, in the hope that his investment will pay dividends in terms of human beings better able to cope with the problems that will still be there when they grow up.

It would seem to us that the school problem is not a question of guns or butter. And no one put it more eloquently than Earl James Mc Grath when he said:"Life does not stop while we build the nation's strength. Children are born and grow up. They go to school and to college. You can not put a generation into educational cold storage and then later put them into an educational hothouse."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

WEDNESDAY - MAY 21, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

General Ridgway says the Russians have been building up their military strength in the far east druing the past 12 months. He says: this, and the increase of communist strength in other Asiatic areas, is a "significant fact that has received careful attention in Washington and at Far East headquarters in Tokyo." In a secret talk to Senators, and at a news-conference, General Ridgway had this to say: its significant that the Russians have replaced their propeller planes with jets in the Far East - significant that they have built new airfields and improved old ones. As for Korea: General Ridgway says the enemy now has a greater offensive potential, than at any time in the past..if they try an offensive, it will be beaten back with tremendous losses. Senator Russell quotes the General as having said in the secret meeting with Senators, that he feels we lack the strength to try to drive the communists out of North Korea. He doesn't advocate any ultimatum. He is not in favor of bombing Manchurian bases. The General feels that the chances are not too bright for an immediate armistice in Korea. We've recorded for you a portion of what General Ridgway had to say about our final truce offer.

RIDGWAY: I would like to point out the fairness and reasonableness of the package offer we have made at Panmunjom. The United Nations Command screening made with the full knowledge and tacit agreement of the Communist negotiators, was an effort to separate as accurately as possible the prisoners-of-war who wanted to be repatriated from those who would violently resist repatriation. U.N.C. personnel doing the screening were those who knew the Chinese and Korean language, and the questioned asked determined definitely the preference of each P.O.W. The embarrassment of the Communists over the results of this screening reveals in dramatic terms the real nature of the Communist tyranny. Despite the offer of the United Nations Command to permit a rescreening of the P.O.W.s held by it, the Communists have ignored it and have loosed a propaganda campaign of unprecedented violence even for them. The United Nations Command and the United States particularly have been accused of every imaginable crime: gas warfare, biological warfare, atrocities, and inhhman treatment of prisoners-of-war - all of which are utter lies.

MURROW: Both in his public and private meetings today, General Ridgway offered little information on the prisoner-of-war disturbances on Koje Island. He did say the Communists have murdered some non-Communists prisoners in our camps, they are carrying out a reign of terror, many are fanatics, they have a very strong underground and possibly secret radio communications.

From Koje today, came word that a Chinese prisoner was killed by an allied soldier on Saturday. The prisoner refused to be searched, sat down and began to shout. An allied soldier thought the prisoner was about to attack him, fired two shots and killed the prisoner. (This was the fourth reported incident in five days.)

Again at Panmunjom, the Communist negotiators used the news from Koje, and the demonstration at Pusan for their propaganda. General Nam Il accuses us of planning to herd all prisoners into the 8th Army to serve as "cannon fodder." He says the Pusan riot is proff - to him - that we murder prisoners. Admiral Joy, in his next to last session as our chief negotiator, (he's coming home to be superintendent at Annapolis), Admiral Joy told Nam Il he is guilty of "crass hypocrisy....his charges are designed to generate enmity and block an armistice."

The Pentagon reports that we suffered another 294 casualties in Korea last week. The total now is 108,707.

In Washington today the Senate Banking Committee voted to continue price and wage controls through next March: to continue rent controls and allocation powers until the end of June 1953. The committee also voted to replace the present Wage Stabilization Board with one composed entirely of public members: (no labor and no industry representatives). The Board would also be deprived of power to recommend settlements in labor disputes. The American Federation of Labor has threatened to boycott any such board that does not have labor representatives.

The Senate today rejected a proposed substitute to the Immigration Bill. Senator Lehman, New York democrat, described the bill as one that would be "dangerous to the security of the country and its civil rights laws."

The House opened debate on foreign aid with Chairman Richards of the Foreign Affairs Committee saying that if the House refuses to approve almost 7-billions in aid to our allies, it may be throwing away "the best chance to avoid" another war. Richards says our European allies next year will have about four million soldiers and will produce about three and a half billion dollars worth of weapons.

A Senate committee today opened an investigation of government censorship. It called on members of the working press to file complaints against the President's recent security order.

Secretary of Agriculture Brannon today accused Congress of creating the conditions for the grain storage scandals. And Republican Senator Aiken of Vermont accused "somebody" of playing a dirty trick on farmers, forcing the price of grain down a billion dollars in 1948.

Lillian Hellman, author of such plays as "The Childrens Hour" and "The Little Foxes", told a House committee today, that she is not now a member of the Communist party, and has not been in the past two years. She refused to answer other questions because she doesn't want to bring "bad trouble" on past associates.

Here in New York today, John Garfield, the actor, died of a hdart attack. He was 39 years old.

The F.B.I. says it has arrested Gloria Dale, a nightclub singer in New York, and two Rhode Island men, and charged them with the 100-thousand dollar robbery at the Quonset, Rhode Island, naval station early in March. The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai says a violent anti-semitic smear campaign is being directed against General Eisenhower. The League says at least 20 so-called "hate merchants" are at the same time accusing Eisenhower of being "a secret Roman Catholic."

In Paris today, the General was awarded France's highest military decoration. And all reporters were barred from NATO headquarters while he made a farewell address to secretaries, typists, and others who work at headquarters. Eisenhower will turn over his command to General Ridgway on May 30th.

President Truman stood in the White House rose garden today, and said that "next to a child's mother, the greatest influence on his character and his growth into a good citizen is his teacher." Mr. Truman paid tribute to all teachers, including his own, and said: "One of the reasons this is the greatest republic in the world has been due to the teachers, who take young minds and train them to be citizens as they should be." (The President's remarks were made in congratulating Mrs. Geraldine Jones of Santa Barbara, California, who had been selected as "Teacher of the Year.")

Mr. Truman's words about the influence of the teacher were probably correct, but he might have expanded his remarks. He might have said that in Mississippi, schoolteachers receive an average of one thousand, four hundred and sixty-two dollars per year. And that's an increase over what they had a year ago. He might have said that we are short of classrooms, short of teachers; that at least a quarter-of-a-million children are going to school in basements, rented store buildings, and other quarters not suited for school purposes. The President might have reminded us that in 1930, we were spending about 3 percent of our national income for schools. In 1932, during the depression, we were spending a little more than 5 percent of our national income. And last year we were spending 2½ percent of our national income for schools. Less in proportion than we were in 1930. This can hardly be regarded as progress.

Eager young broadcasters are frequently told that it's a mistake to use too many figures. (The listener can't hold them in his mind.) And in these days, the broadcaster may confuse millions with billions. Nevertheless, let us try a few more figures. In 1949, our total expenditure for public schools, including new buildings, amounted to about five billion dollars. In that same year, we spent almost as much for tobacco. We spent almost eight billion dollars for alcoholic beverages; (that's about three billion more than we spent for public schools). We spent almost half as much for admission to amusements as we did to support our public school system. Somehow we don't seem to have our priorities right. We are still operating under a system where the child who happens to be born in what might be called a "poor state" is going to get a less good education, than the child who is born in a state where revenues are higher.

Teachers, like the rest of us, work for a living. But generally more is expected of teachers than is required of the ordinary workman. There is a tendency on the part of parents to assign their responsibilities to the teacher. The teacher is expected to lead a more exemplary existence than is required of other citizens of the community. In ethics and morals, the teacher must be a first-class citizen. But in terms of economics, of income, the teacher occupies a second-class position. There is a lot of evidence to indicate that teachers behave pretty much like other mortals. Communities that pay good salaries and offer good conditions of work, are generally able to keep their teachers, and get new ones and good ones. In communities where salaries are low and conditions unfavorable, there is a teacher shortage, both of quantity and of quality. Well prepared teachers go where the rewards and the opportunities are best.

It seems to me that the average citizen can do but little to influence or control directly many of the major issues that plague this minor planet. He doesn't know how many atom bombs we have or should have. He can't decide what the Russians are going to do. He can't measure the importance of a billion dollars more or less in the military budget. But he can recognize that we haven't got enough good schools, staffed with enough competent and well-paid teachers. About that he can do something, in the hope that his investment will pay dividends in terms of human beings, better able to cope with the problems that will still be there when they grow up.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: It would seem to us that the school problem is not a question of guns or butter. And no one put it more eloquently than Earl James McGrath when he said: "Life does not stop while we build the nation's strength. Children are born and grow up. They go to school and to college. You can not put a generation into educational cold storage, and then later put them into an educational hothouse."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Thursday - May 22, 1952

This is the news:

General Ridgway told a joint session of the Congress today that the Russians..with their propaganda charges that we are using germ and gas warfare in Korea..have given us "a monumental warning" of the danger to the free world. We've recorded for you an excerpt from the General's ~~address~~ speech:

(runs 2;25 ending THE DEADLY DANGER WITH WHICH IT CONFRONTS US AND THE FREE WORLD

General Ridgway also told the Congress THAT [redacted] the Japanese government is alive to the threat of Communism.. and resolved to control it. He described the overwhelming attitude of [redacted] the Japanese people towards us as one of gratitude.. hopefullness and great friendliness.

In Korea today Admiral Joy ended his long service as our chief negotiator at Panmunjom. At his final meeting he told the Communists: you are using these talks to stall , to repair your shattered forces.. there is nothing left to negotiate..the decision is in your hands.. we will not back down on our decision not to return to you war prisoners

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Thursday, May 22, 1952
7:45-8:00 P.M.

MURROW: ... We've recorded for you an excerpt from the General's speech.

RIDGWAY: For more than ten months a group of men representative of the United Nations Command, and individually and collectively of as high-principled integrity, fidelity, courage, and vision as I think any group ever assembled for any similar purpose, has sought with full faith and loyalty to achieve an honorable armistice, in accordance with the instructions of competent authority. That these gentlemen have so far been unsuccessful is no slightest mark of failure, but rather, in my opinion, a monumental tribute to their strict adherence to United Nations concepts of human dignity and human rights and to their efforts in the cause of peace. Day after day, week after week, month after month, these splendid American soldiers, sailors, airmen and marines, with their colleagues of the Republic of Korea, acting on behalf of the United Nations, have striven with logic and reason, with patience and restraint and, above all, with principle and truth to overcome the blind hatred, the vituperative venom, the vicious falsehoods deliberately employed, which are all inseparable elements of the technique of Communist negotiation.

I am constrained at this point to refer again to the officially propagated allegations of Communist leaders that the United Nations Command in Korea has employed both germ and gas warfare. I wish to reiterate what I have repeatedly stated publicly, that these allegations are false in their entirety, that no element of the United Nations Command has employed either germ or gas warfare in any form at any time. (applause)

In the whole black record of ~~the~~ false propaganda, these charges should stand out as a monumental warning to the American people and to the free world, a warning as menacing and as urgent as a forest fire bearing down upon a wooden village. The extent to which Communist leaders, worldwide, have gone in fabricating, disseminating, and persistently pursuing these false charges should impress upon the brains of those who yet fail or refuse to see the purpose of Communism the deadly danger with which it confronts us and the free world.

MURROW: General Ridgway also told the Congress that the Japanese Government is alive to the threat of Communism and resolved to control it.

-30-

Ediphone trans./ES.

who do not want to be returned.

General Van Fleet visited prisoner of war camps at Koje and Pusan. He told reporters: he believes the period of violence is ended.. doesn't think there will be any more trouble.. feels that in a few days "we'll command these camps, as everyone would like to see them commanded." But General Boatner, the Koje commander, appears not so optimistic. He told reporters: we cannot get into the compounds on Koje.. we can't take a roll call, don't know how many prisoners we have, or how many have escaped. On Koje, the visiting Van Fleet saw Communist guards inside the prison..presumably on duty to prevent non-Communists from escaping. He saw them drilling and marching.. and waving Korean and Chinese flags. On Pusan he saw a hospital that the prisoners had controlled for one month..refusing to permit any U.N. personnel to enter. And He saw the way they destroyed valuable equipment.

Again today our planes.. air force, navy and Marines, with help from the Australians..attacked a big Communist supply center near Pyongyang. We report 117 buildings destroyed.. 84 damaged.

In Washington, the Senate passed the McCarran immigration bill, by voice vote after nine days of bitter debate.

[redacted] AND the House voted tentatively to cut another 615-million dollars from the foreign aid bill. That's in addition to a one-billion-dollar cut recommended by its foreign affairs committee. The reduction was sponsored by Representative Vorys, Ohio Republican.

The President said today that nobody..neither Congress nor the courts.. can take away from the President the power to seize an industry in an emergency. [redacted] But at the same news conference, Mr. Truman acknowledged that if the Supreme Court rules that his seizure of the steel industry was illegal..he'll return the mills to their owners.. and see what happens then. [redacted] Mr. Truman made it clear that he does not expect the court to declare the steel seizure illegal.. he doesn't believe the question of the Constiutionality of his act is before the court.

The President also told reporters that he would be happy to campaign for any of the announced Democratic presidential candidates. He denied a report that he "is not very enthusiastic" about Senator [redacted] Kefauver's candidacy.

The Government reported today that its consumer price index went up about one-half per cent from the middle to March to the Middle of April. The index is now just under the all-time high of Last January. The latest increase was due to sharp increases in the prices of fresh fruit and vegetables.

Republican Senator Kem of Missouri today accused Secretary of Agriculture Brannon of making "irresponsible and utterly unfounded statements" about Kem. The Senator objected to the Secretary's having said that Kem voted against nearly everything the farmers need. Secretary Brannon said he intends to repeat the statement about Kem (who is up for re-election) - "and he intends to document it." [redacted]

[redacted]

In Germany, an army court martial today sentenced 19-year-old

Private John Vinault to death for the murder of two Germans. Vinault, who comes from Goff Falls, New Hampshire, is believed to be the first American sentenced to death for killing a German, since the end of World War Two. The sentence must be reviewed by higher military authority and the President.

EDWARD R. MURROW: May 22, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

The fire hoses are being readied, around the Parliament building in the West German capital of Bonn. Police riot squads are moving in to support the regular police, for on Monday the Peace Contract, which gives West Germany virtual independence, and links her to the western world in a military alliance, is due to be signed, and there may be trouble. Acheson, Eden and Schumann will be on hand for the signing.

The Prime Minister of the eastern, communist, zone of Germany, said today "the Peace Contract places Germany in the path of a civil war, and a new world war. Decisions must be taken as to what form the fight will take"

Kurt Schumacher, leader of the Socialist Opposition Party in Western Germany, says the treaty deadlocks the whole German question. The re-armament of western Germany will not change the military lineup, because however many divisions are raised in western Germany, the communists in the east will simply form an equal number of new divisions, to maintain their ratio of armed superiority. Schumacher deplores what he calls the "wave of anti-Americanism sweeping Europe", but adds that Germany doesn't want to be an American satellite. And he says that any German who approves the separate peace treaty with the western allies, no longer has the right to call himself a German.

The Russians have said loud and long that they will never tolerate the re-arming of West Germany. The best opinion in Washington seems to be that they will not go to war to prevent it, but the situation being created in Germany has an ominous resemblance to the one that existed in Korea before the North Korean attack.

In India today Prime Minister Nehru launched an unusually bitter attack against Indian communists. He said: "India will never pay the price the Soviet Union and China have paid to achieve progress." He doubted that the leaders of the Russian people would pay the price if they had the chance to do it all over again. Talking about the international situation Nehru said: "Cold war leads to a shooting war; and almost as bad, it coarsens and degrades humanity." The Indian Prime Minister can't understand those people who think they can destroy communism by war. "War" he said, "leads only to overall, large-scale, wholesale destruction and anarchy." Referring to the tactics of violence used by the Indian communists he said: "This only results in disruption and civil war, which is worse than international war." And he said: "It only ends in ultimate victory of counter-revolutionary, reactionary forces.

The Indian Prime Minister has not always agreed with American policy, and has been severely attacked here as an appeaser, (too soft towards the communists.) He made his stand clear today, and it is, at least different, to hear the head of a great State talking about the coarsening and degrading of humanity, a process which is clearly discernible to anyone who bothers to look. The phrase he used was "international vulgarity." According to Prime Minister Nehru the communists are using slogans and doctrines which are completely out of date. "They are rigid, like the old bigots of religion." Nehru said: "I have refused to bow down to the bigots of any religion; and I refuse to bow down to the bigots of this new religion."

Mr. Nehru's definition of the issue, and his choice of words, are both rather more mature than many we are accustomed to hear.

What Prime Minister Nehru had to say today reminded us of something Victor Hugo wrote seventy-five years earlier: "An invasion of armies can be resisted, but an invasion of ideas can not." And it would seem that Russia's position at the moment is pretty well summed up in this observation by Alfred Adler:"It is [redacted] easier to fight for one's principles, than to live up to them."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY - MAY 22, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

General Ridgway told a joint session of the Congress today that the Russians with their propaganda charges that we are using germ and gas warfare in Korea, have given us "a monumental warning" of the danger to the free world. We've recorded for you an excerpt from the General's speech:

RIDGWAY: For more than ten months a group of men representative of the United Nations Command, and individually and collectively of as high-principled integrity, fidelity, courage, and vision as I think any group ever assembled for any similar purpose, has sought with full faith and loyalty to achieve an honorable armistice, in accordance with the instructions of competent authority. That these gentlemen have so far been unsuccessful is no slightest mark of failure, but rather, in my opinion, a monumental tribute to their strict adherence to United Nations concepts of human dignity and human rights and to their efforts in the cause of peace. Day after day, week after week, month after month, these splendid American soldiers sailors, airmen and marines, with their colleagues of the Republic of Korea, acting on behalf of the United Nations, have striven with logic and reason, with patience and restraint, and above all, with principle and truth to overcome the blind hatred the vituperative venom, the vicious falsehoods deliberately employed, which are all inseparable elements of the technique of Communist negotiations.

I am constrained at this point to refer again to the officially propagated allegations of communist leaders that the United Nations Command in Korea has employed both germ and gas warfare. I wish to reiterate what I have repeatedly stated publicly, that these allegations are false in their entirety, that no element of the United Nations Command has employed either germ or gas warfare in any form at any time.

In the whole black record of false propaganda, these charges should stand out as a monumental warning to the American people and to the free world, a warning as menacing and as urgent as a forest fire bearing down upon a wooden village. The extent to which Communist leaders, worldwide, have gone in fabricating disseminating, and persistently pursuing these false charges should impress upon the brains of those who yet fail or refuse to see the purpose of Communism the deadly danger with which it confronts us and the free world.

MURROW: General Ridgway also told the Congress that the Japanese government is alive to the threat of Communism, and resolved to control it. He described the overwhelming attitude of the Japanese people towards us, as one of gratitude, hopefullness, and great friendliness.

In Korea today, Admiral Joy ended his long service as our chief negotiator at Panmunjom. At his final meeting he told the Communists: you are using these talks to stall, to repair you shattered forces....there is nothing left to negotiate....the decision is in your hands...we will not back down on our decision not to return to you war prisoners who do not want to be returned.

General Van Fleet visited prisoner of war camps at Koje Island and Pusan. He told reporters: he believes the period of violence is ended...doesn't think there will be any more trouble...feels that in a few days "we'll command these camps as everyone would like to see them commanded." But General Boatner, the Koje commander, appears not so optimistic. He told reporters: we cannot get into the compounds on Koje....we can't take a roll call, don't know how many prisoners we have or how many have escaped. On Koje, the visiting Van Fleet saw Communist guards inside the prison, presumably on duty to prevent non-Communists from escaping. He saw them drilling and marching, and waving Korean and Chinese flags. On Pusan, he saw a hospital that the prisoners had controlled for one month, refusing to permit any U.N. personnel to enter. And he saw the way they destroyed valuable equipment.

Again today our planes - Air Force, Navy, and Marines with help from the Australians - attacked a big Communist supply center near Pyongyang. We report 117 buildings destroyed - 84 damaged.

In Washington, the Senate passed the McCarran Immigration Bill by voice vote after nine days of bitter debate.

And the House voted tentatively to cut another 615-million dollars from the Foreign Aid Bill. That's in addition to a one-billion dollar cut recommended by its foreign affairs committee. The reduction was sponsored by Representative Vorys, Ohio Republican.

The President said today that nobody - neither Congress nor the courts - can take away from the President the power to seize an industry in an emergency. But at the same news conference, Mr. Truman acknowledged that if the Supreme Court rules that his seizure of the steel industry was illegal, he'll return the mills to their owners and see what happens then. Mr. Truman made it clear that he does not expect the court to declare the steel seizure illegal; he doesn't believe the question of the Constitutionality of his act is before the court.

The President also told reporters that he would be happy to campaign for any of the announced Democratic presidential candidates. He denied a report that he "is not very enthusiastic" about Senator Kefauver's candidacy.

The Government reported today that it's consumer price index went up about one-half per cent from the middle to March to the middle of April. The index is now just under the all-time high of last January. The latest increase was due to sharp increases in the prices of fresh fruit and vegetables.

Republican Senator Kem of Missouri today accused Secretary of Agriculture Brannon of making "irresponsible and utterly unfounded statements" about Kem. The Senator objected to the Secretary's having said that Kem voted against nearly everything the farmers need. Secretary Brannon said he intends to repeat the statement about Kem, (who is up for re-election), "and he intends to document it."

In Germany, an army court martial today sentenced 19-year-old Private John Vinault to death for the murder of two Germans. Vinault, who comes from Goff Falls, New Hampshire, is believed to be the first American sentenced to death for killing a German since the end of World War Two. The sentence must be reviewed by higher military authority and the President.

The fire hoses are being readied around the Parliament building in the West German capital of Bonn. Police riot squads are moving in to support the regular police, for on Monday the Peace Contract, which gives West Germany virtual independance, and links her to the western world in a military alliance, is due to be signed, and there may be trouble, Acheson, Eden and Schumann will be on hand for the signing.

The Prime Minister of the eastern, communist zone of Germany said today the Peace Contract "places Germany in the path of a civil war, and a new world war. Decisions must be taken as to what form the fight will take."

Kurt Schumacher, leader of the Socialist Oppostion Party in Western Germany, says the treaty deadlocks the whole German question. The rearmament of western Germany will not change the military lineup, because however many divisions are raised in western Germany, the communists in the east will simply form an equal number of new divisions to maintain their ratio of armed superiority. Schumacher deplores what he calls the "wave of anti-Americanism sweeping Europe," but adds that Germany doesn't want to be an American satellite. And he says that any German who doesn't want to be an American satellite. And he says that any German who approves the separate peace treaty with the western allies no longer has the right to call himself a German.

The Russians have said loud and long that they will never tolerate the re-arming of West Germany. The best opinion in Washington seems to be that they will not go to war to prevent it, but the situation being created in Germany has an ominous resemblance to the one that existed in Korea before the North Korean attack.

In India today, Prime Minister Nehru launched an unusually bitter attack against Indian communists. He said: "India will never pay the price the Soviet Union and China have paid to achieve progress." He doubted that the leaders of the Russian people would pay the price if they had the chance to do it all over again. Talking about the international situation, Nehru said: "Cold war leads to a shooting war; and almost as bad, it coarsens and degrades humanity." The Indian Prime Minister dan't understand those people who think they can destroy communism by war. "War" he said, "leads only to overall, large-scale, wholesale destruction and anarchy." Referring to the tactics of violence used by the Indian communists he said: "This only results in disruption and civil war, which is worse than international war." And he said: "It only ends in ultimate victory of counter-revolutionary, reactionary forces."

The Indian Prime Minister has not always agreed with American policy, and has been severely attacked here as an appeaser, (too soft towards the communist He made his stand clear today, and it is at least different to hear the head of a great State talking about the coarsening and degrading of humanity, a process which is clearly discernible to anyone who bothers to look. The phrase he used was "international vulgarity". According to Prime Minister Nehru, the communists are using slogans and doctrines which are completely out of date; "They are rigid, like the old bigots of religion." Nehru said: "I have refused to bow down to the bigots of any religion; and I refuse to bow down to the bigots of this new religion."

Mr. Nehru's definition of the issue, and his choice of words, are both rather more mature than many we are accustomed to hear.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today. Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: What Prime Minister Nehru had to say today reminded us of something Victor Hugo wrote seventy-five years earlier: "An invasion of armies can be resisted, but an invasion of ideas can not." And it would seem that Russia's positio at the moment is pretty well summed up in this observation by Alfred Adler: "It is easier to fight for one's principles, than to live up to them."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Friday - May 23, 1952

This is the news:

The State Department disclosed today that ten days ago we warned our allies in Korea to be on guard against new Communist aggression in the Far East. We told them about the enemy build-up in North Korea and the enemy's capabilities for new offensive action. Only yesterday General Ridgway emphasized this warning..in his speech to the Congress. I should like to discuss this, and other developments, in a few minutes.

The Army today announced that it is punishing three generals connected with the prisoner of war incidents at Koje and Pusan. Brigadier General Dodd, who was captured by the prisoners and then released, is being demoted to his permanent grade of colonel. The army says he showed a lack of sound judgment by conferring with the prisoners at the gates to their compound..should of had them brought to his office under guard. His successor, Brigadier General Colson, also is being reduced to his permanent rank as colonel. The Army says Colsen, to secure Dodd's release, made statements to the prisoners [redacted] that permit distortion and the inference of violations in the way we handled prisoners. Brigadier General Paul F. Yount, commander of the army base section at Pusan..and as such responsible for Koje.. has been given a reprimand. He is accused of overlooking "erroneous implications"in the Colsen terms..which he approved. The Army says Yount did not know the contents of the final terms given to the prisoners. Colonels Dodd and Colson, in addition to losing $167 a month in pay and allowances, will have all of this attached to their army records.

General Clark today ordered the commanders of the prisoner camps at Koje and Pusan to meet any new Communist defiance with strong-arm methods. He wants "uncontested control" of the camps..says the prisoners' disregard of our instructions" must no longer be tolerated."

Correspondents on Koje are now permitted by the censor to tell us of another riot..that occurred one month before Colonel Dodd was captured. Four South Korean guards and three North Korean prisoners were killed...57 prisoners, six South Koreans and one American were wounded. There is no explanation of why this information was held up so long.

The Air Force says that allied planes in Korea carried out the heaviest raid of the war on Thursday and Friday. They destroyed or damaged 450 buildings at an important supply arsenal south of Pyongong. The attack went on through day and night..was called off only because of heavy rain.

At the truce talks the Communists surprisingly agreed to our proposal for a three day recess.

In Washington, the House today passed a foreign aid bill, after cutting almost one and three-quarter billions from what the Administration wanted. In addition to approving a one billion dollar cut proposed by committee, the House eliminated 615-million in European defense support, and 111-million in defense support and Point Four aid for Asia. The vote was 245 to 110.

The Big Three allied ministers are in West Germany tonight, for final talks before signing a pact with Germany on Monday. This will grant nearly full soverignty to the 48-million Germans on this side of the iron curtain. Later, the ministers will fly to Paris to approve a West European Army treaty. Under this, six nations agree to merge their armies into a single force under Nato headaurters. The pact willrun for 50 years.

Italy today recalled her military attache from Yugoslavia and ordered the Yugoslav attache in Rome to go home. The Italians object to a recent statement by a Yugoslav official who called both Italy and the Cominform countries warmongers.

The Russians today charged that Iran--in accepting American military aid--has violated a Soviet-Iranian friendship treaty. This treaty permits the Russians to send troops into Iran if foreign military forces, hostile to Russia, are on Iranian soil. The State Department says Russia is trying to intimidate Iran.. our military aid to Iran does not violate her treaty with Russia.

The President today signed two bills increasing pensions to disabled veterans. They're expected to cost the government more than four hundred million dollars a year.

Western Union officials and AF. of L. telegraphers have agreed to end a 51 day strike: if the union membership approves a new contract and if the government gives the company permission to raise its rates.

The army has returned the railroads to private ownership after technically operating them for 21 months.

A Federal Grand Jury in Washington has indicted Joseph W. Weinberg on charges of lying when he told the House un-American activities committee that he was not a Communist. Weinberg was arrested in Minneapolis. He helped develop the atomic bomb.

The American Legion says it has given Hollywood studio heads a list of entertinment people it suspects of having subversive connections. The Legion wants "checking and fact-finding."

The American Farm Bureau Federation says it will recommend to both the Democratic and Republican conventions a platform calling for the removal of wage and price controls.

Edward R. Murrow: May 23, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

There appears to be slightly more than the normal amount of confusion in the news tonight. Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn says we have lost air superiority to Russia; the margin of our atomic superiority is daily disappearing. Russia is tripling her output of Inter Continental Bombers. If the price of freedom is eating hoe cake and molasses, he's for that. Says It is outrageous that we can't supply our soldiers in Korea with adequate ammunition. Speaker Rayburn was attempting to prevent further cuts in the foreign aid program for next year. General Matt Ridgway says there is no shortage of ammunition in Korea. The only major lack out there today is jet planes. Reports of ammunition shortages are based on erroneous information.

General Ridgway further states that the communists have been forced on the defensive by the growing strength and determination of the free world. The General and the Speaker of the House are in substantial disagreement both as to facts and forecasts. General Ridgway said the enemy in Korea is capable of both germ and gas warfare, but he wasn't making any guesses as to whether they would use these weapons. Again he accused the communists of putting out an almost unbroken stream of lies. Their claims that we are using gas and germs are intended to divert world attention from their own crimes against humanity. The General was not optimistic about the outcome of the truce talks, indicating that it would be difficult for the communists to accept our formula on the exchange of prisoners of war, because this would mean admitting to the world that three-fourths of their people had to be driven across the border by bayonets."

Communists in Paris tonight started substantial rioting in anticipation of General Ridgway's arrival to take over General Eisenhower's command.

Another item that appears to reflect some confusion. Earlier in the week the President of the Philippines said this country had issued a warning of possible further communist aggression in Korea. Secretary of State Acheson said no special warning had been issued. Today the State Department said that on May 13 all the nations participating in the Korean war had been warned about the communist build-up in North Korea, and their capabilities for renewed offensive action. In this case the confusion can be isolated. We did warn our allies, as the President of the Philippines reported; and the State Department finally agreed that we had done so.

General Eisenhower said farewell today to the officers and men of his Central Sector Command. He spoke in the courtyard at Fontainebleau, once the Summer Palace of French royalty. General Eisenhower urged the assembled officers to "seek the truth," the "convictions, and the feelings and the emotions of your men". And to the enlisted men he said: "Do not be afraid to express your feelings, your convictions and your emotions to your officers." General Eisenhower said that whatever he was doing in the coming years, he would do whatever he could to support the work of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. French Marshal Alphonse Jouin made a little speech to General Eisenhower. He said: "Since we are all professional soldiers we cannot express our good wishes to you and your new undertaking." But he said his thanks for the leadership and guidance Eisenhower has given.

There was an announcement today in Detroit, regarding General Eisenhower's "new undertaking". The Mayor of Detroit joined with Republican National Committeeman ~~XXXXXX~~ Arthur Somerfield, and with the Chairman of the "Michigan for Eisenhower" group in making the announcement. The General will make two speeches in Detroit on June 14th. (One at the City Hall, and another at the Olympia Stadium.) The announcement states that June 14th is Flag Day; and it further states that the General's speeches will be "non-partisan and non-political." General Eisenhower is of course not responsible for the language used by his supporters in announcing a speaking engagement, any more than he is responsible for the fact that the Michigan Delegation to the Republican Convention hangs in the balance. General Eisenhower is now committed to make three speeches after his return; one in Abilene, Kansas, on June 4th, and these two "non-partisan, non-political" ones in Detroit. If the General's speeches are in fact non-partisan and non-political he will scarcely be following his advice to his troops when he said: "Do not be afraid to express your feelings and your convictions and your emotions."

Senator Taft's national treasurer says "The Taft campaign needs money badly. The backers of General Eisenhower appear to have more funds." As General Eisenhower remarked after a recent primary victory, this thing appears to be getting serious.

Much of the day's news is reasonably confused. But actually, times haven't changed. Many years ago, Abraham Lincoln remarked:"If we could first know where we are and whither we are tending, we could better judge what to do and how to do it." For those, seeking to put the loose ends together,Richard Sheridan once offered some good advice: "It's a pretty quarrel as it stands; you only spoil it by trying to explain it."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY - MAY 23, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news;

The State Department disclosed today that ten days ago we warned our allies in Korea to be on guard against new communist aggression in the Far East. We told them about the enemy build-up in North Korea and the enemy's capabilities for new offensive action. Only yesterday, General Ridgway emphasized this warning in his speech to the Congress. I should like to discuss this, and other developments, in a few minutes.

The Army today announced that it is punishing three generals connected with the prisoner of war incidents at Koje, and Pusan. Brigadier General Dodd, who was captured by the prisoners and then released, is being demoted to his permanent grade of colonel. The Army says he showed a lack of sound judgement by conferring with the prisoners at the gates to their compound: should have had them brought to his office under guard. His successor, Brigadier General Colson, also is being reduced to his permanent rank as colonel. The Army says Colsen, to secure Dodd's release, made statements to the prisoners that permit distortion and the inference of violations in the way we handled prisoners. Brigadier General Paul F. Yount, commander of the Army base section at Pusan - and as such responsible for Koje - has been given a reprimand. He is accused of overlooking "erroneous implications" in the Colsen terms - which he approved. The Army says Yount did not know the contents of the final terms given to the prisoners. Colonels Dodd and Colsen, in addition to losing $167 a month in pay and allowances, will have all ofthis attached to their army records.

General Clark today ordered the commanders of the prisoner camps at Koje and Pusan to meet any new communist defiance with strong-arm methods. He wants "uncontested control" of the camps; says the prisoners disregard of our instructions "must no longer be tolerated."

Correspondents on Koje are now permitted by the censor, to tell us of another riot that occurred one month before Colonel Dodd was caputred. Four South Korean guards and three North Korean prisoners were killed, 57 prisoners, six South Koreans, and one American were wounded. There is no explanation of why this information was held up so long.

The Air Force says that allied planes in Korea carried out the heaviest raid of the war on Thursday and Friday. They destroyed or damaged 450 buildings at an important supply arsenal south of Pyongong. The attack went on through day and night....was called off only because of heavy rain.

At the truce talks the communists surprisingly agreed to our proposal for a three day recess.

In Washington, the House today passed a Foreign Aid Bill after cutting almost one and three-quarter billions from what the Administration wanted. In addition to approving a one billion dollar cut proposed by committee, the House eliminated 615-million in European defense support, and 111-million in defense support and Point Four aid for Asia. The vote was 245 to 110.

The Big Three allied ministers are in West Germany tonight, for final talks before signing a pact with Germany on Monday. This will grant nearly full sovereignty to the 48-million Germans on this side of the Iron Curtain. Later, the ministers will fly to Paris to approve a West European Army treaty. Under this, six nations agree to merge their armies into a single force under NATO headquarters. The pact will run for 50 years.

Italy today recalled her military attache from Yugoslavia, and ordered the Yugoslav attache in Rome to go home. The Italians object to a recent statement by a Yugoslav official who called both Italy and the Cominform countries warmongers.

The Russians today charged that Iran - in accepting American military aid - has violated a Soviet-Iranian friendship treaty. This treaty permits the Russians to send troops into Iran if foreign military forces, hostile to Russia, are on Iranian soil. The State Department says Russia is trying to intimidate Iran; our military aid to Iran does not violate her treaty with Russia.

The President today signed two bills increasing pensions to disabled veterans. They're expected to cost the Government morethan four hundred million dollars a year.

Western Union officials and AFL telegraphers have agreed to end a 51 day strike: if the union membership approves a new contract, and if the Government gives the company permission to raise its rates.

The Army has returned the railroads to private ownership after technically operating them for 21 months.

A Federal Grand Jury in Washington has indicted Joseph W. Weinberg on charges of lying when he told the House un-American activities committee that he was not a communist. Weinberg was arrested in Minneapolis. He helped develop the atomic bomb.

The American Legion says it has given Hollywood studio heads a list of entertainment people it suspects of having subversive connections. The Legion wants "checking and fact-finding."

The American Farm Bureau Federation says it will recommend to both the Democratic and Republican conventions a platform calling for the removal of wage and price controls.

There appears to be slightly more than the normal amount of confusion in the news tonight. Speaker of the House, Sam Rayburn, says we have lost air superiority to Russia; the margin of our atomic superiority is daily disappearing. Russia is tripling her output of inter-continental bombers. If the price of freedom is eating hoe cake and molasses, he's for that. Says it is outrageous, that we can't supply our soldiers in Korea with adequate ammunition. Speaker Rayburn was attempting to prevent further cuts in the foreign aid program for next year. General Matt Ridgway says there is no shortage of ammunition in Korea. The only major lack out there today is jet planes. Reports of ammunition shortages are based on erroneous information.

General Ridgway further states that the communists have been forced on the defensive by the growing strength and determination of the free world. The General and the Speaker of the House are in substantial disagreement both as to facts and forecasts. General Ridgway said the enemy in Korea is capable of both germ and gas warfare, but he wasn't making any guesses as to whether they would use these weapons. Again he accused the communists of putting out an almost unbroken stream of lies. Their claims that we are using gas and germs are intended to divert world attention from their own crimes against humanity. The General was not optimistic about the outcome of the truce talks, indicating that it would be difficult for the communists to accept our formula on the exchange of prisoners of war, because this would mean admitting to the world, that three-fourths of their people "had to be driven across the border by bayonets."

Communists in Paris tonight started substantial rioting in anticipation of General Ridgway's arrival to take over General Eisenhower's command.

Another item that appears to reflect some confusion. Earlier in the week, the President of the Philippines said this country had issued a warning of possible further communist aggression in Korea. Secretary of State Acheson said no special warning had been issued. Today that State Department said that on May 13, all the nations participating in the Korean war had been warned about the communist build-up in North Korea, and their capabilities for renewed offensive action. In this case, the confusion can be isolated. We did warn our allies, as the President of the Philippines reported; and the State Department finally agreed that we had done so.

General Eisenhower said farewell today to the officers and men of his Central Sector Command. He spoke in the courtyard at Fontainebleau, once the Summer Palace of French royalty. General Eisenhower urged the assembled officers to "seek the truth", the "convictions, and the feelings and the emotions of your men." And to the enlisted men he said: "Do not be afraid to express your feelings your convictions and your emotions to your officers." General Eisenhower said that whatever he was doing in the coming years, he would do whatever he could to support the work of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. French Marshal Alphonse Jouin made a little speech to General Eisenhower. He said: "Since we are all professional soldiers, we cannot express our good wishes to you and your new undertaking." But he said his thanks for the leadership and guidance Eisenhower has given.

There was an announcement today in Detroit, regarding General Eisenhow "new undertaking." The Mayor of Detroit joined with Republican National Committeeman, Arthur Somerfield, and with the Chairman of the "Michigan for Eisenhower" group in making the announcement. The General will make two speeches in Detroit on June 14th. (One at the City Hall, and anohter at the Olympia Stadium.) The announcement states that June 14th is Flag Day; and it further states that the General's speeches will be "non-partisan and non-political." General Eisenhower is of course not responsible for the language used by his supporters in announcing a speaking engagement, any more than he is responsible for the fact that the Michigan Delegation to the Republican Convention hangs in the balance. General Eisenhower is now committed to make three speeches after his return; one in Abilene, Kansas, on June 4th, and these two "non-partisan, non-political" ones in Detroit. If the General's speeches are in fact non-partisan and non-political, he will scarcely be following his advice to his troops when he said: "Do not be afraid to express your feelings and your convictions and your emotions."

Senator Taft's national treasurer says "The Taft campaign needs money badly. The backers of General Eisenhower appear to have more funds." As General Eisenhower remarked after a recent primary victory, this thing appears to be getting serious.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today. Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Much of the day's news is reasonably confused, But actually, times haven't changed. Many years ago, Abrahan Lincoln remarked: "If we could first know where we are and whither we are tending, we could better judge what to do and how to do it." For those, seeking to put the loose ends together, Richard Sheridan once offered some good advice: "It's a pretty quarrel as it stands; you only spoil it by trying to explain it."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Monday - May 26, 1952

This is the news:

The Communists in East Germany have reinforced their border guard all along the East-West Germany border...in retaliation for the signing of the West German peace contract today. I should like to discuss the developments in Germany in a few minutes.

~~General Ridgeway left New York late today to fly to Paris where he will take over General Eisenhower's job. Before he left, Ridgway received a United Nations service medal and conferred with General MacArthur for an hour. He described it as a pleasant talk on personal matters and the situation in the Far East.~~

A few hours from now the truce delegations in Korea meet again..after a three day recess. The Canadian government has protested to Washington because a company of Canadians has been sent to Koje island. (the Canadians want their men to fight as a single group..in the Commonwealth Brigade.) On Koje today, General Boatner told correspondents that the prisoners of war there could have captured the island, two weeks ago. And the Army reveals that at least 115 of the prisoners have been killed by their comrades..presumably non-Communists, killed by Communists. Hospital officials say the dead men were either brutally beaten, tortured or hanged -- ..some may have committed suicide. Reports from Koje indicate that more bloodshed is expected. We're told that the Prisoners have made "Molotov cocktails" from gasoline we've sent into their compounds.. from the big steel drums, they've made weapons. We can see them breaking big rocks into smaller ones. We know they have made other weapons from barbed wire..wood.. AND knives from tin cans. We're told they have some rifles and pistols..seized from guards. An informed source on Koje says the trouble really began last September when Communist and non-Communist prisoners battled each other for five days. There were at least 15 prisoners killed then.. and another 100 injured.

In Washington today, Senator Connally opened debate on the six billion 900-million foreign aid bill by telling his colleagues: "If you want real economy..defeat this bill entirely..then you can go home, stretch yourselves before your constituents and say ' I saved seven billion dollars'..and let the world go to hell." ~~Connally asked, who knows more about military security General Eisenhower (who has warned against any substantial cut) on "some politician making speeches out in South Dakota (a reference to the campaigning Senator Taft).~~ Senator Bridges of New Hampshire, the Republican leader, asked that all "unnecessary expenditures" be taken out of the bill. He said:"We've got to get tough about this"... He proposed no specific cut.

Air Force Secretary Finletter told a Senate committee today: "Our national security is in danger", because of a reduction in air force funds, ordered by the Budget Bureau and the House. Finletter said there is "no justification" for delaying the build-up of our air strength. / The House budget cuts will make it impossible to get the desired 143 wings before the middle of 1957. / Finletter says this would be three years after the target date set by the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Munitions Board Chairman Small says we have increased our air production about three times, since the Korean war started. But the Russians are turning out planes much faster than we are.. He says we are "lagging far behind."..particularly in making jets.

The Supreme Court today failed to announce any decision on the steel dispute. / But the court ruled unanimously that New York state cannot bar a MOTION picture on the grounds that it is "sacriligious." Roberto Rosselini's "The Miracle" had been approved by state officials and was shown in this city. Seventeen months ago Francis Cardinal Spellman had a statement read in St. Patricks's church here in New York calling on Catholics to boycott the film and any theater showing it. He called it "a despicable affront to every Christian.. a mockery of our faith." The State Board of Regents then withdrew the license granted the picture. The UNANIMOUS Court ruled today that "it is not the business of [redacted] government to suppress real or imagined attacks upon a particular religious doctrine, whether they appear in publications, speeches or motion pictures."

The court also ruled 7 to one, that no Constiutional rights are violated by radio broadcasts carried by Washington, D.C., busses and street cars. At least ten other cities have broadcasts on public vehicles. The majority feels the whole matter should be decided by the transportation company, the public, and the public utilities commission. Justice Douglas, dissenting, said: "The right to be let alone is indeed the beginning of all freedom."

The President said today that he may ask the Justice Department to investigate private power companies. He told the Electric Consumers Conference that the private companies "are [redacted] ..deliberately setting out to poison the minds of people," BY CONVINCING THEM THAT [redacted] public power projects are part of a plot to "socialize the [redacted] country." He says all consumers are paying for this through higher rates.. and through taxes, because the companies charge their advertising to operational expenses for tax purposes.

Federal Judge Walter Bastian ruled today that Senator McCarthy may not use a wire recorder to take [redacted] testimony in a preliminary hearing on his libel suit against Senator Benton. Senator McCarthy had STATED THAT THIS [redacted] was "the usual practise" to use recording devices in the District of Columbia. Judge Bastian says the request [redacted] is "most unusual".. a tape recorder has never been used and he won't permit it to be used.

In Texas today, RIVAL Taft and Eisenhower forces are presenting their cases to the state's Republican executive committee. They are contesting 31 delegations. The committee's first decision went to a pro-Taft delegation. [redacted] The Eisenhower groups says it will name its own delegation if the executive committee "runs rough shod" over their delegations.

Edward R. Murrow: May 26, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

There was signed in Bonn, Germany today a document called a Peace Contract. It was signed by the United States, Great Britain, France and the West German Government. It was referred to by all concerned as "an historic document." There were no celebrations in any of the countries concerned; minor disturbances in Berlin and Munich. This agreement gives to the 48 million Germans in the Western zones almost complete independence. It leaves 18 million Germans in the Eastern zone under communist control. Seldom in history has such a solemn and binding obligation been undertaken with so little enthusiasm, and so many doubts.

Before the agreement becomes binding it must be ratified by our Congress and the Parliaments of Britain, France and Western Germany. The West hopes to get, out of this agreement, twelve German divisions for a European Army, German manpower and German productive capacity. West The/Germans will be able to handle their own foreign affairs; get back their houses and hotels that have been occupied by their conquerors. They will be subject to their own laws. The occupying forces will lose most of their privileges, and the new West German freedom will mean that the young German between 18 and 26 will face the prospect of being drafted for eighteen months of military service.

This agreement, when and if it is ratified by the Parliaments concerned, will in a real sense formalize the partition of Germany; (while no German politician can come to power without advocating the unity of his country.) The French were reluctant to make this deal; the British were not enthusiastic. Both fear that Germany once re-armed will pull out. There are unofficial reports that the United States, somehow, will guarantee that the Germans won't do that. (No one explains how one sovereign nation can guarantee what another one will or will not do.

There remains the lively possibility that either the French or German Parliaments may refuse to approve this agreement. There are signs that the Communists in West Germany may join with the Social Democrats - the second largest Party - in opposing ratification.

The Russians said today that they would give sympathy and support to all Germans who oppose the signing of the agreement. In the communist zone of Germany the propaganda chief, Gerhardt Eisler who jumped bail in this country, said that Berlin would suffer for the treaty. There would be both economic and social consequences. He said: "The Western Allies smile today; but tomorrow they will cry that the treaty backfired in their faces." Eisler said the East-West German border was endangered by the treaty, and that "protective measures" would have to be taken. He said persons affected would be compensated, which could mean that the communists are going to move people out of the border zone in order to erect fortifications.

About an hour ago the communist East German Government announced that it was strengthening the border guards between East and West Germany; that the communist guards would be reinforced. (There was no mention of Berlin in the announcement.)

It would seem to me that the West German Government and the West Allies have undertaken a major gamble in an effort to fill the power vacuum represented by Germany in the middle of Europe. We would have preferred to have made a deal with a united Germany. But that wasn't possible because the communists control the eastern part of the country. So instead of waiting and arguing some more, we decided to make an agreement with the western zone of Germany. This policy has certain advantages, particularly in the short-range view; but it involves giving the communists in the east practically a monopoly in urging and agitating for the unification of the whole country. And in the long view, the demand for unity may outweigh any paper agreement signed in Bonn today. Chancellor Adenauer's West German Government operates on a narrow margin. The French Parliament may not ratify the agreement. But if this does happen, the West Germans will be re-armed; the East Germans have already promised to create their own army - (for which they have the nucleus;) and eventually we shall have Germans facing Germans across a narrow line, just as we once had North and South Koreans facing each other. The essential difference is of course, that there are American, British and French troops in Germany, as there were not in South Korea. And a communist move against West Germany could not be isolated; it would mean a general war.

This agreement, is properly labelled "an historic decision", which means that future historians will regard it as a turning point, toward war or peace. Judged by contemporary knowledge and standards, it is the greatest gamble the Western Powers have taken since the end of the late war.

The peace contract with Germany has been signed. And it remains to be seen whether James Thompson was right when he said:"It is a vain attempt to bind the ambitious by treaties." ~~No one can foretell the end result, fair as~~ Longfellow once observed:" No action, whether fair or foul, is ever done but it leaves somewhere a record - as a blessing or a curse; and mostly in the greater weakness or greater strength of the acts which follow it."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY - MAY 26, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Communists in East Germany have reinforced their border guard all along the East-West Germany border in retaliation for the signing of the West German peace contract today. I should like to discuss the developments in Germany in a few minutes.

A few hours from now the truce delegations in Korea meet again, after a three day recess. The Canadian Government has protested to Washington because a company of Canadians has been sent to Koje Island; (the Canadians want their men to fight as a single group in the Commonwealth Brigade.) On Koje today, General Boatner told correspondents that the prisoners of war there could have captured the island two weeks ago. And the Army reveals that at least 115 of the prisoners have been killed by their comrades, presumably non-Communists killed by Communists. Hospital officials say the dead men were either brutally beaten, tortured or hanged; some may have committed suicide. Reports from Koje indicate that more bloodshed is expected. We're told that the prisoners have made "Molotov cocktails" from gasoline we've sent into their compounds; from the big steel drums they've made weapons. We can see them breaking big rocks into smaller ones. We know they have made other weapons from barbed wire, wood, and knives from tin cans. We're told they have some rifles and pistols, seized from guards. An informed source on Koje says the trouble really began last September, when Communist and non-Communist prisoners battled each other for five days. (There were at least 15 prisoners killed then, and another 100 injured.)

In Washington today, Senator Connally opened debate on the six billion 900-million foreign-aid bill by telling his colleagues: "If you want real economy, defeat this bill entirely; then you can go home, stretch yourselves before your constituents and say, 'I saved seven billion dollars', and let the world go to hell." Senator Bridges of New Hampshire, the Republican leader, asked that all

"unnecessary expenditures" be taken out of the bill. He said: "We've got to get tough about this." He proposed no specific cut.

Air Force Secretary Finletter told a Senate committee today: "Our national security is in danger," because of a reduction in air force funds ordered by the Budget Bureau and the House. Finletter said there is "no justification" for delaying the build-up of our air strength. The House budget cuts will make it impossible to get the desired 143 wings before the middle of 1957. Finletter says this would be three years after the target date set by the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Munitions Board Chairman Small says we have increased our air production about three times since the Korean war started. But the Russians are turning out planes much faster than we are. He says we are "lagging far behind", particularly in making jets.

The Supreme Court today failed to announce any decision on the steel dispute. But the Court ruled unanimously that New York state cannot bar a motion picture on the grounds that it is "sacriligious." Roberto Rosselini's "The Miracle" had been approved by state officials and was shown in this city. Seventeen months ago Francis Cardinal Spellman had a statement read in St. Patricks' church here in New York calling on Catholics to boycott the film and any theater showing it. He called it "a despicable affront to every Christian....a mockery of our faith." The unanimous Court ruled today that "it is not the business of government to suppress real or imagined attacks upon a particular religious doctrine, whether they appear in publications, speeches or motion pictures."

The Court also ruled (7 to 1) that no Constitutional rights are violated by radio broadcasts carried by Washington, D.C. busses and street cars. (At least ten other cities have broadcasts on public vehicles.) The majority feels the whole matter should be decided by the transportation company, the public, and the public utilities commission. Justice Douglas, dissenting, said: "The right to be let alone is indeed the beginning of all freedom."

The President said today that he may ask the Justice Department to investigate private power companies. He told the Electric Consumers Conference that the private companies "are deliberately setting out to poison the minds of people," by convincing them that public power projects are part of a plot to "socialize the country." He says all consumers are paying for this through higher rates and through taxes, because the companies charge their advertising to operational expenses for tax purposes.

Federal Judge Walter Bastian ruled today that Senator McCarthy may not use a wire recorder to take testimony in a preliminary hearing on his libel suit against Senator Benton. Senator McCarthy had states that this was "the usual practise", to use recording devices in the District of Columbia. Judge Bastian says the request is "most unusual"; a tape recorder has never been used, and he won't permit it to be used.

In Texas today, rival Taft and Eisenhower forces are presenting their cases to the state's Republican executive committee. They are contesting 31 delegations. The committee's first decision went to a pro-Taft delegation. The Eisenhower groups says it will name its own delegation, if the executive committee "runs rough shod" over their delegations.

There was signed in Bonn, Germany, today a document called a "Peace Contract." It was signed by the United States, Great Britain, France and the West German Government. It was referred to by all concerned as "an historic document." There were no celebrations in any of the countries concerned; minor disturbances in Berlin and Munich. This agreement gives to the 48 million Germans in the Western zones almost complete independence. It leaves 18 million Germans in the Eastern zone under communist control. Seldom in history has such a solemn and binding obligation been undertaken with so little enthusiasm, and so many doubts.

Before the agreement becomes binding, it must be ratified by our Congress, and the Parliaments of Britain, France and Western Germany. The West hopes to get, out of this agreement, twelve German divisions for a European Army, German manpower and German productive capacity. The West Germans will be able to handle their own foreign affairs; get back their houses and hotels that have been occupied by their conquerors. They will be subject to their own laws. The occupying forces will lose most of their privileges, and the new West German freedom will mean that the young German between 18 and 26 will face the prospect of being drafted for eighteen months of military service.

This agreement, when and if it is ratified by the Parliaments concerned, will in a real sense formalize the partition of Germany; (while no German politician can come to power without advocating the unity of his country.) The French were reluctant to make this deal; the British were not enthusiastic. Both fear that Germany, once re-armed, will pull out. There are unofficial reports that the United States, somehow, will guarantee that the Germans won't do that. (No one explains how one soverein nation can guarantee what another one will or will not do.)

There remains the lively possibility that either the French or German Parliaments may refuse to approve this agreement. There are signs that the Communists in West Germany may join with the Social Democrats - the second largest Party - in opposing ratification.

The Russians said today that they would give "sympathy and support to all Germans who oppose the signing of the agreement." In the Communist zone of Germany, the propaganda chief, Gerhardt Eisler, who jumped bail in this country, said that Berlin would "suffer" for the treaty. There would be both economic and social consequences. He said: "The Western Allies smile today; but tomorrow, they will cry that the treaty backfired in their faces." Eisler said the East-West German border was endangered by the treaty, and that "protective measures" would have to be taken. He said "persons affected would be compensated," which could mean that the Communists are going to move people out of the border zone, in order to erect fortifications.

About an hour ago the communist East German Government announced that it was strengthening the border guards between East and West Germany; (there was no mention of Berlin in the announcement.)

It would seem to me that the West German Government and the Western Allies have undertaken a major gamble in an effort to fill the power vacuum represented by Germany in the middle of Europe. We would have preferred to have made a deal with a united Germany. But that wasn't possible, because the Communists control the eastern part of the country. So instead of waiting and arguing some more, we decided to make an agreement with the western zone of Germany. This policy has certain advantages, particularly in the short-range view; but it involves giving the Communists in the east practically a monopoly in urging and agitating for the unification of the whole country. And in the long view, the demand for unity may outweigh any paper agreement signed in Bonn today. Chancellor Adenauer's West German Government operates on a narrow margin. The French Parliament may not ratify the agreement. But if this does happen, the West Germans will be re-armed; the east Germans have already promised to create their own army, (for which they have the nucleus); and eventuarlly we shall have Germans facing Germans across a narrow line, just as we once had North and South Koreans facing each other. The essential difference is, of course, that there are American, British, and French troops in Germany, as there were not in South Korea. And a Communist move against West Germany could not be isolated; it would mean a general war.

This agreement is properly labelled "an historic decision," which means that future historians will regard it as a turning point, toward war or peace. Judged by contemporary knowledge and standards, it is the greatest gamble the Western Powers have taken since the end of the late war.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: The peace contract with Germany has been signed, and it remains to be seen whether James Thompson was right when he said: "It is a vain attempt to bind the ambitious by treaties." As Longfellow once observed: "No action, whether fair or foul, is ever done but it leaves somewhere a record - as a blessing or a curse; and mostly in the greater weakness or greater strength of the acts which follow it."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Tuesday - May 27, 1952

This is the news:

Six west European nations today signed a treaty to pool their armed forces. It goes into effect as soon as it has been ratified by the parliemnts of France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg. Secretary of State Acheson calls this treaty "one of the most important, and far-reaching events of our lifetime." Mr. Acheson, and the British and French foreign ministers, have warned Russia that any attack on the European allies..on west Germany, or Berlin.. will be interpreted as a threat to the security of the Big Three. And the West Germany government reveals that it has signed an agreement with the allies, whereby Germany's new army will get atomic weapons and guided missiles, on exactly the same basis that they are supplied to other members of the European army. The Germans promise not to make strategic weapons, without permission from the allies.

The Russians and East Germans today took more steps to make known their objections to the peace contract West Germany has signed with the allies. The Communists have started to cut phone and telegraph service between west Berlin and west Germany. They are creating a three-mile buffer zone between the east and west zones: this will be a no-mans-land. And all Germans in the Russian zone have been told that they must have identity cards to travel or live in this zone. #

General Ridgeway arrived in Paris today and with General Eisenhower drove through the main streets of Paris. (in contempt of Communist threats to stage demonstrations against Ridgway) The General told reporters that his experience in Korea has convinced him that a sound defense against Communism can be built from a combination of many nations.

In Italy's municipal elections, Premier De Gasperi's party retained control of Rome.. the Communists appear to be holding the cities they now control in the north. And a combination of fascists and monarchists have scored important victories in six key southern cities.

In Korea, the Communists ARE threatening to step up the war unless we agree to a truce quickly. General Nam Il told our negotiators that he and his colleagues "could not sit by while seeing their fellow soldiers being slaughtered " in allied prison camps. General Harrison calls this "a pure propaganda speech." And the Chinese radio says unless we yeild on the prisoner of war issue "the alternative is continued war."

Communist guerrillas staged a quick attack on a small American camp north of Pusan..killed five Americans and a South Korean houseboy. The enemy soldiers were on a hunt for arms and ammunition.

On Koje we are now using big earth-moving machines in an effort to find out if the Communist prisoners have any tunnels leading from one compound to another...or to freedom.

In Washington today, the Senate defeated a Republican move to cut an additional one billion dollars from the 7-billion-dollar foreign aid bill. The vote was 35 to 27. Republican Senator Dworshak of Idaho charged that W. Averell Harriman, administrator of the foreign aid program, is using it to promote his campaign for the Democratic nomination for prresident.

~~Air Secretary Finletter told a Senate committee that the Administration's stretch-out of aircraft production, and House budget cuts, will leave the air force 9 thousand planes below recommended strength in 1954...when we believe the Russians will be capable of launching a strong atomic offensive.~~

3A.

Atomic Energy Commission Chairman Dean told a Senate committee today that what he called "the things" recently tested in Nevada have now been added to our arsenal. The commission has stepped up its schedule for producing atomic weapons. Dean says one of the "shots" fired at Nevada "was one of the most important shots ever fired." He didn't elaborate.

Price Stabilizer Arnall told a House committee today that prices are "very high now" and will go still higher if Congress lets controls die. He wants them continued for at least one year.

The government today increased metal allotments for civilian producers for the months of July, August and September. Manufacturers will be given 10 per cent more steel.. 15 per cent more copper and 50 per cent more aluminum than they are getting now. This could mean a big increase in the production of radio and television sets, refrigerators, and other civilian goods; although many manufacturers still have large inventories.

James P. McGranery became attorney general today. He promised vigorous prosecution of all law violators..without witch-hunts, scare-headlines, reckless charges and baseless accusations. He says there will be no value in ordering Justice Department employes to fill out a questionnaire on their finances.. as proposed by Newbold Morris when he was to be the government's "clean-up" expert.

In Texas today both the Republican and Democratic state conventions split [redacted]--the two conventions into four. Taft supporters took charge of the Republican convention and this led to a walkout by Eisenhower supporters. And when Governor Shivers started to run things at the Democratic convention, the so-called "loyalists"..friendly to the Truman administration, walked out to name their own Chicago delegates.

The Connecticut Republican convention today elected 22 delegates to Chicago..20 are for Eisenhower,, the other two are "uncommitted", but favor the general.

Edward R. Murrow: May 27, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

Tonight we bring you a report from South Africa, under rather unusual circumstances. # Prime Minister Malan pushed through the South African Parliament a Bill denying the right to vote to some fifty thousand half-castes. / The South African Supreme Court ruled that it was unconstitutional. The Prime Minister defied the Court, and proposed a law which would give absolute power to his own Party, the Nationalist Party, which controls the Parliament. / Tension has been mounting for weeks in South Africa, and sober men speak of the possibility of civil war. There has been organized a Torch Commando, composed of war veterans, to oppose Prime Minister Malan's unconstitutional procedure.

A couple of weeks ago I received a letter from a friend in South Africa, who had served with considerable distinction in the British Forces during the late war. I cabled asking if he could do a brief recording. It has only recently arrived. # He explained that the delay was occasioned by the fact that in the great city where he lives, he could find only one recording outfit prepared to do the job. # This former officer is a member of the Torch Commando, and of the Opposition United Party, so he speaks as a partisan - and he speaks anonymously, because he believes it to be necessary in a country where his telephone and his mails are not secure. Here he is.

TAPE: RETURN CUE: "...will take on something of the shape of the old vigilantes in America."

We presented that ~~report~~ Recording by a member of the South African Torch Commando, anonymously, because he felt it to be of the utmost importance that his name not be divulged. I am unable to vouch for the detailed accuracy of his report, (for I have not been in South Africa.) But I knew this man during the war, in situations that were as critical or desperate, as the one that confronts him now. And in those days he was a calm and courageous individual, not given to exaggeration or hysteria. Facts available from other sources indicate that his report of the gravity of the situation in South Africa is not exaggerated.

The report that we heard from South Africa has all the ominous undertones that accompany a situation where man sets himself above the law. ~~The King of Sparta once remarked wisely that "laws should have authority over men, not men over laws."~~ ~~For~~ As Ovid pointed out "Laws were made that the stronger might not in all things have his way."// South Africa is a long distance from here. But the Roman Terence - summed it up when he said:"I am a man. And nothing that concerns mankind is alien to me."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

CBS RADIO DIVISION

Edward R. Murrow

Tuesday, May 27, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 P.M.

MURROW: ... A couple of weeks ago, I received a letter from a friend in South Africa, who had served with considerable distinction in the British forces during the late war. I cabled him, asking if he could do a brief recording. It has only recently arrived. He explained that thedelay was occasioned by the fact that in the greatcity where he lives, he could find only one recording outfit prepared to do the job.

This former officer is a member of the Torch Commando and of the opposition, United Party. So, of course, he speaks as a partisan. And, he speaks anonymously, because he believes it to be necessary in a country where his telephone and his mails are not secure. Here he is.

VOICE: I'm getting a friend to take this disk up to Rhodesia, or England, to air mail it from there, as it would almost certainly be prevented from leaving this country.

The present crisis in South Africa is occasioned by a perfectly straight issue:'Is the rule of law to be maintained or the anarchy of a fascist dictatorship set up?' Since coming to power, in 1948, Dr. Malan and his nationalist government have followed exactly in the footsteps of their political messiah, Adolf Hitler. They have deviated in no way whatsoever from the Hitler technique and have now reached the point where they would overthrow the Supreme Court, just as Hitler did himself.

Imbued with a hatred of anything British, or even democratic, these men will stick at nothing to impose their will on the country. But, perhaps, their greatest fault is that they have learned nothing from history, even quite recent history. They do not realize that the peoples of the democracies today have learned that appeasement doesn't pay, and the ...(unintelligible)/white population of South Africa is completely determined that there shall be no fascist dictatorship set up in this country.

The democratic and freedom-loving people of South Africa, who are opposed to Malan and his nationalists, have now formed a united front. This is composed of the united party, which was led until his death by General Smuts, the Labor party, and the war veterans' Torch Commando, under its young, heroic leader, Sala Malan, who has said that he is ashamed to have the same name as the prime minister.

It was on this very constitutional issue, whether the colored voters - the half-castes - in this country, should be removed from the voters' row, that the Torch Commando came into existence. In attempting to do this, Malan (indistinct) broke the given word of the white man, and attempted to destroy one of the entrenched clauses of the constitution.

The war veterans, those men who for 6-long years voluntarily went north to fight precisely the same kind of tyranny as the present government is trying to impose, came out into the streets in the thousands to support the constitution against the nationalist government.

Now that the Supreme Court has ruled against him, Dr. Malan intends to create a higher court, which will in fact merely toady to his own wishes.

Last week, Malan and his cabinet gave one of the most shameful displays of public cowardice by moving large numbers of police to Capetown, to protect them and their homes. They are frightened men. But even so, they will attempt to go through with their declared intentions, because they know if they are defeated on this issue that the nationalists ~~of the~~ as a political party are through.

There is an atmosphere of growing tension throughout South Africa Business is almost at a standstill and the Minister of Economic Affairs has even refused to see representatives of the chambers of commerce.

There can be no question as to the mounting anger of the people. And Malan and Co. will be well advised to take heed of this. No one may prophesy with any accuracy as to when the flash-point will come or what precisely it will be. Only one thing is certain, that the democratic parties and the war veterans' Torch Comando are not going to back down. And, if ~~Amakam~~ Malan and co. continue as they proclaim, a headon collision is inevitable. The price of freedom is eternal vigilance. Andthe time may soon come when that same vigilance will take on something of the shape of the old vigilantes in America.

MURROW: We presented that recording by a member of the South African Torch Commando, anonymously, because he felt it tobe of the utmost importanc that his name not be divulged. I am, of course, unable to vouch for the detailed accuracy of his report, for I have not been in South Africa.

(30)

Wednesday - May 28, 1952

This is the news:

Winston Churchill says American military authorities have informed him that the situation in Korea is "very grave." Mr. Churchill, and his defense minister, Field Marshal Lord Alexander, gave this report to Parliament today: — There is no evidence of any imminent Communist attack. But since the peace talks started, the enemy has nearly doubled his strength. He now has nearly one million men..mostly Chinese. If they attack, they have the stuff to maintain pressure on us for some time. We are confident that we can hold any violent offensive. The Communists are said to have built up all their units..brought in a great deal of armor and artillery. We believe they now have more than 500 tanks and self-propelled guns. We know they have increased their anti-tank guns, anti-aircraft guns, heavy mortars, and rocket launchers in Korea. They now have 18-hundred airplanes..in Manchuria--compared with one thousand in July.

This report on Korea was made [redacted] as North Korean General Nam Il again warned our truce negotiators..in almost the same words he used yesterday..that the Communists would not sit idly by wheile we mistreat their prisoners.... Again, we called this statement "pure propaganda."

The Pentagon reports today, that in the past week's fighting, we suffered another 270 casualties.. The total casualty list is now just under 109-thousand.

On Koje island, Major General Bryan..deputy chief of staff to General Clark..says the situation is still "touchy, but we've got it in hand." The General indicates that when we feel we are ready, we will move into the prisoner of war compounds and restore order.

Senator Bridges wants an investigation..to determine whether General Ridgeway, before he left Tokyo, should share in the blame for what's been going on at Koje.

Ridgeway is now in Paris. And today the Communists there staged a riot directed against the man they call "General Plague"..(a reference to enemy charges that we have been using germ warfare in Korea) The Communists--armed with guns, hatchets, knives and clubs--fought with Paris police. At least 40 of the policemen were injured. [redacted] C.B.S. Radio Correspondent Paul Niven reports from Paris that dozens of policemen and Communists exchanged gunfire. But there is no report on any deaths.

The police arrested more than 600 demonstrators. Among them was Jacques Duclos, France's Number one Communist. He was arrested after police said they found a loaded revolver and a baclkjack in his automobile--during the riots

The American, British and French foreign ministers met in Paris today.. talked over an answer to Moscow's latest note on Germany.. and agreed that West Berlin could expect further Communist reaction to the peace contract West Germany has signed with the western allies. Today, the Communists ordered their police to shoot to kill anyone caught, without proper papers, in the new three-mile no-man's land they are setting up along the East-West border. West Germany's Chancellor Adenauer told his people by radio today: "Sooner or later Russia will seek an understanding with the West because she cannot defeat us."

At the United Nations, here in New York, the Big Three western powers have offered a [redacted] proposal to reduce the armed forces of the bigger nations. They want the American, Russian and Chinese forces to be cut to a maximum of one and half million men each. France and Britain would be permitted 800-thousand men each. Other United Nations forces would be limited to a force not larger than one per cent of their national population. We now have just over three and a half million persons in our armed forces. We estimate the Russians to have at least 4-million.

5

The Senate today approved a proposal by Democratic Senator Long of Louisiana to cut 200-million dollars from the 7-billion dollar foreign aid bill. The vote was 37 to 34. It came after the Senate had rejected earlier [redacted] moves to reduce the bill by one billion...500-million..and 400-million. [redacted]

The Senate Judiciary Committee today approved a proposed Constiutional amendment that would require the specific approval of Congress before the government could seize private property. Senator McCarran, the committee chairman, had introduced the bill on Monday. He says its designed as a safeguard against any "power mad" President who might try to destroy the liberties of the American people.

Senator McCarran's Internal Security Committee today released secret testimony saying that subversive activities in this country are directed by Iron Curtain country diplomats. Joseph Molnar, a young Czech writer, testified about parties thrown by T.H. Florin, former first secretary of the Czech embassy, for the purpose of getting information from effeminate male guests.

Interior Secretary Chapman said tonight that all government restrictions on the use of aviation gasoline will be lifted next Monday.

In Florida, Senator Russell of Georgia has won 18 to 19 delegates to the Democratic national convention. Senator Kefauver won five ~~of the delegates~~.

Senator Taft says the split among Texas Republicans was more of a party organization fight than a battle between his and General Eisenhower's supporters. He thinks the question of delegates will be "settled fairly" at Chicago. Senator Lodge, leader of the Eisenhower campaign, calls the Texas fight "political trickery."

In Pennsylvania, former Senator Joseph Grundy, a veteran Republican leader, today accepted ~~[illegible]~~ an executive position with Taft headquarters in southeastern Pennsylvania.

Edward R. Murrow: May 28, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

Mr. Bernard Baruch, who has intimate knowledge of a couple of world wars, and who has advised many Presidents, did his best to make a simple and direct case before the Senate Preparedness Committee today. He said "there can be no profits-as-usual, social-reforms-as-usual, and politic-as-usual, until we have gained the lead in the armaments race with Russia." He said the nation's top military experts, estimate that in two years time, Soviet military power will be at its peak; yet we are deliberately doing less than we can to achieve readiness by that date. Mr. Baruch contended that we are losing the armaments race with Russia, (and ~~where~~ the stake, is our very survival.)

Mr. Baruch figures that we have wasted somewhere around twenty billion dollars as a result of letting prices get out of hand. He blames the Administration for not enforcing controls voted by Congress; said everybody had an "escalator". Mr. Baruch wants a reserve of weapons and ammunition, rather than plans on drawing boards. Asked whether he would increase taxes to pay for the Defense Program, Mr. Baruch said he favored "taxes higher than a cat's back;" and he insisted that adequate controls are the key to the economic picture.

Almost as though to emphasize Mr. Baruch's point, the Government tonight told about 350 thousand retail grocers, that they could increase their prices about a penny each on hundreds of food items. George L. Mehren, of the office of Price Stabilization, said "the cost of living is as high or higher than it ever was in the history of mankind."

As Mr. Baruch said, it seems that everyone has an escalator. But even the newest and best and most chromium-plated escalator, must sometime reach the top and start down.

Twice in recent months President Truman has tried to provide an escalator of hope for countries controlled by Russia. Back in March he told a group of Czecho-Slovaks that their country would again be free, and that he was doing everything he possibly could to help that time to arrive as promptly as possible. Today he said Russia was guilty of outrageous deportations and kidnappings in Rumania; & that "eventually she is going to have to pay for it". Mr. Truman told a Rumanian delegation: "If I can continue our program, which I inaugurated, you are going to be a free country before you pass on to the next world".

These two statements about the liberation and freedom of Czechoslovakia and Rumania, raise a fundamental question about our foreign policy.

And the President makes foreign policy. # How are these countries to be liberated? Is it expected that the Russians eventually will decide that this was not a nice thing they did to their neighbors, and go home? Is is expected that the Czechs and Rumanians will sometime rush to the barricades, and with no outside help fight their own way to freedom and liberty? The possibility of that sort of action was eliminated by machine guns, tanks and aircraft. # Or is it expected that at some time we shall use military force to throw the Russians out of what would be left of Rumania and Czechoslovakia? If that is our ultimate purpose, then our European allies just wouldn't be interested in participating in the venture, for in the process they would be badly mauled if not destroyed.

Having some slight knowledge of these two countries I would think that the President's casual comments would arouse false hopes of early liberation from communist domination, and would produce a deepening cynicism and disillusionment when those hopes did not materialize. However much we may desire the independence of the satellite countries in eastern Europe - no matter how deep and sincere our sympathy may be for those citizens who are subjected to the barbarism of communist practise - it serves no useful purpose to promise them freedom and independence in the foreseeable future, unless we have a method and a means to bring it about. Such statements can scarcely intimidate our enemy, or cause him to withdraw. They provide him with useful propaganda material, regarding our ultimate belligerent intentions; and they serve to create hopes that cannot be realized in the hearts of those who long for the return of freedom. (Words can sustain hope for only a limited time.) It would perhaps be the part of statesmanship, to reserve such words, such encouragement and such promises, until such time - (if it ever comes) - when there is some possibility of achieving the results promised.

Mr. Baruch's testimony today brings to mind another observation he once made: "If you will give the American people an opportunity to function, not by fear nor yet by favor, and let every segment of society feel that it is not disfavored to the advantage of another, in a few months you'll see an amazing change." But probably it's as Josiah Stamp concluded:"It's easy to dodge our responsibilities, not so easy to dodge the consequences of dodging our responsibilities."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Thursday - May 29, 1952

This is the news:

The French government TODAY accused Jacques Duclos, France's top Communist, of acting against the internal security of France. Duclos was arrested during yesterday's anti-ridgeway riot. Today, in Berlin, East German Communists tried to invade the American sector of the city. I'd like to discuss these demonstrations, and a new incident on Koje island, in a few minutes.

The President today asked Congress for almost three and a third billion dollars, for our atomic energy program. About 150-million of it, would be spent for new electric power plants..to be built by T.V.A., for atomic energy purposes. The rest would go to what the President calls "increasing our leadership" in the atomic arms race with the Russians. The President told Congress that we must step up our production of atomic weapons "to buttress the security of this country, and of the free world. Not to do so invites disaster."

The President also revealed that he will speak at New London, Connecticut, two weeks from tomorrow, when he lays the keel for this country's first atomic-powered submarine.

Mr. Truman today vetoed the tidelands oil bill.. IT WOULD HAVE GIVEN coastal states ownership of oil-rich lands beneath the marginal seas. (within the three-mile limit) Mr. Truman said: "I see no reason for the federal government to make an outright gift, for the benefit of a few coastal states, of property interests worth billions of dollars..interests which now belong to 155-million people." He added: "I do not see how any President could fail to oppose it." Supporters of the President say the veto will be sustained in the Senate, even if the House over-rides it.

Mr. Truman also let the Senate know that he is opposed to a committee plan to make the Wage Stabilization Board an all-public body.. (remove from it the labor and management members) He said, too, if the board is stripped of its power to recommend settlements in labor disputes, it will mean the encouragement of strikes and lockouts.

Today the Senate defeated a Republican move to let all wage and price controls die at the end of this month when the present law expires. The vote was 52 to 18..with 16 Republicans and two Democrats--Ellendar of Louisiana and Gilette of Iowa voting to end controls. The measure was proposed by Republiccan Senator Dirksen of Illinois who said controls are stifling production and amount to "insanity."

General Eisenhower TODAY said goodbye to 427 officers who make up the supreme allied command in Europe. He is due in Washington Sunday afternoon. The President says he expects to see the General immediately after he arrives in Washington.. and at least once more before Eisenhower leaves next Tuesday for a speech in Abilene, Kansas.

Mr. Truman told reporters he still is not ready to announce his candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination. Vice President Barkley said today that if the Democratic convention choses him as its presidential candidate ..he would accept. Mr. Barkley, who is 74, has been endorsed by Kentucky's Democrats. # Senator Russell... another of the six Democratic candidates for the nomination..today announced that Democratic Senator Johnson of Colorado would be his national campaign manager. # Senator Kerr, another candidate, told a Los Angeles audience that if Lincoln were alive today the "Republican party would denounce him as a socialist." # And Republican Senator Young of North Dakota..who supports Senator Taft for the Republican nomination.. said that party fights such as that which occurred in Texas this week are "very bad..and could hurt Republican chances if the differences are not patched up."

Defense Production Chief Manly Fleischman told his final news conference today that we will catch up with Russia's production of jet planes..and build more than they are building..next year. Flieshchman says: "We are on the eve of major production of military goods."

General Nathan F. Twining, the acting chief of staff of the air force, told a Senate committee today: Russia has twice as many combat planes as we have... the growing Soviet power "poses the most ominous threat this country has ever known." The general was arguing for a restoration of cuts made in air force appropriations by the House of Representatives. He said:" The Soviet union's atomic stockpile, according to recent estimates, will soon reach a level sufficient to arm a surprise attack." General Twining said unless we could effectively oppose and counter such an attack it would seriously cripple our war-making capacity.

Admiral DeWitt C. Ramsey, the president of the aircraft industries association, says we might have saved up to three billion dollars since the Korean war started, if there had been a five-year plan for procuring aircraft.

Two former Communists..Whittaker Chambers and Elizabeth Bentley..told a Senate committee today: it must be assumed that Communist agents are still working for this government..looking for secrets./Miss Bentley says its obvious that enemy agents are working inside the government. Chambers says it would be childish to assume that there are no Communist agents in the government. Both withesses say they have no personal knowledge of Communist spies on the federal payroll.

The General Assembly of the Prebysterian Church in the U.S.A. today urged its two million members to resist a nation-wide trend toward "authoritarianism and thought-control."/The Assembly said racial discrimination.. unfair loyalty tests based on "a BLINDING fear of subversive forces" are threats to the whole structure of "freedom and equality in America."

Edward R. Murrow: May 29, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

Today's news provides an unusually clear example of communist tactics - the manner methods by which Moscow can produce crisis and discontent in foreign lands, as though striking great discords on a piano. In West Berlin there was serious rioting, as six to ten thousand communist youths attempted to invade the American sector. The police swung clubs and used fire hoses; arrested sixty. Anthony Eden, the British Foreign Secretary, made a speech in Berlin saying the United States, Britain and France would regard an attack upon Berlin as an attack upon themselves.

The East German communists began searching passengers coming into their zone from the West. Telephone lines between East and West Germany have been re-routed through Leipzig, where the phones can be tapped.

In France, Jacques Duclos, the number one communist leader, has been jailed on charges of "acting against the internal security of France." The communist controlled Confederation of Labor - two million members - called a nationwide strike, as a demonstration, demanding the freeing of Duclos. They say they are striking "in the defense of peace, bread and liberty." Police say they found a gun in Duclos' car; he was directing yesterday's rioting; had a special radio, carrier pigeons and a briefcase full of important documents. # The editor of the leading communist newspaper in Paris has been thrown into jail for inciting riots. In Bordeaux about five hundred communists staged a noisy demonstration today, throwing stones at automobiles and streetcars.

A spokesman for the French Government says France wants Britain and this country to pledge to replace, with their own troops, the forces of any country, (by which they mean Germany,) that pulls out of the European Army. France also wants an assurance that this country will place 485 million dollars' worth of orders with French industry this year.

In Korea the communists beat back a United Nations raid with an unusually heavy artillery barrage, more than five times their normal rate of fire, more than seven thousand rounds. # In the truce negotiations we want a recess; the communists want a daily meeting, and their ~~XXXX~~ spokesman advises us to "pack up such words as "final" and "irrevocable" which are not worth a penny."

In South Korea President Syngman Rhee says the communists are smuggling in money; he's going to continue martial law; he is in conflict with the South Korean Assembly, says some of its members are engaged in a communist plot. United Nations spokesmen say this is all eyewash; asked him to lift his decree establishing martial law. Pres Rhee says he won't do it.

On Koje we used ~~XXXXXX~~ bayonets and teargas to put down another riot. The communist prisoners wanted General Boatner to meet with them; he refused. The official report says that two hours after the rioting, which was apparently put down by British and American troops, a rifle was accidentally discharged during the changing of the guard, killed one prisoner and wounded another.

All these events happened without a single Russian being hit over the head with a billy club, doused with a fire hose or prodded with a bayonet. The increasing pressure on Berlin is of course designed to make the West Germans think twice before ratifying their agreement with the Western Powers. The demonstration and the strikes in France are not an effort to overthrow the government, but rather to create disillusionment and despair, to frighten the Europeans out of attempting to re-arm themselves, and to create in this country the impression that there is no stability in our principal continental ally, and that we may as well give up the whole effort to create a defensive alliance in Western Europe as a bad job. As a matter of fact the French have acted with unprecedented vigor in dealing with their home-grown communists. They have not flinched from the prospect of a minor civil war, which is the spectre the communists are trying to create.

The Communist High Command in Moscow, in accordance with traditional tactics is looking for martyrs, in Korea, in France and in Berlin. In their eyes any foreign communist, or an entire foreign Communist Party is expendable. Their objective is to create disunity in the West, distrust between allies, a general loss of confidence, and the threat of domestic chaos. There is nothing new in all this. It is the core of their doctrine and dogma, and their literature is full of it. These tactics are aimed not so much at the Germans, the French or the South Koreans, as at us; at the weakening of our resolution and determination. For the Russians have learned well the doctrine of Clausewitz, who said: "The first duty of a nation is to recognize its enemy". And so far as the Russians are concerned we are it.

It would seem that Russian strategy hasn't changed much through the years. A quarter of a century ago, Will Rogers said:" The Russians would rather stir up a strike than eat; they thrive on adversity; they play with the biggest and most dangerous toy in the world - liberty; but communism is one third practice and two-thirds explanation." And long before Rogers reached this conclusion, Publilius Syrus remarked:"Civil dissension is the enemy's chance."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY - MAY 29, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The French Government today accused Jacques Duclos, France's top Communist, of acting against the internal security of France. Duclos was arrested during yesterday's anti-Ridgway riot. Today, in Berlin, East-German Communists tried to invade the American sector of the city. I'd like to discuss these demonstrations and a new incident on Koje Island in a few minutes.

The President today asked Congress for almost three and a third billion dollars for our atomic energy program. About 150-million of it would be spent for new electric power plants to be built by T.V.A. for atomic energy purposes. The rest would go to what the President calls "increasing our leadership" in the atomic arms race with the Russians. The President told Congress that we must step up our production of atomic weapons "to buttress the security of this country and of the free world. Not to do so invites disaster."

The President also revealed that he will speak at New London, Connecticut, two weeks from tomorrow, when he lays the keel for this country's first atomic-powered submarine.

Mr. Truman today vetoed the tidelands oil bill; it would have given coastal states ownership of oil-rich lands beneath the marginal seas, (within the three mile limit). Mr. Truman said: "I see no reason for the Federal Government to make an outright gift, for the benefit of a few coastal states, of property interests worth billions of dollars.....interests which now belong to 155-million people." He added: "I do not see how any President could fail to oppose it." Supporters of the President say the veto will be sustained in the Senate, even if the House over-rides it.

Mr. Truman also let the Senate know that he is opposed to a committee plan to make the Wage Stabilization Board an all-public body; (remove from it the labor and management members). He said, too, if the board is stripped of its power to recommend settlements in labor disputes, it will mean the encouragement of strikes and lockouts.

Today the Senate defeated a Republican move to let all wage and price controls die at the end of this month, when the present law expires. The vote was 52 to 18 - with 16 Republicans and 2 Democrats - Ellendar of Louisiana and Gilette of Iowa voting to end controls. The measure was proposed by Republican Senator Dirksen of Illinois who said controls are stifling production and amount to "insanity."

General Eisenhower today said goodbye to 427 officers who make up the Supreme Allied Command in Europe. He is due in Washington Sunday afternoon. The President says he expects to see the General immediately after he arrives in Washington, and at least once more before Eisenhower leaves next Tuesday for a speech in Abilene, Kansas.

Mr. Truman told reporters he still is not ready to announce his candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination. Vice President Barkley said today that if the Democratic convention choses him as its presidential candidate, he would accept. Mr. Barkley, who is 74, has been endorsed by Kentucky's Democrats. Senator Russell, another of the six Democratic candidates for the nomination, today announced that Democratic Senator Johnson of Colorado would be his national campaign manager. Senator Kerr, another candidate, told a Los Angeles audience that if Lincoln were alive today, the "Republican party would denounce him as a socialist." And Republican Senator Young of North Dakota, who supports Senator Taft for the Republican nomination, said that party fights such as that which occurred in Texas this week are "very bad....and could hurt Republican chances if the differences are not patched up."

Defense Production Chief Manly Fleischman told his final news conference today, that we will catch up with Russia's production of jet planes, and build more than they are building, next year. Fleischman says: "We are on the eve of major production of military goods."

General Nathan F. Twining, the Acting Chief of Staff of the Air Force, told a Senate committee today: Russia has twice as many combat planes as we have .....the growing Soviet power "poses the most ominour threat this country has ever known." The General was arguing for a restoration of cuts made in Air Force appropriations by the House of Representatives. He said: "The Soviet Union's atomic stockpile, according to recent estimates, will soon reach a level sufficient to arm a surprise attack." General Twining said unless we could effectively oppose and counter such an attack, it would seriously cripple our war-making capacity.

Admiral DeWill C. Ramsey, the president of the Aircraft Industries Association, says we might have saved up to three billion dollars since the Korean war started, if there had been a five-year-plan for procuring aircraft.

Two former Communists, Whittaker Chambers and Elizabeth Bentley, told a Senate committee today: it must be assumed that Communist agents are still working for the Government - looking for secrets. Miss Bentley says it's obvious that enemy agents are working inside the Government. Chambers says it would be childish to assume that there are no Communist agents in the Government. Both witnesses say they have no personal knowledge of Communist spies on the federal payroll.

The General Assembly of the Prebysterian Church in the U.S.A. today urged its two million members to resist a nation-wide trend toward "authoritarianism and thought-control." The Assembly said racial discrimination - unfair loyalty tests based on "a blinding fear of subversive forces" are threats to the whole structure of "freedom and equality in America."

Today's news provides an unusually clear example of communist tactics - the manner and methods by which Moscow can produce crisis and discontent in foreign lands, as though striking great discords on a piano. In West Berlin there was serious rioting as six to ten-thousand communist youths attempted to invade the American sector. The police swung clubs and used fire hoses - arrested sixty. Anthony Eden, the British Foreign Secretary, made a speech in Berlin saying the United States, Britain and France would regard an attack upon Berlin as an attack upon themselves.

The East German Communists began searching passengers coming into their zone from the West. Telephone lines between East and West Germany have been rerouted through Leipzig, where the phones can be tapped.

In France, Jacques Duclos, the number one communist leader, has been jailed on charges of "acting against the internal security of France." The communist-controlled Confederation of Labor - two million members - called a nationwide strike, as a demonstration, demanding the freeing of Duclos. They say they are striking "in the defense of peace, bread, and liberty." Police say they found a gun in Duclos' car; he was directing yesterday's rioting; had a special radio, carrier pigeons, and a briefcase full of important documents. The editor of the leading communist newspaper in Paris has been thrown into jail for inciting riots. In Bordeaux about five hundred Communists staged a noisy demonstration today, throwing stones at automobiles and streetcars.

A spokesman for the French Government says France wants Britain and this country to pledge to replace with their own troops the forces of any country, (by which they mean Germany), that pulls out of the European Army. France also wants an assurance that this country will place 485 million dollars' worth of orders with French industry this year.

In Korea the Communists beat back a United Nations raid with an unusually heavy artillery barrage, more than five times their normal rate of fire, more than seven thousand rounds. In the truce negotiations we want a recess; the Communists want a daily meeting, and their spokesman advises us to "pack up such words as 'final' and 'irrevocable' which are not worth a penny."

In South Korea, President Syngman Rhee says the Communists are smuggling in money; he's going to continue martial law; he is in conflict with the South Korean Assembly - says some of its members are engaged in a communist plot. United Nations' spokesmen say this is all eyewash; asked him to lift his decree establishing martial law. President Rhee says he won't do it.

On Koje we used bayonets and teargas to put down another riot. The communist prisoners wanted General Boatner to meet with them; he refused. The official report says that two hours after the rioting, which was apparently put down by British and American troops, a rifle was accidentally discharged during the changing of the guard, killed one prisoner and wounded another.

All these events happened without a single Russian being hit over the head with a billy club, doused with a fire hose, or prodded with a bayonet. The increasing pressure on Berlin is of course designed to make the West Germans think twice before ratifying their agreement with the Western Powers. The demonstration and the strikes in France are not an effort to overthrow the Government, but rather to create disillusionment and despair, to frighten the Europeans out of attempting to re-arm themselves, and to create in this country the impression that there is no stability in our principal continental ally, and that we may as well give up the whole effort to create a defensive alliance in Western Europe as a bad job. As a matter of fact, the French have acted with unprecedented vigor in dealing with their home-grown Communists. They have not flinched from the prospect of a minor civil war, which is the spectre the Communists are trying to create.

The Communist High Command in Moscow, in accordance with traditional tactics, is looking for martyrs, in Korea, in France, and in Berlin. In their eyes any foreign Communist, or an entire foreign Communist Party, is expendable. Their objective is to create disunity in the West, distrust between allies, a general loss of confidence, and the threat of domestic chaos. There is nothing new in all this. It is the core of their doctrine and dogma, and their literature is full of it. These tactics are aimed not so much at the Germans, the French, or the South Koreans, as at us - at the weakening of our resolution and determination. For the Russians have learned will the doctrine of Clausewitz, who said: "The first duty of a nation is to recognize its enemy." And so far as the Russians are concerned, we are it.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today."

Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: It would seem that Russian strategy hasn't changed much through the years. A quarter of a century ago, Will Rogers said: "The Russians would rather stir up a strike than eat; they thrive on adversity; they play with the biggest and most dangerous toy in the world - liberty; but Communism is one third practice and two-thirds explanation." And long before Rogers reached this conclusion, Publilius Syrus remarked: "Civil discussion is the enemy's chance."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Friday - May 30, 1952

This is the news:

Throughout this nation, and in many foreign lands, Americans today mourned their war dead on this memorial day. In Tokyo..London..Berlin and Paris there were ceremonies.. tributes to our war dead. Outside of Paris, at the headquarters of Shape, General Eisenhower turned over his command to General Ridgeway. We've recorded for you a part of this ceremony. First, General Eisenhower:

(runs 3;25 ending.. to you and Mrs. Eisenhower, god speed and his richest blessings.)

In what may be his final news conference in Paris, General Eisenhower touched briefly on his plans for the future... I should like to discuss these plans, and a new move by Eisenhower's political headquarters in this country, in a few minutes.

The French government today accused the French Communist party of plotting to seize power. And, as a result of the arrest of Jacques Duclos, the top French Communist, the Communist-controlled Confederation of Labor again urged its members to strike.."to halt the scheme of war and misery of the Pinay government." The Soviet newspaper Pravda, says Duclos "must be immediately freed."

CBS RADIO DIVISION

E. R. MURROW

Friday, May 30, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 P.M.

MURROW: ... Outside of Paris, at the headquarters of SHAPE, General Eisenhower turned over his command to Gen.Ridgway. We've recorded for you part of this ceremony. First, General Eisenhower.

EISENHOWER: Ladies and Gentlemen! This ceremony marks the official end of my tour of duty as Supreme Commander Allied Powers Europe. As I look forward to what is to come, I want to leave with you ~~only~~ always (unintelligible) ... my utter conviction that we are on the road to success. Nothing can defeat united free people on the march. As long as our cause is just, and is as decent as is ours, we cannot be defeated. So, I say 'Go forward with deep understanding and humility in your hearts, but with high courage, because we are working for ourselves; our children; and our grandchildren - that they may live in peace and enjoy the freedoms, the decencies and the opportunities that have been so richly ours in all our (indistinct)'

And, now, General Ridgway, it is my proud duty to turn over to you the finest headquarters unit I've ever seen. And, along with it, the commandof subordinate units that are as devoted, as capable, as any that could be found in this whole free world. Yours is now the responsibility ...? the authority. My expressions of the hope ... of competence? confidence ...? your convictions ...(indistinct) The task is now yours. My congratulations. (applause)

RIDGWAY: I accept, sir, the fullresponsibilities from you (unintelligible) There is here no aggressive intent. No effort to tear down. No effort to destroy. There is but a single purpose, a creative purpose, to protect, to safeguard, to preserve, to enlarge man's dignity and liberties - his freedomto think; to work; to worship. To raise his family within decent standards of living according to the dictates of no human despot, but according to the laws of a power higher than any other on earth.

We wish to make clear that this is our intent, our resolve. We wish all people to know that with aggressive designs towards none, we are determined with all our physical, mental and spiritual strength to resist aggression against us and the peoples we serve, from whatever source this aggression may come.

To you, General and Mrs. Eisenhower, God speed and His richest blessings!

MURROW: In what may be his final news conference, in Paris, General Eisenhower touched briefly on his plans for the future.

(30)

Another Communist leader, Mrs. Anna Pauker, appears to be in trouble in Romania. The Bucharest radio says [redacted] she has been dropped from the Romanian Politburo.. and the secretariat of the party. But the broadcast does not criticize her. Some observers think she may be on the way out.

In [redacted] Berlin, the western allies have called on the Russian commander to stop interfering with west Berlin's highway traffic, railroads, telehphone and telegraph communications. We attack these "obstructive measures".. and demand the right to send allied patrols from Berlin through the Soviet zone to west Germany. [redacted]

The Communist government in East Germany today called on all Germans to prevent ratification of West Germany's peace contract with the allies. "by all means of extreme national resistance."

Secretary of State Acheson arrived back in Washington today after signing the West German contract. The President, who met him at the airport said,:"You have made a great contribution to the peace of the world and nobody appreciates it more than I do."

In Korea today, the Communist truce negotiators, took note of the accidental death of a Communist prisoner on Koje yesterday. They told our delegates: "You should not fail to see the consequences of such action." Yesterday, 15 prisoners, in a work party, attacked two American and two South Korean guards. In the fight, four North Koreans were killed, three others wounded. And north of Pusan, three North Korean civilians were killed and 13 injured in a FIGHT AMONG PRISONERS AT ANOTHER camp.

A spokesman at Koje island says we now have the prisoners there "licked, and they know it." He expects that before we seperate the prisoners into smaller compounds there will be more uprisings.

At Hyde Park, New York, today six Russian BLOC representatives walked out of memorial services at the grave of the late President Roosevelt. W. Averell Harriman was speaking..he said Russia is "a traitor to the cause of peace." At this point the Russian BLOC members of a 50-MAN United Nations DELEGATION, walked out. Mr. Harriman charged they only came to the Roosevelt grave to make propaganda. Mrs. Roosevelt said: "You would expect them to do something like that, here today."

At Indianapolis, 22-year-old Troy Ruttman of Lynwood, California, won the 500-mile speedway race. He averaged almost 129-miles an hour.. breaking the 126 mile an hour record set last year. Jim Rathman of Chicago was second..Sam Hanks of Glendale, California, third.

Edward R. Murrow: May 30, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

Today in Paris, at his last news conference, General Eisenhower said that after next Tuesday he would remove his uniform and "assume the privileges of an American citizen," by which presumably he meant the right to campaign for the Presidential nomination. The General is on the record as saying: "Under no circumstances will I ask for relief from this assignment in order to seek nomination for political office. And I shall not participate in the pre-Convention activities of others, who may have such an intention, with respect to me.

General Eisenhower said in Paris today that after his speech in Abilene, Kansas next Wednesday: "I am in the hands of my friends."

The General's friends did something today that may cause him to reflect upon the necessity for protection from his friends. An unnamed spokesman, at the Eisenhower headquarters in Washington, announced that an expense-paid invitation would be issued to Republican delegates to come and talk with the General, either in Abilene, New York or Denver. The spokesman said the delegates' expenses would be paid by the Eisenhower for President Committee. He said the General wouldn't go on any transcontinental trips, or go around shaking hands. Republican delegates could call upon him and get his views. At least two delegations have already received invitations.

This announcement of paid visits to the General stimulated Dave Ingalls, Senator Taft's campaign manager, to ask whether the Eisenhower people were going to pay the expenses of delegates to Chicago, too. Mr. Ingalls thinks this proposal comes pretty close to bribery, is only one example of the money poured into the Eisenhower campaign by Wall Street; and he wants to know who has been paying the travelling expenses for some of the people who've been making the pilgrimage to Paris. to see the General

Gale Sullivan, Senator Kefauver's manager, calls this scheme "a brazen attempt to buy support"; says it's "gross bribery, as callous and calculated a come-on as the grab and squeeze tactics of Senator Taft."

After Messrs. Ingalls and Sullivan had spoken, the Eisenhower "spokesman" said he had been "misunderstood" Wes Roberts, executive director for the Eisenhower for President headquarters in Washington, issued a statement saying: "The false and vicious charge by David Ingalls shows the same desperation and lack of good morals as the Texas Convention scandals. The Eisenhower National Headquarters is not paying any delegate's expenses. Many have expressed a desire to meet with General Eisenhower, and they have been invited to meet with him." Mr. Roberts continued: "In accordance with the usual custom their expenses will be paid, either by themselves or by local committees, clubs, or individuals."

That is the story, as it stands right now.

If all of the Republican delegates and alternates should accept an invitation to visit the General, it would involve about twenty-five hundred people, and this would mean a tidy sum in travelling expenses - even if they didn't take their families along.

That unnamed spokesman at the General's headquarters in Washington also said that the General would be making some speeches, in addition to the ones now scheduled at Abilene and Detroit. But the date and places haven't been determined. Those arranging the speeches in Detroit have said that they would be "non-political and non-partisan."

The question arises: in view of General Eisenhower's statement about no pre-Convention activity, and in view of the invitation for delegates to visit the General and get his views - the question asks itself, why those views should not be expressed in public? Perhaps they will be. That remains to be seen.

It would appear that one of the first tasks confronting the General when he returns, will be to designate a political Chief of Staff, who can speak with a combination of authority and caution. Right now it's a little difficult to tell who is running his campaign.

This Memorial Day, these words by a great American Carl Sandburg would seem appropriate:

"Freedom is everybody's job. When freedom shrieks, everybody should listen. And should the question be asked continuously, oh constantly, like this: who paid for my freedom, and what the price, and am I somehow beholden. The question is not rhetorical. It is a burning, and terrible historical question."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY - MAY 30, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Throughout this nation, and in many foreign lands, Americans today mourned their war dead on this Memorial Day. In Tokyo, London, Berlin and Paris there were ceremonies - tributes to our war dead. Outside of Paris, at the headquarters of SHAPE, General Eisenhower turned over his command to General Ridgway. We've recorded for you a part of this ceremony. First, General Eisenhower:

EISENHOWER: Ladies and Gentlemen! This ceremony marks the official end of my tour of duty as Supreme Commander Allied Powers Europe. As I look forward to what is to come, I want to leave with you always.....my utter conviction that we are on the road to success. Nothing can defeat united free people on the march. As long as our cause is just, and is as decent as is ours, we cannot be defeated. So, I say 'Go forward with deep understanding and humility in your hearts, but with high courage, because we are working for ourselves, our children and our grandchildren - that they may live in peace and enjoy the freedoms, the decencies and the opportunities that have been so richly ours in all our .....

And, now, General Ridgway, it is my proud duty to turn over to you the finest headquarters unit I've ever seen. And, along with it, the command of subordinate units that are as devoted, as capable, as any that could be found in this whole free world. Yours is now the responsibility.....the authority. My expressions of the hope.....of confidence.....your convictions..... The task is now yours, My congratulations.

RIDGWAY: I accept, sir, the full responsibilities from you..... There is here no aggressive intent. No effort to tear down. No effort to destroy. There is but a single purpose, a creative purpose, to protect, to safeguard, to preserve, to enlarge man's dignity and liberties - his freedom to think, to work, to worship. To raise his family within decent standards of living according to the dictates of no human despot, but according to the laws of a power higher than any other on earth.

We wish to make clear that this is our intent, our resolve. We wish all people to know that with aggressive designs towards none, we are determined with all our physical, mental, and spiritual strength to resist aggression against us and the peoples we serve, from whatever source this aggression may come.

To you, General and Mrs. Eisenhower, God speed, and His richest blessings

MURROW: In what may be his final news conference in Paris, General Eisenhower touched briefly on his plans for the future. I should like to discuss these plans and a new move by Eisenhower's political headquarters in this country in a few minutes.

The French Government today accused the French Communist Party of plotting to seize power. And, as a result of the arrest of Jacques Duclos, the top French Communist, the Communist-controlled Confederation of Labor again urged its members to strike, "to halt the scheme of war and misery of the Pinay Government." The Soviet newspaper, Pravda, says Duclos "must be immediately freed."

Another Communist leader, Mrs. Anna Pauker, appears to be in trouble in Romania. The Bucharest radio says she has been dropped from the Romanian Politburo, and the secretariat of the Party. But the broadcast does not criticize her. Some observers think she may be on the way out.

In Berlin, the Western Allies have called on the Russian commander to stop interfering with west Berlin's highway traffic, railroads, telephone and telegraph communications. We attack these "obstructive measures", and demand the right to send allied patrols from Berlin through the Soviet zone to West Germany.

The Communist Government in East Germany today called on all Germans to prevent ratification of West Germany's peace contract with the allies, "by all means of extreme national resistance."

Secretary of State Acheson arrived back in Washington today after signing the West German contract. The President, who met him at the airport said: "You have made a great contribution to the peace of the world, and nobody appreciates it more than I do."

In Korea today, the Communist truce negotiators, took note of the accidental death of a communist prisoner on Koje yesterday. They told our delegates: "You should not fail to see the consequences of such action." Yesterday 15 prisoners, in a work party, attacked two American and two South Korean guards. In the fight, four North Koreans were killed, three others wounded. And north of Pusan, three North Korean civilians were killed, and 13 injured in a fight among prisoners at another camp.

A spokesman at Koje Island says we now have the prisoners there "licked, and they know it." He expects that before we separate the prisoners into smaller compounds there will be more "uprisings."

At Hyde Park, New York, today six Russian-bloc representatives walked out of Memorial Services at the grave of the late President Roosevelt. W. Averell Harriman was speaking: he said Russia is "a traitor to the cause of peace." At this point the Russian-bloc members of a 50-man United Nations delegation walked out. Mr. Harriman charged they only came to the Roosevelt grave to "make propaganda." Mrs. Roosevelt said: "You would expect them to do something like that here today."

At Indianapolis, 22-year-old Troy Ruttman of Lynwood, California, won the 500-mile speedway race. He averaged almost 129-miles an hour, breaking the 126 mile an hour record set last year. Jim Ratham of Chicago was second: Sam Hanks of Glendale, California, third.

Today in Paris, at his last news conference, General Eisenhower said that after next Tuesday, he would remove his uniform and "assume the privileges oa an American citizen," by which presumably he meant the right to campaign for the Presidential nomination. The General is on the record as saying: "Under no circumstances will I ask for relief from this assignment in order to seek nomination for political office. And I shall not participate in the pre-Convention activities of others, who may have such an intention with respect to me.

General Eisenhower said in Paris today that after his speech in Abilene, Kansas, next Wednesday: "I am in the hands of my friends."

The General's friends did something today that may cause him to reflect upon the necessity for protection from his friends. An unnamed spokesman at the Eisenhower headquarters in Washington announced that an expense-paid invitation would be issued to Republican delegates to come and talk with the General, either in Abilene, New York or Denver. The spokesman said the delegates' expenses would be paid by the Eisenhower for President Committee. He said the General wouldn't go on any transcontinental trips, or go around shaking hands. Republican delegates could call upon him and get his views. At least two delegations have already received invitations.

This announcement of paid visits to the General stimulated Dave Ingalls, Senator Taft's campaign manager, to ask whether the Eisenhower people were going to pay the expenses of delegates to Chicago, too. Mr. Ingalls thinks this proposal comes pretty close to bribery, is only one example of the money poured into the Eisenhower campaign by Wall Street; and he wants to know who has been paying the travelling expenses for some of the people who've been making the pilgrimage to Paris to see the General.

Gale Sullivan, Senator Kefauver's manager, calls this scheme "a brazen attempt to buy support"; says it's "gross bribery, as callous and calculated a come-on as the grab and squeeze tactics of Senator Taft."

After Messrs. Ingalls and Sullivan had spoken, the Eisenhower "spokesman" said he had been "misunderstood." Wes Roberts, executive director for the Eisenhower of President headquarters in Washington, issued a statement saying: "The false and vicious charge by David Ingalls shows the same desperation and lack of good morals as the Texas Convention scandals. The Eisenhower National Headquarters is not paying any delegate's expenses. Many have expressed a desire to meet with General Eisenhower, and they have been invited to meet with him."

Mr. Roberts continued: "In accordance with the usual custom, their expenses will be paid, either by themselves or by local committees, clubs, or individuals."

That is the story, as it stands right now.

If all of the Republican delegates and alternates should accept an invitation to visit the General, it would involve about twenty-five hundred people, and this would mean a tidy sum in travelling expenses - even if they didn't take their families along.

That unnamed spokesman at the General's headquarters in Washington also said that the General would be making some speeches, in addition to the ones now scheduled at Abilene and Detroit. But the date and places haven't been determined. Those arranging the sppeches in Detroit have said that they would be "non-political and non-partisan."

The question arises: in view of General Eisenhower's statement about no pre-Convention activity, and in view of the invitation for delegates to visit the General and get his views - the question asks itself, why those views should not be expressed in public? Perhaps they will be. That remains to be seen.

It would appear that one of the first tasks confronting the General when he returns, will be to designate a political Chief of Staff, who can speak with a combination of authority and caution. Right now it's a little difficult to tell who is running his campaign.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: This Memorial Day, these words by a great American, Carl Sandburg, would seem appropriate: "Freedom is everybody's job. When freedom shrieks, everybody should listen. And should the question be asked continuously, oh constantly like this - who paid for my freedom, and what the price, and am I somehow beholden. The question is not rhetorical. It is a burning and terrible historical question."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Monday - June 2, 1952

This is the news:

The Supreme Court ruled today that the President's seizure of the steel mills was illegal. Within minutes after radio carried this decision across the country the C.I.O. steel workers, with union approval, started walking off their jobs. Phil Murray called for new negotiating with the industry..on the basis of the Wage Stabilization Board recommendations. The steel industry announced its ready to try to work out a fair settlement. The President ordered Commerce Secretary Sawyer to return the mills to their owners. And the government banned the shipment of steel from warehouses to manufacturers of civilian goods.

It took the members of the Supreme Court more than two and a half hours to read their decisions. Six justices ruled against the Administration. Three dissented. Seven of the nine justices read opinions of their own.

Mr. Justice Black read the majority decision. He said: the President's power to seize the steel mills must stem either from an act of Congress or from the Constiution itself. There is no law that expressely authorizes the President to take possession of property as he did in this case. Nor is there an act of Congress from which such a power can be fairly implied. Further--said Justice Black--the government doesn't claim that it acted under any specific law. And in fact, Congress specifically ruled out seizure of private property, when it was considering the Taft Hartley law. The Congress felt this would be a means of [redacted] avoiding interference with collective bargaining.

Justice Black went on to reason: if the President had the power to seize the steel industry.. [redacted]. then there must be some provision of the Constiution that gives him this power. The Administration did not claim any specific Constiutional power.. but ,it said, the President acted under implied powers..inherent powers...under the "executive power" vested in him.. under the Constiutional provision that he "faithfully execute" the laws.. under his position as "commander in chief" of the armed forces. The majority justices found that none of this gives the President the power to seize the steel industry. Here's what the Black decision has to say: The court cannot, with faithfullness to the Constiution, hold that the President, as commander in chief, can seize an industry to keep a labor [redacted] dispute from stopping production. "This,"says Mr. Justice Black," is a job for the nation's lawmakers..not for its military authorities."

As for the government's claim to implied..inherent powers, the Court said: In the framework of our Constiution the President has the power to see that laws are faithfully executed. This refutes the idea that he is to be a law-maker. The Constiution limits the President to recommending laws he thinks wise, vetoing laws he thinks bad. But the law-making power is specificially given to Congress. The Constiution leaves no doubt about this. And this law-making power is not subject to Presidential, or military supervision or control.

[redacted] To the government argument that there is precedent for seizure.. that other Presidents seized private industry, without Congressional authority...to this argument the court says: Even if true, Congress has not lost its exclusive authority to make laws.

That was the majority opinion by Justice Black. Five justices agreed with this, but felt compelled to add views of their own. If I may pick sentences from these opinions: [redacted] Justice Clark feels the President should have acted under [redacted] the Taft-Hartley law. Justie Burton feels the President [redacted] violated our principle of separation of governmental powers. Justice Frankfurter thinks its absurd to call the President a dictator...

He describes Mr. Truman as " a representative product of the sturdy democratic tradition of the Mississippi valley. [redacted] Justice Douglas says:" Today a kindly President seizes the steel industry, to effect a wage increase and keep steel in production. Tomorrow, another President might use the same power to prevent a wage increase, curb trade unionists, regiment labor as oppressively, as industry thinks it has been regimented by this seizure." And Justice Jackson says: " Men have discovered no technique for long deserving free government, except that the executive be under the law, and that the law be made by parliamentary deliberations. Such instiutions may be destined to pass away, but it is the duty of the court to be the last, not the first, to give them up."

With these six opinions, [redacted] three of the court bretheren disagree. Chief Justice Vinson spoke for himself and Justices Reed and Minton. Mr. Vinson argues this way: Those who suggest this case involves extraordinary powers should be mindful that these are extraordinary times. [redacted]

It is wrong to believe that in an emergency the President must wait for the passage of a law to cope with a threatened disaster. We must not make the President powerless at a moment when: the need for action is pressing and no one but the President is immediately capable of swift action. [redacted] The framers of the Constiution knew the real danger of Executive weakness in times of peril. They didn't create an "automaton, impotent to exercise powers at a time when the survival of the republic may be at stake." They created a government subject to law but " not left subject to inertia when vigor and initiative are required." History supports this.. supports the President's seizure.. history demonstrates that the President, here, acted in "full conformity with his duties under the constiution." [redacted] ACTED [redacted] illegal.

That is what the nine members of the Supreme Court had to say. The majority decision was greeted enthusiastically by most members of Congress. Many called for immediate use of the Taft-Hartley law. Many "rejoiced" for the country. There were a few who noted that the decision.. with the attendant walkout of the steelworkers..creates a "grave situation."

Among the industry leaders, Clarence B. Randall of Inland Steel - called the decision: a great day for America." And he added:"PHil Murray has "struck" the country again."

[redacted]

At the White House, the President [redacted] gave no indication of what the next step might be. The President could: ask Congress for a new law...use the Taft-Hartley law...try again to get both sides to a White House conference for agreement. He might offer the industry a price increase in return for agreeing to a wage increase for the union. Or he might, under developing conditions, find [redacted] a current law [redacted] under which he can make another move to seize the industry.

Today, the President had other business on hand. He asked the Senate [redacted] to ratify QUICKLY the peace contract with Western Germany.. and an amendment to the Nato charter whereby we pledge the west Germans military support if they are attacked. He said prompt ratification would be "a significant step towards peace and security in Europe and the whole free world."

Mr. Truman told his Conference on Industrial Safety that he wants the House to approve the mine safety bill. He said: "The power of persuasion is not enough to induce the coal industry to save a lot of lives and prevent a lot of injuries." The bill would give federal inspectors the right to close down unsafe mines.

In the Far East today, General Mark Clark made his first visit to the prisoner of war camps on Koje island. He told reporters: we will tolerate no nonsense from the prisoners.. when we are ready we will use maximum force to make them obey our orders. He has no concrete proof but he is certain that there is a direct link between the prison camps and the truce negotiators at Panmunjom. After General Clark left the island: a South Korean guard, taunted by some prisoners, shot at them, wounded one... American infantrymen, riding on tanks, with baseball bats and shillelaghs in their hands, entered two prison compounds..ripped down Communist flags, and insulting signs, and burned them. At the truce talks, North Korean General Nam Il is described as having "toned down" his voice. General Harrison, our chief negotiator, says he doesn't know if this has any signifiance.

Edward R. Murrow: June 2, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

Tomorrow General Eisenhower ends a distinguished 37-year military career. At his own request he will stop drawing his approximately nineteen thousand dollars a year in pay and allowances. He will retain his military aide, Lieutenant-Colonel Bob Shulz, and two master sergeants. This action clears the way for his entrance into the political wars. Today the General visited Walter Reid Hospital briefly; had conferences with officials of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization; paid a brief visit to Secretary of State Acheson; went to the White House again, where President Truman gave him his fifth Distinguished Service Medal. The President spoke of the General's "monumental achievement" in planning the defense of Western Europe. General Eisenhower said he was "deeply touched and honored."

On Wednesday of this week, at 7 o'clock Eastern Time, General Eisenhower makes his first big speech in civilian clothes, from Abilene, Kansas. The next morning he holds his first news conference, since becoming a candidate, and removing his uniform. We are advised by Eisenhower Headquarters that a recording of this news conference will be made available for broadcasting later. But there will not be any direct, instantaneous broadcasting of questions and answers.

We are further told, by spokesmen for the General, that television cameras will not be permitted to pick up and transmit the question and answer period. Later on, after the news conference is ended, it is planned that another ~~news~~ conference will be held before the television cameras; but questions here will be confined to those asked earlier at the non-televised conference. XXX This means that under present plans broadcasting of the conference will be delayed, and that the televising of it will be specially staged - a sort of "re-enactment" of the first one - with no questions permitted except those that were asked at the original conference.

Technical facilities in Abilene are limited. The movie house in which the news conference will be held seats only about 300 people. It would have been somewhat difficult but altogether possible to place a television camera in a position where both questions and answers could have been picked up live. ~~XXXXXXXXXXXX~~ So far as I can learn, the radio and television networks have not yet decided finally whether they will accept and transmit this delayed and restricted version of General Eisenhower's news conference.

Those in charge of making arrangements for General Eisenhower's first news conference as a full-fledged civilian candidate have surrounded it with more restrictions and prohibitions than have been attempted by any other candidate of either Party.

The Supreme Court has ruled that the steel seizure is illegal...a violation of the constitution. Samuel Johnson agreed with the majority opinion when he said:"The law is the last result of human wisdom acting upon human experience for the benefit of the public." He also agreed with the minority when he said:" A thousand things occur (for which laws can not provide) where authority ought to interpose."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY - JUNE 2, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Supreme Court ruled today that the President's seizure of the steel mills was illegal. Within minutes after radio carried this decision across the country, the CIO steel workers, with union approval, started walking off their jobs. Phil Murray called for new negotiations with the industry on the basis of the Wage Stabilization Board recommendations. The steel industry announced its ready to try to work out a fair settlement. The President ordered Commerce Secretary Sawyer to return the mills to their owners, and the Government banned the shipment of steel from warehouses to manufacturers of civilian goods.

It took the members of the Supreme Court more than two and a half hours to read their decisions. Six Justices ruled against the Administration, three dissented. In all, seven of the nine Justices read opinions of their own.

Mr. Justice Black read the majority decision. He said: the President's power to seize the steel mills must stem either from an act of Congress or from the Constitution itself. There is no law that expressly authorizes the President to take possession of property, as he did in this case. Nor is there an act of Congress from which such a power can be fairly implied. Further, said Justice Black, the Government doesn't claim that it acted under any specific law. And, in fact, Congress specifically ruled out seizure of private property, when it was considering the Taft-Hartley law. The Congress felt this would be a means of avoiding interference with collective bargaining.

Justice Black went on to reason: if the President had the power to seize the steel industry, then there must be some provision of the Constitution that gives him this power. The Administration did not claim any specific Constitutional power, but it said, the President acted under implied powers, inherent powers, under the "executive power" vested in him under the Constitutional provision that he "faithfully execute " the laws under his position as "Commander in Chief" of the armed forces. The majority Justices found that none of this gives the President the power to seize the steel industry. Here's what the Black decision has to say: The court cannot, with faithfulness to the Constitution, hold that the President, as Commander in Chief, can seize an industry to keep a labor dispute from stopping production. "This," says Mr. Justice Black, "is a job for the nation's lawmakers - not for its military authorities."

As for the Government's claim to implied, inherent powers, the Court said: In the framework of our Constitution, the President has the power to see that laws are faithfully executed. This refutes the idea that he is to be a law-maker. The Constitution limits the President to recommending laws he thinks wise, vetoing laws he thinks bad. But the law-making power is specifically given to Congress. The Constitution leaves no doubt about this. And this law-making power is not subject to Presidential or military supervision or control.

To the Government argument that there is precedent for seizure - that other Presidents seized private industry, without Congressional authority - to this agrument the Court says: Even if true, Congress has not lost its exclusive authority to make laws.

That was the majority opinion by Justice Black. Five Justices agreed with this, but felt compelled to add views of their own. If I may pick sentences from these opinions: Justice Clark feels the President should have acted under the Taft-Hartley law. Justice Burton feels the President violated our principle of separation of governmental powers. Justice Frankfurter thinks its absurb to call the President a didtator; he describes Mr. Truman as "a representative product of the sturdy democratic tradition of the Mississippi Valley. Justice Douglas says: "Today a kindly President seizes the steel industry, to effect a wage increase and keep steel in production. Tomorrow, another President might use the same power to prevent a wage increase, curb trade unionists, regiment labor as oppressively as industry thinks it has been regimented by this seizure." And Justice Jackson says: "Men have discovered no technique for long deserving free government, except that the executive be under the law, and that the law be made by parliamentary deliberations. Such institutions may be destined to pass away, but it is the duty of the Court to be the last, not the first, to give them up."

With these six opinions, three of the Court bretheren disagree. Chief Justice Vinson spoke for himself and Justices Reed and Minton. Mr. Vinson argues this way: Those who suggest this case involves extraordinary powers should be mindful that these are extraordinary times. It is wrong to believe that in an emergency, the President must wait for the passage of a law to cope with a threatened disaster. We must not make the President powerless at a moment when the need for action is pressing, and no one but the President is immediately capable of swift action. The framers of the Constitution knew the real danger of Executive weakness in times of peril. They didn't create an "automaton, impotent to exercise powers at a time when the survival of the republic may be at stake." They created a government subject to law but "not left subject to inertia, when vigor and initiative are required." History supports this, supports the President's seizure: history demonstrates that the President, here, acted in "full conformity with his duties under the Constitution."

That is what the nine members of the Supreme Court had to say. The majority decision was greeted enthusiastically by most members of Congress. Many called for immediate use of the Taft-Hartley law. Many "rejoined" for the country. There were a few who noted that the decision, with the attendent walkout of the steel workers, creates a "grave situation."

Among the industry leaders, Clarence B. Randall of Inland Steel called the decision "a great day for America." And he added: "Phil Murray has "struck the country again."

At the White House, the President gave no indication of what the next step might be. The President could 1) ask Congress for a new law 2) use the Taft-Hartley law 3) try again to get both sides to a White House conference for agreement. He might offer the industry a price increase in return for agreeing to a wage increase for the union. Or he might, under developing conditions, find a current law under which he can make another move to seize the industry.

Today, the President had other business on hand. He asked the Senate to ratify quickly the peace contract with Western Germany, and an amendment to the NATO charter, whereby we pledge the West Germans military support if they are attacked. He said prompt ratification would be "a significant step towards peace and security in Europe, and the whole free world."

Mr. Truman told his Conference on Industrial Safety that he wants the House to approve the mine safety bill. He said: "The power of persuasion is not enough to induce the coal industry to save a lot of lives and prevent a lot of injuries." The bill would give federal inspectors the right to close down unsafe mines.

In the Far East today, General Mark Clark made his first visit to the prisoner of war camps on Koje Island. He told reporters we will tolerate no nonsense from the prisoners; when we are ready, we will use maximum force to make them obey our orders. He has no concrete proof but he is certain that there is a direct link between the prison camps and the truce negotiators at Panmunjom. After General Clark left the island, a South Korean guard, taunted by some prisoners, shot at them - wounded one. American infantrymen, riding on tanks, with baseball bats and shillelalis in their hands, entered two prison compounds, ripped down Communist flags, and insulting signs and burned them. At the truce talks, North Korean General Nam Il is described as having "toned down" his voice. General Harrison, our chief negotiator, says he doesn't know if this has any significance.

Tomorrow General Eisenhower ends a distinguished 37-year military career. At his own request, he will stop drawing his approximately nineteen thousand dollars a year in pay and allowances. He will retain his military aide,

Lieutenant-Colonel Bob Shulz, and two master sergeants. This action clears the way for his entrance into the political wars. Today the General visited Walter Reid Hospital briefly, had conferences with officials of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, paid a brief visit to Secretary of State, Acheson, went to theWhite House again, where President Truman gave him his fifth Distinguished Service Medal. The President spoke of the General's "monumental achievement" in planning the defense of Western Europe. General Eisenhower said he was "deeply touched and honored."

On Wednesday of this week, at 7 O'clock Eastern Time, General Eisenhower makes his first big speech in civilian clothes, from Abilene, Kansas. The next morning he holds his first newsconference since becoming a candidate, and removing his uniform. We are advised by Eisenhower Headquarters that a recording of this news conference will be made available for broadcasting later. But there will not be any direct, instantaneous broadcasting of questions and answers.

We are further told, by spokesmen for the General, that television cameras will not be permitted to pick up and transmit the question and answer period. Later on, after the news conference is ended, it is planned that another conference will be held before the television cameras, but questions here will be confined to those asked earlier at the non-televised conference. This means, that under present plans, broadcasting of the conference will be delayed, and that the televising of it will be specially staged - a sort of "re-anactment" of the first one - with no questions permitted except those that were asked at the original conference.

Technical facilities in Abilene are limited. The movie house in which the news conference will be held seats only about 300 people. It would have been somewhat difficult, but altogether possible, to place a television camera in a position where both questions and answers could have been picked up - live. So far as I can learn, the radio and television networks have not decided finally, whether they will accept and transmit this delayed and restricted version of General Eisenhower's news conference.

Those in charge of making arrangements for General Eisenhower's first news conference as a full-fledged civilian candidate, have surrounded it with more restrictions and prohibitions than have been attemted by any other candidate of either Party.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: The Supreme Court has ruled that the steel seizure is illegal - a violation of the Constitution. Samuel Johnson agreed with the majority opinion when he said: "The law is the last result of human wisdom acting upon human experience for the benefit of the public." He also agreed with the minority when he said: "A thousand things occur for which laws can not provide, where authority ought to interpose."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Tuesday, June 3, 1952

This is the news:

The steel strike is having its effect on other indstries. THOUSANDS OF miners..railroad workers.. barge men .. are being laid off in various sections of the country. Steel industry leaders meet in New York tomorrow, to work out plans for a meeting with the union. #

Administration leaders in the Senate are preparing some new law.. to resolve the dispute, get production going again. Senator Taft says he's against ANY NEW legislation, until the President uses a law now on the books..the Taft-Hartley law. Defense Production Administrator Fowler says, if the strike lasts for four or five days, it will "hit" the production of some secret military items.

There was no progress today at the Korean truce talks. On Koje island, the commander, General Boatner demands that the Communist prisoners haul down their flags. He's given them a time limit. (but it has not been made public) The prisoners today shouted:" Nobody will come through the gates of our compounds." In one AREA, prisoners refused to remove their laundry from barbed wire SURROUNDING THEIR COMPOUND. They became antagonistic. American soldiers opened fire.. wounded four North Koreans.

The President appears to have halted a move by South Korean President Syngman Rhee to dissolve his country's national assembly. Informed sources say Mr. Truman wrote Rhee that he was "shocked and amazed" at the political situation in Pusan. (where Rhee has arrested 12 assemblymen.) Rhee had been scheduled to issue an order dissolving the assmbly..but he didn't.

~~American Ambassador Muccio, who had been vacationing in this country, has interrupted his vacation to fly back to Korea..with special instructions from the President.~~

In West Berlin today, the British reacted quickly to the Soviet seizure..in the Russian zone of Germany..of three small communities that the British have been administering. British troops surrounded the Russian radio station..located in the British sector of Berlin. The Russians then sent an emissary to consult with the British..to try to work out a settlement.

In New York, General Mac Arthur has reacted to those who have criticized his public speeches on political matters. Major General Whitney, his advisor, says General MacArthur's position is identical to that of General Eisenhower when he was president of Columbia University..and making speeches on political subjects. Whitney condemns what he calls "a labored effort by partisans to show that actions are wrong when taken by MacArthur, but right when taken by Eisenhower."

In Washington today, General Eisenhower held his last news conferences as a military man..and indirectly took occassion to answer some recent charges by Senator Taft. My colleague Bill Shadell covered this news conference in the Pentagon for us.

WHAT WAS IT LIKE, BILL?

(return cue after 4;40 "It is seems strange just thinking about my final meeting in uniform)

CBS RADIO DIVISION

E. R. MURROW

Tuesday, June 3, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 P.M.

MURROW: ... In Washington, today, Gen. Eisenhower held his last news conference as a military man, and indirectly, took occasion to answer some recentcharges by Senator Taft.

My colleague, Bill Shadel, covered this news conference in the Pentagon for us. What was it like, Bill?

SHADEL: Ed, this morning Gen. Eisenhower came into the Pentagon's auditorium for his final military news conference; an auditorium packed to the gunnels with Washington reporters and Army personnel, with TV and newsreel cameras and all the trappings. He came in jauntily, took his orders from photographers with a smile, then stepped up to the microphones on the stage and became deeply serious.

EISENHOWER: I have never hesitated under appropriate circumstances as far as I know, to speak my mind freely if I thought I had an idea or felt? a policy or something as high-sounding as a philosophy of government, I've never hesitated for a second to say sayx so ... and I do not intend to hesitate in the future to speak out my own mind. I will try to be as frank as I know how to be.

SHADEL: While Eisenhower reminded his audience that he was still in uniform and wanted to deal only with military questions, the first question put to him was an obvious reference to Senator Taft's charge that American air power began deteriorating when Eisenhower was Chief of Staff.

EISENHOWER: I have made many, many public statements in which I have stated that the dominant factor in any future was going to be air power. But, ladies and gentlemen, any one who finds that the ordinary foot soldier has been finally eliminated from war, I wish he would show me how to do it, because if there's anyone who would like to relieve the young boys of our time, of all the free world from the necessity of shouldering a rifle and going in the mud, I'm No. I.

SHADEL: Has failure to adopt universal military training weakened our defense program?

EISENHOWER: There are many of you here present that have seen the consequences of putting only partially trained men into action. And it's a heartbreaking thing.

I don't look upon UMT as something that is purely sacrifice on the part of theman that goes through it, I look upon UMT as something that gives him a proper chance if he's called upon ever to undergo this terrible ordeal of war.

SHADEL: How do you feel about the overall mobilization picture?

EISENHOWER: The business of preparing United States for defense, the business of building withothers a collective security doesn't belong merely, or I think probably even most importantly to the people in uniform. This thing is a terrifically important business and belongs to every citizen. No enlightened citizen can afford to dismiss the subject and say 'oh, it belongs to those soldiers or airmen or sailors.'

I also said a long time ago 'war's become far too serious to trust it just to the generals.'

Peace has become far too serious to trust it to any particular segment of our population.

This is the business of everybody.

SHADEL: How do you feel about proposals for reducing military appropriations?

EISENHOWER: There is no possibility that in expenditures as great as we are now making for our security here and abroad, that there cannot be found many, many instances where efficient operation, austerity in living, where certain moneys can't be saved ... cannot be saved. Of course, they can.

SHADEL: Specifically, how do you feel about a 10% cut?

EISENHOWER: That is normally a very ... sort of a meat axe way of doing a thing.

SHADEL: Next, the inevitable question: How serious is the threat of war?

EISENHOWER: I think that any reasonable calculation shows that any nation, including Russia, that would deliberately seek war today is very foolish.

Now, people will do foolish things. Because you arrive at that conclusion, you cannot say 'there will be no war.' And I believe we should be here highly alert and highly mobilized.

SHADEL: Can we carry out our worldwide commitments?

EISENHOWER: My own belief is that we should approach the whole business of foreign relations - our relations with other countries - on one basis only, - the enlightened self interest of the United States. And I believe every other nation should approach the problem from exactly that way.

SHADEL: And that's the way Gen. Eisenhower's news conference went this morning, Ed. As the general shook hands with some of us in the front row, he remarked, "This seems strange just thinking that this is my final meeting in uniform."

MURROW: ... Gen. Eisenhower removed his uniform and put on his civilis clothes, he lunched with some of his political advisers and he is now on his way to Kansas.

(30)

Ed. trans/ P. O.

Removed uniform - Put on civilian clothes - General Eisenhower, loaded with his political addresses and is now on his way to Kansas.

We are talking tonite from Abilene Kansas. (almost the exact center of the country). This is where the big trail herds from Texas used to meet the railroad; where Wild Bill Hickock used to walk down the center of the street. This is the town where General Eisenhower grew up, (on the wrong side of the tracks). The street where he lived still isnt paved. Tomorrow he comes home. There isnt much public excitement, (these people dont excite very easily). The bunting is up, the Generals picture looks out of store windows; extra cops have been moved in to handle the crowds; the souvenier stands, hot dog establishments are going up out near the stadium, where the speech will be tomorrow evening. The stands will seat maybe a couple of thousand people; the rest will stand. The baseball field is bare and dusty. Abilene is about as American a town as you could find. There are thousands like it between the Appalachians and the Cascades: population about seven thousand, nine hole golf course, being converted from sand to grass greens, couple of paved streets. Tallest building, the Sunflower Hotel - eight stories. Nobody seems in a particular hurry. The people combine that dignity ~~xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx~~ and courtesy that comes naturally to people who live close to the soil. The big grain elevators stick up like light houses above the green sea of fine old elm trees. The great booming whistle of the Sante Fe trains, rolls down the shady streets under the great trees and trickles away over the rich flat land that surrounds the town. Its hot 95°: coolest place in town is down on the railroad siding. By tomorrow morning there will be thirty pullman cars there. Air conditioned $ for reporters, cameramen and all the rest.

Tomorrow at ~~xxxxx~~ twelve thirty General Eisenhower will arrive, and lay the cornerstone of the Eisenhower Museum, which will ~~xxxxxxxxxx~~ house his war trophies.

In the afternoon there will be a parade depicting the life of General Ike. There will be High School bands, riding clubs, and lots of floats: the old swimming hole where he used to swim "Mud Creek", fishing float, even a cooking float (one of the General's hobbies) also a Belle Springs Creamery float, where Ike and his father used to work;...a West Point float,...marriage float,...World War One float,...one with a stork flying over a blue cradle to remind people of the birth of the Eisenhower's son. Ike will be shown saluting in front of a palm tree, (thats for his Philippine service)...he will be shown giving out diplomas, (thats for his Columbia University service)...There will even be a grandpa and grandma float,...an elephant will wear an "I Like Ike" banner, and the final float will be the White House ...all white with blue trim....

Tonite Abilene, Kansas, is full of reporters...The local committee has done a good job of taking care of them...even provided typewriters, but they came from a High School where students are learning the touch system. There is a man right busy now taking off the black tabs that hide the letters. (You'd be surprised how many reporters can't type their own names, if they cant see the letters)...Tonite the Sunflower Hotel is the busiest place in town...Tomorrow, officials expect to park twenty thousand cars and handle five hundred small aircraft, The Forecast is Fair. ..It ought to be quite a day...

The Name Kansas comes from a Sioux Indian word meaning "Swift Wind" or "South Wind.." state bird-the meadow lark,..tree,the cottonwood,..state flower,the Sun Flower..//Folks who live here are independent of mind,When the legislature was arguing about a state motto,"We Will" was proposed.--and it was immediately moved that it be changed to "WE Wont,"..They finally settled on;.."To the stars through difficulties,".

Good night and good luck

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY - JUNE 3, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The steel strike is having its effect on other industries. Thousands of miners, railroad workers, barge men are being laid off in New York tomorrow to work out plans for a meeting with the union. Adminstration leaders in the Senate are preparing some new law to resolve the dispute, get production going again. Senator Taft says he's against any new legislation until the President uses a law now on the books - the Taft-Hartley law. Defense Production Administrat Fowler says, if the strike lasts for four or five days, it will "hit" the production of some secret military items.

There was no progress today at the Korean truce talks. On Koje Island, the commander, General Boatner, demands that the Communist prisoners haul down their flags. He's given them a time limit, but it has not been make public. The prisoners today shouted: "Nobody will come through the gates of our compounds." In one area, prisoners refused to remove their laundry from barbed wire surrounding their compounc. They became "antagonistic". Americam soldiers opened fire, founded four North Koreans.

The President appears to have halted a move by South Korean President Syngman Rhee to dissolve his country's national assembly. Informed sources say Mr. Truman wrote Rhee that he was "shocked and amazed" at the political situation in Pusan, where Rhee has arrested 12 assembly men. Rhee had been scheduled to issue an order dissolving the Assembly, but he didn't.

In West Berlin today, the British reacted quickly to the Soviet seizure in the Russian zone of Germany of three small communities that the British have been administering. British troops surrounded the Russian radio station located in the British sector of Berlin. The Russians then sent an emissary to consult with the British to try to work out a settlement.

In New York, General Eisenhower held his last news conference as a military man and indirectly took occassion to answer some recent charges by Senator Taft. My colleague Bill Shadell covered this news conference in the Pentagon for us. What was it like, Bill?

SHADEL: Ed, this morning Gen. Eisenhower came into the Pentagon's auditorium for his final military news conference; an auditorium packed to the gunnels with Washington reporters and Army personnel, with TV and newsreel cameras and all the trappings. He came in jauntily, took his orders from photographers with a smile, then stepped up to the microphones on the stage and became deeply serious.

EISENHOWER: I have never hesitated under appropriate circumstances as far as I know, to speak my mind freely if I thought I had an idea or felt a plicy or something as high-sounding as a philosophy of government, I've never hesitated for a second to say so.....and I do not intend to hesitate in the future to speak out my own mind. I will try to be as frank as I know how to be.

SHADEL: While Eisenhower reminded his audience that he was still in uniform and wanted to deal only with military questions, the first question put to him as an obvious reference to Senator Taft's charge that American air power began deteriorating when Eisenhower was Chief of Staff.

EISENHOWER: I have made many, many public statements in which I have stated that the dominant factor in any future was going to be air power. But, ladies and gentlemen, any one who finds that the ordinary foot soldier has been finally eliminated from war, I wish he would show me how to do it, because if there's anyone who would like to relieve the young boys of our time, of all the free world from the necessity of shouldering a rifle and going in the mud, I'm No. I.

SHADEL: Has failure to adopt universal military training weakened our defense program?

EISENHOWER: There are many of you here present that have seen the consequences of putting only partially trained men into action. And it's a heartbreaking thing. I don't look upon UMT as something that is purely sacrifice on the part of the man that goes through it, I look upon UMT as something that gives him a proper chance if he's called upon ever to undergo this terrible ordeal of war.

SHADEL: Howdo you feel about the overall mobilization picture?

EISENHOWER: The business of preparing United States for defense, the business of building with others a collective security doesn't belong merely, or I think probably even most importantly to the people in uniform. This thing is a terrifically important business and belongs to every citizen. No enlightened citizen can afford to dismiss the subject and say 'Oh, it belongs to those soldiers or airmen or sailors.' I also said a long time ago: 'War's become far too serious trust it just to the generals.' Peace has become far too serious to trust it to any particular segment of our population. This is the business of everybody.

SHADEL: How do you feel about proposals for reducing military appropriations?

EISENHOWER: There is no possibility that in expenditures as great as we are now making for our security here and abroad, that there cannot be found many, many instances where efficient operation, austerity in living, where certain moneys can't be saved....cannot be saved. Of course, they can.

SHADAL: Specifically, how do you feel about a 10% cut?

EISENHOWER: That is normally a very....sort of a meat-axe way of doing a thing.

SHADEL: Next, the inevitable question: how serious is the threat of war?

EISENHOWER: I think that any reasonable calculation shows that any nation, including Russia, that would deliberately seek war today is very foolish. Now, people will do foolish things. Because you arrive at that conclusion, you cannot say 'there will be no war.' And I believe we should be here highly alert and highl mobilized.

SHADEL: Can we carry out our worldwide commitments?

EISENHOWER: My own belief is that we should approach the whole business of foreign relations - our relations with other countries - on one basis only, - the enlightened self-interest of the United States. And I believe every other nation should approach the problem from exactly that way.

SHADEL: And that's the way Gen. Eisenhower's news conference went this morning, Ed. As the General shook hands with some of us in the front row, he remarked: "This seems strange just thinking that this is my final meeting in uniform."

MURROW: ...Gen. Eisenhower removed his uniform and put on his civilian clothes, he lunched with some of his political advisers and he is now on his way to Kansas.

We are talking tonight from Abilene, Kansas - almost the exact center of the country. This is where the big trail herds from Texas used to meet the railroad - where Wild Bill Hickock used to walk down the center of the street. This is the town where General Eisenhower grew up, (on the other side of the tracks). The street where he lived still isn't paved. Tomorrow he comes home. There isn't much public excitment; (these people don't excite very easily). The bunting is up, the Generals picture looks out of store windows; extra cops have been moved in to handle the crowds; the souvenier stands, hot dog establishments are going up out near the stadium, where the speech will be tomorrow evening. The stands will seat maybe a couple of thousand people; the rest will stand. The baseball field is bare and dusty.

Abilene is about as American a town as you could find. There are thousands like it between the Appalachians and the Cascades: population about seven thousand, nine-hole golf course - being convented from sand to grass greens, couple of paved streets, tallest building the Sunflower Hotel - eight stories. Nobody seems in a particular hurry. The people combine that dignity and courtesy that comes naturally to people who live close to the soil. The big grain elevators stick up like light houses above the green sea of fine old elm trees. The great booming whistle of the Sante Fe trains rolls down the shady streets under the great trees and trickles away over the rich flat land that surrounds the town. It's hot - 95 degrees: coolest place in town is down on the railroad siding. By tomorrow morning there will be thirty pullman cars there - air conditioned - for reporters, cameramen and all the rest .

Tomorrow at twelve thirty, General Eisenhower will arrive and lay the cornerstone of the Eisenhower Museum, which will house his war trophies. In the afternoon there will be a parade depicting the life of General Ike. There will be High School bands, riding clubs, and lots of floats: the old swimming hole where he used to swim - "Mud Creek", fishing float, even a cooking float, (one of the General's hobbies): also, a Bell Springs Creamery float, where Ike and his father used to work, a West Point float, marriage float, World War One float, one with a stork flying over a blue cradle to remind people of the birth of the Eisenhower's son.

Ike will be shown saluting in front of a palm tree; (that's for his Philippine service). He will be shown giving out diplomas; (that's for his Columbia University service). There will even be a grandpa and grandma float, an elephant will wear an "I Like Ike" banner, and the final float will be the White House - all white with blue trim.

Tonight Abilene, Kansas, is full of reporters. The local committee has done a good job of taking care of them - even provided typewriters....but they came from a High School where students are learning the touch system. There is a man right busy now taking off the black tabs that hide the letters. (You'd be surprised how many reporters can't type their own names, if they can't see the letters.) Tonight the Sunflower Hotel is the busiest place in town. Tomorrow, officials expect to park twenty thousand cars and handle five hundred small aircraft. The forecast is fair. It ought to be quite a day.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERICAL

MURROW: The name Kansas domes from a Sioux Indian word meaning "Swift Wind", or "South Wind": state bird - the meadow lark; tree - the cottonwood: state flower - the sunflower. Folks who live here are independent of mind. When the legislature was arguing about a state motto, "We Will" was proposed, and it was immediately moved that it be changed to "We Won't". They finally settled on: "To the stars through difficulties."

Good Night and Good Luck!

LeSueur cbs 4 June 1954 7:45p

Well, Ed, General Eisenhower's hometown celebration was the big news back here, too...But there were several other events of importance.. Particularly the South Dakota Primary and the Steel dispute..

The Administration stepped into the 3-day-old steel strike.. called both sides to a White House meeting tomorrow...And both sides promptly accepted the invitation of Acting Defense Mobilizer Steelman...The steel industry said it was ready to bargain with the steelworker's union, "in a spirit of give and take.."

And CIO president Philip Murray acknowledged the White House summons, saying: "I'll be at the White House meeting tomorrow at 11 o'clock.

Almost at the same time, a democratic Senator introduced a bill that would do three things... Senator Maybank of South Carolina proposed a measure that would forbid strikes in critical industries for 120 days, would set up a board to recommend settlement terms. and allow the President to seize the industry if the terms were NOT accepted..

[redacted]

~~But he would not be allowed to change, worker's wages.~~

The proposal immediately became the subject of hot debate...

Senator Taft jumped on it... Said it would be "infinitely tougher on labor" than the Taft-Hartley Act..

The Senate voted today to retain the present wage stabilization board set-up. with public, labor and industry members... However it would make the members subject to Senate confirmation and restrict the board's power to handle labor disputes..

~~It was the vote up to President Barkley, deciding the deciding vote.~~

The Senate also decided to end national rent controls next March first...

It's what they're calling a "photo-finish" in the South Dakota Republican primary Between General Esienhower and Senator Taft, with the Senator edging the General by a nose...The Senator claims victory by about 700 votes...with the last 50 precincts still reporting...It was the closest direct contest between the two, yet staged..

The latest tally gave Taft delegates 64 thousand 467 votes Eisenhower 63 thousand, 916.

Former Governor Mickelson, the state Eisenhower leader admits Taft may have won by about 500 votes, but said he wasn't conceding because an official canvass may change the result... Senator Kefauver took South Dakota's 8 democratic delegates and California's 68 democratic delegates.... The Tennessean won by a 2 and 1/2 to 1 margin over an unpledged slate one drafted to support President Truman... Governor Earl Warren took California's 70 Republican delegates...And Senator Knowland, an Administration critic, won the Senatorial nomination in both parties...

In Korea, General Beatner's "get tough" policies are in accordance ... Heavily-armed american troops entered three of the prison compounds, and tore down the last of the defiant red flags. The prisoners put up NO resistance. There are also reports that General Beatner's putting them on short rations.. (as permitted by the Geneva convention). (Some 75 communist leaders were taken out and put into another enclosure..)

a flare-up in Berlin today... An American M.P. was slightly wounded by a trigger-happy East German policeman.. And Russian soldiers fired their tommyguns in the air, as they seized a cemetary in the French sector.. We and the French have protested

In Paris, the french communist [redacted] call for a General strike, fizzled out, except for one auto plant... It was the biggest communist flop sinne the end of the war...

Ed, that's the latest news here...Now what about the rest of the story in Abilene?

Another convict uprising in this country... Three guards and Seven civilians have been taken hostage at North Carolina Central Prison, and the convicts have barricaded themselves in.. The Warden is negotiating with them over their food complaints..

This is the News. 1 NOA

Generalsx finished speaking fifteen minutes ago...we are talking from small room ~~underneath~~ the grandstand... His train arrived on schedule from Kansas City...there were dark clouds building up in the west...As Eisenhower stepped off the train followed by his travellinf companions and Mrs Eisenhower it was clear that that there was to be no eastern influence upon this occasion Lodge Duff Dewey hoffman..the eastern advisors were all absent...the general walked to the small platform where the Eisenhower Memorial was to be dedicated...the cornerstone laid... He spoke without notes and with considerable eloquence...about his parents..their honesty thrift courage and integrity...the fact that the bible lived for them...they were frugal... Eisenhower said..."I have found in later years that we were very poor..but the glory of America is that we didnt know it then."...The crowd of two to three thousand stood in what was a cornfield last year ...It was not a demonstrative crowd.....

Later the parade.....Floats depicting General Eisenhowers life.....

THE SPEECH....General Eisenhowers speech,just concluded ,concerned itself primarily with the need for unity,the dangers of inflation,high taxation and the dangers of beurocrady and big government...Here is the substance of what he had to say on these subjects.....

Quote from Script....

~~Here in Abilene a [illegible] minutes ago~~

~~[illegible] minutes ago [illegible] completed [illegible] speech.~~

Here in Abilene under the grandstand we dont know whats going on in the rest of the world... Lets switch back to New Yory for a report of the other news of the day from Larry Leseuer... After that,if theres time I shall attemt a personal comment regarding todays speech....

Larry....

Football Team

gen Eisenhowers Speech -

~~It~~ was a rather blamd restrained ~~speech~~...those who wanted Ike to "Come out swinging" as they put it will be disappointed...It was more a declaration of faith than a political document... Many of the things the general said would be subscribed to by Harry Truman and Robert Taft... There was no criticism of administration foreign policy except a casual referemce to Yalta and that had to do with secrecy rather than substance...He did not attempt to assign partisan blame for the collapse of China...He didnt lash out at corruption in high places but pointed out that it sort of seeps up from the bottom.....Those who have accused the general of Me tooism will find support for their contention in this speech...those who have urged the general to conduct a dignified high level campaign will be pleased by todays effort.....I doubt that this speech will set the pararies afire or start any great stampeded...but it cleared some ground as to where the general stands in terms of the dangers that confront us...just what he would do about them is somewhat less clear...A few hundred reporters will try to get some clarification on these subjects at tomorrows news conference.....The hallmark of this speech was restraint coupled with a belief that the traditional virtues ,thrift,hoesty belief in God are as essential in solving todays problems as they were when the General was a boy here in Abilene...

Wont confound his enemies or cause great rejoicing amongst his supporters...we shall find out tomorrow whether the general has any specific remedies to offer for overcoming or averting the dangers he described today.....

Watching General Eisenhower today...standing on the Markee of the sunflower hotel reviewing the parade..listning to his speech..reminded us of something said by Oliver Wendell Holmes...

"Fame usually comes to those who are thinking about something else....very rarely to those who say to themselves....Go to now...let us be a celebrated individual....

Good night and good luck...

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

WEDNESDAY - JUNE 4, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

General Eisenhower finished speaking here in Abilene about 15 minutes ago. We are talking from a small truck near stadium where he spoke.

Before he arrived, it rained. They call it a 'Kansas shower'. In other parts of country, they would probably call it a minor cloud-burst. The mud was literally ankle deep, but the rain stopped just before the General, dressed in a raincoat, arrived to start his speech.

General Eisenhower's train arrived on schedule from Kansas City, shortly after noon today. There were dark clouds building up in the west. As the General stepped off the train, followed by his travelling companions and Mrs. Eisenhower, it was clear that there was to be no eastern influence on this occasion. Lodge, Duff, Dewey, Hoffman, the eastern advisors, were all absent.

The General walked to the small platform, where the Eisenhower Memorial was to be dedicated. He spoke without notes, and with considerable eloquence about his parents, their honesty, thrift, courage and integrity; the fact that the Bible 'lived' for them; they were frugal. Eisenhower said; "I have found in later years that we were very poor, but the glory of America is that we didn't know it then. The crowd of 2 or 3,000 stood in what was a cornfield last year. It was not a demonstrative crowd. Later came the parade, depicting Eisenhower's life practically from the time his parents arrived here, until - as people hope - he goes to the White House.

In the course of the speech, General Eisenhower has just concluded he concerned himself primarily with the need for unity, the danger of inflation, high taxation and the dangers of bureaucracy and big government.

Here is a substance of what he had to say on these subjects. He said: "Evils, which can ultimately throttle free government, are present in today's situation, and they must be faced by responsible citizenship.

I shall speak briefly of four of these threats, which to me seem to be dangerous lapses from the American-way. "As a first thing," said the General, "we must - as a people - hold fast to our faith and ideals, which are fundamental to the free system. We must work together in an atmosphere of good will and confidence. Yet, we see an increasing trend toward unreasonable antagonism, between economic elements of our country. An indulgence in the fantastic notion that any major part of our society can long prosper unless the whole enjoys prosperity. This is a danger that is far easier to intensify than to reduce by depending exclusively upon legislation.

Unless all of us are prepared to apply responsible citizenship to our problems, the alternative is resort to masses of punitive laws. "Such a process said General Eisenhower, "will be costly, futile and stupid. And if long pursued, can end only in regimentation of all workers and bureaucratic control of all means of production."

And then General Eisenhower said a second evil is a continued shrinkage in the value of money; inflation, which fattens on unbalanced budgets. At its worst, inflation can insidiously destroy the fruits of a lifetime's labor. Even as a gradual pace inflation dooms the farmer and city dweller alike to a hopeless treadmill race against the cost of living. Inflation cannot only destroy our savings, but our jobs. In our kind of economy, inflation , unless brought under control, eventually leads to depression. Inflation can even destroy free competative enterprise, the indispensible economic support to human liberty.

And then the General passed to his next danger, and he listed it as 'excessive taxation', rates that destroy incentive to excell in skill and in production. When external menace or internal crisis requires abnormal government expenditures, we must, temporarily, use every possible means to reduce inflationary pressures, to avoid mortgaging the lives of our children and to achieve the goal we have set ourselves. But long continued taxes, that are only a little below the confiscatory level, will destroy free government. Today, staggering federal expenditures for civil and military purposes have soared to totals beyond the comprehension of ordinary citizens.

In a world threatened by war, a great proportion of these is inescapable else we would stand helpless before the threat that hovers over the free world.

And then the General went on to discuss another evil. One, he said, which threatens us is the gradual absorption by the central government of functions that belong to local communities and to individuals. The stifling and costly bureaus that spring out of this process are manned by experts in self-perpetuation and ceaseless expansion, to no profit in terms of the national welfare.

Bureaucracy - helpless to lead older nations to security and prosperity - will do no better in America. Here, said General Eisenhower, our first need is to promote efficiency in government within the framework of theConstitution.

The federal government must be so organized that we feel confident we haven't lost sight of such things as thrift, frugality and economy. And General Eisenhower then said only aroused citizens can end these evils that increasingly grow into real threats to our country: disunity, inflation, excessive taxation and bureaucracy.

On the matter of foreign policy, General Eisenhower said: "We should know what is expected of our nations, which are accepting help from us, and we should be assured that those programs do not bring about an economic chaos that would defeat us all. We're entitled to reasonable estimates of how much our substances will be required in these great efforts."

On the subject of politics, the General said flatly that, in his opinion, "one party had been in power too long."

On the matter of foreign aid, he said: "I believe we can look forward to decreasing future costs without sacrificing the essentials of reasonable goals."

The General said, and this drew one of the largest rounds of applause, and it was perhaps his only direct political reference, when he said that "one party had been too long in power in this country." He ended his speech by saying: "I believe we can have peace with honor, reasonable security with national solvency.

And he said: "I believe in the future of the United States of America."

Here in Abilene, Kansas, near the grandstand, we don't know what's going on in the rest of the world. Let's switch to New York for a report of other news of the day from Larry Lesueur. After that, if there's time, I shall attempt a personal comment regarding today's speech.

LESUEUR: Well, Ed, General Eisenhower's home-town celebration was the big news back here, too. But there were several other events of importance, particularly, the South Dakota primary and the steel dispute. The Administration stepped into the 3-day-old steel strike, called both sides to a White House meeting tomorrow, and both sides promptly accepted the invitation of Acting Defense Mobilizer Steelman. The steel industry said it was ready to bargain with the steelworker's union, "in a spirit of give and take."

And CIO president, Philip Murray, acknowledged the White House summons saying: "I'll be at the White House meeting tomorrow at 11o'clock. Almost at the same time, a democratic Senator introduced a bill that would do three things: Senator Maybank of South Carolina proposed a measure that would forbid strikes in critical industries for 120 days, would set up a board to recommend settlement terms, and allow the President to seize the industry, if the terms were not accepted. The proposal immediately became the subject of hot debate. Senator Taft jumped on it; said it would be "infinitely tougher on labor" than the Taft-Hartley Act.

TheSenate voted today to retain the present Wage Stabilization Board set-up, with public, labor and industry members. However, it would make the members subject to Senate confirmation and restrict the board's power to handle labor disputes.

The Senate also decided to end national rent controls next March first.

It's what they're calling a "photo-finish" in the South Dakota Republican primary between the General and Senator Taft, with the Senator edging the General by a nose. The Senator claims vicotry by about 700 votes with the last 50 precincts still reporting. It was the closest direct contest between the two yet staged. The latest tally gave Taft delegates 64 thousand, 467 votes - Eisenhower 63 thousand, 916 votes.

Former Governor Mickelson, the state Eisenhower leader, admits Taft may have won by about 500 votes, but said he wasn't conceding, because an official canvass may change the result. Senator Kefauver took South Dakots's 8 democratic delegates and California's delegates. The Tennessean won by a 2½ to one margin over an unpledged slate, one drafted to support President Truman. Governor Earl Warren took California's 70 Republican delegates, and Senator Knowlan an Administration critic, won the Senatorial nomination of both parties.

In Korea, General Boatner's "get tough" policies are in evidence. Heavily-armed American troops entered three of the prison compounds, tore down the last of the defiant red flags. The prisoners put up no resistance. There are also reports that General Boatner is putting them on short rations, (as permitted by the Geneva convention), Some 75 communist leaders were taken out and put into another enclosure.

A flare-up in Berlin today. And American M.P. was slightly wounded by a trigger-happy East German policeman; and Russian soldiers fired their tommy-guns in the air, as they seized a cemetary in the French sector. We and the French have protdsted.

In Paris, the French Communist call for a general strike, fizzled out, except for one auto plant. It was the biggest communist flop since the end of the war.

Well, Ed, that's the latest news here. Now what about the rest of the story in Abilene?

MURROW: General Eisenhower's speech today was rather bland and restrained. Those who wanted Ike to come out swinging, as they put it, will be disappointed. It was more a declaration of faith than a political document. Many of the things the General said would be subscribed to by Harry Truman and Robert Taft.

There was no criticism of Administration foreign policy except a casual reference to Yalta, and that had to do with secrecy rather than substance.

He did not attempt to assign partisan blame for the collapse of China. He did not lash out at corruption in high places in government, but pointed out that it sort of seeps up form the bottom.

Those who have accused the General of 'me-tooism' will find support for their contention in this speech. Those who have urged the General to conduct a dignified, high-level campaign, will be pleased by today's effort.

I doubt that this speech will set the prairies afire or start any great stampede. But it clears some ground as to where the General stands in terms of the dangers that confront us. Just what he would do about them is somewhat less clear. A few hundred reporters will try to get some clarification on these subjects at tomorrow's news conference. The hallmark of this speech was restraint coupled with a belief that the traditional virtues, thrift, honesty, and belief in God, are as essential to the country as they were when Eisenhower was a boy here.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Watching General Eisenhower today, standing on the marque of the Sunflower Hotel, having a fine time reviewing a parade, and then later on listening to his speech, reminded us of something said by Oliver Wendell Holmes: "Fame usually comes to those who are thinking about something else - very rarely to those who say to themselves 'go to now - let us be a celebrated individual'."

Good Night and Good Luck!

CBS RADIO DIVISION

E. R. MURROW

Wednesday, June 4, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 P.M.

ANNOUNCER: ... (C O M M E R C I A L) ...

MURROW: This is the news! Gen. Eisenhower finished speaking here in Abilene about 15-min. ago. We are talking from a small truck near the stadium where he spoke.

Before he arrived it rained. They call it a 'Kansas shower.' In other parts of the country, they would probably call it a minor cloudburst. The mud was literally ankle deep, but the rain stopped just before the general, dressed in a raincoat, arrived to start his speech.

Gen. Eisenhower's train arrived on schedule from Kansas City, shortly afternoon today. There were dark clouds building up in the west. As the general stepped off the train, followed by his travelling companions and Mrs. Eisenhower, it was clear that there was to be no eastern influence on this occasion. Lodge, Duff, Dewey, Hoffman, the eastern advisors, were all absent.

The general walked to the small platform, where the Eisenhower Memorial was to be dedicated. He spoke without notes, and with considerable eloquence about his parents, their honesty, thrift, courage and integrity. The fact that the Bible 'lived' forthem; they were frugal. Eisenhower said, "I have found in later years that we were very poor, but the glory of America is that we didn't know it then. The crowd of 2-or-3,000 stood in what was a cornfield last year. It was not a demonstrative crowd. Later came the parade, depicting Eisenhower's life practically from the time his parents arrived here, until - as people hope - he goes to the White House.

In the course of the speech, Gen. Eisenhower has just concluded, he concerned himself primarily with the need for unity, the danger of inflation, high taxation and the dangers of bureaucracy and big government.

Here is a substance of what he had to say on these subjects. He said: "Evils, which can ultimately throttle free government, are present in today's situation, and they must be faced by responsible citizenship.

I shall speak briefly of four of these threats, which to me seem to be dangerous lapses fromthe American way. As a first thing," said the general, "we must - as a people - hold fast to our faith and ideals, which are fundamental to the free system. We must work together in an atmosphere of good will and confidence. Yet, we see an increasing trend toward unreasonable antagonism, between economic elements of our country. An indulgence in the fantastic notion that any major part of our society can long prosper unless the whole enjoys prosperity. This is a danger that is far easier to intensify than to reduce by depending exclusively upon legislation.

Unless all of us are prepared to apply responsible citizenship to our problems, the alternative is resort to masses of punitive laws. Such a process," said Gen. Eisenhower, "will be costly, futile and stupid. And if long pursued, can end only in regimentation of all workers and bureaucratic control of all means of production."

And then Gen. Eisenhower said a second evil is a continued shrinkage in the value of money; inflation, which fattens on unbalanced budgets. At its worst, inflation can insidiously destroy the fruits of a lifetime's labor. Even as a gradual pace inflation dooms the farmer and city dweller alike to a hopeless treadmill race against the cost of living. Inflation cannot only destroy our savings, but our jobs. In our kind of economy, inflation, unless brought under control, eventually leads to depression. Inflation can even destroy free competative enterprise, the indispensible economic support to human liberty.

Andthen the general passed to his next danger, and he listed it as 'excessive taxation,' rates that destroy incentive to excell in skill and in production. When external menace or internal crisis requires abnormal government expenditures, we must, temporarily, use every possible means to reduce inflationary pressures, to avoid mortgaging the lives of our children and to achieve the goal we have set ourselves. But long continued taxes, that are only a little below the confiscatory level, will destroy free government. Today, staggering federal expenditures for civil and military purposes have soared to totals beyondthe comprehension of ordinary citizens.

In a world threatened by war, a great proportion of these is inescapable else we would standhelpless before the threat that hovers over the free world.

And then the general went on to discuss another evil. One, he said, which threatens us is the gradual absorption by the central government of functions that belong to local communities and to individuals. The stiflingand costly bureaus that spring out of this process are mannedby experts in self-perpetuation and ceaseless expansion, to no profit in terms of the national welfare.

Bureaucracy - helpless to lead older nations to security and prosperity - will do no better in America. Here, said General Eisenhower, our first need is to promote efficiency in government within the framework of the Constitution.

The federal government must be so organized that we feelconfident we haven't lost sight of such things as thrift, frugality and economy.

And Gen. Eisenhower then said only aroused citizens can end these evils that increasingly grow into real threats to ourcountry; disunity, inflation, excessive taxation and bureaucracy.

On the matter of foreign policy, Gen. Eisenhower said: "We should know what is expected of other nations, which are accepting help from us, and we should be assured that those programs do not bring about an economic chaos that would defeat us all. We're entitled to reasonable estimates of how much our substance will be required in these great efforts."

On the subject of politics, the general said flatly that, in his opinion, 'one party had been in power too long.'

On the matter of foreign aid, he said, "I believe we can look forward to decreasing future costs without sacrificing the essentials of reasonable goals."

The general said, and this drew one of the largest rounds of applause, and it was perhaps his only direct political reference, when he said that "one party had been too long in power in this country." He ended his speech by saying, "I believe we can have peace with honor; reasonable security with national solvency." And he said, "I believe in the future of the United States of America."

Here in Abilene, Kansas, near the grandstand, we don't know what's going on in therest of the world. Let's switch to New York for a report of other news of the day from Larry Lesueur. Afterthat, if there'stime, I shall attempt a personal comment regarding today's speech.

LESUEUR: Well, Ed, Gen. Eisenhower's homecoming town celebration was the big news back here too. But there were several other events of importance, particularly, the South Dakota primary and the steel dispute. ... ... And, Ed, that's the latest news here. Now what about the rest of the story in Abilene?

MURROW: Gen. Eisenhower's speech today was rather bland and restrained. Those who wanted Ike to come out swinging, as they put it, will be disappointed. It was more a declaration of faith than a political document. Many of the things the General said would be subscribed to by Harry Truman and Robt. Taft.

There was no criticism of Administration foreign policy except a casual reference to Yalta, and that had to do with secrecy rather than substance.

He did not attempt to assign partisan blame for the collapse of China. He did not lash out at corruption in high places in government, but pointed out that is sort of seeps up from the bottom.

Those who have accused the general of 'me-tooism' will find support for their contention in this speech. Those who have urged the general to conduct a dignified, high-level campaign, will be pleased by today's effort.

I doubt that this speech will set the prairies afire or start any great stampede. But it clear some ground as to where the general stands in terms of the dangers that confront us. Just what he would do about them is somewhat less clear.

A few hundred reporters will try to get some clarification onthese subjects at tomorrow's news conference.

The hallmark of this speech was restraint coupled with a belief that the traditional virtues, thrift, honesty and belief in God, are as essential to the country as they were when Eisenhower was a boy here.

This is Ed. Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the word for today. Now, here is Bob Dixon.

ANNOUNCER: ... That's my word for today, and here's Mr. Murrow with his word for today.

MURROW: Watching Gen. Eisenhower today, standing on the marque of the Sunflower Hotel, having a fine time reviewing a parade, and then later on listening to his speech, reminded us of something said by Oliver Wendell Holmes: "Fame usually comes to those who are thinking about something else. Very rarely to those who say to themselves 'go to now— let us be a celebrated individual.'

Good night and good luck!

ANNOUNCER: ... (C O M M E R C I A L) ...

THIS IS CBS ... RADIO NETWORK. (30)

Thursday ~~June~~ June 5, 1952

#619

7:45

This is the news:

Mister ~~David D~~ Dwight Eisenhower said today that "Peace and security" are the p paramount issues in the political campaign, in which he is now engaged. In a few minut s I'd like to sum up for you the other answers Eisenhower gave us at a politicial newsconference in a movie theater in Abilene.

Senator Taft today seked the Fededal Communicatios Commission to make available to him "equal facilities"to thos e Eisenhower had on his radioa and television broadcasts last night. Taft says he will be satisfied with such facilitiew any day within the next week. The radio networks.. CBS...NBC and the American Broadcasting Company have told the Senator that they have given him network facilitiee in the past.

Senator Taft appears to have won the South Dakota primary.. and the 14 delegates to the Republican convention. The last report we have,, with only eight precincts missing..shows Taft leading by 641 votes out of a total of almost 129-thousand that have been counted.

Senator Kefauver won the Democratic primary and with his victory in California picked up another 68 convention votes. California's Governor Warren won the Republic primary race.

Senator Kefauver called on the ptesident in the White House today. Later, he told reporters that he expects..and hopes...that Mr. Truman will remain neutral throughout the Democratic convention. Kefauver said that if he wins the nomination he'll be pleased to have Truman'shelp.

The President told reporters today that he would remain neutral in the presidential race until the convention in Chicago starts. Mr. Truman was asked whether he thought Mr. Eisenhower spelled out the issues in the campaign in his Abilene speech yesterday . The President said he didn't know. He also told reporters that it is up to the people to decide whether Eisenhower was right in saying the Democrats have been in power to long. And he said those Republicans who charge that he is plotting to get the Democratic nomination again have..warped minds. He will not run for re-election.

The President today arranged for representatives of the steel induztry and the sreel workers union to meet in the White House and start negotiating again. Presidential assistant John Steelman will try to arrange a "quick settlement." Democratic Senator Mc Farland says he feels there is a possibility that the strike may be settled by Monday, Mr. Steelman says the negototiaors today got down to more real bargaining than at any time since the dispute began. Democratic Senator Byrd of Virginia wants the Congress to formally ask the Presidet to invoke the Taft-Hartley law to get the steel mills ~~work~~ring again.

The House today passed a one-billion-dollar-a-year G.I. bill of rights for veterans of the Korean war.. it would provide free schooling, goarantees of loans and other benefits for the men who have fought in Korea.

The House also approved a six billion 447-million dollar foreign aid bill..and sent it to the Senate. This is about a billion and a half less than the President asked for military and eceonomi aid for our allies.

Price Stabilizer Ayres today removed price ceilings from white potatoes. And industry spokesmen say this will break the ~~black-market~~ black-market in potatoes.

A House committee investigating whether radio and television are over-emphasizing sex, crime and violence, today heardfrom Paul Harvey, who is a news commentator for the Amerian Broadcasting Company out of Chicago. Harvey said the moral ~~m~~ atmospehere of New York is responsible for what he called the crude and offensive radio and television progra. Representa

Representative Klein from New York said:"New York, in my opinion, is one of the cleanest cities in the country."

The Senate today defeated a move by Republican Senator Dirksen of Illinois to suspend all price controls next September first. The vote was 54 to 27.

In Korea, the Communist negotiators at the truce conference brought up the Geneva convention (which they have not signed) to support their demand that we return to them even those prisoners of war who don't want to go home. General Harrison, our chief negotiator, told the enemy: "Your position is fraudeulent...as are all the rest of your positions with respect to the prisoner of war issue,"

One non-Communist North Korean prisoner of war on Koje told American reporters today that he had been sentenced to death by fanatical Communist prisoners..and beaten for a week.. before he manged to get out of his compound.

In Germany, the Russians demand that the United States pay Communist east Germany 14-million dollars for the use of telephone lines to Berlin..over the past seven years. The Russians threaten to cut the lines..if we do not pay them.

At nine oclock this mornung..in a small movie house in Abilene, Mr Eisenhower faced a ~~fa~~ considerable number of reporters,..the conference was televised, as frequently happens with other candidates,.....Eisehower said that in his youth, he had aspired to be another Hans Wagner or a Pullman conductor,..today he did some pretty fair fielding,..but the conference lasted less than an hour,...//..When it was over, there wasnt much doubt that Eisenhower stands on a platform of homely virtue,..will not deal in personalities of any kind,...He has rejected the advice of those who urged him to hit hard and often,..and he has rejected the counsel of those who urged him to say nothing,.. He is attempting to go down the middle of the road,..// Eisenhower began by establishing his voting record as a Republican,..He agrees that the big argument is between "socialism and freedom.",.. The first question was about the Korean war,..Eisenhower didnt have any prescription for bringing it to an end;..we cant retreat/...there is no clean cut answer...//..Next question:..who was responsible for the disaster in China?..Eisenhower didnt know, wasnt going to engage in personalities;..but the party in power took credit for the diplomatic victories during that period, and so they should take blame for the failures. Would Eisenhower support Taft if he should be nominated?...He would support any Republican candidate, but he wasnt going to engage in personalities..

Does Eisenhower favour a compulsory FEPC?..He thought that was a sort of shot gun question,..He is for fairness and equality amongst all American citizens,..but we can't cure all the evils in mens hearts by law, and he really believes that we can do more by leadership and getting the states to do it,.. In short, he is against compulsory FEPC,....Would the General be willing to appoint some negro of competence to his cabinet, such as Ralph Bunch?..The question was premature,..question hadnt come up,..but the General said he had always searched for the best men he could find,.. and his Columbia UNIVERSITY had given Dr Bunch an honorary degree,.....~~If the communists in our government are offensive~~...Does Eisenhower favour the re election of Senator Macarthy?.. Again the General wasnt going to engage in personalities,..He wants to uproot all communistic or pinkish elements from government, believes it can be done without besmirching the reputation of any innocent man,(..He didnt say whether he favoured the re election of senator Macarthy).....On the steel dispute, Eisenhower didnt want to comment,..The Supreme Court had spoken, and he believes in Constitutional Government,.....Regarding the Taft-Hartley law, Mr Eisenhower thought we must find some way of getting these people together,.. (He dodged that one).....On the matter of compulsory health insurance, he declined to answer too specifically, but he was against submitting ourselves to a controll that would lead eventually to socialism....

Eisenhower would hate to see us excluded from the St Lawrence seaway.....

Does Eisenhower think he will win over Taft at Chicago?..He doesnt have the least idea,..He is going to speak out as frankly as he knows how, because he is very proud of everybody who thinks he still has something to give to the United States..//..The real issue confronting the country in the opinion of Mr Eisenhower,is peace and security,.....Does Eisenhower approve the administrations foreign policy?..He has never been part of any administration;..he agrees with what we are trying to do in Europe;..we ought not to handcuff ourselves with pre-action statements;..we should be ready to act in our own self interest..//...Then came the Mac Arthur question;..would Eisenhower make use of him?..Again the General wasnt going to engage in personalities,..He has great respect for Mac Arthurs intellectual and professional capacities,..If Eisenhower became president, nothing would bar him from seeking out the finest brains and experience,...General Eisenhower would want to know what General Mac Arthur thought about the Far East,..(but there was no promise of a job.)....Then came the question about delegates coming on expense-paid trips to see Eisenhower,..He said he had had no part in it,..and he added;"Even now, as you can see, it would be foolish for me to try to assume any directive or decisive influence."...He has never asked a man for a nickel;..has great faith in the integrity and honour of the men backing him...

Someone asked about the charges that Eisenhower rose to high rank under a Democratic administration, and, therefore, wouldnt wage a hard-hitting campaign,, the reply was that he didnt know Roosevelt well, never heard him talk politics except on the radio,..Any connection between him and any political administrati was a shiboleth,.....On the subject of Agriculture and soil conservation,..Mr Eisenhower said conservation is imperative, and some form of price support for farmers seemed necessary...but he wasnt sure just what the figures should be..

Those who were worried about whether Mr Eisenhower,(thats what he prefers to be called now.),..could handle a news conference,could have saved their worries, he thinks fast on his feet,his evasions are no more obvious than those of other politicians,..and he has clearly decided how he's going to run this show:restraint,no name calling,stick to generalities as much as possible,.. admit lack of opinion or information upon subjects where he is obviously uninformed,..#.It seemed to be the opinion of most reporters there today that the news conference was not a great triumph and certainly it was no defeat,.. After all, it was just a trial run..... There will be more!

Todays news conference with Mr Eisenhower lasted a little less than an hour,..There were many questions unasked, and, therefore, unanswered,.. Individual views as to the answers will differ;.. there will be other opportunities for questions to be put,..And as tha campaign progresses, Mr Eisenhower may remember the advice of Edward Young, who said....Hard questions must have hard answers....

Good night and good luck.....

Friday - June 6, 1952

This is the news:

Representatives of the steelworkers union, and the steel industry, have spent another day trying to reach a settlement in their dispute. None of the participants would say anything on their progress, or lack of it. There will be another meeting tomorrow. Republican Senator Morse of Oregon predicts the strike will be settled "in the next few days." He says that "sources he considers reliable" have told him enough to satisfy him that there will be an agreement. Defense Secretary Lovett says his department is faced with "a very grave situation" as a result of the steel strike. ~~He is asking congress [illegible] are working on [illegible] items [illegible] that have [illegible] been closed down.~~

~~The Senate tonight approved a farm appropriations bill that calls for almost one and a third billion dollars. Democratic Senators Anderson of New Mexico and Douglas of Illinois tried to reduce the bill by 100 millions But their move was defeated.. 35 to 20.~~

Republican Senator Wiley of Wisconsin said today that "so-called American leaders" are helping Russian propagana, by talking as if air power alone could win a war in Europe. Wiley..the ranking Republican on the Foreign Relations committee.. told reporters he was not criticizing

Senator Taft, who has said that "control of the air is the only possible insurance of peace." Wiley told the Senate that Europeans are frightened by those Americans who are saying that in event of war we would retreat to the Rhine or the Pyrenees.. and atom-bomb everything in between our line and the enemy's. Senator Wiley says those who argue along these lines "are guilty of contributing to and feeding the Russian propaganda mill."

The politicians had much to say today. Senator Taft said that he would be willing to compromise "on a fair basis" any disputed delagtes to the Republican convention..such as those in Texas.

Mister Eisenhower, returning to New York from Kansas, told reporters:" Gee, that sounds good." But Senator Lodge, Eisenhower's campaign manager, says:" It is never right to compromise with dishonesty. We are in the right both on the facts and on the law and we'll enter into no deals which will disenfranchise the Republicans of Texas."

Eisenhower told reporters today:"We're in a terrifically serious time right now or they wouldn't have me in this political race." And he gave reporters a little more light on what he said about the two-party system in his Abeilen speech. Eisenhower said today:"If one party stays in power for 20 years..it easily becomes 24 and then 28 years until finally you have a monolithic state as they have abroad..or their splinter parties."

The general's views on an F.E.P.C. bill today brought a statement from Walter White of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. He has asked Eisenhower "to reconsider your statement on fair employment in light of your affirmation of unalterable support of fairness among all citizens."

And Senator Taft, noting Eisenhower's approval of the Republican party's February 1950 statement, told reporters he's glad Eisenhower approves of the "Liberty against socialism" theme..because the Senator says he had a lot to do with writing that statement.

In Vermont, Senator Kefauver said that "for purely political purposes" "certain men are trying to create instruments of terror to silence their opponents.

The President is in Springfield, Missouri tonight..for a reunion with his world war one buddies of the 35th division.

Russia's ambassador to the United States...Alexander Panyushkin..announced today that he is returning home.."in connection with a new appointment." He will be succeeded by Georgi Zarubin..a former ambassador to Great Britain and to Canada. Zarubin was the ambassador to Canada in 1946 when the Canadians uncovered a big atomic spy ring..and found its roots in the Soviet embassy.

Western Union today asked the Federal Communications Commission for authority to raise its rates on domestic messages and money orders by a little over nine per cent. The company says it needs the boost to pay its employes higher wages.

~~The government says that the wholesale prices of white potatoes shot up as much as two to four dollars a hundred pounds overnight.. after price ceilings were removed yesterday.~~

In Korea today.. the prisoners of war on Koje island were quieter than at any time since the Dodd incident.

United Nations Secretary General Trygve Lie says he too has warned South Korean President Rhee to stop using "arbitrary methods" in handling his national assembly.

And at Panmunjom, our truce negotiators told the Communists they are illegally blocking off their prisoner of war camps..by not permitting inspection by the Red Cross.

The Fifth Air Force says our jets destroyed seven enemy Migs and damaged two more.

In Germany, Walter Ulbricht, the Communist leader in East Germany, called on railway workers in the Soviet zone to block "the west's enslavement of all Germany by organizing the armed defense of our homeland."

And General Ridgway, in a D-Day anniversary speech in Normandy, said the west would suffer a great deal if the Communists start a war. But--he said--"it would bring destruction to them and their power."

Edward R. Murrow: June 6, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

There comes a time when a reporter wearies of reporting political speeches. This is the season for commencement speeches. # For generations, each graduating class has been told that it is emerging from the cloistered academic halls, into a world beset with doubt, uncertainty and perplexing problems. That is true today, and probably always will be. # It's always a mistake to give advice, and it's a major error to give good advice. / But it has always seemed to me that Commencement speakers ought to be a little more specific and practical in their advice. To the trim, hard-muscled athlete, who is going to sit in an office, they should recall the words of Margaret Halsey (for they will be applicable ten or fifteen years from now): "He must have had a magnificent build, before his stomach went in for a career of its own." / To those who long for the "good old days", Mr. Dooley might be quoted: "The past always looks better than it was; it's only pleasant because it isn't here." / For those graduates inclined to be argumentative, a word from William Hazlitt: "We are not satisfied to be right, unless we can prove others to be quite wrong." To the graduate who barely squeaked by in Latin, some consolation from Heinrich Heine: "If the Romans had been obliged to learn Latin, they would never have found time to conquer the world." Two bits of counsel from Don Herold: to the graduate who is inclined to overwork: "Work is a form of nervousness." Someone once said: "My father taught me to work, but not to love it." To the holder of the sheepskin whose manners have not been polished as well as they might have been: "Be kind and considerate to others, depending somewhat upon whom they are." To the graduate who may regret youthful indiscretions, Katherine Mansfield says: "Regret is an appalling waste of energy; you can't build on it; it's only good for wallowing in." Advice for the student who wants to be a writer, from Don Marquis: "If you want to get rich from writing, write the sort of thing that's read by persons who move their lips when they're reading to themselves." Somerset Maugham has wise words for the co-ed looking for a husband: "American women expect to find in their husbands a perfection that Englishwomen only hope to find in their butlers." And for those who just want to be a gentleman, Billy Phelps said: "The final test for him is his respect for those who can be of no possible service to him."

Samuel Butler maintained that: "Life is the art of drawing sufficient conclusions from insufficient premises." Sydney Smith, on the other hand, took what might be called the clinical approach to this question when he said: "The great secret of life is digestion." The philosophical approach was perhaps best expressed by Susan Ertz, who remarked: "Millions who long for immortality do not know what to do with themselves on a rainy Sunday afternoon."

All of these words of wisdom will of course be forgotten, just like all Commencement speeches, so let's return to the traditional theme. This year's graduates are being told to have courage. Channing Pollock once said: "No man in the world has more courage than the man who can stop after eating one peanut".

I have an idea that a wholly serious Commencement speech could be done in a single paragraph. Something like this: Graduates who have achieved this distinction by hard work, cheating, or the indifference of your professors - you have had a good break; no one of you paid your own freight. No matter how wealthy your parents, how exclusive your school, society has paid some part of the cost of your education; you are in its debt. That sheepskin won't get or hold a job for you; it doesn't guarantee you personal profit at the expense of the society which made possible your superior intellectual training. Maybe you have been taught to think (we will know more about that in twenty years); but somewhere along the way you must have picked up some ideas about the dignity and the freedom of the individual, about his right to be wrong, and his rights under the law. You have finished your education at a time of uncertainty, unrest and unprecedented change. Don't overdevelop your instinct for being unhappy. Don't conclude prematurely that the individual is of little importance. If you don't like the books you read, go and write one. You are the, at least partially educated brood, of the most luxurious, powerful nation in the world. Maybe you are coming out of College into a depression, a war, certainly all XXXX kinds of alarms and excursions, constant tension and uncertainty. But look around the world and compare your lot, with that of your contemporaries elsewhere.

I have an idea ~~that an entire Commencement speech could be made in~~ a ~~half-dozen lines~~. ~~And surely that would be a good thing.~~ These words were written by the great German poet and philosopher, Goethe, and will of course, like most Commencement speeches, be forgotten. But just for the beauty of the language, and the clarity of the thought, I should like to read you the "complete" commencement speech in a half-dozen lines. "There are nine requisites for contented living: Health enough to make work a pleasure; wealth enough to support your needs; strength to battle with difficulties and overcome them; grace enough to confess your sins and forsake them; patience enough to toil until some good is accomplished; charity enough to see some good in your neighbor; love enough to move you to be useful and helpful to others; faith enough to make real the things of God; hope enough to remove all anxious fears concerning the future."

This is graduation time. And what Will Rogers said 18 years ago, still stands up:" It's not a bright future that we ask the college graduate to enter into. They feel they are the ones to right it, we feel we are the ones that lost it and will find it. We can't help but look back, they can't help but look forward. But we are both standing on the same ground - and their feet is there as firmly as ours."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
C.B.S. RADIO NETWORK

EXCERPT FROM BROADCAST OF
JUNE 6, 1952

There comes a time when a reporter wearies or reporting political speeches. This is the season of Commencement speeches. For generations, each graduating class has been told that it is emerging from the cloistered academic halls into a world beset with doubt, uncertainty and perplexing problems. That is true today, and probably always will be. It's always a mistake to give advice, and it's a major error to give good advice. But it has always seemed to me that Commencement speakers ought to be a little more specific and practical in their advice. To the trim, hard-muscled athlete, who is going to sit in an office, they should recall the words of Margaret Halsey, (for they will be aplicable ten or fifteen years from now): "He must have had a magnificent build, before his stomach went in for a career of its own." To those who long for the "good old days," Mr. Dooley might be quoted: "The past always looks better than it was; it's only pleasant because it isn't here." For those graduates inclined to be argumentative, a word from William Hazlitt:"We are not satisfied to be right, unless we can prove others to be quite wrong." To the graduate who barely squeaked by in Latin, some consolation from Heinrich Heine: "If the Romans had been obliged to learn Latin, they would never have found time to conquer the world." Two bits of counsel from Don Herold - to the graduate who is inclined to overwork: "Work is a form of nervousness." Someone once said:"My father taught me to work, but not to love it." To the holder of the sheepskin who's manners have not been polished as well as they might have been:"Be kind and considerate to others, depending somewhat upon whom they are." To the graduate who may regret youthful indiscretions, Katherine Mansfield says: "Regret is an appalling waste of energy; you can't build on it; it's only good for wallowing in." Advice for the student who wants to be a writer, from Don Marquis:"If you want to get rich from writing, write the sort of thing that's read by persons who move their lips when they're reading to themselves." Somerset Maugham has wise words for the co-ed looking for a husband: "American women expect to find in their husbands a perfection that Englishwomen only hope to find in their butlers. And for those who just want to be a gentleman, Billy Phelps said:"The final test for him is his respect for those who can be of no possible service to him."

Samuel Butler maintained that:"Life is the art of drawing sufficient conclusions from insufficient premises." Sydney Smith, on the other hand, took what might be called the clinical approach to this question when he said: "The great secret of life is digestion." The philosophical approach was perhaps best expressed by Susan Ertz, who remarked: "Millions who long for immortality do not know what to do with themselves on a rainy Sunday afternoon."

All of these words of wisdom will of course be forgotten, just like all Commencement speeches, so let's return to the traditional theme. This year's graduates are being told to have courage. Channing Pollock once said: "No man in the world had more courage than the man who can stop after eating one peanut."

I have an idea that a wholly serious Commencement speech could be done in a single paragraph. Something like this: Graduates who have achieved this distinction by hard work, cheating, or the indifference of your professors - you have had a good break; no one of you paid your own freight. No matter how wealthy your parents, how exclusive your school, society had paid some part of the cost of your education; you are it its debt. That sheepskin won't get or hold a job for you; it doesn't guarantee you personal profit at the expense of the society which made possible your superior intellectual training.

Maybe you have been taught to think, (we will know more about that in twenty years), but somewhere along the way you must have picked up some ideas about the dignity and the freedom of the infididual, about his right to be wrong, and his rights under the law. You have finished your education at a time of uncertainty, unrest, and unprecedented change. Don't overdevelop your instinct for being unhappy. Don't conclude prematurely that the indivudual is of little importance. If you don't like the books you read, go and write one. You are the at least partially educated brood of the most luxurious, powerful nation in the world. Maybe you are coming out of college into a drepession, a war, certainly all kinds of alarms and excursions, constant tension and uncertainty. But look around the world and compare your lot with that of your contemporaries elsewhere.

These words were written by the great German poet and philosopher, Goethe, and will, like most commencement speeches, be forgotten. But just for the beauty of the language, and the clarity of the thought, I should like to read you the "complete" commencement speech in a half-dozen lines. "There are nine requisites for contented living: Health enough to make work a pleasure; wealth enough to support your needs; strength to battle with difficulties and overcome them; grace enough to confess your sins and foresake them; patience enough to toil until some good is accomplished; charity enough to see some good in your neighbor; love enough to move you to be useful and helpful to others; faith enough to make real the things of God; hope enough to remove all anxious fears concerning the future."

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word for Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: This is graduation time, and what Will Rogers said 18 years ago, still stands up: "It's not a bright future that we ask the college graduate to enter into. They feel they are the ones to right it; we feel we are the ones that lost it, and will find it. We can't help but look back; they can't help but look forward. But we are both standing on the same goounds - and their feet are there as firmly as ours."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Monday - June 9, 1952

This is the news:

American troops have captured Compound 76 on Koje island. We have reports that 24 Communists were killed...25 wounded. One American was killed..13 wounded..in the first two hours of fighting. Our troops moved in after the prisoners of war turned down an ultimatum to assembly their 64-hundred men into groups of 150.

1A

~~This is the news.~~

~~American troops are now fighting Communist prisoners of war on Koje~~

~~island. The battle began after the Communists turned down an ultimatum~~

~~to assemble their [illegible] hundred prisoners in groups of 150 men. The~~ ~~latest word from Koje reports three casualties: at least 30 Communists~~

~~wounded, 12 killed. At least two Americans have been killed during the~~

~~[illegible] in the mandatory [illegible] the ur[illegible]~~.

~~They~~ Our Troops were in full battle dress, ~~[illegible]~~ supported by tanks and armored cars. ~~Our troops~~ used flame-throwers.. ..tear gas.. concussion grenades. The Communists fought with crude but deadly weapons, from ~~[illegible]~~ waist-deep trenches they had built. ~~[illegible]~~ At last ~~[illegible]~~ 4,000 of the prisoners have been taken out of the compound...(the same one where former General Dodd had been held prisoner). General Boatner, the new ~~[illegible]~~ prison camp commander, says the Communists ~~[illegible]~~ kill~~ing~~ed some of their fellow prisoners, to prevent them from obeying our orders. The prisoners ~~are using~~ used gasoline to burn down their tents and buildings.

2)

Army Secretary Pace said today he disagrees with Major General Daniel Hudelson's statement that we cannot win in Korea..that we don't have the manpower to stand up to a Communist attack. Hudelson has returned to this country and private life after 21 months as head of the California National Guard division in Korea. Secretary Pace says "the men who know most about the situation" diagree. They feel we can meet any challenge.

Today, General Van Fleet told reporters his army is ready, alert and fit to meet any enemy offensive. He said the 8th army's morale is high.."almost to the point of wishing the enemy would attack."

~~On Koje island our troops went through their second dress rehearsal for when the time comes to break the big prison compounds into smaller ones. Inside those compounds, the prisoners have dug deep trenches. apparently waiting for our troops to come in.~~

The Communist high command in Korea today sent a letter to General Mark Clark protesting the three-day recess we have taken in the armistice talks. The enemy says "What you could not get on the battlefront you cannot get at the conference site." Our delegation does not intend to return to the conference site until Wednesday.

In Washington, leaders of the striking C.I.O. steelworkers and industry representatives are still trying to settle the week-old strike. Today the President asked the Senate not to take any action on the dispute because...he said..."parties on both sides appear to be seeking a settlement"....any Senate action might result in a break-down of negotiations. (The Senate agreed to do nothing.)

5

The Senate today passed, and sent to the White House, a six billion 447-million dollar foreign aid bill. That's almost one and a half billion less than the Administration requested. The final Senate vote was 59 to 11.. with ten Republicans and Democratic Senator Johnston of South Carolina voting against it.

The Federal Reserve Board announced today that starting on Wednesday smaller down payments will be required of those buying new homes. ~~Veterans will not have to make any down payments if they~~ buy ~~houses costing less than 7 thousand dollars. Non-veterans buying homes for 7 thousand or less must pay 500 dollars down..half of what they had to pay under the old regulations. In 10 thousand dollar class the reduction is only 50-dollars..from the present down payment of 24-hundred dollars to two thousand three hundred and fifty. And if you want to buy a house that costs 25 thousand dollars or more the down-payment will be 10 thousand instead of 12-thousand 500.~~

The Supreme Court today agreed to hear arguments. when it meets again in October. on segregation in the schools. Parents of children in segregated schools in Topeka and in Clarendon County, South Carolina, argue that their children are "stigmatized with the badge of inferiority" by having to attend all-negro schools. Governor Byrnes of South Carolina has threatened to abandon the public school system in his state if segregation is declared illegal.

Today the court voted six to three that the Railway Labor Act bars unions from "using their position and power to destroy colored workers jobs in order to give them to white workers." The court said an agreement between the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the St. Louis-San Fransisco railroad threatened Negro train porters with the loss of their jobs for the sole reason that they are not white. For the minority, Justice Minton said the majority seemed to be trying to institute a federal fair employment practise code by sheer power. He said this is no substitute for legality.

In Berlin tonight, the British lifted their week-old blockade of the Russian radio's headquarters..in the British sector. The western commandants take the view that the barricade of the Soviet radio might boomerang if we continued it any longer. Since [redacted] British troops first surrounded the station, the Soviets have [redacted] lifted some of their pressure on the Berlin border.

In the Netherlands today, Iranian Premier Mossadegh told the World Court that it has no jurisdiction in Iran's fight with Britain over oil production in Iran.

Here in New York today, General Eisenhower met with Republican delegates from New Hampshire, Delaware, Massachusetts and Connecticut. Mrs. Clare Booth Luce, one of the Connectict delegates, says Eisenhower told her group that "a general's name was placed in nomination at the Republican convention in 1948, without any dissent from the General." This was a reference to General MacArthur. Recently MAC ARTHUR had warned against electing a military man to be president. And in the South Dakota campaign he urged voters to vote for Senator Taft.

In Chicago today, Taft supporters were urging that General Mac Arthur be chosen the party's keynoter at the Republican convention in Chicago. The committee on arrangements makes the decision tomorrow. Russel Sprague of New York, an Eisenhower supporter, says Mac Arthur should not get the job because he "has been particularly vehement and active" in supporting Senator Taft. But Sprague concedes that the Taft-men on the committee have the strength to name Mac Arthur if they want to. Carroll Reece, a Taft supporter, says Mac Arthur is a great American "who can give direction and moral tone to the convention."

Edward R. Murrow: June 9, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

The state presidential primaries are now over. No one can add up the figures [redacted] to show that Taft or Eisenhower, or any Democratic candidate will have enough to win on the first ballot. The scramble is now on for the uncommitted, doubtful or contested delegates. So far as the Republicans are concerned, it appears that their candidate will be chosen by considerably less than half a hundred men. This is the area where trades and deals are made in both Parties, without regard to the wishes or desires of the electorate.

Once again we [redacted] are witnessing a sort of political shell game, played by professional politicians of both Parties. The individual voter is a mere spectator - he will finally be confronted by a choice between two candidates, but he will not really have had a hand in choosing either one. We like to boast of our free elections, but our method of selecting candidates amounts to a denial of democratic processes. In all the states where primaries have been held, under varying rules and conditions, only in New Hampshire are the delegates legally bound to vote the way the voters in that state voted.

Perhaps the best way to illustrate this would be to ask you whether you as an individual - whether you be Republican or Democrat - had any real voice in selecting your Party's candidate. The overwhelming majority of you did not. If you are a Republican and want to vote for Taft, or for Eisenhower, you may or may not get the chance to do so. It all depends on what deals are made between now and Chicago, by less than fifty men. (The same thing will probably be true in connection with the Democratic Convention.)

There are those who object to calling these negotiations and arrangements deals, but that's what they are. The Party bosses will make the decisions in this particular form of bargain basement politics. This has been going on for a long time. Back in 1912 both the Democratic and Progressive platforms called for nationwide presidential primaries. Woodrow Wilson's first message to Congress asked for federal legislation to make this possible. But nothing happened. About five months ago Senator Paul Douglas of Illinois, and Congressman Charles Bennett of Florida, introduced Bills for a nationwide presidential primary. Their proposal was greeted with an eloquent outburst of silence from professional politicians. After all, their proposal would have permitted Democrats and Republicans alike to have some say in choosing their Party's candidate. And that, of course, would destroy the trading position, the bartering power of the professional politicians.

There is of course no way of telling whether Taft or Eisenhower would have won out in a direct presidential primary. But had there been one, millions of Republican voters would have made the ~~XXXX~~ choice, rather than having it made by considerably less than half a hundred men. Our system of selecting candidates mocks our protestations that the people choose their leaders. And it is perpetuated by what might be termed the "professional politicians' trade union."

For example, the choice between Eisenhower and Taft might well, in theory at least, be determined by the Texas Delegation. There will be two of them, one supporting Eisenhower, the other Taft. The Eisenhower boys say the Taft crew just plain stole the delegation. If they did, there's nothing new about this either. But it would have been interesting, important and democratic to have had a vote in Texas and in the other states to determine just which of the two candidates were favored by the majority of Republican voters; likewise for the Democrats.

Political conventions can be interesting spectacles. The row over the Texas Delegation could come to the floor in Chicago, before the full Convention, and there we might see an able prosecutor like Thomas E. Dewey cross-questioning the Taft delegates, and someone like Senator Dirksen firing questions at the Eisenhower delegates. This could, in theory, go on for days.

At the end of each session there could be a burst of ~~XXXX~~ organ music and the admonition: "Tune in again tomorrow, for the solution of this fascinating mystery: will Ike or Bob win the Texas Delegation?" It may not be seemly to speak in such light-hearted vein of a matter so important as the choosing of a Party's presidential nominee - whether Republican or Democrat. But the fact is that so far as the individual voter is concerned, this process has become a spectator sport.

This reporter doesn't pretend to know whether a direct presidential primary would provide either the Republicans or Democrats with better candidates. But it would make it possible for members of both Parties to participate in selecting their candidate, and remove the choice from the fewer than half a hundred whose bargaining, trading and dealing, is prompted by political self-interest. Hugh Johnson once said: "We're shooting craps with the nation's destiny." That may be happening in the selection of the two P~~arty's~~ parties' candidates. It seems reasonable that the individual voter ought to be permitted to roll the dice once.

Four weeks from today the Republican Convention begins in Chicago...and it should be quite a show. "A convention, " will Rogers said, "is the one place where our public men can do foolish things and due to the surroundings they look kinder plausible at the time. It takes weeks after one is over to see what was really inside it. Then is when our sense of humor asserts itself."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY - JUNE 9, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

American troops have captured Compound 76 on Koje Island. We have reports that 24 Communists were killed - 25 wounded. One American was killed, 13 wounded in the first two hours of fighting. Our troops moved in after the prisoners of war turned down an ultimatum to assemble their 64-hundred men into groups of 150. Our troops were in full battle dress supported by tanks and armored cars....used flame-throwers, tear gas, concussion grenades. The Communists fought with crude but deadly weapons, from waist-deep trenches they had built. At least 4,000 of the prisoners have been taken out of the compound, (the same one where former General Dodd had been held prisoner). General Boatner, the new prison camp commander, says the Communists killed some of their fellow prisoners to prevent them from obeying our orders. The prisoners used gasoline to burn down their tents and buildings. Army Secretary Pace said today he disagrees with Major General Daniel Hudelson's statement that we cannot win in Korea - that we don't have the manpower to stand up to a communist attack. Hudelson has returned to this country and private life after 21 months as head of the California National Guard Division in Korea. Secretary Pace says "the men who know most about the situation" disagree. They feel we can meet any challenge.

Today General Van Fleet told reporters his army is ready, alert and fit to meet enemy offensive. He said the 8th Army's morale is high, "almost to the point of wishing the enemy would attack."

The Communist High Command in Korea today sent a letter to General Mark Clark protesting the three day recess we have taken in the armistice talks. The enemy says: "What you could not get on the battlefront you cannot get at the conference site." Our delegation does not intend to return to the conference site until Wednesday.

In Washington, leaders of the striking CIO steelworkers and industry representatives are still trying to settle the week-old strike. Today the President asked the Senate not to take any action on the dispute because - he said- "Parties on both sides appear to be seeking a settlement"; any Senate action might result in a breakdown of negotiations. (The Senate agreed to do nothing.)

The Senate today passed, and sent to the White House, a six billion 447-million dollar foreign aid bill. That's almost one and a half billion less than the Administration requested. The final Senate vote was 59 to 11, with ten Republicans and Democratic Senator Johnston of South Carolina voting against it.

The Federal Reserve Board announced today that, starting on Wednesday, smaller down payments will be required of those buying new homes.

The Supreme Court today agreed to hear arguments (when it meets again in October) on segregation in the schools. Parents of children in segregated schools in Topeka and in Clarendon County, South Carolina, argue that their childre are "stigmatized with the badge of inferiority" by having to attend all-negro schools. Governor Byrnes of South Carolina has threatened to abandon the public school system in his state if segregation is declared illegal.

Today the Court voted six to three that the Railway Labor Act bars unions from "using their position and power to destroy colored workers jobs in order to give them to white workers." The Court said an agreement between the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the St. Louis-San Francisco railrodd threatene Negro train porters with the loss of their jobs for the sole reason that they are not white. For the minority, Justice Minton said the majority seemed to be trying to institute a Federal Fair Employment Practice Code by sheer power. He said this is no substitute for legality.

In Berlin tonight, the British lifted their week-old blockade of the Russian radio's headquarters in the British sector. The western commandants take the view that the barricade of the Soviet radio might boomerang, if we continued it any longer. Since British troops first surrounded the station, the Soviets have lifted some of their pressure on the Berlin border.

In the Netherlands today, Iranian Premier Mossadegh told the World Court that it has no jurisdiction in Iran's fight with Britain over oil production in Iran.

Here in New York today, General Eisenhower met with Rephblican delegates from New Hampshire, Delaware, Massachusetts and Connecticut. Mrs. Clare Booth Luce, one of the Connecticut delegates, says Eisenhower told her group that "a general's name was placed in nomination at the Republican convention in 1948, without any dissent from the general." This was a reference to General MacArthur. Recently MacArthur had warned against electing a military man to be president. And in the South Dakota campaign, he urged voters to vote for Senator Taft.

In Chicago today, Taft supporters were urging that General MacArthur be chosen in the party's keynoter at the Republican convention in Chicago. The committee on arrangements makes the decision tomorrow. Russel Sprague of New York, and Eisenhower supporter, says MacArthur should not get the job because he "has been particularly vehement and active" in supporting Senator Taft. But Sprague concedes that the Taft-men on the committee have the strength to name MacArthur if they want to. Carroll Reece, a Taft supporter, says MacArthur is a great American "who can give diredtion and moral tone to the convention."

The state presidential primaries are now over. No one can add up the figures to show that Taft or Eisenhower, or any Democratic candidate, will have enough to win on the first ballot. The scramble is now on for the uncommitted, doubtful or contested delegates. So far as the Republicans are concerned, it appears that their candidate will be chosen by considerably less than half a hundred men. This is the area where trades and deals are made in both Parties, without regard to the wishes or desires of the electorate.

Once again we are witnessing a sort of political shell game, played by professional politicians of both Parties. The individual voter is a mere spectator - he will finally be confronted by a choice between two candidates, but he will not really have had a hand in choosing either one. We like to boast of our free elections, but our method of selecting candidates amounts to a denial of democratic processes. In all the states where primaries have been held, under varying rules and conditions, only in New Hampshire are the delegates legally bound to vote the way the voters in that state voted.

Perhaps the best way to illustrate this would be to ask you whether you as an individual - whether you be Republican or Democrat - had any real voice in selecting your Party's candidate. The overwhelming majority of you did not. If you are a Republican and want to vote for Taft, or for Eisenhower, you may or may not get the chance to do so. It all depends on what deals are made between now and Chicago, by less than fifty men. (The same thing will probably be true in connection with the Democratic Convention.)

There are those who object to calling these negotiations and arrangements deals, but that's what they are. The Party bosses will make the decisions in this particular form of bargain basement politics. This has been going on for a long time. Back in 1912, both the Democratic and Progressive platforms called for nationwide presidential primaries. Woodrow Wilson's first message to Congress asked for federal legislation to make this possible. But nothing happened. About five months ago, Senator Paul Douglas of Illinois, and Congressman Charles Bennett of Florida, introduced bills for a nationwide presidential primary. Their proposal was greeted with an eloquent outburst of silence from professional politicians. After all, their proposal would have permitted Democrat and Republican voters alike to have some say in choosing their Party's candidate, and that, of course, would destroy the trading position, the bartering power of the professional politicians.

There is of course no way of telling whether Taft of Eisenhower would have won out in a direct presidential primary. But had there been one, millions of Republican voters would have made the choice, rather than having it made by considerably less than half a hundred men. Our system of selecting candidates mocks our protestations that the people choose their leaders. And it is perpetuated by what might be termed the "professional politicians' trade union."

For example, the choice between Eisenhower and Taft might well, in theory at least, be determined by the Texas Delegation. There will be two of them, one supporting Eisenhower, the other Taft. The Eisenhower boys say the Taft crew just plain stole the delegation. If they did, there's nothing new about this either. But it would have been interesting, important and democratic, to have had a vote in Texas and in the other states to determine just which of the two candidates were favored by the majority of Republican voters; likewise for the Democrats.

Political conventions can be interesting spectacles. The row over the Texas Delegation could come to the floor in Chicago, before the full Convention, and there we might see an able prosecutor like Thomas E. Dewey cross-questioning the Taft delegates, and someone like Senator Dirksen firing questions at the Eisenhower delegates. This could, in theory, go on for days. At the end of each session, there could be a burst of organ music and the admonition: "Tune in again tomorrow for the solution of this fascinating mystery. Will Ike or Bob win the Texas Delegation?" It may not be seemly to speak in such light-hearted vein of a matter so important as the choosing of a Party's presidential nominee - whether Republican or Democrat. But the fact is that so far as the individual voter is concerned, this process has become a spectator sport.

This reporter doesn't pretned to know whether a direct presidential primary would provide either the Republicans or Democrats with better candidates. But it would make it possible for members of both Parties to participate in selecting their candidate, and remove the choice from the fewer than half a hundred whose bargaining, trading and dealing is prompted by political self-interest Hugh Johnson once said: "We're shooting craps with the nation's destiny." That may be happening in the selection of the two Party's candidates. It seems reasonable that the individual voter ought to be permitted to roll the dice once.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Four weeks from today the Republican Convention begins in Chicago, and it should be quite a show. "A convention," Will Rogers said, "is the one place where our public men can do foolish things, and due to the surroundings, they look kinda' plausible at the time. It takes weeks after one is over to see what was really inside it. Then is when our sense of humor asserts itself."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Tuesday June 10, 1952

This is the news:

The President today PERSONALLY appealed to a joint session of Congress for power to seize the steel industry and operate it UNTIL the present dispute is settled. Five hours later the Senate--ignoring the President's appeal--voted to "request" him to use the Taft-Hartley law. That is: appoint a board to inquire into the facts in the case..then, if necessary, seek an 80-day injunction to keep the steelworkers at work. The vote was 49 to 30. This "request" to the President was supported by 32 Republicans and 17 Democrats all from the south. Voting against it were 27 Democrats and three Republicans.

The President made it clear in his message to the Congress that he did not want to use the Taft-Hartley law. He said this would be: "unwise, unfair, and quite possibly ineffective." He said it would NOT BE fair, after the Steelworker's long delay in striking, to make them wait another 80-days for a cooling-off period. He said an injunction against the union would be taking sides with the steel companies against the steelworkers.

What the President proposed was a law giving him power to seize the industry..and thus assure production...give the workers a wage increase... and guarantee fair profits to the industry.

[redacted]

The President said:"I hope Congress will act quickly. The issue of peace or war hangs in the balance and steel is a vital element in the outcome. The issue is squarely up to Congress. I hope it meets it by enacting fair and effective legislation." Mr. Truman made it clear that if Congress insisted that he use the Taft-Hartley law, HE WOULD LIKE [redacted] special powers to seek an "immediate" injunction without having to wait until a fact-finding board reported.. [redacted]

But the Senate decided not to go along with the President..defeated three Democratic proposals along the lines the President suggested and [redacted] voted to "request" him to use the Taft-Hartley law.

[redacted]

Senator Taft, who called the President's arguments childish, accused him of"scheming a deal" with Phil Murray ..to seize the industry AND raise wages [redacted] without the inconvenience of a strike.

There is no comment from the White House tonight.

In Chicago today, the Arrangements Committee for the Republican National convention selected General Mac Arthur to be the convention keynoter. Walter S. Hallanan of West Virginia , a Taft supporter, was selected as temporary chairman..the man who will have to make important decisions on what happens to the disputed delegations. Representative Joe Martin will be the permanent chairman. Senator Millikan of Colorado will head the platform committee.

General Mac Arthur has informed the committee that his selection as keynoter took him "somewhat by surprise." He says he has grave doubts about his ability to fulfill the demands of the job. He accepts with "a real sense of grateful appreciation."

The Army today issued a statement, in reply to questions, saying it is not considering any action in connection with Mac Arthur's designation as keynoter at the Republican convention. The army declined comment on a regulation that prohibits Army personnel from participating in any activities at political conventions or making political speeches.

General Mac Arthur is on record favoring Senator Taft for the Presidential nomin tion. Most Eisenhower supporters, paying tribute to Mac Arthur as a great American, made it clear they would have preferred an impartial keynoter. Mister Eisenhower himself told reporter he doesn't discuss political matters.."just says what I believe"..and sent them to Senators Lodge and Carlson. Both Senators acknowledged they couldn't stop the Taft forces on the arrangements committee. But they had offered no keynote candidate of their own. Ralph Cake of Oregon, an Eisenhower supporter, told reporters in Chicago "The Taft people have rigged the convention machinery". later he modified this and said:"The Taft slate of officers has been bulled through regardless of tradition or the wishes of other candidates." [redacted]

In Washington, Attorney General Mc Granery told 94 federal prosecutors that he wants an immediate report on the criminal cases in their districts that have been pending the longest. He wants exact information on cases where no prosecution has been started.

A Senate committee today voted against the President's plan to change the way postmasters are selected. The President wants to put them under the civil service law..and take from the Senate the power to reject postmaster appointees.

A Federal grand jury in Washington today indicted Charles E. Shaver, on charges of accepting thirty-one hundred dollars in fees at the time he was counsel for the Senate small business subcommittee. The indictment charges that Shaver accepted the fees to push cases before government agencies.. a violation of the law.

Secretary of State Acheson today urged the Senate to [redacted] approve quickly the German peace contract, and the guarantee to help defend western Germany in case the Communists attack.

In West Berlin today, the Russians turned down the western protest against a 15-day-old ban on allied military patrols going from Berlin through the Helmstedt highway to the western zone of Germany. The Russians says we violated established regulations with these patrols in the past.

In Korea tonight the armistice talks will be resumed AFTER [redacted] a three-day recess. General Clark says if the Communists use their 2-thousand plane airforce in a new offensive, we should strike back with "no holds barred." On Koje island, after yesterday's battle in Compound 76, prisoners in two other big compounds expressed their willingness to be broken up into smaller groups..without trouble. And former Generals Dodd and Colson have informed a House committee that they feel their actions in the Dodd episode were fully justified...the best solution possible to avoid the death of Dodd and the slaughter of thousands of prisoners. Colonel Colson (both men were demoted) says his letter that secured the release of Dodd, "bore the approval of the headquarters" above him.

Edward R. Murrow: June 10, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

These are days when any reporter who does more than read the headlines is accused of political partisanship. With that fact in mind this reporter would like to make certain observations regarding our military establishment, and politics. First the facts that are all spread upon the record. About two-thirds of our national budget is now devoted to what can properly be termed Military Affairs. This gives our armed forces, and those who direct them, greater influence, direction and control over our economy than at any previous period of our peacetime history. They place the orders, determine who shall produce what, and in what quantity.

In 1948, when General MacArthur's name was placed before the Republican convention for nomination, he did not withdraw and did nothing to discourage his supporters. He was willing. In 1952, General MacArthur warns of the "dangers" of a military man becoming President, speaks of a "Military Junta". In 1948, General Eisenhower believed that in the absence of overriding considerations a man who had spent his life in military service should not seek high office. In 1952, General Eisenhower is seeking office. The two Generals have reversed their positions as of four years ago.

General Wedemeyer is beating the bushes in support of Taft. General Lucius Clay is one of the principal advisers of General Eisenhower. Senator Taft has made it clear that if elected he would change drastically the complexion of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; and has said that he would appoint General MacArthur to a position commensurate with his capabilities, by which presumably he meant Secretary of Defense.

But it is not the Republicans alone who are mixing the military with politics. President Truman's ~~XXXXX~~ military aide, General Vaughan, has for a long time been a not particularly resilient political football. General George Marshall was made Secretary of Defense AND of State; Admiral Kirk, Ambassador to Moscow. The President wanted to send General Mark Clark as our Envoy to the Vatican. Neither political Party can deny the charge that it has attempted to use military men for partisan political purposes. All these facts are in the record. And in this reporter's opinion they add up to a situation that merits serious attention. There is massive historical evidence that when politicians begin using the military as political pawns, then the military begins to play the political game.

I am not talking about what has loosely been called the military mind, because the military men that I have known have minds that vary as widely, are as well furnished or as barren of intellectual furniture, as doctors, lawyers or teachers.

What is here involved is not a plot by the Generals, but rather the danger - and it exists in both Parties - that our Military Establishment may become a political football, where command and advancement may be based upon political preference; where allegiance to the Party will be rewarded more promptly than allegiance to the State. When any group - whether it be composed of laboring men, religious men or military men - engaged in political activity, they must expect to pay the price of defeat if they fail to win.

We now find ourselves in a position where many of our active military leaders are afraid to speak out, to divulge information of most vital concern to this nation, lest they be accused of engaging in partisan politics.

~~We find ourselves in a situation where (for a time) the Air Force declined to divulge ([redacted]) weather conditions between Gander and Washington on the last leg of General Eisenhower's flight, or to give his estimated time of arrival, lest somehow the Air Force be accused of partisan activity.~~

We have never before maintained such a formidable military establishment in what is technically a time of peace. Never before has the Military Establishment exercised such a pervasive influence upon our economy. This is necessary. How long it must continue no man can say. # Mr. Truman has used military men for political purposes, and some have served the nation with great distinction. Both Mr. Taft and Mr. Eisenhower have availed themselves of the support and the counsel of high-ranking officers. No one can be sure whether Eisenhower, Taft, or the Democratic nominee, whoever he may be, would be more vigilant in protecting and insisting upon the maintenance of the non-political character of our armed forces. But in this sort of world the political neutrality, the allegiance to nation rather than Party of the armed forces may well be quite as important as the name of the individual elected in November.

We were speaking of the military men and ~~and his new relationship in every day~~ political affairs. The Australian, Sir Henry Parkes once remarked that "the trade of a soldier is war." And many believe ~~it would seem~~ that that is the way it should remain. But there are times when it becpmes difficult for the man in uniform to "disentangle" himself. In such instances, the best advice to follow is that of Propertius, who said:"Tis his cause, that makes or mars, a soldier's strength."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Wednesday - June 11, 1952

This is the news:

The President today approved a suggestion that we ask military leaders, from five neutral nations, to visit the prisoner of war camps in Korea. The suggestion was made to the President by Democratic Senator Russell of Georgia. The Senator, who is a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, is also chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee. He proposed that we ask top military men from India, Pakistan and Indonesia to go to Koje island...look over the way we are handling enemy prisoners of war..and then make a report, to all free people. The President, sending this suggestion on to Defense Secretary Lovett, added two countries.. Sweden and Switzerland..and said the Russell proposal "has a lot of merit." There now are representatives of the Red Cross on Koje. But Senator Russell feels the handling of the prisoners is a military problem... and might be best observed by military men. He feels the report by these neutral observers would give the lie to Communist propaganda charges, and prove to the free world that no Russian propaganda is to be trusted.

The Communist truce negotiators again tried to make much of the recent events on Koje in the latest truce talk..resumed after a three-day recess. They say we are "SLAUGHTERING prisoners."

On Koje today, we cleaned out another compound..without any trouble..and found 15 bodies..men who had been murdered within 12 hours before our troops came in. We have sent seven Communist leaders to solitary confinement for questioning about what happened. So far, three compounds have been fully evacuated.

An 8th army briefing officer says the enemy has stepped up his ground attack near Chorwon.. with very heavy artillery fire. And the Air Force reports that 12 of our jets tangled with 25 enemy Migs today. We shot down seven enemy planes. There is no report on any losses we might have suffered.

The Pentagon says we suffered another 553 casualties last week. The total list is now 109, 712.

A Tokyo newspaper reports that the Russians have rejected a Japanese demand, that they withdraw the Soviet mission to Japan, in compliance with the Japanese peace treaty. The paper reports that the Russians have told Japan the treaty is "ineffective" because Russia has not been a part of it... that Japan is still an occupied nation.

In Washington today, the Senate again refused to approve a move designed to give the President legal authority to seize the nation's steel mills. This was the fourth such move voted down. The Senate is now waiting for the President to act on its "request" that he use the injunction provision of the Taft-Hartley law. There was no word from the White House today..although some Administration leaders suggest the President may be waiting for the House to take some action. #

A move was made in the House to give the President authority to seize the mills, but it was ruled out of order. The House then approved the extension of 48 war-time powers of the President.. but dropped the President's authority to seize the nation's railroads.

The Senate has passed and sent to the White House a controversial immigration bill. It also approved and sent to the President a bill calling for the government to invest one-and-a-third billion dollars in national and international highways.

The House Banking Committee has voted to abolish all restrictions on installment buying and down-payments for houses, at the end of this month. The committee would extend wage, price and rent controls until the end of June , 1953.

Draft Director Lewis B. Hershey told a House committee today that the health of this nation's young men "not only has shown no improvement" but is "actually less favorable" now than during the last war. General Hersehy says that since June 1948... four years ago.. nearly 45 per cent of all draft-eligible men who have been examined have been rejected for physical, mental or moral reasons. The standards now are about the same as the lowest level used during World War Two. Hershey says the nation faces a challenging problem because "there is a real "youth-health problem" in this country which we cannot afford to ignore." The General's state-by-state breakdown shows that the lowest rejection rate in the country was found in Kansas..the highest in South Carolina.

President Truman talked today with visiting federal district attorneys. He told them that "some" congressional committees "don't know there is a bill of rights in the Constiutution." He said:"Your objective is to enforce the law.. we don't want anyone to get away with criminal action.. but in enforcing the law you must see that the individual has justice and receives the proper treatment under the Bill of Rights." He SAID he is against those who "assassinate characters for the purpose of public

The Federal Communications Commission today rejected a charge that CERTAIN radio and television stations have discriminated against some performers because they are alleged to have associated with Communist groups or Communist ACTIVITIES. The American Civil Liberties Union had filed a complaint with the F.C.C. charging blacklisting practises to CBS...NBC....ABC... and the Dumont television network, among others. The commission, issued no formal opinion, but said it had examined the complaint and the denials of the accused and decided that a general investigation is not warranted.

Secretary of Agriculture Brannon recommended to Congress today that it keep price supports for basic crops at "rigid high levels" for another three years. Allan B. Kline, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, says the Move to suspend "flexibility" in farm supports is "completely indefensible...politics."

There was politics here in New York today as General Eisenhower met with New York State delegates to the Republican convention. One delegate quotes the General as saying that under certain conditions--(with a buildup of the free world's economic and military strength)--there is a possibility of removing the fear of war within two or three years.

Eisenhower also spoke with John Foster Dulles. Mr. Dulles later told reporters he has not publicly announced his support for any Republican candidate. (What he is trying to do is get an agreement on a foreign policy plank for the party.) He believes there are no irreconciliable differences between Eisenhower and Taft, on foreign policy.

Paul Hoffman, one of Eisenhower's campaign leaders, told reporters he believes the Taft forces are trying to "steam-roller" the convention. He was asked about the selection of General MacArthur as the keynoter. He said once, in the Philippines, MacArthur chose Eisenhower to be his chief of staff. Hoffman added: "As long as Ike was in a subordinate position, Ike was wonderful."

David Ingalls, the Taft campaign manager, charged today that there's what he called "a strange affinity" between Eisenhower supporters, and the Administration. He noted that three Republican senators who support Eisenhower....Morse, Tobey and Ives.. yesterday voted for giving the President power to seize strike-bound defense industries. Ingalls says this raises "grave doubts" whether Eisenhower could wage an effective campaign for the presidency.. when three "Eisenhower managers" (as he called them) can vote counter to "the best wishes of the great majority of the Republicans, on an issue that is basic to party principles."

In Arizona today, Averell Harriman, a candidate for the Democratic nomination, charged that the Republican party has been captured by "weepers and wailers." He said G.O.P. stands for "grim old pessimists."

Secretary of State Acheson said today that the treaties to bring west Germany into the western alliance, do not in any way add to the President's powers to send American troops abroad...he believes the President has that power, when sending troops would add to the nation's security.

The United States and Britain said today they do not intend to claim any reperations, out of current production, from [redacted] the West Germany government, or any future German government. The French, in effect, reserve the right to make such claims in the future.

Britain and France have agreed to invite Russia to meet with the western powers to discuss Germany..providing the United States is willing.

Edward R. Murrow: June 11, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

Mr. Winston Churchill has never been reluctant to look danger, or bad news, in the face. Today he told his fellow-countrymen, that their island home is dangerously near economic bankruptcy. Britain is standing on a treacherous trapdoor, which may fall beneath it, at any time. The 77-year-old Prime Minister, was speaking to newspaper men in London, urging them to tell their readers the facts of Britain's economic plight. He said: "It does seem indeed hard, that the traditions and triumphs of a thousand years, should be changed by the ebb and flow of markets and commercial transactions." Mr. Churchill said: "Never in history has there been such a nation of fifty million people like Britain, limited in agricultural production, at such a dizzy eminence, and at the same time on such a precarious foundation." Mr. Churchill said: "Lands and nations whom we have defeated in war, or rescued from subjugation, are today more solidly sure of earning their living, than we who have imparted our message of parliamentary institutions to the civilized world, and who kept the flag of freedom flying, in some of its darkest days."

The British Prime Minister urged reporters not to be afraid of telling the British people "ugly things." He characterized his speech as, not a cry of despair, but an alert, and more than an alert - an alarm. Said Mr.

Churchill: "Our head is above water; but it is not enough to float; we have to swim successfully, and we have to swim against the stream."

Mr. Churchill was of course viewing the long sweep of British history, through which he has lived since Victorian times. He was deploring the passing of British power and glory. And he has great appetite for both power and glory. But he was doing more than that. He was speaking as the head of our most powerful and reliable ally; one that was grievously wounded during the war, and which man for man, and dollar for dollar, has made a greater effort than have we, to prepare to meet the challenge of aggressive communism. Mr. Churchill was not speaking merely to a British audience - (he seldom does.) He was saying in substance, to the New World, which has twice come to the rescue of the Old, that Britain may not be long able to maintain her present rate of re-armament, without suffering economic collapse. In urging British reporters to "expose any facts, however unpleasant," Mr. Churchill also exposed us to some unpleasant facts. Such candor might well be imitated in this country.

Winston Churchill made it clear to the people of Britain that there is no quick...no easy way out of their economic problem. It's pretty much as Dorothy Canfield Fisher once said:"very few can meet life's crises in one short, exalted hour of fighting." But Mr. Churchill and his countrymen do not discourage easily. They know well what Edmund Burke meant when he said: "Never despair. But if you do, work on in despair."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

WEDNESDAY - JUNE 12, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President today approved a suggestion that we ask military leaders from five neutral nations to visit the prisoner of war camps in Korea. The suggestion was made to the President by Democratic Senator Russell of Georgia. The Senator, who is a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, is also chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee. He proposed that we ask top military men from India, Pakistan and Indonesia to go to Koje Island, look over the way we are handling enemy prisoners of war, and then make a report to all free people. The President, sending this suggestion on to Defense Secretary Lovett, added two countries, Sweden and Switzerland, and said the Russell proposal "has a lot of merit." There now are representatives of the Red Cross on Koje. But Senator Russell feels the handling of the prisoners is a military problem, and might be best observed by military men. He feels the report by these neutral observers would give the lie to Communist propaganda charges and prove to the free world that no Russian propaganda is to be trusted.

The Communist truce negotiators again tried to make much of the recent events on Koje in the latest truce talk, resumed after a three-day recess. They say we are "slaughtering prisoners."

On Koje today, we cleaned out another compound without any trouble, and found 15 bodies, men who had been murdered within 12 hours before our troops came in. We have sent seven Communist leaders to solitary confinement for questioning about what happened. So far three compounds have been fully evacuated.

An 8th Army briefing officer says the enemy has stepped up his ground attack near Chorwon, with very heavy artillery fire. And the Air Force reports that 12 of our jets tangled with 25 enemy MIGs today. We shot down seven enemy planes. There is no report on any losses we might have suffered.

The Pentagon says we suffered another 553 casualties last week. The total list is now 109,712.

A Tokyo newspaper reports that the Russians have rejected a Japanese demand that they withdraw the Soviet mission to Japan in compliance with the Japanese peace treaty. The paper reports that the Russians have told Japan the treaty is "ineffective", because Russia has not been a part of it - that Japan is still an occupied nation.

In Washington today the Senate refused to approve a move designed to give the President legal authority to seize the nation's steel mills. This was the fourth such move voted down. The Senate is now waiting for the President to act on its "request" that he use the injunction provision of the Taft-Hartley law. There was no word from the White House today, although some Administration leaders suggest the President may be waiting for the House to take some action.

A move was made in the House to give the President authority to seize the mills but it was ruled out of order. The House then approved the extension of 48 war-time powers of the President, but dropped the President's authority to seize the nation's railroads.

The Senate has passed and sent to the White House a controversial immigration bill. It also approved and sent to the President a bill calling for the Government to invest one-and-a-third billion dollars in national and international highways.

The House Banking Committee has voted to abolish all restrictions on installment buying and down-payments for houses at the end of this month. The committee would extend wage, price and rent controls until the end of June 1953.

Draft Director Lewis B. Hershey told a House committee today that the health of this nation's young men "not only has shown no improvement" but is "actually less favorable" now, than during the last war. General Hershey says that since June 1948, four years ago, nearly 45 per cent of all draft-eligible men who have been examined, have been rejected for physical, mental or moral reasons. The standards now are about the same as the lowest level used during World War Two. Hershey says the nation faces a challenging problem because "there is a real 'youth-health problem' in this country, which we cannot afford to ignore." The General's state-by-state breakdown shows that the lowest rejection rate in the country was found in Kansas - the highest in South Carolina.

President Truman talked today with visiting federal district attorneys. He told them that "some" congressional committees "don't know there is a Bill of Rights in the Constitution." He said: "Your objective is to enforce the law; we don't want anyone to get away with criminal action, but in enforcing the law, you must see that the individual has justice and receives the proper treatment under the Bill of Rights." He said he is against those who "assassinate characters for the purpose of publicity."

The Federal Communications Commission today rejected a charge that certain radio and television stations have discriminated against some performers, because they are alleged to have associated with Communist groups or Communist activities. The American Civil Liberties Union had filed a complaint with the F.C.C. charging blacklisting practises to CBS, NBC, ABC, and the Dumont Television Network, among others. The commission, issued no formal opinion, but said it had examinied the complaint and the denials of the accused and decided that a general investigation is not warranted.

Secretary of Agriculture Brannon recommended to Congress today that it keep price supports for basic crops at "rigid high levels" for another three years. Allan B. Kline, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, says the move to suspend "flexibility" in farm supports is "completely indefensible... politics."

There was politics here in New York today as General Eisenhower met with New York State delegates to the Republican convention. One delegate quotes the General as saying that under certain conditions (with a buildup of the free world's economic and military strength), there is a possibility of removing the fear of war within two or three years.

Eisenhower also spoke with John Foster Dulles. Mr. Dulles later told reporters he has not publicly announced his support for any Republican candidat (What he is trying to do is get an agreement on a foreign policy plank for the Party.) He believes there are no irreconciliable differences between Eisenhower and Taft on foreign policy.

Paul Hoffman, one of Eisenhower's campaign leaders, told reporters he believes the Taft forces are trying to "steam-roller" the convention. He was asked about the selection of General MacArthur as the keynoter. He said once, in the Philippines, MacArthur chose Eisenhower to be his Chief of Staff. Hoffman added: "As long as Ike was in a subordinate position, Ike was wonderful."

David Ingalls, the Taft campaign manager, charged today that there's what he called "a strange affinity" between Eisenhower supporters and the Administration. He noted that three Republican Senators who support Eisenhower, Morse, Tobey, and Ives, yesterday voted for giving the President power to seize strike-bound defense industries. Ingalls says this raises "grave doubts" whether Eisenhower could wage an effective campaign for the presidency, when three "Eisenhow managers" (as he called them) can vote counter to "the best wishes of the great majority of the Republicans on an issue that is basic to party principles."

In Arizona today, Averell Harriman, a candidate for the Democratic nomination, charged that the Republican party has been captured by "weepers and wailers." He said G.O.P. stands for "grim old pessimists."

Secretary of State Acheson said today that the treaties to bring West Germany into the western alliance, do not in any way add to the President's powers to send American troops abroad. He believes the President has that power, when sending troops would add to the nation's security.

The United States and Britain said today they do not intend to claim any reperations, our of current production, from the West German Government or any future German government. The French, in effect, reserve the right to make such claims in the future.

Britain and France have agreed to invite Russia to meet with the Western Powers to discuss Germany, providing the United States is willing. Mr. Winston Churchill has never been reluctant to look danger or bad news in the face. Today he told his fellow-countrymen, that their island home is dangerously near economic bankruptcy. Britain is standing on a treacherous trapdoor, which may fall beneath it at any time. The 77-year-old Prime Minister was speaking to newspaper men in London, urging them to tell their readers the facts of Britain's economic plight. He said: "It does seem indeed hard that the traditions and triumphs of a thousand years, should be changed by the ebb and flow of markets and commercial transactions." Mr. Churchill said: "Never in history has there been such a nation of fifty million people like Britain, limited in agricultural production, at such a dizzy emminence, and at the same time on such a precarious foundation." Mr. Churchill said: "Lands and nations whom we have defeated in war, or rescued from subjugation, are today more solidly sure of earning their living than we who have imparted our message of parliamentary institutions to the civilized world, and who kept the flag of freedom flying in some of its darkest days."

The British Prime Minister urged reporters not to be afraid of telling the British people "ugly things." He characterized his speech as not a cry of despair, but an alert, and more than an alert - an alarm. Said Mr. Churchill: "Our head is above water, but it is not enough to float; we have to swim successfully, and we have to swim against the stream."

Mr. Churchill was of course viewing the long sweep of British history through which he has lived since Victorian times. He was deploring the passing of British power and glory, (and he has great appetite for both power and glory). But he was doing more than that. He was speaking as the head of our most powerful and reliable ally - one that was grievously wounded during the war, and which man for man, and dollar for dollar, has made a greater effort than have we to prepare to meet the challenge of aggressive Communism. Mr. Churchill was not speaking merely to a British audience; (he seldom does.) He was saying in substance, to thd New World, which has twice come to the rescue of the Old, that Britain may not be long able to maintain her present rate of re-armament, without suffering economic collapse. In urging British reporters to "expose any facts, however unpleasant," Mr. Churchill also exposed us to some unpleasant facts. Such candor might well be imitated in this country.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Winston Churchill made it clear to the people of Britain that there is not quick, no easy way out of their economic problem. It's pretty much as Dorothy Canfield Fisher once said: "Very few can meet life's crises in one short, exalted hour of fighting." But Mr. Churchill and his countrymen do not discourage easily. They know well what Edmund Burke meant when he said: "Never despair; but if you do, work on in despair."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Thursday - June 12, 1952

This is the news:

Allied troops in Korea today captured a hill on the western front in bitter fighting. Correspondents CALL it as fierce as any battle since last November. This was the sixth straight day of FIGHTING in this area.

At the truce talks, North Korean General Nam Il said our refusal to change our position on the exchange of war prisoners "amounts to inimidation." General Harrison, our chief negotiator, REPLIED: "I tell you flatly and definitely, that no further concessions will be forthcoming."

On Koje island, our troops cleaned out another prisoner of war compound. Some 400 enemy prisoners risked their lives..broke away from others in their camp..to come under allied protection. The men shouted "Now we are free" as they ran, with their hands in the air, towards our troops.

A House committee reveals that the original army board of inquiry that investigated the Dodd incident on Koje recommended against any punishment of Generals Dodd and Colson..both of whom were returned to their permanent rank as colonels. The board said that "under difficult circumstances both men had acted in the best interests of the United States and the United Nations." But General Mark Clark over-ruled this recommendation..made one of his own, that both men be dropped in rank. This was approved by Chief of Staff General Collins and Army Secretary Pace. Collins and Pace told a House committee that one reason for the trouble at Koje was that we couldn't spare enough troops to guard the island properly. We needed all the men we could get at the front. At one time, 132-thousand prisoners were being guarded by 28-hundred South Korean soldiers.

The South Korean government has cut-off Voice of America broadcast relays to North and South Korea. The South Koreans says the Voice has been "obviously insulting to the Syngman Rhee government. The State department is protesting.

Prime Minister Nehru told the Indian parliament today that [redacted] "support for persons operating like Rhee is just the reverse of what the United Nations stands for." Nehru also suggested that the Indian people had better not accept Communist claims of allied use of germ warfare in Korea, until one side or the other produces proof. And he told the Communists in his Parliament that their "continuing shouting of 'peace' has become so discordant and so loud that sometimes it sounds more like 'war.'"

In Washington today, a House committee voted against a proposal to give the president power to seize the steel mills..the first action by any House group since the President asked for these powers. And Senators who support the President have decided not to push their fight to get him seizure powers. The government appears ready to ask the industry and the union to open enough plants to turn out 500-thousand tons of finished steel a month..for defense needs. And in Pittsburgh tomorrow, Phil Murray meets with the executive board and wage policy committee of the striking C.I.O. steelworkers. The Ford Motor company says that unless the strike is settled, it will have to start closing down its plants across the nation in two weeks.

[redacted]

The President refused to [redacted] comment today on the Senate vote requesting him to use the Taft-Hartley act in the steel dispute.

And Mr. Truman told reporters that he regards the position of keynoter at [redacted] a convention..AS a "political" position. The Republicans have chosen General MacArthur for this job. The President says he is letting the army decide [redacted] what attitude it should take towards the General, who is still on active service. The President is taking no part in the army's consideration. But if he's not satisfied with what the army does, he'll call the army down.

Here in New York today, Senator Lodge..campaign manager for General Eisenhower..attacked the decisions made by the REPUBLICAN convention arrangements committee. Lodge says the Taft forces are frightened, because they don't have the votes.. they are showing contempt for popular government.. jeopardizing the party's chances for success in November. Lodge says the Eisenhower forces will fight back, in Chicago. He insists the Taft forces "will not control the floor in Chicago."

Both Eisenhower and Senator Taft met with convention delegates here in New York today. On some things both candidates agreed: that they would have used the Taft-Hartley law in the steel dispute... that taxes should be lowered.. that the government is spending too much money. To questions on the war in Korea, Taft said: we should continue our efforts for an armistice.. drag our feet in these truce talks until we have built enough arms to equip the South Koreans. Then he would have us withdraw. Eisenhower said: he has no definite answer on how to settle the war quickly. He, too, would build up the South Korean forces to the point where they would be able to hold-off any future aggression until other United Nations forces could arrive to help them. General Eisenhower also said: during the LAST war he opposed seperating Germany into occupied zones.. warned against isolating Berlin. He said his advice was not accepted by the politicians at Yalta and Potsdam.

Republican Governor McNeldin of Maryland says that a man representing himself as sent by Governor Fine of Pennsylvania proposed to him that Maryland, Pennsylvania and Michigan get their delegates together.. so that they could decide the contest between Taft and Eisenhower. Governor Fine says he had no part in any such proposal.

The Port of New York Authority announced today that Newark airport— closed since February 11..will re-open for limited traffic at midnight Sunday.

John J. McCloy, our high commissioner to Germany, told the Senate today that the Russians are waging a campaign of "terror and conquest" to try to keep west Germany from joining the western alliance against Communism.

Edward R. Murrow: June 12, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

Slowly, and rather painfully we are learning that allies can be troublesome. They don't always do what we think they ought to do. This can be very annoying. The French, for example, are urging an early conference with Russia, to talk about conditions under which a free election might be held in all of Germany, and how the country might be unified. We have no enthusiasm for this plan. # The British express increasing doubts about our conduct of the negotiations in Korea, and send Lord Alexander, their Defense Minister, out to have a look for himself. The knowledge that an Army Board decided that the then Generals Dodd and Colson did nothing wrong in making the deal with the prisoners on Koje Island is not likely to increase British respect for our military statesmanship.

Then, today, Britain's Labour Party, whose political strength is increasing, demanded the admission of Communist China to the United Nations; and an end to "outside restrictions" on Japan's relations with other nations. The Labour Party, like the French Government, wants a Big Four Conference, and free elections in Germany before Germany is re-armed. None of these developments makes our government very happy.

On top of this we are in an argument with our hardest pressed ally, the Government of South Korea. Its President, Syngman Rhee, has been feuding with his own legislature, and has thrown a dozen of its members into jail. This country, and several others, have suggested that he shouldn't do this; that it's a bad way to behave; and if we're fighting to protect democratic institutions in Korea, there ought to be some democracy behind the lines.

Today it was revealed that the South Korean Government has stopped broadcasting two half-hour news programs, produced by the Voice of America, and a fifteen-minute program of United Nations news. Copies of a recent issue of Newsweek Magazine have been confiscated by the South Korean Government. South Korean officials claim that the Voice of America programs were cut off because they were anti-government and "obviously insulting." A spokesman for the South Korean Government, which operates a network of 10 radio stations, said he wasn't going to continue to carry these critical foreign broadcasts, because they were too critical of the South Korean Government, and to continue broadcasting them would be like "lending a man a pistol to shoot you." So it comes down to this: our South Korean ally, whom we entered the war to save - or if you prefer, whom we took a police action in defense of - doesn't like our Voice, so they threw the switch. They are, of course, entitled to do that. It's a free country, thanks to the United Nations forces that blocked the communists from flooding down the Peninsula from the north. But it illustrates again that no nation bases its policy upon gratitude, ~~and~~ ~~XX~~/we cannot remake Nations either in Europe or in Asia, over in our own image. Our allies will continue to hold views of their own, and pursue policies calculated to serve their own self-interest. After all, we entered the alliances because we thought it would be in our self-interest.

An alliance of the kind we have undertaken, with commitments stretching round the world, is a very delicate thing. As a nation we have had practically no experience in dealing with peacetime allies. We never needed them before. We are so much stronger than they are that that fact increases our difficulties. The fact is that we are terribly short of experienced able men, to do our business with our allies. Leadership requires more than power. It demands persuasion, patience and pliability. It requires a meshing - the real co-ordination - of our economic, political, military and cultural interests. And it requires great tolerance. There must be constant attention to the light in which our policies appear, not only to people here at home but to our allies abroad, as well. We have reached the point where there is no real dividing line between domestic and international events.

We cannot expect or demand that our allies imitate us; but we should be concerned that they respect us. If this proposition is true, then it follows that one of the most astonishing stories of recent weeks turned up today when it was revealed that an Army Board of Enquiry had decided that Generals Dodd and Colson did nothing wrong, acted in the best interest of the Service, and so forth in their deal with the prisoners on Koje. Finally, General Clark and Secretary of the Army Frank Pace demoted the two acting Brigadiers to their permanent rank of Colonel, (which is about like taking a man's bonus away from him.) Such incidents cause our enemies to rejoice, and our allies to wonder greatly.

~~We are living in a period of doubt and uncertainty. And~~ In times such as these, we and our allies would do well to remember what G. Lowes Dickinson once said:"Our most threatening enemy is not the evil intention of the ordinary man, but the increasing confusion of our time." Sir Norman Angell summed up the problem this way:"How, out of complexity to distill simplicity; out of knowledge, essential understanding; out of confusion, clarity. (Upon its discovery will depend survival.")

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY - JUNE 12, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Allied troops in Korea today captured a hill on the western front in bitter fighting. Correspondents call it as fierce as any battle since last November. This was the sixth straight day of fighting in this area.

At the truce talks, North Korean General Nam Il said our refusal to change our position on the exchange of war prisoners "amounts to inimidation." General Harrison, our chief negotiator, replied: "I tell you flatly and definitely, that no further concessions will be forthcoming."

On Koje Island, our troops cleaned out another prisoner of war compound. Some 400 enemy prisoners risked their lives, broke away from others in their camp to come under allied protection. The men shouted, "Now we are free", as they ran, with their hands in the air, towards our troops.

A House committee reveals that the original Army Board of Inquiry that investigated the Dodd incident on Koje recommended against any punishment of Generals Dodd and Colson, both of whom were returned to their permanent rank as colonels. The board said that "under difficult circumstances both men had acted in the best interests of the United States and the United Nations." But General Mark Clark over-ruled this recommendation - make one of his own; both men be dropped in rank. This was approved by Chief of Staff General Collins and Army Secretary Pace. Collins and Pace told a House committee that one reason for the trouble at Koje was that we couldn't spare enough troops to guard the island properly. We needed all the men we could get at the front. At one time, 132-thousand prisoners were being guarded by 28-hundred South Korean soldiers.

The South Korean Government has cut-off Voice of America broadcast relays to North and South Korea. The South Koreans says the Voice has been "obviously insulting" to the Syngman Rhee Government. The State Department is protesting.

Prime Minister Nehru told the Indian parliament today that "support for persons operating like Rhee is just the reverse of what the United Nations stands for." Nehru also suggested that the Indian people had better not accept Communist claims of allied use of germ warfare in Korea until one side or the other produces proof. And he told the Communists in his Parliament, that their "continuing shouting of 'peace' has become so discordant, and so loud, that sometimes it sounds more like 'war'."

In Washington today, a House committee voted against a proposal to give the President power to seize the steel mills, the first action by any House group since the President asked for these powers. And Senators who support the President have decided not to push their fight to get him seizure powers. The Government appears ready to ask the industry and the union to open enough plants to turn out 500-thousand tons of finished steel a month for defense needs. And in Pittsburgh tomorrow, Phil Murray meets with the executive board and wage policy committee of the striking CIO steelworkers. The Ford Motor company says that unless the strike is settled, it will have to start closing down its plants across the nation in two weeks.

The President refused to comment today on the Senate vote requesting him to use the Taft-Hartley act in the steel dispute. And Mr. Truman told reporters that he regards the position of keynoter at a convention as a "political" position. The Republicans have chosen General MacArthur for this job. The President says he is letting the Army decide what attitude it should take towards the General, who is still on active service. The President is taking no part in the Army's consideration. But if he's not satisfied with what the Army does, he'll "call the Army down."

Here in New York today, Senator Lodge, campaign manager for General Eisenhower, attacked the decisions made by the Republican convention arrangements commintee. Lodge says the Taft forces are frightened, because they don't have the votes; they are showing contempt for popular government, jeopardizing the Party's chances for success in November. Lodge says the Eisenhower forces will fight back, in Chicago. He insists the Taft forces "will not control the floor in Chicago."

Both Eisenhower and Senator Taft met with convention delegates here in New York today. On some things both candidates agreed; that they would have used the Taft-Hartley law in the steel dispute; that taxes should be lowered; that the Government is spending too much money. To questions on the war in Korea, Taft said: we should continue our efforts for an armistice....drag our feet in these truce talks until we have built enough arms to equip the South Koreans. Then he would have us withdraw. Eisenhower said: he has no definite answer on how to settle the war quickly, He, too, would build up the South Korean forces to the point where they would be able to hold-off any future aggression, until the other United Nations forces could arrive to help them. General Eisenhower also said: during the last war, he opposed seperating Germany into occupied zones....warned against isolating Berlin. He said his advice was not accepted by the politicians at Yalta and Potsdam.

Republican Governor McKeldin of Maryland says that a man representing himself as sent by Governor Fine of Pennsylvania proposed to him that Maryland, Pennsylvania and Michigan get their delegates together, so that they could decide the contest between Taft and Eisenhower. Governor Fine says he had no part in any such proposal.

The Port of New York Authority announced today that Newark airport closed since February 11, will re-open for limited traffic at midnight Sunday.

John J. McCloy, our High Commissioner to Germany, told the Senate today that the Russians are waging a campaign of "terror and conquest" to try to keep West Germany from joining the Western Alliance against Communism.

Slowly, and rather painfully we are learning that allies can be troublesome. They don't always do what we think they ought to do. (This can be very annoying.) The French, for example, are urging an early conference with Russia, to talk about conditions under which a free election might be held in all of Germany, and how the country might be unified. We have no enthusiasm for this plan. The British express increasing doubts about our conduct of the negotiations in Korea, and send Lord Alexander, their Defense Minister, out to have a look for himself. The knowledge that an Army Board decided that the then Generals Dodd and Colson did nothing wrong in making the deal with the prisoners on Koje Island is not likely to increase British respect for our military statesmanship.

Then, today, Britain's Labour Party, whose political strength is increasing, demanded the admission of Communist China to the United Nations; and an end to "outside restrictions" on Japan's relations with other nations. The Labour Party, like the French Government, wants a Big Four Conference, and free elections in Germany before Germany is re-armed. None of these developments makes our Government very happy.

On top of this, we are in an argument with our hardest pressed ally, the Government of South Korea. Its President, Syngman Rhee, has been feuding with his own legislature, and his thrown a dozen of its members into jail. This country, and several others, have suggested that he shouldn't do this; that it's a bad way to behave; and if we're fighting to protect democratic institutions in Korea, there ought to be some democracy behind the lines.

Today it was revealed that the South Korean Government has stopped broadcasting two half-hour news programs produced by the Voice of America, and a fifteen-minute program of United Nations news. Copies of a recent issue of Newsweek Magazine have been confiscated by the South Korean Government. South Korean officials claim that the Voice of America programs were cut off because they were anti-government and "obviously insulting." A spokesman for the South Korean Government, which operates a network of 10 radio stations, said he wasn't going to continue to carry these critical foreign broadcasts, because they were too critical of the South Korean Government, and to continue broadcasting them would be like "lending a man a pistol to shoot you." So it comes down to this: our South Korean ally, whom we entered the war to save - or if you prefer, whom we took a police action in defense of - doesn't like our Voice, so they threw the switch. They are, of course, entitled to do that. It's a free country, thanks to the United Nations forces that blocked the Communists from flooding down the Peninsula from the north. But it illustrates again that no nation bases its policy upon gratitude; we cannot remake nations, either in Europe or in Asia, over in our own image. Our allies will continue to hold views of their own, and pursue policies calculated to serve their own self-interest. After all, we entered the alliances because we thought it would be in our self-interest.

An alliance of the kind we have undertaken, with commitments stretching round the world, is a very delicate thing. As a nation we have had practically no experience in dealing with peacetime allies. We never needed them before. We are so much stronger than they are, that that fact increases our difficulties. The fact is that we are terribly short of experienced able men, to do our business with our allies. Leadership requires more than power. It demands persuasion, patience, and pliability. It requires a meshing - the real co-ordination - of our economic, political, military and cultural interests - and it requires great tolerance. There must be constant attention to the light in which our policies appear, not only to people here at home, but to our allies abroad, as well. We have reached the point where there is no real dividing line between domestic and international events.

We cannot expect or demand that our allies imitate us; but we should be concerned that they respect us. If this proposition is true, then it follows that one of the most astonishing stories of recent weeks turned up today, when it was revealed that an Army Board of Enquiry had decided that Generals Dodd and Colson did nothing wrong, acted in the best interest of the Service, and so forth, in their deal with the prisoners on Koje. Finally, General Clark and Secretary of the Army Frank Pace demoted the two acting Brigadiers to their permanent rank of Colonel, (which is about like taking a man's bonus away from him). Such incidents cause our enemies to rejoice, and our allies to wonder greatly.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: In times such as these, we and our allies would do well to remember what G. Lowes Dickinson once said: "Our most threatening enemy is not the evil intention of the ordinary man, but the increasing confusion of our time." Sir Norman Angell summed up the problem this way: "How, out of complexity to distill simplicity; out of knowledge, essential understanding; out of confusion, clarity. Upon its discovery will depend survival."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Friday - June 13, 1952

This is the news:

The President today called for a strong civil rights program, backed up by "the full force and power of the federal government." In a commencement speech at Howard University.. a school for negroes in Washington. Mr. Truman said: "I am not one of those who feel we can leave these matters up to the states alone, or that we can rely solely on the efforts of men of goodwill." He said all Americans "should be equal before the law.. enjoy equal political rights, and have equal opportunities of education, employment and decent living conditions." He said we have made progress in the field of civil rights in the last five years, but we still have a long way to go. Mr. Truman said he does not believe in following the doctrine of those people who "are so afraid of rocking the boat, that they stop rowing." Again he called for a Fair Employment Practises Commission.. with power to enforce its decrees against job discrimination based on race, creed or color. It was this issue that brought a walkout by some southern delegations at the Democratic convention four years ago.

The C.I.O. Steelworkers today called on the steel industry to re-examine its position in the steel strike and "take constructive heed of the workers's needs." The striking union's wage-policy committee said it stands ready to bargain collectively. It wants CONGRESS TO "REQUIRE" the industry to adopt the recommendations of the Wage Stabilization Board. Union President Phil Murray told the wage-policy committee that the union and industry are now in disagreement on four points. He said the industry wants a contract clause defining MANAGEMENTS rights. Murray said this might lead to a speedup. The companies and the union have not agreed on the problem of seniority... incentive pay rates..and the union shop. Murray also said no agreement has been reached on "economic issues". And he said he proposes to "carry out the mandate" of the union. The union promises there will be no difficulty in removing essential steel from the mills for defense purposes.

In Korea today, on the 7th day of battle on the western front, American troops stopped a counter-attack by 750 Chinese soldiers..and then pushed on to seize a second hill. At the truce talks, the Communists told us we are in no position "to dictate anything, either on the battlefield or in the conference."

Brigadier General Boatner, the commander of prisoner of war camps on Koje island, says: "The thing here is actually over." Six of the 17 compounds on the island have now been broken up. Three more groups surrendered today. We will [redacted] clean out additional compounds as soon as we have prepared smaller 500-man size compounds. Today the communist prisoners in one compound surrendered 21 prisoners, who had been beaten and half-starved. All were anti-Communists.

The United Press reports from Pusan that South Korean President Syngman Rhee has ordered a strict censorship of all news coming into Korea. The government has refused, so far, to lift its ban on Voice of America broadcasts.

The Moscow radio says Andrei Gromyko, chief deputy foreign [redacted] minister, has been appointed Russian ambassador to Great Britain. The [redacted] former ambassador to Washington..Alexander Panyushkin..will become [redacted] ambassador to Communist China.

In Western Germany today, Defense Minister Theodor Blank predicted that west Germany will have 12 divisions in the field, in fighting shape, by the first of 1955. He believes the European army agreement will be ratified by all six member-countries by the end of this year.

In Washington today, Admiral Radford, commander of our Pacific Fleet, said our delivery of arms aid to Nationalist China has been

"disappointingly slow." He said this may be due to the need for setting-up world-wide priorities under our general aid program... or, to the fact that overall production has been lagging behind original estimates.

A number of distributor groups--claiming to represent 125-thousand retail stores, today demanded that price controls be lifted immediately on 64 popular food products, and a number of luxury items.

The Republican National Committee today decided to hear at the Chicago convention eight disputed delegate-at-large contests..four each from Louisiana and Mississippi. The committee sent back to the states 11 contests concerning district delegates. No action was taken on the 38 disputed Texas delegates. All these disputes concern rival Taft and Eisenhower delegates.

Walter S. Hallanan, a Taft supporter, who has been named temporary chairman of the convention, today attacked Senator Lodge, the Eisenhower manager. Lodge had protested that Hallanan might not recognize Eisenhower supporters on the floor. Hallanan says this is a reflection upon his integrity..he thinks Lodge is "a completely spoiled political child."

Another Eisenhower supporter, Senator Duff, says Taft supporters are using corrupt methods to get Taft the nomination..trying to bulldoze their candidate through the convention. He calls these people "architects of disaster" for the Republican party. Duff says the Republicans CANNOT accuse the Democrats of corruption if the Republican candidate is nominated by corrupt methods.

Senator Taft was in Delaware today. Again, he said he'll win the nomination. And he thinks the Democrats will probably turn to Mr. Truman as a last resort because he appears to be the best known of their candidates..the one with the least drawbacks.

General Eisenhower today entertained Pennsylvania's 70-delegates and alternates on his 189-acre farm at Gettysburgh. The General said: if he's elected he'll clean out all top State Department officials. Later, Governor Fine, the Pennsylvania delegation leader, said he thought Eisenhower had converted "maybe a couple or three delegates." -- BUT NOT FINE.

G. Mason Owlett, the national committeeman, said he beleieves Eisenhower did not gain ANY support, TODAY.

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Friday, June 13, 1952
7:45 to 8:00 p.m.

MRROW: Mr. W. Averill Harriman, the Mutual Security Administrator and candidate for the Democratic nomination has been campaigning out in Arizona, New Mexico and Utah. Tonight he's in Salt Lake City and we thought we'd have a little conversation with him. Are you there Averell?

HARRIMAN: Yes, I'm here Ed - here in Salt Lake.

MURROW: Well, have you been picking up any delegates? How's it been going?

HARRIMAN: Things are going well. I've had enthusiastic reception wherever I've been and I think you'll see some delegates come out at the right time. It's all a question of timing, you know.

MURROW: M-m-m, I know - I've heard that from other candidates.

HARRIMAN: That's right.

MURROW: Averell, both -

HARRIMAN: You can be skeptical, but wait and see Ed.

MURROW: (LAUGHS) Both Senator Taft and General Eisenhower said that the issue is really between Socialism and Freedom. How do you feel about that?

HARRIMAN: Well, I'd like to have them tell me just what they mean by - by freedom - and freedom for whom? Do people who are enslaved to poverty and misery have any freedom? How about the farmer who his farm foreclosed because he can't sell his products at a decent price? Does he have any freedom? I don't think so. They have no freedom. It is not socialism to help the people whom Roosevelt used to call The Forgotten Man, and I say that during the past 20 years of the Democratic Administration there is more freedom for more people in the United States than ever before. There's been no interference with political freedoms and far more economic freedom. We are getting Democratic - we are getting democracy on the economic side just as we have political democracy, and I think that process can go on to the advantage of everybody, more economic democracy and - as well as more political democracy.

MURROW: Well Averell, you probably heard a moment ago the report made on the President's speech on civil rights today. Do you go along with him on that?

HARRIMAN: Yes, I've been taking that position in all the statements that I've made in answer to questions asked me. You know, everywhere I go I encourage people to ask questions, and I've answered that issue of civil liberties along the lines of President Truman.

MURROW: Now, as I understand it, you are the only democratic candidate that is going, so to speak, all the way down the line, that is - New Deal, Fair Deal - continuation of foreign aid and all the rest, would that be a fair summary of your position?

HARRIMAN: That is right. I'm for - strongly for the programs that have made our country strong and our people more prosperous than ever before and I believe bringing us to peace. Any deviation from them will only be disastrous. Now, we've got new problems ahead and we've got to make more - more progress, but the principles that we have adhered to are the right ones, and we're going to have success only in that way for peace and for increased prosperity.

MURROW: What sort of questions do you get most in the course of your campaigning out there, Averell.

HARRIMAN: Well, you get it on every single issue that - every single issue that is before us. They ask me about prices, they ask me about taxes, they ask me about the question of civil rights, they ask me about (UNINTELLIGIBLE) prices - they ask - of course in the West here they're tremendously interested in reclamation, soil conservation and federal aid, federal financing of these great projects which are going to expand the West and increase the prosperity over the West and our whole country.

MURROW: Well, Mr. Harriman, could you change your hat for a moment and let me ask you what the significance is of our decision to buy complete aircraft in Europe?

HARRIMAN: Well, I think that's abit premature. I hope that the program will work out. There appears to be very real advantages both to our European allies and to ourselves. You know, we have this (UNINTEL.) procurmment program, where we buy some of the products which they can produce and under that program we hope to be able to havethe Europeans expand their production so that we won't haveto continue indefinitely to help them with equipment from this side. Now, in the field of the aircraft, they've developed some very useful and very advanced types of aircraft, that supplement those that we haveproduced in this country and it looks like - it looks as if it'll be useful all around - and increase our mutual security.

MURROW: Have you heard any good stories in thecourse of your campaign?

HARRIMAN: Well, I just came from a call on the Elders of the Later Days Saints and Elder Richards told me of a story which he heard during my father's time, 40 years ago, when they were building the cutoff across Salt Lake. You know, he built a railroad right across the middle of the Lake, and they were having difficulty with the fill and the engineers got --

MURROW: Averell, I am terribly embarassed. We are going to have to tell that story later. The clock has run us down. Thank you very much.

trans. SSpence

arrig. N.M. — Utah! Salt Lake City

Mutual Security Administrator...Candidate Democratic nomination...

Harriman..Salt Lake City Utah .....

Picking up any delegates.... Heard any good Stories —

~~Whats your reaction to Senate decsision to extend controlls for eight months~~....

Whats ~~xxxxxxxx~~ significance of our decision to buy complete aircraft Europe...

Taft Socialism vs Freedom.

President made big speech Civil rights today...you go along with him?...

You only candidate going all the way..fair deal,new deal...foreign aid,whole democratic philosophy past twenty years...why?

(Understand you seeing President Monday to report on political climate round the country...give us any idea of what youll tell him...)

The ~~pre-convention campaigns are starting up~~. ~~And~~ every day we come across a new prediction or a new poll. This reminds me of something Will Rogers once said:"The same men that straw vote are the ones who can sit down all day and play solitaire. It's like winning on the races in your mind. No mathematician has ever been able to figure out how many hundred straw votes it takes to equal one legitimate vote."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY - JUNE 13, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President today called for a strong civil rights program backed up by "the full force and power of the Federal Government." In a Commencement speech at Howard University, a school for negroes in Washington, Mr. Truman said: "I am not one of those who feel we can leave these matters up to the states alone, or that we can rely solely on the efforts of men of good will." He said all Americans "should be equal before the law....enjoy equal political rights, and have equal opportunities of education, employment and decent living conditions." He said we have made progress in the field of civil rights in the last five years, but we still have a long way to go. Mr. Truman said he does not believe in following the doctrine of those people who "are so afraid of rocking the boat, that they stop rowing." Again he called for a Fair Employment Practises Commission, with power to enforce its decrees against job discrimination based on race, creed or color. It was this issue that brought a walkout by some southern delegations at the Democratic convention four years ago.

The CIO Steelworkers today called on the steel industry to re-examine its position in the steel strike and "take constructive heed of the worker's needs." The striking union's wage-policy committee said it stands ready to bargain collectively. It wants Congress to "require" the industry to adopt the recommendation of the Wage Stabilization Board. Union President, Phil Murray, told the wage-policy committee that the union and industry are now in disagreement on four points. He said the industry wants a contract clause defining management's rights. (Murray said this might lead to a speedup.) The companies and the union have not agreed on the problem of seniority, incentive pay rates, and the union shop. Murray also said no agreement has been reached on "economic issues." And he said he proposes to "carry out the mandate" of the union. The union promises there will be no difficult in removing essential steel from the mills for defense purposes.

In Korea today, on the 7th day of battle on the western front, American troops stopped a counter-attack by 750 Chinese soldiers, and then pushed on to seize a second hill. At the truce talks, the Communists told us we are in no position "to dictate anything, either on the battlefield or in the conference."

Brigadier General Boatner, the Commander of prisoner of war damps on Koje Island, says: "The thing here is actually over." Six of the 17 compounds on the island have now been broken up. Three more groups surrendered today. We will clean out additional compounds as soon as we have prepared smaller 500-man size compounds. Today the communist prisoners in one compound surrendered 21 prisoners, who had been beaten and half-starved. All were anti-Communists.

The United Press reports from Pusan that South Korean President, Syngman Rhee has ordered a strict censorship of all news coming into Korea. The Government has refused, so far, to lift its ban on Voice of America Broadcasts.

The Moscow radio says Andrei Gromyko, Chief Deputy Foreign Minister, has been appointed Russian ambassador to Great Britain. The former ambassador to Washington, Alexander Panyushkin, will become ambassador to Communist China.

In Western Germany today, Defense Minister Theodor Blank, predicted that West Germany will have 12 divisions in the field, in fighting shape, by the first of 1955. He believes the European Army agreement will be ratified by all six member-countries by the end of this year.

In Washington today, Admiral Radford, Commander of our Pacific Fleet, said our delivery of arms aid to Nationalist China has been "disappointingly slow." He said this may be due to the need for setting-up world-wide priorities under our general aid program, or to the fact that overall production has been lagging behind original estimates.

A number of distributor groups, claiming to represent 125-thousand retail stores, today demanded that price controls be lifted immediately on 64 popular food products, and a number of luxury items.

The Republican National Committee today decided to hear at the Chicago convention eight disputed delegate-at -large contests - four each from Louisiana and Mississippi. The committee sent back to the states 11 contests concerning district delegates. No action was taken on the 38 disputed Texas delegates. All these disputes concern rival Taft and Eisenhower delegates.

Walter S. Hallanan, a Taft supporter, who has been named temporary chairman of the convention, today attacked Senator Lodge, the Eisenhower manager, Lodge had protested that Hallanan might not recognize Eisenhower supporters on the floor. Hallanan says this is a reflection upon his integrity; he thinks Lodge is "a completely spoiled political child."

Another Eisenhower supporter, Senator Duff, says Taft supporters are using corrupt methods to get Taft the nomination - trying to bulldoze their candidate through the convention. He calls these people "architects of disaster" for the Republican party. Duff says the Republicans cannot accuse the Democrats of corruption if the Republican candidate is nominated by corrupt methods.

Senator Taft was in Delaware today. Again, he said he'll win the nomination. And he thinks the Democrats will probably turn to Mr. Truman as a last resort because he appears to be the best known of their candidates - the one with the least drawbacks.

General Eisenhower today entertained Pennsylvania's 70-delegates and alternates on his 189-acre farm at Gettysburgh. The General said: if he's elected he'll clean-out all top State Department officials. Later, Governor Fine, the Pennsylvania delegation leader, said he thought Eisenhower had converted "maybe a couple or three delegates" - but not Fine. G. Mason Owlett, the national committeeman, said he believes Eisenhower did not gain any support today.

Mr. W. Averell Harriman, the Mutual Security Administrator and candidat for the Democratic nomination has been campaigning out in Arizona, New Mexico and Utah. Tonight he's in Salt Lake City and we thought we'd have a little conversation with him. Are you there Averell?

HARRIMAN: Yes, I'm here Ed - here in Salt Lake.

MURROW: Well, have you been picking up any delegates? How's it been going?

HARRIMAN: Things are going well. I've had enthusiastic reception where I've been and I think you'll see some delegates come out at the right time. It's all a question of timing, you know.

MURROW: M-m-m, I know - I've heard that from other candidates.

HARRIMAN: That's right.

MURROW: Averell, both -

HARRIMAN: You can be skeptical, but wait and see Ed.

MURROW: (LAUGHS) Both Senator Taft and General Eisenhower said that the issue is really between Socialism and Freedom. How do you feel about that?

HARRIMAN: Well, I'd like to have them tell me just what they mean by - by freedom - and freedom for whom? Do people who are enslaved to poverty and misery have any freedom? How about the farmer who has his farm foreclosed because he can't sell his products at a decent price? Does he have any freedom? I don't think so. They have no freedom. It is not socialism to help the people whom Roosevelt used to call The Forgotten Man, and I say that during the past 20 years of the Democratic Administration, there is more freedom for more people in the United States than ever before. There's been no interference with political freedoms and far more economic freedom. We are getting Democratic - we are getting democracy on the economic side just as we have political democracy, and I think that process can go on to the advantage of everybody, more economic democracy and - as well as more political democracy.

MURROW: Well Averell, you probably heard a moment ago the report made on the President's speech on civil rights today. Do you go along with him on that?

HARRIMAN: Yes, I've been taking that position in all the statements that I've made in answer to questions asked me. You know, everywhere I go I encourage people to ask questions, and I've answered that issue of civil liberties along the lines of President Truman.

MURROW: Now, as I understand it, you are the only democratic candidate that is going, so to speak, all the way down the line, that is - New Deal, Fair Deal - continuation of foreign aid and all the rest, would that be a fair summary of your position?

HARRIMAN: That is right. I'm for - strongly for the programs that have made our country strong and our people more prosperous than ever before and I believe bringing us to peace. Any deviation from them will only be disastrous. Now, we've got new problems ahead and we've got to make more - more progress, but the principles that we have adhered to are the right ones, and we're going to have success only in that way for peace and for increased prosperity.

MURROW: What sort of questions do you get most in the course of your campaigning out there, Averell?

HARRIMAN: Well, you get it on every single issue that - every single issue that is before us. They ask me about prices, they ask me about taxes, they ask me about the question of civil rights, they ask me about.....prices - they ask - of course in the West here - they're tremendously interested in reclamation, soil conservation and federal aid, federal financing of these great projects which are going to expand the West and increase the prosperity over the West and our whole country.

MURROW: Well, Mr. Harriman, could you change your hat for a moment and let me ask you what the significance is of our decision to buy complete aircraft in Europe?

HARRIMAN: Well, I think that's abit premature. I hope that the program will work out. There appears to be very real advantages both to our European allies and to ourselves. You know, we have this.....procurement program, where we buy some of the products which they can produce and under that program we hope to be able to have the Europeans expand their production so that we won't have to continue indefinitely to help them with equipment from this side. Now, in the field of the aircraft, they've developed some very useful and very advanced types of aircraft, that supplement those that we have produced in this country and it looks like - it looks as if it'll be useful all around - and increase our mutual security

MURROW: Have you heard any good stories in the course of your campaign?

HARRIMAN: Well, I just came from a call on the Elders of the Later Days Saints and Elder Richards told me of a story which he heard during my father's time, 40 years ago, when they were building the cut-off across Salt Lake. You know, he built a railroad right across the middle of the Lake, and they were having difficulty with the fill and the engineers got --

MURROW: Averell, I am terribly embarassed. We are going to have to tell that story later. The clock has run us down. Thank you very much.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: Commercial

MURROW: Every day we come across a new prediction or a new poll. This reminds me of something Will Rogers once said: "The same men that straw vote are the ones who can sit down all day and play solitaire. It's like winning on the races in your mind. No mathematician has ever been able to figure out how many hundred straw votes it takes to equal one legitimate vote."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Monday - June 16 1952

This is the news:

The Swedish government has sent two angry protests to the Soviet Union. One concerned the shooting down by a Russian jet of a Swedish air force plane 60 miles off the Estonian coast. The second protest demands that the Soviet embassy in Stockholm stop its conniving with spies in Sweden.

Tonight more than 2-thousand persons surrounded the Soviet embassy in Stockholm shouting: "we will see Stalin hanged"...and "down with the Communist warmongers." This was in reaction to the attack by two Soviet Migs on a Swedish plane. One of the Migs fired at the plane..shot it down. Two of its seven crew members were injured. They were all picked up in the Baltic by a small German freighter. The Swedish plane was looking for another airplane missing in this area since Friday. It, too, was believed to have been shot down. And it was in this same general area than an American navy Privateer was shot down two years ago..with 10 men aboard. The Swedish government has told Moscow it wants "swift punishment for this outrage".. reserves the right to claim indemnities for this "act of violence."

This new incident occured as Sweden started its biggest spy trial. Seven Swedish citizens are charged with selling defense secrets to Russian agents. One defendent has pleaded guilty. As a result of information gained in this trial, the Swedish government flatly accused the Soviet embassy of [redacted] being connected with a spy ring in Sweden.

In Washington today, [redacted] we renewed talks with [redacted] RUSSIA on settling [redacted] HER 11-billion dollar lend-lease account. We also want the return of 670 naval and merchant ships, we turned over to Russia during World War Two. The talks were suspended ten months ago but renewed today, at Russian request. They offer to give back 186 vessels.. say they want to buy another 167...claim that the rest were lost, scrapped or are unfit for navigation. WE TURNED DOWN THIS OFFER. We want 800-million dollars to settle the cash account. The Russians offer only 300-million. We want to let the World Court arbitrate the disagreement. They refuse. (The negotiations will continue.)

Jacob Malik of Russia is [redacted] chairman of the United Nations Security Council for this month. Today he called the council to a Wednesday meeting, to discuss two items. One: he wants all countries that have not signed the Geneva Convention outlawing germ warfare, to do so. (The United States is not a signatory.) And Two: Malik wants the council to approve for admission to the U.N. 14 nations.. five of them Soviet satelliites

(we have objected to this in the past). While Malik's germ warfare resolution is stated in mild words, American officials expect him to renew his charge that we are using germ warfare in Korea and China. American Delegate ERNEST GROSS said today: "the purpose of the resolution is to continue old lies in a new forum. We welcome the opportunity to again show up the Soviet falsehoods."

In Korea today, General Harrison, our chief truce negotiator, told the Communists that they are "keeping a bloody and profitless war going" by refusing to accept our compromise truce terms.

~~On Koje island we expect to move 17,500 prisoners of war from three big compounds into smaller compounds. Its reported that we intend to move an estimated 60 thousand prisoners to other small islands off the South Korean coast.~~

~~Troops of the 45th division today again stopped an artillery supported Communist attack, and~~ North of Pusan, a big explosion occurred at our army's biggest ammunition dump. One korean was killed..8 Americans wounded.. four are missing. South Korean police believe the explosion was set-off by Communist guerrillas. The army says most of the ammunition was salvaged.. not useable at the front for one reason or another.

The Italian chamber of deputies tonight ratified the Schuman [redacted] PLAN TO POOL COAL AND STEEL. The Senate approved last March. Italy is the third key nation to ratify the plan..following France and West Germany.

General Ridgeway visited Rome today, and a guard of 50-thousand troops and police prevented any Communist demonstrations.

In Washington, the government has authorized retail price increases on more than 75 per cent of all department store goods. (to offset recent increases in freight and parcel post rates) Officials say they expect little effect from the new orders, because most of the articles are now selling below ceiling prices.

The government today accused Swift and Company, one of the largest meat packers in the world, of violating price ceilings and using false invoices to do this. The company says: it has followed regulations..and all its employes have had explicit instructions to comply with all price regulations.

The House today tentatively approved an increase of at least five dollars a month, for the four and a half million Americans who now receive government checks, under the old age and survivors benefit insurance program.

Here in New York today, we had one of our biggest traffic jams after engineers on the Long Island railroad went on strike this morning.. halting all trains. An estimated 150-thousand commuters used their cars, subways and busses to get TO & FROM WORK. The engineers refuse to accept rule changes recently agreed to in Washington by the nation's railroads and the union.

W. Averell Harriman called on the President today and then told reporters:"The President said that what I am doing in my campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination is tops. He said to keep on fighting after I told him I was campaigning without compromise on New Deal and Fair Deal principles."

General Eisenhower, in Denver, told farm editors today that he would be "at sea" if he tried to discuss the technical problems of agriculture. He said if he's elected President he'll get the "best brains" available to work on solutions to all problems.

The 19 Scripps-Howard newspapers today endorsed Eisenhower for president.

Edward R. Murrow: June 16, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

Mr. John Foster Dulles is generally regarded as the Republicans' outstanding authority on foreign affairs. He advised Governor Dewey in the '48 campaign. He has worked closely with Secretary of State Acheson; and was the principal architect of the Japanese Peace Treaty. And Mr. Dulles has now taken on a job, that will be a severe test of his literary and diplomatic skill. He is going to try to write the foreign policy plank for the Republican platform; one which will satisfy General Eisenhower, Senator Taft, and their supporters. Of course, in view of what generally happens to Party platforms, this may be nothing more than an exercise in literary gymnastics. But the important thing is that the Taft and Eisenhower leaders have agreed that Mr. Dulles should try it; which in turn would seem to mean they feel that there is no unbridgeable gap, between the foreign policy views of the Senator, and those of the General. This may be true, but a few weeks ago supporters of both men didn't think it was. Many of General Eisenhower's supporters expected that the real clash between the two leading Republican candidates, would come in the field of foreign policy. But apparently this is not to be. Of course, Senator Taft has a voting record, and General Eisenhower hasn't. That voting record, against Lend-Lease, against Conscription - (just before Pearl Harbor) - against the U.N., the North Atlantic Pact, and the Mutual Defense Assistance Act, amongst other things, had led the Eisenhower supporters to hope that the General would belabor Taft with his own record, and present Republicans with a clearcut foreign policy issue. But Eisenhower has confined himself to generalities when speaking of foreign policy; and has not used what many of his supporters had hoped would be his strongest weapon against Taft. True, Taft calls Korea "the unnecessary war", and "the Truman war"; while Eisenhower says "Korea and Indo-China are just as important to us as any other sector of the world." Both men speak of big budgetary reductions, careful scrutiny of military expenses; but neither candidate is very specific as to how these reductions are to be made.

In any event it appears that, without meeting face to face, the two leading Republican candidates have agreed that their differences of opinion about foreign policy can probably be reconciled, by a man of the skill and experience of John Foster Dulles. He will not be a ghost writer, having no passion for anonymity; but the ghosts of previous statements, by both candidates, will be looking over his shoulder. (It will be a tough writing job).

In the past two weeks General Eisenhower has demonstrated that he is not the inflexible military martinet that his enemies had claimed; and that he is not the liberal crusader able to rally all dissidents and independents as many of his supporters had hoped.

In the course of the last two weeks Eisenhower has emerged as something of a classical conservative, not too well informed on many political, social and economic developments during the past couple of decades, but with sufficient candor to admit his lack of knowledge. He is fearful of "big government", would reserve maximum power for the individual states; is against federal aid to education, compulsory health insurance, and a compulsory Fair Employment Practises Commission. He would continue aid to our allies, but hopes to reduce it. Eisenhower favors large-scale tax reductions but admits that he doesn't know when the time will come when we can "reduce our sterile military spending." He favors the principle of the Taft-Hartley Law, but not all of its provisions. His policy on labor seems to add up to the belief that management and labor ought to co-operate closely. Originally he was in favor of the states controlling Tidelands Oil, but that was before he learned of the Supreme Court's decisions on the subject.

General Eisenhower is a man who has demonstrated that he can absorb military, political and economic information very quickly. He has referred repeatedly to the necessity of getting the "best brains available" around him, before reaching a firm decision on many subjects. # Since coming home the General has not lacked for advice. But he has not had a political chief of staff, who could do for him what Generals Bedell Smith and Al Gruenther did, in the world of military affairs. It is unlikely that any candidate ever received so much enthusiastic, well-intentioned, but conflicting advice. So the General has decided to run the show himself. # As he views the grandeur of the Rocky Mountains, it must occur to him that Hannibal was at times lonely, while crossing the Alps on that elephant.

Mr. Dulles has no easy task in writing a foreign policy plank which will satisfy both factions within the Republican Party. He is doubtless aware that both sides feel as James Russel Lowell once said:"Compromise makes a good umbrella, but a poor roof." But he also knows well what the British statesman Thomas Macaulay meant when he said:" The essence of politics is compromise."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY - JUNE 16, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Swedish Government has sent two angry protests to the Soviet Union. One concerned the shooting down by a Russian jet of a Swedish Air Force plane 60 miles off the Estonian coast. The second protest demands that the Soviet embassay in Stockholm stop its conniving with spies in Sweden.

Tonight more than 2-thousand persons surrounded the Soviet embassy in Stockholm shouting: "We will see Stalin hanged", and "Down with the Communist warmongers." This was in reaction to the attack by two Soviet MIGs on a Swedish plane. One of the MIGs fired at the plane, shot it down. Two of its seven crew members were injured. They were all picked up in the Baltic by a small German freighter. The Swedish plane was looking for another airplane missing in this area since Friday. It, too, was believed to have been shot down. And it was in this same general area that an American navy Privateer was shot down two years ago with 10 men aboard. The Swedish Government has told Moscow it wants "swift punishment for this outrage"; reserves the right to claim indemnities for this "act of violence."

This new incident occurred as Sweden started its biggest spy trial. Seven Swedish citizens are charged with selling defense secrets to Russian agents. One defendent has pleaded guilty. As a result of information gained in this trial, the Swedish Government flatly accused the Soviet embassy of being connected with a spy ring in Sweden.

In Washington today, we renewed talks with Russia on settling her 11-billion dollar lend-lease account. We also want the return of 670 naval and merchant ships, we turned over to Russia during World War Two. The talks were suspended ten months ago but renewed today at Russian request. They offer to give back 186 vessels, say they want to buy another 167, claim that the rest were lost, scrapped or are unfit for navigation. We turned down this offer. We want 800-million dollars to settle the cash account. The Russians offer only 300-million. We want to let the World Court arbitrate the disagreement. They refuse. (The negotiations will continue.)

Jacob Malik of Russia is chairman of the United Nations Security Council for this month. Today he called the council to a Wednesday meeting to discuss two items. One: he wants all countries that have not signed the Geneva Convention outlawing germ warfare to do so. (The United States is not a signatory.) And Two: Malik wants the council to approve for admission to the U.N. 14 nations, five of them Soviet satellites; (we have objected to this in the past). While Malik's germ-warfare resolution is stated in mild words, American officials expect him to renew his charge that we are using germ warfare in Korea and China. American Delegate, Ernest Gross, said today: "The purpose of the resolution is to continue old lies in a new forum. We welcome the opportunity to again show up the Soviet falsehoods."

In Korea today, General Harrison, our chief truce negotiator, told the Communists that they are "keeping a bloody and profitless war going" by refusing to accept our compromise truce terms.

North of Pusan, a big explosion occurred at our army's biggest ammunition dump. One Korean was killed, 8 Americans wounded, four are missing. South Korean police believe the explosion was set-off by Communist guerrillas. The Army says most of the ammunition was salvaged, not useable at the front for one reason or another.

The Italian Chamber of Deputies tonight ratified the Schuman Plan to pool coal and steel. The Senate approved last March. Italy is the third key nation to ratify the plan following France and West Germany.

General Ridgway visited Rome today and a guard of 50-thousand troops and police prevented any Communist demonstrations.

In Washington, the Government has authorized retail price increases on more than 75 per cent of all department store goods, (to offset recent increases in freight and parcel post rates). Officials say they expect little effect from the new orders because most of the articles are now selling below ceiling prices.

The Government today accused Swift and Company, one of the largest meat packers in the world, of violating price ceilings and using false invoices to do this. The company says it has followed regulations and all its employees have had explicit instructions to comply with all price regulations.

The House today tentatively approved an increase of at least five dollars a month for the four and a half million Americans who now receive government checks under the old age and survivors benefit insurance program.

Here in New York today, we had one of our biggest traffic jams after engineers on the Long Island Railroad went on strike this morning, halting all trains. An estimated 150-thousand commuters used their cars, subways, and busses to get to and from New York. The engineers refuse to accept rule changes recently agreed to in Washington by the nation's railroads and the union.

W. Averell Harriman called on the President today and then told reporters: "The President said that what I am doing in my campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination is tops. He said to keep on fighting after I told him I was campaigning without compromise on New Deal and Fair Deal principles

General Eisenhower, in Denver, told farm editors today that he would be "at sea" if he tried to discuss the technical problems of agriculture. He said if he's elected President he'll get the "best brains" available to work on solutions to all problems.

The 19 Scripps-Howard newspapers today endorsed Eisenhower for president.

Mr. John Foster Dulles is generally regarded as the Republicans' outstanding authority on foreign affairs. He advised Governor Dewey in the '48 campaign. He has worked closely with Secretary of State Acheson, and was the principal architect of the Japanese Peace Treaty. And Mr. Dulles has now taken on a job that will be a severe test of his literary and diplomatic skill. He is going to try to write the foreign policy plank for the Republican platform - one which will satisfy General Eisenhower, Senator Taft and their supporters. Of course, in view of what generally happens to Party platforms, this may be nothing more than an exercise in literary gymnastics. But the important thing is that the Taft and Eisenhower leaders have agreed that Mr. Dulles should try it - which in turn would seem to mean they feel that there is no unbridgeable gap between the foreign policy views of the Senator and those of the General. This may be true, but a few weeks ago supporters of both men didn't think it was. Many of General Eisenhower's supporters expected that the real clash between the two leading Republican candidates would come in the field of foreign policy. But apparently this is not to be. Of course, Senator Taft has a voting record, and General Eisenhower hasn't. That voting record against Lend-Lease, against Conscription, (just before Pearl Harbor), against the U.N., the North Atlantic Pact, and the Mutual Defense Assistance Act, amongst other things, had let the Eisenhower supporters to hope that the General would belabor Taft with his own record, and present Republicans with a clearcut foreign policy issue. But Eisenhower has confined himself to generalities when speaking of foreign policy and has not used what many of his supporters had hoped would be his strongest weapon against Taft. True, Taft calls Korea "the unnecessary war", and "the Truman war", while Eisenhower says "Korea and Indo-China are just as important to us as any other sector of the world." Both men speak of big budgetary reductions, careful scrutiny of military expenses, but neither candidate is very specific as to how these reductions are to be made.

In any event it appears that, without meeting face to face, the two leading Republican candidates have agreed that their differences of opinion about foreign policy can probably be reconciled by a man of the skill and experience of John Foster Dulles. He will not be a ghost writer, having no passion for anonymity; but the ghosts of previous statements by both candidates will be looking over his shoulder. (It will be a tough writing job.)

In the past two weeks General Eisenhower has demonstrated that he is not the inflexible military martinet that his enemies had claimed, and that he is not the liberal crusader, able to rally all dissidents and independents, as many of his supporters had hoped.

In the course of the last two weeks, Eisenhower has emerged as something of a classical conservative, not too well informed on many political, social and economic developments during the past couple of decades, but with sufficient candor to admit his lack of knowledge. He is fearful of "big government", would reserve maximum power for the individual states; is against federal aid to education, compulsory health insurance, and a compulsory Fair Employment Practises Commission. He would continue aid to our allies, but hopes to reduce it. Eisenhower favors large-scale tax reductions, but admits that he doesn't know when the time will come when we can "reduce our sterile military spending." He favors the principle of the Taft-Hartley Law, but not all of its provisions. His policy on labor seems to add up to the belief that management and labor ought to co-operate closely. Originally he was in favor of the states controlling Tidelands Oil, but that was before he learned of the Supreme Court's decisions on the subject.

General Eisenhower is a man who has demonstrated that he can absorb military, political and economic information very quickly. He has referred repeatedly to the necessity of getting the "best brains available" around him, before reaching a firm decision on many subjects. Since coming home, the General has not lacked for advice. But he has not had a political chief of staff, who could do for him what Generals Bedell Smith and Al Gruenther did in the world of military affairs. It is unlikely that any candidate ever received so much enthusiastic, well-intentioned but conflicting advice. So the General has decided to run the show himself. As he views the grandeur of the Rocky Mountains, it must occur to him that Hannibal was at times lonely, while crossing the Alps on that elephant.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Mr. Dulles has no easy task in writing a foreign policy plank which will satisfy both factions within the Republican Party. He is doubtless aware that both sides feel as James Russel Lowell once said: "Compromise makes a good umbrella, but a poor roof." But he also knows well what the British statesman Thomas Macaulay meant when he said: "The essence of politics is compromise."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Tuesday - June 17, 1952

This is the news:

A Senate committee said today that we must build-up our air force as quickly as possible, to overcome what it called "a terrifying" Russian air superiority. The preparedness subcommittee says that to do otherwise "would reduce our defenses below safe levels, and be an invitation to disaster." The committee's testimony shows that the Joint Chiefs of Staff have made it clear that they consider the general period of 1954 to be "the most dangerous for the security of the United States" for the foreseeable future." Yet the President's decision to stretch out the build-up of our air power means we will not have the desired 143 air wings until 1956. Testimony by General Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs, says this stretch-out program will seriously reduce our military capabilities.. will hurt our chances TO withstand an all-out enemy air attack prior to 1956.

The army disclosed today that it now has moved anti-aircraft batteries around the nation's strategic industrial plants. The exact locations are not disclosed. The army says this has no special significance ..just to provide a state of "operational readiness" in event of an attack.

The airforce has ordered civilian defense sky-watchers to go on a 24-hour alert beginning July 14. Thousands of observation posts will be manned along the routes enemy planes might be expected to take. The air force says this new alert is necessary because "the soviets have had the capability for some time to attack us."

Air Secretary Finletter today asked Senators to give the air force an urgently needed quarter of a billion dollars, to complete air bases in Europe. The House had eliminated this money from a military construction bill. Mr. Finletter says that to avoid "a lengthy and disastrous campaign of attrition" we must have air bases for atomic planes to strike back at the enemy.

In Korea today allied fighter-bombers were busy supporting ground troops who held-on to a western front hill, despite the heaviest Communist artillery attack of the war. The enemy fired 18 and a half thousand rounds of artillery shells Sunday night and Monday. (a new record for them in nearly two years of war.)

Our negotiators at Panmunjom walked out of the truce talks again... for a three day recess. This was the second time in two weeks that General Harrison, our chief negotiator, forced a recess on the reds in the hope that they would reconsider our settlement proposal. Once again the enemy accused us of slaughtering prisoners of war.

General Boatner, the commander of the prisoner camps on Koje island, said today he is convinced we have found the "czar" of the prison camp..the leader of the recent riots./Seven Communist leaders were recently taken from Compound 77 and held for investigation in connection with the murder of 16 non-Communist prisoners in that camp. One of the seven is now believed to be the top man in the enemy's resistance campaign on Koje.

General Ridgeway, our former commander in the Far East, was in Rome today..ending a two day visit to Italy. The General took the occassion to go on the record firmly with a repeated denial that we ever used any germ warfare in Korea. We've recorded for you a portion of General Ridgeway's answer to the question: "Did the allies ever use germ warfare in Korea and China."

(runs 1;50 ending: "...for you to judge whether this is true or false than by this example of the communist leaders' own working methods."

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Tuesday, June 17, 1952
7:45-8:00 p.m.

MURROW: ..... General Matt Ridgway, our former Commander in the Far East, was in Rome today, ending a two-day visit to Italy. The General took the occasion to go on the record firmly with a repeated denial that we ever used any germ warfare in Korea. We've recorded for you a portion of General Ridgway's answer to the question -- did the Allies ever use germ warfare in Korea and China?

RIDGWAY: I am glad you raised this point. I know of no better illustration of the deliberate use of deliberately fabricated falsehood by Communist leaders in their charges that the United Nations Command employed germ warfare in Korea. As the former Commander-in-Chief of United Nations forces in Korea, and as God is my witness, I tell you that no elements of that Command employed any form of germ warfare at any time and that all of the so-called proof, including photographs, was manufactured by the Communists themselves. The efforts the Communists have expended on this deliberately false campaign should open your eyes, if nothing else has done so, as to the real purpose of these Communists leaders. They have made these false charges, which they knew to be false, for the purpose of stirring up hatred, of causing dissensions, of provoking disorders, of creating an atmosphere of dangerous tension between nations and between groups of people within the same nation. They have done all these things and they continue to do them while telling you they are working for peace. I don't know of any better way for you to judge whether this is true or false than by this example of the Communist leaders' own working methods.

Ed.trans.-A.A.Cardiff (30)

Tomorrow, Jacob Mailk of Russia will raise this whole question at the United Nations Security Council. And here in New York today American, British and French diplomats conferred on how best to handle the expected Malik accusation.

The Russians tonight protested to the Swedish government over what they called the violation of the Soviet frontier by Swedish aircraft.. The Russians say they shot down a Swedish plane over the Baltic yesterday after the Swedish plane refused orders to land, and opened fire on Russian planes. The Swedes say the plane that was shot down was unarmed.

The Soviet protest came as the Swedish government sent an armed naval flotilla to positions in the Baltic where one of its planes was believed to have been shot down on Friday. The one shot down yesterday was searching for this plane at the time it encountered two Soviet Migs.

The Swedes ordered their sailors, and escorting jet fighters, to shoot back at anyone who shoots at them.

In West Germany today, representatives of three captive ~~Balkan~~ Baltic nations...Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia.. charged that 25 per cent of the population of the three countries..one and a half million persons... have been sent to slave labor camps by the Russians.

And in East Germany, the Soviet zone communist government announced that it is "compelled" to form an army to "ward off an attack" by the western allies.

~~The West German government has offered Israel 714 million dollars worth of goods [redacted] ations for Nazi persecutio[redacted] Israel [redacted] billion dollars to pay the cost of [redacted] from Germany [redacted]~~

Here in New York, a two-day strike of Long Island railroad engineers was settled late this afternoon...after one of the worst transportation tie-ups in the city's history. The engineers objected to certain rules changes. Terms of the settlement were not announced..but the railroad is now back in service, expected to resume normal schedules tomorrow.

In Washington, Acting Defense Mobilizer Steelman reports that considerable progress has been made on a government plan to get steel for urgent military production from some of the nation's strike-bound steel plants. There will be another meeting tomorrow with union officials. The steel strike is now in its 16th day. And while no [redacted] widespread shortages have been reported, yet a number of companies served notice today that later this week they may have to cut down on their production of mortars, rockets and certain [redacted] trucks for the army.

The House Labor committee voted today that the Wage Stabilization Board "failed to respect the national labor policy" by recommending the union shop as part of the settlement for the steel dispute.

The National Production Authority today approved a 43 per cent increase in copper allotments for the production of radio and television sets, refrigerators, stoves, washers.. and [redacted] copper that may be used for the building of homes and commercial buildings.

The House today gave final approval to a bill that will increase social security benefits by at least 5-dollars a month to four and a half million persons now receiving payments. This would cost 300-million dollars a year.

A House administration subcommittee today approved the spending of 415-thousand dollars for various investigations being carried out by other House committees. The new funds include 25-thousand dollars that would be used to investigate obscene books and magazines. If the full House approves the committee recommendations, the total amount spent for all investigations in this 82nd congress would be three milion 160-thousand dollars.. (the highest in history.)

The House today approved a bill that would exempt radio and television stations from libel suits that might result from remarks made by political candidates. The stations could not be sued unless it could be shown that they "wilfully" participated in sending the libelous remarks over the air. The bill also requires radio and television stations to make time available to political candidates at rates comparable to those charged for commercial advertising. Some politicians have complained thet they were forced to pay higher rates for their campaign talks than are paid by regular advertisers.

In Maine, Governor Frederick G. Payne has scored the biggest political upset in the state in the past 30 years by defeating Republican Senator Brewster's bid for re-nomination. With almost all the votes counted, Governor Payne has a three-thousand-vote lead over Brewster, the fifth ranking Republican in the Senate.

The Army decided today that its rules forbidding military men from taking part in political campaigns does not apply to General MacArthur..who will keynote the Republican convention. The Army says the order ~~mmmmmm~~ applies only to those "engag4d either in the formulation of military policy or in the ex cution of any of the tasks of the army." General MacArthur is on the active list..but is not assigned to any specific duties.

~~The Republican National Committee says it will rule tomorrow in the dispute between pro-Taft and Eisenhower~~ delegates from Texas. ~~Senator Duff, an Eisenhower supporter, said tonight that pro-Taft Republicans in Texas pigged what he called "the biggest steal in the history of texas." He compared the move to "armed robbery." In Denver, a spokesman at Eisenhower quarters says the General is "delighted"~~

Out in Denver today, General Eisenhower told reporters that he will win the Republican nomination over Senator Taft whom he called an "isolationist." Eisenhower spoke to a small group of reporters who had invited him to lunch. Don Whiteahead of the Associated Press (WHO WAS NOT INVITED) says Eisenhower told this group: he does not believe a foreign policy plank could be drafted for the party platform that would be acceptable both to him and to Senator Taft. He says his remarks about a 40-billion dollar budget cut had been taken from context and misinterpreted by Taft people. Eisenhower is also reported to have said that he does not favor any more generals being raised to five-stars at this time. And he believes in pump priming and federal works projects..in a time of depression. The General is also said to have told the group of reporters that he is very bitter about a whispering campaign directed against himself and Mrs. Eisenhower.

Earlier, a spokesman for the General said he was "fighting mad" over tacticis used by the Taft forces in the Texas Republican convention. And Senator Duff.. an Eisenhower supporter..called this " the biggest steal in the history of Texas.. one of the most flagrant violations of decency in the history of American politics."

L.M. Pexton, of Denver.. co-chairman of the Colorado Eisenhower for President campaign..told reporters "any illegal seating of delegates" at the Chicag convention might open the way to a third party. Pexton made it clear he was speaking for himself..hadn't discussed the matter with Eisenhower.

General Ridgeway has given the lie to Russian charges of germ warfare in Korea. Another General, former Marine Commandant Vandergrift once said:" Situations arise in which people take a gambler's chance, and sometimes carry it off. But true success belongs to those whose strength is real because it is backed by couragrex and character. In the long run real artillery is more reliable than ruses."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY - JUNE 17, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

A Senate committee said today that we must build-up our Air Force as quickly as possible to overcome what it called "a terrifying" Russian air superiority. The preparedness subcommittee says that to do otherwise "would reduce our defenses below safe levels and be an invitation to disaster." The committee's testimony shows that the Joint Chiefs of Staff have made it clear that they consider the general period of 1954 to be "the most dangerous for the security of the United States" for the "foreseeable future." Yet the President's decision to stretch out the build-up of our air power means we will not have the desired 143 air wings until 1956. Testimony by General Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs, says this stretch-out program will seriously reduce our military capabilities, will hurt our chances to withstand an all-out enemy air attack prior to 1956.

The Army disclosed today that it now has moved anti-aircraft batteries around the nation's strategic industrial plants. The exact locations are not disclosed. The Army says this has no special significance, just to provide a state of "operational readiness" in event of an attack.

The Air Force has ordered civilian defense sky-watchers to go on a 24-hour alert beginning July 14. Thousand of observation posts will be manned along the routes enemy planes might be expected to take. The Air Force says this new alert is necessary because "the Soviets have had the capability for some time to attack us."

Air Secretary Finletter today asked Senators to give the Air Force an urgently needed quarter of a billion dollars to complete air bases in Europe. The House had eliminated this money from a military construction bill. Mr. Finletter says that to avoid "a lengthy and disastrous campaign of attrition", we must have air bases for atomic planes to strike back at the enemy.

In Korea today allied fighter-bombers were busy supporting ground troops who held-on to a western-front hill, despite the heaviest Communist artillery attack of the war. The enemy fired 18 and a half thousand rounds of artillery shells Sunday night and Monday, (a new record for them in nearly two years of war).

Our negotiators at Panmunjom walked out of the truce talks again for a three day recess. This was the second time in two weeks that General Harrison, our chief negotiator, forced a recess on the Reds in the hope that they would reconsider our settlement proposal. Once again the enemy accused us of slaughtering prisoners of war.

General Boatner, the Commander of the prisoner camps on Koje Island, said today that he is convinced we have found the "czar" of the prison camp - the leader of the recent riots. Seven Communist leaders were recently taken from Compound 77 and held for investigation in connection with the murder of 16 non-Communist prisoners in that camp. One of the seven is now believed to be the top man in the enemy's resistance campaign on Koje.

General Ridgeway, our former Commander in the Far East, was in Rome today - ending a two day visit to Italy. The General took the occassion to go on the record firmly with a repeated denial that we ever used any germ warfare in Korea. We've recorded for you a portion of General Ridgway's answer to the question: "Did the Allies ever use germ warfare in Korea and China?"

RIDGWAY: I am glad you raised this point. I know of no better illustration of the deliberate use of deliberately fabricated falsehood by Communist leaders in their charges that the United Nations Command employed germ warfare in Korea. As the former Commander-in-Chief of United Nations forces in Korea, and as God is my witness, I tell you that no elements of that Command employed any form of germ warfare at any time and that all of the so-called proof, including photographs, was manufactured by the Communists themselves. The efforts the Communists have expended on this deliberately false campaign should open your eyes, if nothing else has done so, as to the real purpose of these Communists leaders. They have made these false charges, which they knew to be false, for the purpose of stirring up hatred, of causing dissensions, of provoking disorders, of creating an atmosphere of dangerous tension between nations and between groups of people within the same nation. They have done all these things and they continue to do them while telling you they are working for peace. I don't know of any better way for you to judge whether this is true or false than by this example of the Communist leaders' own working methods.

MURROW: Tomorrow, Jacob Malik of Russia will raise this whole question at the United Nations Security Council. And here in New York today American, British, and French diplomats conferred on how best to handle the expected Malik accusation.

The Russians tonight protested to the Swedish Government over what they called the violation of the Soviet frontier by Swedish aircraft. The Russians say they shot down a Swedish plane over the Baltic yesterday after the Swedish plane refused orders to land, and opened fire on Russian planes. The Swedes say the plane that was shot down was unarmed. The Soviet protest came as the Swedish Government sent an armed naval flotilla to positions in the Baltic where one of its planes was believed to have been shot down on Friday. The one shot down yesterday was searching for this plane at the time it encountered two Soviet MIGs. The Swedes ordered their sailors, and escorting jet fighters, to shoot back at anyone who shoots at them.

In West Germany today, representatives of three captive Baltic nations, Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, charged that 25 per cent of the population of the three countries - one and a half million persons - have been sent to slave labor camps by the Russians.

And in East Germany, the Soviet zone Communist Government announced that it is "compelled" to form an army to "ward off an attack" by the Western Allies.

Here in New York, a two-day strike of Long Island railroad engineers was settled late this afternoon, after one of the worst transportation tie-ups in the city's history. The engineers objected to certain rules changes. Terms of the settlement were not announced, but the railroad is now back in service, expected to resume normal schedules tomorrow.

In Washington, Acting Defense Mobilizer Steelman reports that considerable progress has been made on a government plan to get steel for urgent military production, from some of the nation's strike-bound steel plants. There will be another meeting tomorrow with union officials. The steel strike is now in its 16th day. And while no widespread shortages have been reported, yet a number of companies served notice today that later this week, they may have to cut down on their production of mortars, rockets and certain trucks for the Army.

The House Labor committee voted today that the Wage Stabilization Board "failed to respect the national labor policy" by recommending the union shop as part of the settlement for the steel dispute.

The National Production Authority today approved a 43 per cent increase in copper allotments for the production of radio and television sets, refrigerators, stoves, washers, and copper that may be used for the building of homes and commerical buildings.

The House today gave final approval to a bill that will increase social security benefits by at least 5-dollars a month to four and a half million persons now receiving payments. This would cost 300-million dollars a year.

A House administration subcommittee today approved the spending of 415-thousand dollars for various investigations being carried out by other House committees. The new funds include 25-thousand dollars that would be used to investigate obscene books and magazines. If the full House approves the committee recommendations, the total amount spent for all investigations in this 82nd Congress would be three million, 160-thousand dollars - the highest in history.

The House today approved a bill that would exempt radio and television stations from libel suits that might result from remarks made by political candidates. The stations could not be sued unless it could be shown that they "wilfully" participated in sending the libelous remarks over the air. The bill also requires radio and television stations to make time available to political candidates at rates comparable to those charged for commercial advertising. Some politicians have complained that they were forced to pay higher rates for their campaign talks than are paid by regular advertisers.

In Maine, Governor Frederick G. Payne has scored the biggest political upset in the state in the past 30 years, by defeating Republican Senator Brewster's bid for re-nomination. With almost all the votes counted, Governor Payne has a three thousand vote lead over Brewster, the fifth ranking Republican in the Senate.

The Army decided today that its rules forbidding military men from taking part in political campaigns does not apply to General MacArthur, who will keynote the Republican convention. The Army says the order applies only to those "engaged either in the formulation of military policy, or in the execution of any of the tasks of the Army." General MacArthur is on the active list, but is not assigned to any specific duties.

Out in Denver today, General Eisenhower told reporters that he will win the Republican nomination over Senator Taft whom he called an "isolationist." Eisenhower spoke to a small group of reporters who had invited him to lunch. Don Whitehead of the Associated Press - who was not invited - says Eisenhower told this group: he does not believe a foreign policy plank could be drafted for the party platform that would be acceptable both to him and to Senator Taft. He says his remarks about a "40-billion dollar budget cut" had been taken from context, and misinterpreted by Taft people. Eisenhower is also reported to have said that he does not favor any more generals being raised to five-stars at this time. And he believes in pump-priming and federal works projects in a time of depression. The General is also said to have told the group of reporters that he is very bitter about a whispering campaign directed against himself and Mrs.

Eisenhower.

Earlier, a spokesman for the General said he was "fighting mad" over tactics used by the Taft forces in the Texas Republican convention, Senator Durr, an Eisenhower supporter, called this "the biggest steal in the history of Texas....one of the most flagrant violations of decency in the history of American politics."

L. M. Pexton of Denver, co-chairman of the Colorado Eisenhower for President campaign, told reporters: "Any illegal seating of delegates" at the Chicago convention might open the way to a third party. Pexton made it clear he was speaking for himself - hadn't discussed the matter with Eisenhower.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: General Ridgway has given the lie to Russian charges of germ warfare in Korea. Another General, former Marine Commandant Vandergrift once said: "Situations arise in which people take a gambler's chance, and sometimes carry if off. But true success belongs to those whose strength is real because it is backed by courage and character. In the long run, real artillery is more reliable than ruses."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Wednesday - June 18, 1952

This is the news:

The Senate today turned down three presidential proposals for re-organizing the government. It turned down plans. (originally suggested by the non-partisan Hoover Commission). that would eliminate the necessity of Senate confirmation for 21-thousand postmasters.. 94 United States marshals and 52 customs collectors. Supporters of these plans argued that they were a step forward in the merit system..that appointees would be chosen on the basis of civil service rules and regulations. Opponents of the plan, particularly the one affecting postmasters, argued that they were "politically" designed...a move to make the postmaster general one of the nation's most powerful political figures. And Democratic Senator McClellan of Arkansas, leading the opposition, said these plans amounted to "an assault on the intellectual honesty and competence of everey Senator."

The President suffered another defeat when the Senate voted to send back to the Foreign Relations ~~commission~~ Committee for more study..the bill to authorize our participation, with Canada, in building an 818-million dollar St. Lawrence seaway and power project. Before the Senate voted, the President made it known that he would consider defeat of the plan "one of the worst economic mistakes in the nation's history." He said if we fail to go along with the project, Canada will build it alone.. and steel producers will have to pay tolls on all of their imports of ore from Labrador. The vote to send the St. Lawrence project back to committee was 43 to 40.. (with both parties divided fairly evenly.)

Secretary of State Acheson said today that he was "deeply shocked and concerned by the indefensible action" of the Russians in shooting down a Swedish plane over the Baltic. The Swedish government today told the Russians that contrary to a Soviet note: the Swedish plane was not armed.. and at no time was it closer than 15 nautical miles to Soviet territory. The Russians had claimed that the Swedish plane opened fire on the Russian mig which later shot down the Swedish plane. Swedish newspapers today called the Russians "liars".. the cabinet met for its third urgent session. And Swedish planes and warships are now carrying live ammunition and orders to shoot back if attacked. The Danish government [redacted] has made it known that since March its planes and warships have been similarly armed and instructed to shoot back if attacked in international or territorial waters.

In London, Prime Minister Churchill rejected demands from a Laborite that the British call a high level conference on the Korean truce negotiations. Mr. Churchill said his government is constantly exchanging information with Washington..(there is no need now for a formal conference.)

The truce negotiators in Korea are in the middle of a three-day recess. Liason officers from both sides met today, with the Communists giving us a note saying, that the recess we called is "unjustified.. designed to delay an armistice." We told the enemy that contrary to his statements, four prisoner of war camps in northern Korea are not marked as such. We say that perhaps these camps, containing allied prisoners, do not exist, at the locations the Communists have given us.

The Chinese broke off a six-day attack on the western front. And the Pentagon reports that in the last week [redacted] we suffered 259 casualties. Our total casualty list now includes just under 110-thousand names.

Koje island was quiet again today. We moved another 11-thousand prisoners out of two compounds..(without any trouble.)

The Japanese government announced today that she recognizes the Chinese Nationalists as the government for all China; and has no "relations whatsoever with the Peiping regime."

At the United Nations today, Jacob Malik, president of the security council this month, made a mild 20-minute speech calling on all nations that have not ratified the Geneva protocol against using germ warfare...to do so now. Malik did not use this particular occassion to open his propaganda charge that the United Nations have been using germ warfare in Korea and China.

But American Delegate Gross took the floor and warned that Russia's previous charges against us have set the stage for the Russians and Chinese to use germ warfare against us. He pointed out that the Geneva protocol..for which the Russians want more signatures.. contains a "reservation" by the Russians. In it they say they are free to use germ warfare against any nation that first uses it against them.

DBS RADION DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Wednesday, June 18, 1952
7:45 to 8:00 p.m.

MURROW: And John L. Lewis, President of the United Mine Workers, today offered to lend the striking steel workers at least ten million dollars to help them win their fight. Mr. Lewis made his offer in a telegram to Phil Murray, and we have recorded part of it as he read it to reporters today.

LEWIS: I have today, gentlemen, sent the following telegram to Mr. Philip Murray, president, United Steel Workers of America, at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. "We are conscious of the strength of the vast array of adversaries which confront you. Rarely has a union membership faced such a formidable grouping of financial and corporate interests as now oppose the steel workers of the nation in their long-standing struggle to achieve their rightful aims and objectives in the industry.

It is, of course, the fervent hope of those interests that they can crush your strike through the utilization of the infamous Taft-Hartley slave statute. They are aided and abetted by certain groups and individuals in Congress for whom Mr. R. Alfonso Taft is spokesman. Any attempt to crush your strike through the device of the Taft-Hartley machinery for the benefit of the rapacious and predatory interests that oppose you would be a heinous crime against American labor, anti-social in its concept and perilously destructive of confidence in the principles of our American Republic. It would be equivalent to the creation of a neo-Fascist movement in America, of which R. Alfonso Taft with his jack boots and velvet pants would be the willing tool and symbol. Our union is in this fight with you. Indicative of that fact, and as a preliminary step, United Mine Workers of America has today established financial credit for the United Steel Workers of America in the National Bank of Washington, D.C., in the amount of ten millions of dollars, subject to your draft and order, as your need warrants and circumstances require. The men in the mining industry and those ~~in~~ of our membership in associated industries salute themen in the steel industry and commend their brave hearts. Our full support is ever with you.

****

trans. S.Spence

The Ford Motor Company announced today that it is putting most of its plants across the nation on a four-day week. (because of the steel shortage.) Ford will close its plants Friday, and keep them open next week on a Monday through Thursday basis, as long as possible.

Economic Stabilizer Putnam said today that the steel industry has been assured of "friendly and sympathetic" consideration of a price increase..after it has worked out a new contract with the striking C.I.O. steelworkers.

And John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, today offered to lend the striking steelworkers at least 10-million dollars, to help them win their fight. Mr. Lewis made his offer in a telegram to Phil Murray and we have recorded part of it as he read it to reporters today:

(runs 2;45 ending: our full support is ever with you)

There is no reply yet from the Steelworkers..or President Murray.

In the House today, Republican Representative Brown of Ohio urged his colleagues to "strike a blow for liberty" and let the economic controls bill die. Brown called it a "socialistic monstrosity..that is slowly chocking the life out of America." Representative Spence, Kentucky

Democrat, said the Republicans would not "dare" kill off economic controls in an election year. He said: "If you do, things may happen.. a spiriling inflation that will impoverish the people. That would be something to answer for."

The Office of Price Stabilization said today that it will suspend price ceilings this week-end on whiskey and wine sold in bottles... There would be no change in ceilings on liquor sold by the drink.

The Republican National Committee decided today that the cases of 72 contested convention delegates will be decided by the National committee..not the states. This includes 38 seats in Texas, and others from five southern states and Kansas. Shortly before the committee decision was announced Senator Taft told reporters that he wanted the committee and not the states to decide the contest; and this is what Eisenhower backers want. Both candidates had something to say today.

Senator Taft, in two Washington speeches, xsaid the story of the Texas delegation has been completely misrepresented by what he called "the Eisenhower press." . He said the issue, broadly speaking is whether the Democrats can take over the Republican party and dictate its presidential nominee. General Eisenhower, in Denver, said "my voice will be raised in Texas" against the methods used there by the Taft forces. He went on: "The will of the American people must not be thwarted..I can't be expected to remain silent on this.. I will have nothing to do with any delegate who was not elected by free expression of the American people."

The General met today with delegates from Oregon. Among other things he told them: he doesn't expect a tax cut quickly..doesn't think anyone would want to cut taxes until we get rid of our deficit. He believes we must develop a program that "will convince Russia that we are through with this half-hot, half-cold, business." [redacted]

Senator Taft says if he's elected he will pledge a straight 15 per cent tax cut within two years. He thinks the difference among Republicans is "more of method than principle." The basic question facing the country is the fiscal situation. [redacted] repeated his demand for [redacted] said we [redacted]

~~building a big military force "without any clear concept of what we are building for."~~ The Senator says if elected he would seek Eisenhower's "advice" on military matters. He feels the charge that he is steamrolling the Republican convention is a fake issue..(showing the despair of his opposition.)

On the Democratic side: Averell Harriman won the District of Columbia primary...beating Senator Kefauver by four to one: 14-thousand votes to 33-hundred. Harriman won 41 of the District's 45 precincts..and all six convention delegates.

In Cleveland, Senator Kefauver said that if he is elected President he'll fight for repeal of the Taft-Hartley law. And Kefauver said he's "disappointed" in General Eisenhower. He says he doubts that Eisenhower shares the isolationist sentiment of most Republican leaders. But, he said, no matter what Republican is in the White House, the Republican isolationists will dominate the party.

This was another busy day of politicking. And reminds me of an observation Will Rogers once made:"Talk about economizing and cutting out all unnecessarys. What's the idea of holding conventions ? The papers announce all the campaign plans...the platform will be the one they have read for 40 years and have never used...and the speeches will be the same ones delivered for 40 years but never listened to."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

WEDNESDAY - JUNE 18, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Senate today turned down three presidential proposals for reorganizing the Government. It turned down plans (originally suggested by the non-partisan Hoover Commission), that would eliminate the necessity of Senate confirmation for 21-thousand postmasters, 94 United States marshals, and 52 customs collectors. Supporters of these plans argued that they were a step forward in the merit system, that appointees would be chosen on the basis of civil service rules and regulations. Opponents of the plan, particularly the one affecting postmasters, argued that they were "politically" designed - a move to make the Postmaster General one of the nation's most powerful political figures. And Democratic Senator McClellan of Arkansas, leading the opposition, said these plans amounted to "an assault on the intellectual honesty and competence of every Senator."

The President suffered another defeat when the Senate voted to send back to the Foreign Relations Committee for more study - the bill to authorize our participation, with Canada, in building an 818-million dollar St. Lawrence seaway and power project. Before the Senate voted, the President made it known that he would consider defeat of the plan "one of the worst economic mistakes in the nation's history." He said, if we fail to go along with the project, Canada will build it alone and steel producers will have to pay tolls on all of their imports of ore from Labrador. The vote to send the St. Lawrence project back to committee was 43 to 40, (with both parties divided fairly evenly).

Secretary of State Acheson said today that he was "deeply shocked and concerned by the indefensible action" of the Russians in shooting down a Swedish plane over the Baltic. The Swedish Government today told the Russians that contrary to a Soviet note, the Swedish plane was not armed, and at no time was it closer than 15 nautical miles to Soviet territory. The Russians had claimed that the Swedish plane opened fire on the Russian MIG which later shot down the Swedish plane. Swedish newspapers today called the Russians "liars". The cabinet met for its third urgent session, and Swedish planes and warships are now carrying live ammunition andorders to shoot back if attacked. The Danish Government has made it known that since March, its planes and warships have been similarly armed and instructed to shoot back if attacked in international or territorial waters.

In London, Prime Minister Churchill rejected demands from a Laborite that the British call a high level conference on the Korean truce negotiations. Mr. Churchill said his government is constantly exchanging information with Washington; (there is no need now for a formal conference).

The truce negotiators in Korea are in the middle of a three day recess. Liason officers from both sides met today with the Communists giving us a note saying that the recess we called is "unjustified...designed to delay an armistice." We told the enemy that contrary to his statements, four prisoner of war camps in northern Korea are not marked as such. We say that perhaps these camps, containing allied prisoners, do not exist at the locations the Communists have given us.

The Chinese broke off a six-day attack on the western front. And the Pentagon reports that in the last week, we suffered 259 casualties. Our total casualty list now includes just under 110-thousand names.

Koje Island was quiet again today. We moved another 11-thousand prisoners out of two compounds - without trouble.

The Japanese Government announced today that she recognizes the Chinese Nationalists as the government for all China, and has no "relations whatsoever with the Peiping regime."

At the United Nations today, Jacob Malik, president of the Security Council this month, made a mild 20-minute speech calling on all nations that have not ratified the Geneva protocol against using germ warfare to do so now. Malik did not use this particular occassion to open his propaganda charge that the United Nations have been using germ warfare in Korea and China.

But American Delegate Gross took the floor and warned that Russia's previous charges against us have set the stage for the Russians and Chinese to use germ warfare against us. He pointed out that the Geneva protocol, for which the Russians want more signatures, contains a "reservation" by the Russians. In it they say they are free to use germ warfare against any nation that first uses it against them.

The Ford Motor Company announced today that it is putting most of its plants across the nation on a four-day week, (because of the steel shortages). Ford will close its plants Friday, and keep them open next week on a Monday through Thursday basis as long as possible.

Economic Stabilizer Putnam said today that the steel industry has been assured of "friendly and sympathetic" consideration of a price increase, after it has worked out a new contract with the striking CIO Steelworkers.

And John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, today offered to lend the striking steelworkers at least 10-million dollars to help them win their fight. Mr. Lewis made his offer in a telegram to Phil Murray and we have recorded part of it as he read it to reporters today:

LEWIS: I have today, gentlemen, sent the following telegram to Mr. Philip Murray, president, United Steel Workers of America, at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania: "We are conscious of the strength of the vast array of adversaries which confront you. Rarely has a union membership faced such a formidable grouping of financial and corporate interests as now oppose the steel workers of the nation in their long standing struggle to achieve their rightful aims and objectives in the industry.

It is, of course, the fervent hope of those interests that they can crush your strike through the utilization of the infamous Taft-Hartley slave statute. They are aided and abetted by certain groups and individuals in Congress for whom Mr. R. Alfonso Taft is spokesman. Any attempt to crush your strike through the device of the Taft-Hartley machinery for the benefit of the rapacious and predatory interests that oppose you, would be a heinous crime against American labor, anti-social in its concept and perilously destructive of confidence in the principles of our American Republic. It would be equivalent to the creation of a neo-Fascist movement in America, of which R. Alfonso Taft with his jack boots and velvet pants would be the willing tool and symbol. Our union is in this fight with you. Indicative of that fact, and as a preliminary step, United Mine Workers of America has today established financial credit for the United Steel Workers of America in the National Bank of Washington, D.C., in the amount of ten millions of dollars, subject to your draft and order, as your need warrants and circumstances require. The men in the mining industry and those of our membership in associated industries salute the men in the steel industry and commend their brave hearts. Our full support is ever with you.

MURROW: There is no reply yet from the Steelworkers - or President Murray.

In the House today, Republican Representative Brown of Ohio urged his colleagues to "strike a blow for liberty" and let the Economic Controls Bill die. Brown called it a "socialistic monstrosity....that is slowly chocking the life out of America." Representative Spence, Kentucky Democrat, said the Republicans would not "dare" kill off economic controls in an election year. He said: "If you do, things may happen.....a spiriling inflation that will impoverish the people. That would be something to answer for."

The Office of Price Stabilization said today that it will suspend price ceilings this week-end on whiskey and wine sold in bottles. There would be no change in ceilings on liquor sold by the drink.

The Republican National Committee decided today that the cases of 72 contested convention delegates will be decided by the National Committee - not the states. This includes 38 seats in Texas, and others from five southern states and Kansas. Shortly before the committee decision was announced, Senator Taft told reporters that he wanted the committee and not the states to decide the contest; and this is what Eisenhower backers want. Both candidates had something to say today.

Senator Taft, in two Washington speeches, said the story of the Texas delegation has been completely misrepresented by what he called "the Eisenhower press." He said the issue, broadly speaking, is whether the Democrats can take over the Republican Party and dictate its presidential nominee. General Eisenhower, in Denver, said: "My voice will be raised in Texas" against the methods used there by the Taft forces." He went on: "The will of the American people must not be thwarted....I can't be expected to remain silent on this.....I will have nothing to do with any delegate who was not elected by free expression of the American people."

The General met today with delegates from Oregon. Among other things he told them: he doesn't expect a tax cut quickly...doesn't think anyone would want to cut taxes until we get rid of our deficit. He believes we must develop a program that "will convince Russia that we are through with this half-hot, half-cold business."

Senator Taft says if he's elected he will pledge a straight 15 per cent tax cut within two years. He thinks the difference among Republicans is "more of method than principle." The basic question facing the country is the fiscal situation. The Senator says, if elected, he would seek Eisenhower's "advice" on military matters. He feels the charge that he is steamrolling the Republican convention is a fake issue, (showing the despair of his opposition).

On the Democratic side: Averell Harriman won the District of Columbia primary, beating Senator Kefauver by four to one: 14-thousand votes to 33-hundred. Harriman won 41 of the District's 45 precincts and all sixconvention delegates.

In Cleveland, Senator Kefauver said that, if he is elected President, he'll fight for repeal of the Taft-Hartley law. And Kefauver said he's "disappointed" in General Eisenhower. He says he doubts that Eisenhower shares the isolationist sentiment of most Republican leaders. But, he said, no matter what is in the White House, the Republican isolationists will dominate the Party.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: This was another busy day of politicking, and reminds me of an observation Will Rogers once made: "Talk about economizing and cutting out all unnecessarys. What's the idea of holding conventions? The papers announce all the campaign plans, the platform will be the one they have read for 40 years and have never used, and the speeches will be the same ones delivered for 40 years but never listened to."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Thursday - June 19, 1952

This is the news:

The President said today that taxes should be raised..instead of cut.. (as proposed by Senator Taft and General Eisenhower) Mr. Truman told reporters: if taxes could be cut he'd of tried to cut them. He doesn't think any Democratic president would reduce taxes. We can't do that unless we put the country more in a hole than we are in now. Mr. Truman also said he still thinks Eisenhower is a nice guy, but he can't wish him luck in his presidential campaign, because Ike is not a Democrat. The President said he agrees with Averell Harriman that Harriman's victory, in a District of Columbia primary, was a clear triumph for the New Deal and Fair Deal.

Senator Taft said tonight that if he's elected President he will balance the budget the first year of his term..cut taxes 15 per cent in the second year. The Senator says:"The new deal wing of the Republican party"--(an obvious reference to Eisenhower)-- cannot win anymore in November, than it has in the past, on a me-too platform." He favors the end of price controls today: to insure the freedom of businessmen to run their business. Taft said:"We must promise the expulsion of the money-changers from the temple and the appointment of honest men to office."

Senator Kefauver, campaigning in Detroit, said today that the nation cannot afford day-dreams about low taxes. He said both Taft and Eisenhower "are avoiding reality" in talking about tax cuts.

Carroll Reece, a leader in the Taft campaign, charged today that General Eisenhower, and other UN-IDENTIFIED military leaders, are responsible for what he called the "pitiful shape" of our armed forces. Reece says these men sold themselves to the Administration. The Administration used Eisenhower to cover up its gamble with our security in 1949..when the military budget was cut. Reece says Eisenhower was rewarded for this with the NATO job "which kept him in the public eye."

Republican Senator Knowland of California today denied press reports that Senator Taft had personally offered him the vice-presidency in return for California's convention votes. Knowland says that is not true..he's going to nominate Governor Warren of California at the Chicago Convention.

~~The Taft forces says Senator Dirksen of Illinois will nominate Taft.~~

At his news conference today, THE PRESIDENT SAID he is "considering" the use of the Taft-Hartley law in the steel strike. But he questions whether an injunction would get the striking C.I.O. steelworkers back to work. A reporter suggested, at least it would give the country 80-days of production. The President asked: How do you know that? [redacted]

The Steelworkers today told their local unions to co-operate and help move [redacted] steel for defense, from 75 mills and warehouses.

The Ford Motor Company has decided to keep its five-day work week..not cut it to four days.. in order to qualify under the government's production quota system.

The House today voted tentatively to withdraw this country from the international distribution of the [redacted] free world's supply of strategic materials.

The government says the cost of living, during May, almost reached the peak set last January. This means a two cents-an-hour wage increase for a million and a quarter railroad workers.. at least a penny-an-hour raise for 100-thousand textile, aircraft, and oil refinery workers.

Congress has sent to the President a bill to almost double the size of the Marine Corps..to 400-thousand men.. and to give the Marine commandant the right to be consulted by the Joint Chiefs of Staff on matters affecting Marines.

Attorney General Mc Granery says the President has fired U. S. District Attorney Lester Luther of Topeka, Kansas. A jury will investigate charges that Luther took outside fees while working for the government.

~~House investigators say they are going to investigate a complaint that the Justice Department in 1948 stifled an investigation of four big Nixon companies after the companies contributed to the Democratic campaign.~~

Democratic Senator Hunt says Formosa is not in a position to defend itself against a Communist attack. After hearing testimony from General Bradley, Hunt told reporters: anyone who has the wild idea that the Chinese NATIONALIST troops on Formosa are ready to be used in Korea ~~out~~ ought to get the idea out of his head."

Vice Admiral Joy, our former chief negotiator in Korea, returned to San Fransisco today and said: "We have made progress..we learned what the Communsists are.. a lesson that will serve us in the future."

And British Field Marshal Earl Alexander, in Canada on his way home to Britain from Korea, says we "may be very near an armistice" right now. Alexander, Britain's defense minister, says his people have been "awfully ignorant" of what's happening in Korea. He found their criticism absolutely unjustified.. he was very favorably impressed with everything... says the United Nations effort is one of the best examples of team-work he's ever seen.

The Korean battlefronts were comparatively quiet today. And on Koje we moved another 7-thousand prisoners of war without incident.

IN Sweden, a spy trial witness accused two members of the Swedish parliament of being links in a spy network for Russia.

The French Communist party today confessed publicly to serious errors in its policy and tactics..called on its members to submerge their domestic program and mix with non-Communists in a supreme battle for peace---meaning Soviet foreign policy.

In Brooklyn today, Dodger Pitcher Carl Erskine pitched a no-hit, no-run game, shutting out the Chicago Cubs, 5 to nothing. Erskine allowed only one man to get on base.. a walk to the opposing pitcher.

It seems to this reporter that there are times when Americans feel unduly and unnecessarily sorry for themselves - hemmed in with global responsibilities, high taxes, rising cost of living, politics and uncertainty. At such times, as an antidote to such thoughts, it is perhaps comforting to consider the difficulties of other nations and people. / For example: a Budapest newspaper reports that a certain steel factory is now making razor blades of good quality. An enterprising reporter reports, that they are really good - he tried them...but he had to go to the factory where they're made. And he suggests that it's not enough to manufacture good razor blades - they must also be put on the market. / This reporter in communist Hungary, asked for these new razor blades in a store. They had them but they weren't selling them, because it was necessary to sell the old inferior ones first. This is unworthy of XXXXXXXX socialist commercial enterprise. The newspaper story continues that the reason the new and better blades were made, was that the older ones were so bad, that the men who worked in the factories were afraid to use them. / So they started making better quality blades, but the factory workers are using most of the output, and other comrades can't get the new blades. / The Ministry of Internal Trade has given orders to withdraw all the old dull blades from the shops, but the shops continue to sell them.

Also there are complaints about cigarettes. Packages supposed to contain 25 firm, round cigarettes, turn up containing only 22, and a couple of broken pieces. There is serious trouble in communist Hungary. (And have you had any trouble with cigarettes or razor blades recently?)

The editor of a Budapest newspaper writes a solemn piece saying that it's all right for workers to wear neckties. Loyalty to the working class need not be expressed in an untidy and slovenly appearance. We must not restrict, but rather increase, the pretensions of workers, and one way of doing this is to wear neckties. Moreover, continues the editor: "if nobody wears neckties, what will become of our necktie factories?" I would contend that anyone who urges the wearing of a necktie in hot weather, is no friend of the working classes, or any other class.

And if we have trouble understanding what goes on behind the Iron Curtain, imagine their difficulty in comprehending what's happening over here. For example, today the official Russian newspaper in Vienna made what appears to be the first Soviet analysis of our presidential campaign, — declared that Republicans and Democrats have agreed on Eisenhower as the next President in order to "guarantee the continuation of American aggressive policy". So Eisenhower, who is a faithful follower of democratic policies, is able to represent himself as a Republican. The paper says Truman and the Democrats would never have made such an agreement, if they had any chance of winning themselves. And the editorial in this communist newspaper concludes, that the only real fight is between Eisenhower and Taft "because Taft is sceptical of Eisenhower's sudden conversion to Republicanism, and considers his candidacy a conspiracy of Democrats against Republicans." That's what the editor of this communist newspaper in Vienna says, in this first communist comment on the presidential campaign. (He's really going to be confused before the thing is settled.)

And as we contemplate our own trials and tribulations, spare a thought for the gay and unpredictable Austrians. They are divided into two hostile camps over a basic issue. It happened in the Austrian cultural metropolis of Graz. Yesterday the Philharmonic Orchestra assembled to give a concert over the Austrian Radio. The fiddles were tuned up; the conductor raised his baton, when he lowered it, there was no sound - just a deep hum of indignation not to be found in any musical score. The Concert Meister than announced that the orchestra would not play, so long as the music critic for a newspaper remained in the hall. His name was Herbert Schneiber. He was labelled "a hateful and antipathetic person". His criticism had prevented the orchestra from getting a wage raise in the last negotiations. From big drum to piccolo the orchestra wouldn't play. The crisis was resolved when Schneiber got up from his seat, stalked from the concert hall, followed by all of his fellow critics, all declaring that the orchestra was trying to suppress freedom of speech, and vowing that they wouldn't write a single line about the concert. And they didn't.

Any time left over from contemplating our own difficulties could be devoted to arguing the merits of this Austrian controversy. I'm in favor of the critics. But then I am neither musician nor critic, have never heard the orchestra play; but lack of information should prevent no one from participating in a controversy.

It ~~is apparent that~~ those behind the Iron Curtain have their troubles too. And as George Moore once remarked:"There is nothing so consoling as to find that one's neighbor's troubles are at least as great as one's own." As for the Graz Philharmonic, some comfort may be found in this observatio by the Finnish Composer Sibelius:"Pay no attention to what the critics say; there has never been set up a statue in honor of a critic."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY - JUNE 19, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President said today that taxes should be raised, instead of cut - as proposed by Senator Taft and General Eisenhower. Mr. Truman told reporters: if taxes could be cut he'd of tried to cut them. He doesn't think any Democratic president would reduce taxes. We can't do that unless we put the country more in a hole than we are in now. Mr. Truman also said he still thinks Eisenhower is a nice guy, but he can't wish him luck in his presidential campaign, because Ike is not a Democrat. The President said he agrees with Averell Harriman that Harriman's victory in a District of Columbia primary was a clear triumph for the New Deal and Fair Deal.

Senator Taft said tonight that if he's elected President, he will balance the budget the first year of his term - cut taxes 15 per cent in the second year. The Senator says: "The New Deal wing of the Republican Party," - an obvious reference to Eisenhower - "cannot win anymore in November than it has in the past on a me-too platform." He favors the end of price controls today to insure the freedom of businessmen to run their business. Taft said: "We must promise the expulsion of the 'money-changers' from the temple and the appointment of honest men to office." Senator Kefauver, campaigning in Detroit, said today that the nation cannot afford day-dreams about low taxes. He said both Taft and Eisenhower "are avoiding reality" in talking about tax cuts.

Carroll Reece, a leader in the Taft campaign, charged today that General Eisenhower, and other unidentified military leaders, are responsible for what he called the "pitiful shape" of our armed forces. Reece says these men sold themselves to the Administration. The Administration used Eisenhower to cover up its gamble with our security in 1949, when the military budget was cut. Reece says Eisenhower was rewarded for this with the NATO job, "which kept him in the public eye."

Republican Senator Knowland of California today denied press reports that Senator Taft had personally offered him the vice-presidency in return for California's convention votes. Knowland says that is not true; he's going to nominate Governor Warren of California at the Chicago Convention.

The President, at his news conference today, said he is "considering" the use of the Taft-Hartley law in the steel strike. But he questions whether an injunction would get the striking CIO steelworkers back to work. A reporter suggested at least it would give the country 80-days of production. The President asked: How do you know that?

The steelworkers today told their local unions to co-operate and help move steel for defense from 75 mills and warehouses.

The Ford Motor Company has decided to keep its five-day work week, not cut it to four days, in order to qualify under the government's production quota system.

The House today voted tentatively to withdraw this country from the international distribution of the free world's supply of strategic materials.

The Government says the cost of living, during May, almost readhed the peak set last January. This means a two-cents-an-hour wage increase for a million and a quarter railroad workers - at least a penny-an-hour raise for 100-thousand textile, aircraft and oil refinery workers.

Congress has sent to the President a bill to almost double the size of the Marine Corps to 400-thousand men, and to give the Marine Commandant the right to be consulted by the Joint Chiefs of Staff on matters affecting Marines.

Attorney General McGranery says the President has fired U.S. District Attorney Lester Luther of Topeka, Kansas. A jury will investigate charges that Luther took outside fees while working for the Government.

Democratic Senator Hunt says Formosa is not in a position to defend itself against a Communist attack. After hearing testimony from General Bradley,

Hunt told reporters: anyone who has the wild idea that the Chinese Nationalist troops on Formosa are ready to be used in Korea ought to get the idea out of his head."

Vice Admiral Joy, our former chief negotiator in Korea, returned to San Francisco today and said: "We have made progress....we learned what the Communists are.....a lesson that will serve us the future."

And British Field Marshal, Earl Alexander, in Canada on his way home to Britain from Korea, says we "may be very near an armistice" right now. Alexander Britain's Defense Minister, says his people have been "awfully ignorant" of what's happening in Korea. He found their criticism absolutely unjustified. He was very favorably impressed with everything; says the United Nations effort is one of the best examples of team-work he's ever seen.

The Korean battlefronts were comparatively quiet today. And on Koje we moved another 7-thousand prisoners of war without incident.

In Sweden, a spy trial witness accused two members of the Swedish parliament of being links in a spy network for Russia.

The French Communist Party today confessed publicly to serious errors in its policy and tactics; called on its members to submerge their domestic program and mix with non-Communists in a supreme battle for peace - meaning Soviet foreign policy.

In Brooklyn today, Dodger Pitcher Carl Erskine pitched a no-hit, no-run game, shutting out the Chicago Cubs, 5 to nothing. Erskine allowed only one man to get on base - a walk to the opposing pitcher. It seems to this reporter that there are times when Americans feel unduly and unnecessarily sorry for themselves - hemmed in with global responsibilities, high taxes, rising cost of living, politic and uncertainty. At such times, as an antidote to such thoughts, it is perhaps comforting to consider the difficulties of other nations and people. For example: a Budapest newspaper reports that a certain steel factory is now making razor blades of good quality. An enterprising reporter reports, that they are really good - he tried them. But he had to go to the factory where they're made. And he suggests that it's not enough to manufacture good razor blades; they must also be put on the market. This reporter in communist Hungary asked for these new razor blades in a store. They had them but they weren't selling them, because it was necessary to sell the old, inferior ones first. This is unworthy of socialist commercial enterprise. The newspaper story continues that the reason the new and better blades were made, was that the older ones were so bad, that the men who worked in the factories were afraid to use them. So they started making better quality blades, but the factory workers are using most of the output, and other comrades can't get the new blades. The Ministry of Internal Trade has given orders to withdraw all the old dull blades from the shops, but the shops continue to sell them.

Also, there are complaints about cigarettes. Packages supposed to contain 25 firm, round cigarettes, turn up containing only 22, and a couple of broken pieces. There is serious trouble in communist Hungary. (And have you had any trouble with cigarettes or razor blades recently?)

The editor of a Budapest newspaper writes a solemn piece saying that it's all right for workers to wear neckties. Loyalty to the working class need not be expressed in an untidy and slovenly appearance. We must not restrict, but rather increase, the pretensions of workers, and one way of doing this is to wear neckties. Moreover, continues the editor: "If anybody wears neckties, what will become of our necktie factories?" I would contend that anyone who urges the wearing of a necktie in hot weather, is no friend of the working class, or any other class.

And if we have trouble understanding what goes on behind the Iron Curtain, imagine their difficulty in comprehending what's happening over here. For example: today the official Russian newspaper in Vienna made what appears to be the first Soviet analysis of our presidential campaign - declared that Republicans and Democrats have agreed on Eisenhower as the next President in order to "guarantee the continuation of American aggressive policy." So Eisenhower, who is a faithful follower of democratic policies, is able to represent himself as a Republican. The paper says Truman and the Democrats would never have made such an agreement, if they had any chance of winning themselves. And the editorial in this communist newspaper concludes that the only real fight is between Eisenhower and Taft, "because Taft is sceptical of Eisenhower's sudden conversion to Republicanism, and considers his candidacy a conspiracy of Democrats against Republicans." That's what the editor of this communist newspaper in Vienna says in this first communist comment on the presidential campaign. (He's really going to be confused before the thing is settled.)

And as we contemplate our own trials and tribulations, spare a thought for the gay and unpredictable Austrians. They are divided into two hostile camps over a basic issue. It happened in the Austrian cultural metropolis of Graz. Yesterday the Philharmonic Orchestra assembled to give a concert over the Austrian Radio. The fiddles were tuned up; the conductor raised his baton; when he lowered it, there was no sound - just a deep him of indignation not to be found in any musical score. The Concert Meister then announced that the orchestra would not play so long as the music critic for a newspaper remained in the hall. His name was Herbert Schneiber. He was labelled "a hateful and antipathetic person." His criticism had prevented the orchestra from getting a wage raise in the last negotiations. From big drum to piccolo, the orchestra wouldn't play. The crisis was resolved when Schneiber got up from his seat, stalked from the concert hall, followed by all of his fellow critics, all declaring that the orchestra was trying to suppress freedom of speech, and vowing that they wouldn't write a single line about the concert. And they didn't.

Any time left over from contemplating our own difficulties could be devoted to arguing the merits of this Austrian controversy. I'm in favor of the critics. But then I am neither musician nor critic, have never heard the orchestra play; but lack of information should prevent no one from participating in a controversy.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Those behind the Iron Curtain have their troubles, too. And as George Moore once remarked: "There is nothing so consoling as to find that one's neighbor's troubles are at least as great as one's own." As for the Graz Philharmonic, some comfort may be found in this observation by the Finnish Composer Sibelius: "Pay no attention to what the critics say. There has never been set up a statue in honor of a critic."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Friday - June 20, 1952

This is the news:

The House today tentatively agreed to kill almost all price controls. It voted 146 to 88, to remove price controls on all foods..consumer goods and materials, except a few materials vital to the defense effort. The measure was proposed by Representative Talley, Iowa Republican, as a means of "encouraging free enterprise." Opponents of the bill, and the Office of Price Stabilization, said if it becomes law "it obviously would be the end of price controls, for all practical purposes." The Democrats, in general, voted against the bill, but were hampered by a large number of absentees among their party members. The house also voted to replace the present Wage Stabilization Board, with its equal representation for labor, management and the public, with a board that would have a majority of public members. The new board would also be stripped of its power to recommend settlements in labor disputes. The House put off a final vote until Wednesday, when it will Also consider a request to the President to use the Taft-Hartley injunction to end the steel strike.

The government today gave up its plan to relax building restrictions on the first of July. National Production Administrator Fowler says this is necessary because "the steel strike is slowly but surely strangling military and civilian production." He says the only way we can support the defense program is to have nearly all the closed plants back in operation.

The strike is now in its 19th day. A number of steel executives are reported meeting here in New York to plan a resumption of negotiations with the strikers.

The President today signed the foreign aid bill. It comes to almost six and a half billion dollars. That's 18 and a half per cent less than the President called "the minimum necessary for next year."

The government says it is considering a plan to buy airplanes.. complete.. from western European nations. They would be paid for by this country and delivered to our allies in Europe. The allies would be required to use some of their own funds to help buy the planes. The government says its plans would not hurt the American aviation industry.

Commerce Secretary Sawyer today turned over the luxury liner "United States" to the United States lines for the company's contract price of 28 million dollars. And the President called on the attorney general to investigate whether there has been an excessive subsidy. Under a 1942 contract the government agreed to pay an estimated 42 million toward the cost of the big ship. The President's letter indicates that the government's share may be closer to 50 millions. He wants Attorney General Mc Granery to determine how much the SHIP [redacted] cost the government.. and if we paid too much what should be done to take "corrective action" under existing law.

[redacted]

The President today nominated Angus Ward to be ambassador to Afghanistan. Mr. Ward was once a prisoner of the Communists in Mukden, Manchuria. After his release and return to this country he was assigned to British East Africa.

The State Department reveals that it has asked all customs officials to prevent Owen Lattimore from leaving this country. Micheal Mc Dermott, a department spokesman, says: "an allegation was recently made to the Department that Mr. Lattimore was making arrangements for a possible visit to Russia and/or its satellites." Mr. Lattimore does not have a passport to leave the country..says he has no such plans and hasn't asked for any passport because he does not intend to go abroad. He calls the State Department's action "a mid-summer night madness." Mr. McDermott says this order to customs agents is the first of its kind.. unusual.. as far as he knows Mr. Lattimore is not under sureveillance.. McDermott says this action does not imply any illegal intent on the part of Mr. Lattimore. Senator Mc Carthy has accused Lattimore of being Russia's top agent in this country. Lattimore has constantly denied this..and other charges that he is a Communist.

~~Republican Senator Williams of Delaware charged today that for years the Treasury failed to collect delinquent income taxes from Frank Costello. And the Senator says the Treasury has now "buried" 315 thousand dollars worth of taxes due from Phil Kastel, Costello partner in some ventures.~~

At Fort Ord , California, Sergeant C.D. Chase was convicted by a court martial of disrespect for General Clark, our Far Eastern commander. Sergeant Chase had written the general criticising his handling of the Koje island riots as "repugnant and disgraceful." Chase was reduced to private first class and ordered to forfeit $75 a month pay for six months.

The Army says it has now completed its major re-shuffling of prisoners on Koje. The truce negotiaors meet in a few hours from now..after a three day recess..and our negotiators say there is a possibility of yet another recess if the Communists have nothing to offer.

In France, the National Assembly defeated a motion to fire Foreign Minister Schuman from the cabinet. And the Assembly refused to endorse his program for greater self-rule for the protectorate of Tunisia.

~~Thirteen Asian and Arab nations to requested a special session of the United Nations general assembly to consider their charges that the French-Tunisian dispute is a threat to world peace.~~

AT THE UNITED NATIONS Security Council American Delegate Gross said the time has come to expose Russia's "false and wicked lie" that we are using germ warfare in Korea. Gross wants an impartial investigation of the charges by the International Red Cross and any scientists and experts it selects.

In Phildelphia today, Harold Stassen said both Eisenhower and Taft are too conservative.. only a liberal program such as he offers could win for the Republicans in November. Mr. Stassen claims 25 of the convention twelve hundred and six delegates.

Eisenhower delegates from Texas say the [redacted] committee in charge of rooms IN CHICAGO attempted to quarter their delegation in a suburb 32 miles from the site of the convention. They've managed to find rooms in a downtown hotel.

Edward R. Murrow: June 20, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

Well, that's the news - most of it anyway. We have been whiling away a little time, while waiting for the Chicago Conventions to convene, reading old nominating speeches. We conclude that the construction of a nominating speech is a special art form, difficult, and demanding a combination of diffidence and delicacy, in the use of the spoken word, which we should never be able to master. But our researches into the subject of the nominating speech emboldened us to try our hand at a synthesis, a sort of distillation, of nominating speeches that have, and have not, been made. It would go something like this:

I propose to present to you the name of a great American, the only man Stalin fears. His record in opposing corruption is unblemished and unequalled. (Neither he, nor any of his intimate friends, have ever been caught with their hand in the till.) On the matter of taxes his record is clear. He has never voted against an appropriation, or in favor of a tax increase.

I propose to present to you my old "comrade in arms." We fought many a gallant rearguard action together, at Washington cocktail parties. He is a man beloved of the farmers, for he has consistently stood for higher farm prices, while defending the right of the housewife to buy groceries across the counter at cheaper prices. His record on foreign aid is spread upon the record for all to see. He would reduce taxes, reduce aid to our allies, bring the boys home, and at the same time contribute greatly to the security, confidence, and stability, of our allies, (at least those who do what he thinks they ought to do.)

I propose to present a man who believes in, and has fought for, full employment; who at the same time is persuaded that a little unemployment is good for business. WHO BELIEVES IN STATES RIGHTS, BUT BELIEVES EQUALLY THAT THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT SHOULD STEP IN WHEN THESE RIGHTS ARE ABRIDGED. On the matter of federal aid to education his record is ~~equally~~ clear. He has consistently contended that every boy and girl in this great land, is entitled to an education, ~~XXXXX~~ provided there be no interference with states' rights, and no resulting increase in the almost intolerable tax burden we now bear.

I propose to present to you a man who would balance the budget, reduce taxes, eliminate corruption in high places, root out all communists, reduce military spending, and at the same time increase the military effectiveness of the nation. He is a man who, on television, would combine the mass appeal of Arthur Godfrey, with the intellectual stature of Albert Einstein. He is a happy warrior, who can be relied upon to fight with equal vigor on both sides of such issues as Tidelands Oil, soil conservation and compulsory health insurance. His record is replete, if not redolent, with evidence of his concern for small business; but he has also demonstrated that he does not believe that bigness is bad. His record in defence of the rights of labor, its right to organize and to bargain, is known to all of you. And his voting record proves his deep belief that labor, once organized, should keep silent.

I propose to present to you the name of a man who believes in the dignity of man, (particularly those men and women who belong to our great Party) which, over the centuries, has always conducted itself with dignity in defeat, and never with vindictiveness in time of victory. Under his leadership the Party and the nation will go onward and upward, to something or other. Our future will not be behind us. Our global leadership will be assured, for we shall be led by a man, who takes a "rounded view" of all questions, who tolerates fools gladly, and is tolerant of the views of the Opposition, (particularly if they have the most votes.)

We cannot fail to turn the rascals out, but at the same time we must not rock the horse, while the steady hand at the tiller attempts to navigate the Ship of State through uncharted seas, without a compass, while there are breakers ahead.

And so, with all humility, and full appreciation to those who have contributed to his campaign funds, and the deep conviction that he can reduce taxes, increase expenditures, balance the budget, make us more secure with fewer troops, frighten our enemies, hearten our allies, unite the country, win the election, inaugurate an era of good feeling, and eliminate the boll weevil - I give you the man Who?

Politics, it would seem, doesn't change, it just repeats itself. In 1924 Will Rogers wrote:" We have heard nothing since ten o'clock this morning, but 'the man I am going to name.' There are so many being nominated that some of the men making the nominating speeches had never even met the men they were nominating. I know they had not from the way they talked about them."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

Monday - June 23, 1952

This is the news:

American planes, for the first time in the Korean war, have attacked enemy hydro-electric plants in North Korea. More than 500 planes.. air force, marines and navy.. knocked out five plants. (that supply power to North Korea, and part of Manchuria). A defense department official in Washington says this attack was made, because the enemy is stalling at the truce negotiations. He said: "We now realize that the [redacted] best chance of breaking the deadlock at Panmunom, is to hit the enemy with the force at our command." AS [redacted] our planes went over their targets today. (all on the Korean side of the Yalu). they saw more than 200 enemy Migs on the ground in Manchuria. No enemy plane rose to challenge us. And all of our planes returned safely.

The major target was the world's fourth largest hydro-electric plant at ~~Suiho.~~ SWEE-HO It was built by the Japanese in 1941, at a cost of 100-million dollars. Its kilowatt capacity is [redacted] LARGER than THAT OF our own Bonneville dam in the Pacific northwest. Japanese editors call today's attack more of a political than military step. They say that with this attack the "united Nations is [redacted] perhaps risking all-out war with Communist China." All through the two years of the Korean war we avoided attacks on today's targets.. ~~Suiho.~~ SWEE-HO two generating stations at the Chosin reservoir.. and two others in East Korea. Lieut. General Barcus, commander of the 5th air force, says today's attack "demonstrates our mastery of the sky over North Korea." #

There was no progress at the truce talks today. We told the Communists we are going to free 27-thousand Korean civilians from our prison camps. And the U.N. command now acknowledges that many of the prisoners on Koje island have never been screened on their views toward returning to the enemy lines. We have started to screen 45-thousand Communist civilians and soldiers

General Mac Arthur and his former aide, General Eichelberger, have exchanged statements on politics. Eichelberger, who now lives in North Carolina.. supports Eisenhower for the Republican nomination.. and says that MacArthur did not always consider it a tragic development to elect a military man president -- AS HE DOES NOW. Eichelberger says that in 1944 and 1948 MacArthur was a presidential hopeful. General MacArthur, through a spokesman, points out that General Eisenhower, in 1948, went on record against a professional soldier seeking high office. The spokesman says this Eisenhower statement was "widely held to have adversely affected efforts of MacArthur's friends in the Wisconsin primary in 1948." The spokesman says MacArthur has "warm personal regard" for Eisenhower but does not support his political ambitions.

A MacArthur-for-President headquarters was opened in Chicago today.

Senator Taft today accused four eastern governors of using political patronage to swing their convention delegations behind Eisenhower. He said Dewey of New York..Lodge of Connecticut..Adams of New Hampshire and Driscoll of New Jersey..are all doing this. Taft also said he does not believe the contested Texas delegates should be permitted to vote on their own permanent seating at the convention. But he thinks all contested delegations should be able to vote on contests outside their own states. The Eisenhower forces oppose this.

Sinclair Weeks, the finance chairman of the Republican national committee, today called on Taft to withdraw in favor of Eisenhower, unite the party, and guarantee victory in November.

And Senator Carlson, an Eisenhower leader, says Eisenhower and Taft differ on the fundamental issue of our time: how to establish a durable peace. CARLSON says the two candidates differ on their estimate of the danger and what should be done about it.

The President today took note of reports that a Senate committee might cut in half a two-and-three-quarter-billion dollar bill for the construction of air bases around the world. Mr. Truman says this would be "a terrible disaster.. we just can't afford to let it happen."

~~Phil Murray, head of the striking steelworkers, says the President assured him last December that if the union would postpone a strike scheduled for the first of this year "you need have no fear of a Taft-Hartley" law injunction.~~

~~Democratic Senator McCarran was defeated today in an effort to get the Senate to take up a constitutional amendment that would deny the President the right to seize any private property without congressional authorization. The motion was tabled after Majority Leader MacFarland accused McCarran of trying to overthrow the leadership of the Senate.~~

Price Stabilizer Arnall says if Congress approves a proposal to kill most price controls "the public will have absolutely no protection" against sky-rocketing price increases.

Federal Security Administrator Ewing today asked Congress to approve a law that would provide federal funds to help NOODY youngsters go to college. Congress would provide 800-dollar a year scholarships "for the neediest of the ablest" high school graduates. These students could also borrow money FROM colleges they attend..with the government insuring part of the money. The plan would cost 32-million dollars in its first year..would send 50 to 60-thousand poor children to college each year.

A House committee was told today by Herbert Bergson, a former assistant attorney general that political contributions played no part in the Justice Department's decision not to investigate the liquor industry. He said Ernest L. Branham, a department lawyer, had threatened Washington liquor dealers. Branham says that's an "unmitigated lie". He told the committee Edward P. Hodges, another department lawyer, tried to intimidate him into signing a "whitewash" for the liquor industry. Hodges says that is "absolutely untrue."

The Senate Foreign Relations committee today approved the German peace contract.

At the United Nations Jacob Malik of Russia insists that the Security Council invite Communist China and North Korea to testify on germ warfare. American Delegate Gross says we' are against that.

Edward R. Murrow: June 23, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

About seventeen months ago the President appointed a "Materials Policy Commission," headed by William S. Paley, Chairman of the Board of C.B.S. The Commission made its report today. This is the first effort to take a long look at what we have, and what we need, in the way of material resources - oil, copper, coal, food and all the rest. We in this country have ten percent of the free world's population. But in 1950 we used more than half the supply of such fundamental materials as petroleum, rubber, iron ore, manganese and zinc. We are consuming more than we produce. At the start of the century we were producing about fifteen percent more raw materials than we consumed. Now we are consuming ten percent more than we produce. There are no longer large mineral deposits in the West, waiting to be stumbled upon, and scooped up with picks and shovels; nor are there any longer vast forest tracks to be discovered. The President's Commission, looking ahead 25 years, sees our working population increasing by about twenty millions. And that means that our shortage of domestic materials will become more acute. Demand for everything can be expected to rise substantially. For example, right now the Munitions Board lists 74 categories of strategic and critical materials. We import all of our supplies for more than 40 of these, and part of our supplies for most of the rest. 90 percent of our virgin timber stand has been cut, and we have done a poor job of growing replacement crops.

The Commission estimates that during the next 25 years our demand for minerals as a whole will rise about 90 percent. We will need another 40 percent in agricultural products. The demand for energy in all forms will double. In fact, the demand for everything will rise substantially. So far as food is concerned we will probably be all right, for production from present acreage might be increased 200 percent in the next 25 years, if every farmer used fertilizer properly and employed every other known good farming practise. But the fact remains that we are using more raw materials than we are producing. We can either discover new materials, develop substitutes or import larger quantities from other nations, on terms that are advantageous to us and to the seller. Right now we are wasting a lot of materials that are in short supply.

The President's Commission suggests certain steps that can be taken to get us what we need in the next 25 years. It rejects the idea of self-sufficiency, and argues in favor of an increased pooling of the materials of the free world. It wants us to knock down our tariff walls in relation to materials we need. + don't have - Our objective should be to gain the greatest security at the lowest cost. If we fail to work for a rise in the standard of living of the rest of the free world, we therby hamper and impede a further rise of our own. The President's Commission recommends that a complete census of our minerals industry be taken every five years. It wants better maps and geologic surveys of this country and Alaska. It wants government aid for small mining operations - more emphasis on fire protection and forestry research; and a system of forest insurance. We should make long-term purchase contracts with price guarantees, with countries who produce the materials we need. When we are in urgent need of a particular material we should eliminate all duty on that material.

The Government should give financial assistance to private companies that will undertake the production of oil from shale # we're going to need more electric power, so we should develop our hydro-electric potential as quickly as possible. The government ought to spend about five times what it is now spending on basic research. The stockpiling of strategic and critical materials should be a fixed and constant policy.

In all the Commission offers more than 70 specific recommendations. Many are controversial and some will require legislation which will have a tough time getting through Congress. Mr. Truman said the Commission's study was "the most foresighted appraisal ever attempted, and establishes a landmark in this field."

The President's Commission contends that if we are to enjoy economic growth and national security, the free nations of the world must co-ordinate their resources to the ends of common growth, common safety and common welfare. # The facts and forecasts in this massive Report permit of no other conclusion. But there is often a vast difference between sound economics and what is called practical politics. We shall have to wait and see how many of the Commission's recommendations are translated into law.

We were talking of the conservation of our natural resources. Stuart Chase once said:" If we abuse the earth - destroy its soils by erosion, lay waste its cover of forest and grassland,pollute its waters, our world can not long protect and support us." For as Gifford Pinchot observed:"Without natural resources life itself is impossible. Conservation is the basis of permanent propperity among men and lasting peace among nations."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY - JUNE 23, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

American planes, for the first time in the Korean war, have attacked enemy hydro-electric plants in North Korea. More than 500 planes, Air Force, Marines and Navy, knocked out five plants that supply power to North Korea and part of Manchuria. A defense Department official in Washington says this attack was made, because the enemy is stalling at the truce negotiations. He said: "We now realize that the best chance of breaking the deadlock at Panmunjom is to hit the enemy with the force at our cmmmand." As our planes went over their targets today, (all on the Korean side of the Yalu), they saw more than 200 enemy MIGs on the ground in Manchuria. No enemy plane rose to challenge us, and all of our planes returned safely.

The major target was the world's fourth largest hydro-electric plant at Swee-Ho. It was built by the Japanese in 1941, at a cost of 100-million dollars Its kilowatt capacity is larger than that of our own Bonneville Dam in the Pacific northwest. Japanese editors call today's attack more of a political than military step. They say that with this attack, the "United Nations is perhaps risking all -out war with Communist China." All through the two years of the Korean war we avoided attacks on today's targets - Swee-Ho, two generating stations at the Chosin reservoir, and two others in East Korea. Lieut. General Barcus, commander of the 5th Air Force, says today's attack "demonstrates our mastery of the sky over North Korea."

There was no progress at the truce talks today. We told the Communists we are going to free 27-thousand Korean civilians from our prison camps. And the U.N. command now acknowledges that many of the prisoners on Koje Island have never been screened on their views toward returning to the enemy lines. We have started to screen 45-thousand communist civilians and soldiers.

General MacArthur and his former aide, General Eishelberger have exchanged statements on politics, Eichelberger, who now lives in North Carolina, supports Eisenhower for the Republican nomination, says that MacArthur did not always consider it a tragic development to elect a military man president...as he does now. Eichelberger says that in 1944 and 1948, MacArthur was a presidential hopeful. General MacArthur, (through a spokesman), points out that General Eisenhower, in 1948, went on record against a professional soldier seeking high office. The spokesman says this Eisenhower statement was "widely held to have adversely affected efforts of MacArthur's friends in the Wisconsin primary in 1948." The spokesman says MacArthur has "warm personal regard" for Eisenhower but does not support his political ambitions.

A MacArthur for President headquarters was opened in Chicago today.

Senator Taft today accused four eastern governors of using political patronage to swing their convention delegations behind Eisenhower. He said Dewey of New York, Lodge of Connecticut, Adams of New Hampshire and Driscoll of New Jersey, are all doing this. Taft also said he does not believe the contested Texas delegates should be permitted to vote on their own permanent seating at the convention. But he thinks all contested delegations should be able to vote on contests outside their own states. The Eisenhower forces oppose this.

Sinclair Weeks, the finance chairman of the Republican national committee, today called on Taft to withdraw in favor of Eisenhower, unite the party and guarantee victory in November.

And Senator Carlson, an Eisenhower leader, says Eisenhower and Taft differ on the fundamental issue of our time: how to establish a durable peace. Carlson says the two candidates differ on their estimate of the danger and what should be done about it.

The President today took note of reports that a Senate committee might cut in half a two-and-three-quarter-billion dollar bill for the construction of air bases around the world. Mr. Truman says this would be "a terrible disaster

.....we just can't afford to let it happen."

Price Stabilizer Arnall says if Congress approves a proposal to kill most price controls, "the public will have absolutely no protection" against sky-rocketing price increases."

Federal Security Administrator Ewing today asked Congress to approve a law that would provide federal funds to help needy youngsters go to college. Congress would provide 800-dollars a year scholarships "for the neediest of the ablest" High School graduates. These students could also borrow money from colleges they attend, with the Government insuring part of the money. The plan would cost 32-million dollars in its first year; would send 50 to 60-thousand poor children to college each year.

A House committee was told today by Herbert Bergson, a former assistant Attorney General, that political contributions played no part in the Justice Department's decision not to investigate the liquor industry. He said Ernest L. Branham, a Department lawyer, had threatened Washington liquor dealers. Branham says that's an "unmitigated lie." He told the committee Edward P. Hodges, another Department lawyer, tried to intimidate him into signing a "whitewash" for the liquor industry. Hodges says that is "absolutely untrue."

The Senate Foreign Relations committee today approved the German peace contract.

At the United Nations, Jacob Malik of Russia insists that the Security Council invite Communist China and North Korea to testify on germ warfare. American Delegate Gross says we are against that.

About seventeen months ago, the President appointed a "Materials Policy Commission", headed by William S. Paley, Chairman of the Board of C.B.S. The Commission made its report today. This is the first effort to take a long look at what we have and what we need in the way of material resources - oil, copper, coal, food and all the rest. We in this country have ten percent of the free world's population. But in 1950, we used more than half the supply of such fundamental materials as petroleum, rubber, iron ore, manganese and zinc. We are consuming more than we produce. At the start of the century, we were producing about fifteen percent more raw materials than we consumed. Now we are consuming ten percent more than we produce. There are no longer large mineral deposits in the West, waiting to be stumbled upon and scooped up with picks and shovels; nor are there any longer vast forest tracks to be discovered. The President's Commission, looking ahead 25 years, sees our working population increasing by about twenty millions. And that means that our shortage of domestic materials will become more acute. Demand for everything can be expected to rise substantially. For example: right now the Munitions Board lists 74 categories of strategic and critical materials. We import all of our supplies for more than 40 of these, and part of our supplies for most of the rest. 90 percent of our virgin timber stand has been cut, and we have done a poor job of growing replacement crops.

The Commission estimates that during the next 25 years, our demand for minerals as a whole will rise about 90 percent. We will need another 40 percent in agricultural products. The demand for energy in all forms will double. In fact, the demand for everything will rise substantially. So far as food is concerned, we will probably be all right, for production from present acreage might be increased 200 percent in the next 25 years, if every farmer used fertilizer properly and employed everyother known good farming practice. But the fact remains that we are using more raw materials than we are producing. We can either discover new materials, develop substitutes, or import larger quantities from other nations, on terms that are advantageous to us and to the seller. Right now, we are wasting a lot of materials that are in short supply.

The President's Commission suggests certain steps that can be taken to get us what we need in the next 25 years. It rejects the idea of self-sufficiency and argues in favor of an increased pooling of the materials of the free world. It wants us to knock down our tariff walls in relation to materials we need and don't have. Our objective should be to gain the greatest security at the lowest cost.

If we fail to work for a rise in the standard of living of the rest of the free world, we thereby hamper and impede a further rise of our own. The President's Commission recommends that a complete census of our minerals industry be taken every five years. It wants better maps and geologic surveys of this country and Alaska. It wants government aid for small mining operations - more emphasis on fire protection and forestry research; and a system of forest insurance. We should make long-term purchase contracts with price guarantees, with countries who produce the materials we need. When we are in urgent need of a particular material, we should eliminate all duty on that material.

The Government should give financial assistance to private companies that will undertake the production of oil from shale; we're going to need more electric power, so we should develop our hydro-electric potential as quickly as possible. The Government ought to spend about five times what it is now spending on basic research. The stockpiling of strategic and critical materials should be a fixed and constant policy.

In all, the Commission offers more than 70 specific recommendations. Many are controversial and some will require legislation which will have a tough time getting through Congress. Mr. Truman said the Commission's study was "the most foresighted appraisal ever attempted, and established a landmark in this field."

The President's Commission contends that if we are to enjoy economic growth and national security, the free nations of the world must co-ordinate their resources to the ends of common growth, common safety and common welfare. The facts and forecasts in this massive Report permit of no other conclusion. But there is often a vast difference between sound economics, and what is called practical politics. We shall have to wait and see how many of the Commission's recommendations are translated into law.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: We were talking of the conservation of our natural resources. Stuart Chase once said: "If we abuse the earth - destroy its soils by erosion, lay waste its cover of forest and grassland, pollute its waters - our world can not long protect and support us." For as Gifford Pinchot observed: "Without natural resources, life itself is impossible. Conservation is the basis of permanent prosperity among men and lasting peace among nations."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Tuesday - June 24, 1952

This is the news:

American planes in Korea today returned to the same North Korean hydro-electric targets they hit yesterday. Our air force and navy planes struck at four of the targets..stayed away from Swee-ho..the world's fourth largest hydro-electric plant. Returning pilots report "complete destruction."

These raids caused an angry debate today in Britain's House of Commons. Laborites..such as former prime Minister Atlee, and Aneurin Bevan..demanded an immediate debate. They argued: the British should have been consulted before the attacks started.. these plants affect the whole of Manchuria..it could mean a spreading of the war..it was an "irresponsible action." Prime Minister Churchill replied that he did not know in advance that the attacks were to be made..he defended General Clark, the United Nations Commander. And he said that so far as Britain is concerned there has been no change in allied policy in Korea. THE HOUSE OF COMMONS WILL FORMALLY DEBATE THIS TOMORROW.

Britain's defense minister, Earl Alexander, and Minister of State Selwyn Lloyd have completed KOREAN talks with American diplomatic and military officials in Washington. A Joint communique says the talks were "most useful."

Defense Secretary Lovett said today that in the event of an emergency in Korea.. such as an all-out air attack on our troops by [redacted] Communist PLANES... our Joint Chiefs of Staff could authorize air attacks on Manchuria, without consulting the United Nations. Mr. Lovett says there is no connection between the LAST TWO AIR [redacted] attacks and the truce talks..although yesterday a defense official, who didn't want his name used, said the attacks were made because the Communists are stalling at the truce talks.

There was no progress at Panmunjom today... the second anniversary of the Korean war. General Clark issued a statement warning the Communists that we are ready for "renewed bloody fighting" if they refuse to make peace. He said the Communists have the choice of peace or war.

In Pusan, South Korean President Rhee told an American reporter he will defy his friends, enemies, and the Korean constiution, to build what he calls "a firmer base of democracy" in South Korea. He says the Korean people support him..and he will eventually prove that his enemies are prepared to sell out to the Communists.

In Washington today the government urged the C.I.O. auto workers not to go through with a strike scheduled to start at midnight tomorrow, at four plants of North American aviation (-three in California, and one in Ohio.) Federal Mediation Director Cyrus Ching has told the union that these plants...all producing Sabre Jet fighter planes... are vital... the loss of a single day's production would have a serious effect on air force operations in the Far East. Ching says the Defense Department has assigned the Sabre Jet "the highest priority on the defense department's master urgency list."

In the 23-day-old steel strike, a union-company agreement to release steel for defense, went into effect today. Finished steel for the navy was trucked out of the Jones and Laughlin plant in Pittsburgh. And Inland Steel shipped 19 tons of steel to a jet engine factory.

General Motors says that because of a shortage of steel, it is laying off 12-thousand workers beginning tonight.

The Senate Labor Committee today approved two bills that would give the President power to seize the steel industry. But Democratic leaders do not feel the Senate will give any consideration to either bill.

The Russians today broke off the latest series of discussions with American officials on the Soviet Union's lend-lease payments. The Russians have now decided to back down on their promise to return to us 186 ships we loaned them during the war. The Soviet negotiator says this will be done only when we agree to sell them another 167 of our ships that they hold. We don't want to sell..we want all of our ships back.

The government today removed its outright ban on the manufacture of color television sets. But government officials and some manufacturers say that because of demands of the defense program there will be very little production of color t.v. sets for about two years.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee today approved a move to put West Germany in the western defense alliance. The committee rejected a provision by Republican Senator Hickenlooper that would deny the President the right to send troops overseas unless he had the consent of Congress.

The Russians today replied to a note from the Swedish government inquiring whether a missing Swedish airplane had been fired on by a Russian plane. The Kremlin says that on June 13..the day the Swedish plane disappeared...two foreign planes violated Soviet territory. Moscow says both were driven away by Russian planes..the nationality of the two planes was not established because of bad weather conditions. The Russian reply also demands that Sweden take urgent measures to prevent such further incidents,

Edward R. Murrow: June 24, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

Last week the State Department issued an unusual order barring Professor Owen Lattimore from leaving the country. Professor Lattimore has been accused of being a communist sympathiser and an agent of Russia, and has denied the charges vigorously. He has been convicted of nothing. The Washington Post TODAY dug up a story that the first allegation that Lattimore was planning a trip abroad was made to the Central Intelligence Agency. That agency is supposed to deal with foreign intelligence; has no domestic police or subpoena powers; (its job is supposed to begin at the water's edge.) When we queried the Agency today as to what happened, we were told that they received information that Lattimore was planning a trip abroad from a source they regarded as reliable in the field of foreign intelligence. The C.I.A. could have done two things: either thrown this information in the wastebasket; or pass it on without either evaluation or proof to the State Department and the F.B.I. They passed it on. Lattimore stoutly denies that he has any plans to visit any Iron Curtain countries. The F.B.I. remains silent, but State Department officials are saying privately that a public apology will probably be made to Professor Lattimore, who it should be remembered has not been convicted of anything. It would appear on the evidence available so far that the State Department went off half-cocked, and not for the first time.

The General and the Senator are arguing about foreign policy. Senator Taft, meeting with Pennsylvania delegates today, said he wants Eisenhower to attack the present Administration's foreign policy, instead of attacking Republicans. He said the General fails to condemn the Administration's policy or to name names. According to Taft, all Eisenhower did last night was set up a straw man in the form of some Isolationists, and then attack the straw man. Taft thinks John Foster Dulles can formulate a foreign policy plank satisfactory to him and to Eisenhower. He doesn't think a Convention fight over foreign policy is necessary. Today in Denver General Eisenhower "fervently hoped" that agreement on foreign policy can be reached; but he doesn't believe Dulles can reconcile his views with Taft's. The General refused to define an Isolationist precisely, but said "it boils down to how much we are ready to work and sacrifice for a great co-operative program of world peace." He is against the idea that all we have to do is sit at home and build up an Air Force. Any thought of retiring within our own borders will certainly lead to disaster for this country. The General was asked what should be done about foreign affairs that the Truman Administration is not now doing. He replied that we ought to say what we are going to do, make it plain that we are going to continue in that direction until we get the level of security for us and our friends that we think is vital to us. The nearest thing to direct open criticism of XXXXX the Administration's foreign policy that Eisenhower has said was to demand an end to the hand-to-mouth operation of the State Department. The General is in favor of regional security pacts. We began with the Pan American Pact, in which he firmly believed; and he favors security agreements in the Far East similar to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

General Eisenhower denied that he was trying to put Senator Taft on the defensive in the matter of foreign policy during the past few weeks.

Taft is doing his best to minimize his differences of opinion with Eisenhower over foreign policy, contending that they are both saying pretty much the same thing. He is trying to maneuver Eisenhower into attacking the whole Administration's foreign policy, of which Eisenhower was one of the principal instruments. Eisenhower continues to refuse to name names, or to be very specific about what he would do that the Administration is not now doing, except to say that he would do it in a firmer, more forceful and consistent fashion.

If there is not a basic conflict between these two men on the subject of foreign policy, then words have no meaning. Taft's voting record and speeches; Eisenhower's actions and speeches, must all be disregarded. And John Foster Dulles can sit down in a soundproof room and write a platform plank on which both men can agree. This would tax the flexibility even of Mr. Dulles' language, and astonish many of the supporters of both candidates. Taft is saying, in effect: there isn't much difference between us; it's the Democrats who have messed things up - lost China, wasted money, got us in a needless war. Eisenhower isn't attacking the Administration with any real vigor; nor is he pointing out with any force that if Taft has been right on foreign policy over the past 12 years, then the majority of Americans have been consistently wrong. But General Eisenhower said today he was not trying to put Taft on the defensive. Presumably he isn't trying to help him. The man in the middle - the would-be great conciliator - is John Foster Dulles. To succeed he will have to rare back and pass a major miracle.

There are some basic disagreements between General Eisenhower and Senator Taft on foreign policy. And whether they can be reconciled when the time comes to write the party platform remains to be seen. But, as David Hinshaw once remarked: "Party platform committees are the world's greatest appeasers. Harmony is their watchword, and the greatest vote, from the greatest number, is their golden goal."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY - JUNE 24, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

American planes in Korea today returned to the same North Korean hydro-electric targets they hit yesterday. Our Air Force and Navy planes struck at four of the targets...stayed away from Swee-Ho...the world's fourth largest hydro-electric plant. Returning pilots report "complete destruction."

These raids caused an angry debate today in Britain's House of Commons. Laborites, such as former Prime Minister Atlee and Aneurin Bevan, demanded an immediate debate. They argued: the British should have been consulted before the attacks started....these plants affect the whole of Manchuria....it could mean a spreading of the war....it was an "irresponsible action." Prime Minister Churchill replied that he did not know in advance that the attacks were to be made; he defended General Clark, the United Nations Commander, and he said that so far as Britain is concerned, there has been no change in allied policy in Korea. The House of Commons will formally debate this tomorrow.

Britain's Defense Minister, Earl Alexander, and Minister of State Selwyn Lloyd have completed Korean talks with American diplomatic and military officials in Washington. A Joint communique says the talks were "most useful."

Defense Secretary Lovett said today that in the event of an emergency in Korea, such as an all-out air attack on our troops by communist planes, our Joint Chiefs of Staff could authorize air attacks on Manchuria- without consulting the United Nations. Mr. Lovett says there is no connection between the last two air attacks and the truce talks, although yesterday a defense official, who didn't want his name used, said the attacks were made because the Communists are stalling at the truce talks.

There was no progress at Panmunjom today, the second anniversary of the Korean war. General Clark issued a statement warning the Communists that we are ready for "renewed bloddy fighting" if they refuse to make peace. He said the Communists have the choice of peace or war.

In Pusan, South Korean President Rhee told an American reporter he will defy his friends, enemies and the Korean constitution to build what he calls "a firmer base of democracy" in South Korea. He says the Korean people support him, and he will eventually prove that his enemies are prepared to sell out to the Communists.

In Washington today, the Government urged the CIO auto workers not to go through with a strike scheduled to start at midnight tomorrow at four plants of North American aviation, (three in California and one in Ohio). Federal Mediation Director Cyrus Ching has told the union that these plants, all producing Sabre Jet fighter planes, are vital; the loss of a single day's production would have a serious effect on Air Force operations in the Far East. Ching says the Defense Department has assigned the Sabre Jet "the highest priority on the Defense Department's master urgency list."

In the 23-day-old steel strike, a union-company agreement to release steel for defense, went into effect today. Finished steel for the Navy was trucked out of the Jones and Laughlin plant in Pittsburgh. And Inland Steel shipped 19 tons of steel to a jet engine factory.

General Motors says that because of a shortage of steel, it is laying off 12-thousand workers beginning tonight.

The Senate Labor Committee today approved two bills that would give the President power to seize the steel industry. But Democratic leaders do not feel the Senate will give any consideration to either bill.

The Russians today broke off the latest series of discussions with American officials on the Soviet Union's lend-lease payments.

The Russians have now decided to back down on their promise to return to us 186 ships we loaned them during the war. The Soviet negotiator says this will be done only when we agree to sell them another 167 of our ships that they hold. We don't want to sell; we want all of our ships back.

The Government today removed its outright ban on the manufacture of color television sets. But government officials and some manufacturers say that because of demands of the defense program there will be very little production of color TV sets for about two years.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee today approved a move to put West Germany in the Western Defense Alliance. The Committee rejected a provision by Republican Senator Kickenlooper, that would deny the President the right to send troops overseas unless he had the consent of Congress.

The Russians today replied to a note from the Swedish Government inquiring whether a missing Swedish airplane had been fired on by a Russian plane. The Kremlin says that on June 13, the day the Swedish plane disappeared, two foreign planes violated Soviet territory. Moscow says both were driven away by Russian planes. The nationality of the two planes was not established because of bad weather conditions. The Russian reply also demands that Sweden take urgent measures to prevent further incidents.

Last week the State Department issued an unusual order barring Professor Owen Lattimore from leaving the country. Professor Lattimore has been accused of being a communist sympathiser and an agent of Russia, and has denied the charges vigorously. He has been convicted of nothing. The Washington Post today dug up a story that the first allegation that Lattimore was planning a trip abroad was made to the Central Intelligence Agency. That Agency is supposed to deal with foreign intelligence; has no domestic police or subpoena powers; (its job is supposed to begin at the water's edge). When we queried the Agency today as to what happened, we were told that they received information that Lattimore was planning a trip abroad from a source they regarded as reliable in the field of foreign intelligence. The CIA could have done two things: either thrown this information in the wastebasket, or pass it on without either evaluation or proof to the State Department and the F.B.I. They passed it on. Lattimore stoutly denies that he has any plans to visit any Iron Curtain countries. The F.B.I. remains silent, but State Department officials are saying privately that a public apology will probably be made to Professor Lattimore, who it should be remembered has not been convicted of anything. It would appear on the evidence available so far, that the State Department went off half-cocked, and not for the first time.

The General and the Senator are arguing about foreign policy. Senator Taft, meeting with Pennsylvania delegates today, said he wants Eisenhower to attack the present Administration's foreign policy, instead of attacking Republicans. He said the General fails to condemn the Administration's policy or to name names. According to Taft, all Eisenhower did last night was set up a straw man in the form of some Isolationists, and then attack the straw man. Taft thinks John Foster Dulles can formulate a foreign policy plank satisfactory to him and to Eisenhower. He doesn't think a Convention fight over foreign policy is necessary. Today in Denver, General Eisenhower "fervently hoped" that agreement on foreign policy can be reached, but he doesn't believe Dulles can reconcile his views with Taft's. The General refused to define an Isolationist precisely, but said: "It boils down to how much we are ready to work and sacrifice for a great co-operative program of world peace." He is against the idea that all we have to do is sit at home and build up an Air Force. Any thought of retiring within our own borders will certainly lead to disaster for this country. The General was asked what should be done about foreign affairs, that the Truman Administration is not now doing. He replied that we ought to say what we are going to do, make it plain that we are going to continue in that direction until we get the level of security for us and our friends that we think is vital to us. The nearest thing to direct open criticism of the Administration's foreign policy that Eisenhower has said was to demand an end to the hand-to-mouth operation of the State Department. The General is in favor of regional security pacts. We began with the Pan American Pact, in which he firmly believed, and he favors security agreements in the Far East, similar to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

General Eisenhower denied that he was trying to put Senator Taft on the defensive in the matter of foreign policy during the past few weeks.

Taft is doing his best to minimize his differences of opinion with Eisenhower over foreign policy, contending that they are both saying pretty much the same thing. He is trying to maneuver Eisenhower into attacking the whole Administration's foreign policy, of which Eisenhower was one of the principal instruments. Eisenhower continues to refuse to name names, or to be very specific about what he would do that the Administration is not now doing, except to say that he would do it in a firmer, more forceful and consistent fashion.

If there is not a basic conflict between these two men on the subject of foreign policy, then words have no meaning. Taft's voting record and speeches - Eisenhower's actions and speeches - must all be disregarded. And John Foster Dulles can sit down in a soundproof room and write a platform plank on which both men can agree! (This would tax the flexibility even of Mr. Dulles' language, and astonish many of the supporters of both candidates.) Taft is saying, in effect: there isn't much difference between us; it's the Democrats who have messed things up - lost China, wasted money, got us in a needless war. Eisenhower isn't attacking the Administration with any real vigor, nor is he pointing out with any force that if Taft has been right on foreign policy over the past 12 years, then the majority of Americans have been consistently wrong. (But General Eisenhower said today he was not trying to put Taft on the defensive.) Presumably he isn't trying to help him. The man in the middle - the would-be great conciliator - is John Foster Dulles. To succeed he will have to rare back and pass a major miracle.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: There are some basic disagreements between General Eisenhower and Senator Taft on foreign policy, and whether they can be reconciled when the time comes to write the Party Platform remains to be seen. But, as David Hinshaw once remarked: "Party Platform committees are the world's greatest appeasers. Harmony is their watchword, and the greatest vote from the greatest number is their golden goal."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Wednesday - June 25, 1952

This is the news:

The House voted today..tentatively..to end all wage and price controls, at the end of July, and kill consumer credit controls, when the present law expires at midnight Monday. The vote on the move to terminate price and wage controls, was 118 to 87. When Administration leaders discovered they could not control the voting, they postponed final action until tomorrow. As the House bill now stands it would continue rent controls.. the allocation of scarce materials.. and a request to the President to use the injunction provision of the Taft-Hartley law, to end the steel strike.

That "request" was approved by a vote of 190 to 133. Most Republicans and almost all southern Democrats voted for it. The Senate has also made a similar "request" of the President.

There was no word on Mr. Truman's reaction today..as the strike went through its 24th day. Phil Murray, the union president, has told the strikers:"The Taft-Hartley law does not manufacture steel."

Another strike that would have hurt the nation's defense has been called off. The C.I.O. auto workers have agreed to federal conciliation in Washington of their dispute at four North American Aviation plants that produce Sabre jets. [redacted]

In Korea today our fighter-bombers attacked enemy supply lines.

General Van Fleet marked the second anniversary of the war, by telling reporters: "We hope the Communists attack. We would pile him up on the barbed wire and maybe end the war. But--he said--he doesn't think the enemy has the stomach to fight another offensive.

~~There was no progress at the truce talks. General Harrison, our chief negotiator, again told the enemy: "We are trying to conclude a just and honorable armistice to end this bloody conflict."~~

The Pentagon says we suffered another 640 causalties last week.. the total casualty list is now 110, 611.

At Pusan, a member of a Korean secret society tried to assassinate South Korean President Syngman Rhee. He pulled the trigger only five feet from Rhee, but the cartrdige did not fire. The man was seized by military police and bystanders.

The Russian news agency tonight made its first comment on the allied air attacks on North Korean hydro-electric projects. Tass, the Soviet news agency, says American planes have started, what it calls, "massive bombing of peaceful towns."

British Laborites today continued their attack on the American command for permitting the air raids on the Korean power plants. Former Prime Minister Atlee said: the attacks "carried conditions of total war to Red China".. they endangered the chances of an armistice.. they are a profound psychological mistake, and not the first psychological mistakes of the Korean war. Atlee says [redacted] the new air blows [redacted] are going to cause misery and distress to hundreds of thousands of civilians who are not in the fighting at all. [redacted]

Foreign ~~Minister~~ Secretary Eden answered. He said he was "sorry" the British had been kept in the dark before the attacks were launched. He will deal with this later. But he made it clear "our allies have our full support.. if the Communists find the attacks intolerable they can agree to a peaceful armistice. And Eden [redacted] added that the attacks were made on "perfectly legitimate military targets."

Minister of State Selwyn Lloyd..just back from a visit to Washington..said he told State Department officials that it was a "matter [redacted] of regret" that Britain had not been consulted before the attack.

[redacted]

[redacted]

Here in New York, at the United Nations, the Security Council decided to consider an American demand for an impartial investigation of Russia's germ warfare charges.

The President today vetoed the McCarran-Walter immigration bill. He called it: "fantastically discriminatory.." [redacted]. He says the bill holds that citizens with English or Irish names are better people than Americans with Italian, Greek or Polish names. Mr. Truman said this bill [redacted] would be a threat to our strength at home and to our moral leadership for world peace. The President said the bill would be "insulting to a large number of our finer citizens..irritating to our allies abroad and foreign to our purposes and ideals."

Senator McCarran, one of the main sponsors of the bill , calls the President's veto "one of the most un-american acts" he has witnessed in his public career. The Senator says the [redacted] President had been advised to approve it by the State and Justice Departments.

The Justice Department said today that a Seattle, Washington, grand jury is going to investigate a "tip" that Owen Lattimore planned to leave this country for a visit to a Soviet satellite. Mr. Lattimore has denied any such plan.

In Denver today, Senator Lodge, campaign manager for General Eisenhower, made his first political prediction in 20 years. He told reporters Eisenhower will be nominated on the second or third ballot at Chicago. Lodge says Senator Taft "knows the jig is up"..suffered "great reversals" in the past few days.

Senator Taft said again today there are no major foreign policy differences between him and Eisenhower.. except he wouldn't put foreign aid as high on the list of priorities as Eisenhower does.. and he wouldn't [redacted] spend as much money in Europe as Eisenhower would.

At Louisville today, the [redacted] veteran golfer Jim Tehr-ness-uh of Briarcliff Manor, New York, won the Professional Golf Association champaionship. He defeated Chick Harbert of Michigan on the 36th hole.

Edward R. Murrow: June 25, 1952. 7.45 p.m.

This reporter has spent most of today in an F-94 Jet, flying between Cape Cod and New York City. A 94 is a fast, two-place day and night interceptor, one of our primary defense weapons against enemy bombing attacks. The Air Force laid on a simulated bombing attack against New York City. One B-29 was flown from England, and over Maine it was joined by two others. This was a low-level operation, an effort to come in under the Radar screen; For the range of Radar is limited by the curvature of the earth, if attacking planes stay low enough, even the most modern Radar cannot trace them, pick them up and hold them on the screen. This morning, as the three bombers came down from Maine at 500 feet or less, F-86 Sabre Jets - (the kind we are using in Korea) - were scrambled off fields in Maine, but they failed to find and intercept the three big bombers heading for New York.

When the alert was sounded at Otis Air Force base, on Cape Cod, four F-94's were airborne in less than five minutes. Two T-33 Jets, equipped with cameras, came along to film the operation. As soon as the 94's formed up - tucked in so tight that you could read the small print on the fuselage of the next plane - less than 20 feet separated their wingtips - they were taken over by a ground controller called Pinkerton. Pinkerton had us on the end of a string; told us when to change course, when to alter speed; kept pulling us in toward the three bombers coming down the coast. We had some trouble finding them. The air was full of code talk. But finally we saw the sun bouncing off three big bombers, right where Pinkerton said they should be, dead ahead at twelve o'clock, and low. The 94's talked a little amongst themselves, ~~[illegible]~~ loosened up their formation, and the flight leader peeled off and went down to make the first pass. There is practically no noise up there in a Jet, you are travelling too fast, the noise can't keep up. The attacks were made with cold guns, only the cameras working; firing started at about twelve hundred feet and broke off at between four and five hundred. When an F-94 pulls up, even as gently as they were doing it today, your vision blurs a little, and you feel that someone has placed a big piano, none too gently, on your shoulders. The stomach removes itself to somewhere in the region of the kneecaps. Five hundred feet at those speeds seems a very short distance. And occasionally the prop wash in a B-29 flips the Jet like a dry leaf in an autumn wind.

In this simulated raid one bomber was shot down before it reached the outskirts of New York, but the other two got through. We don't know what score will be claimed by the ack-ack gunners, who were tracking them all the time.

This was no "fancy Dan" exercise; it was designed to test both ground and air defences against ~~any~~ enemy attack. The Air Force doesn't figure to knock down more than about 30 percent of an attacking force; and it reckons the Russians capable of launching an attack now. Thomas Finletter, the Secretary of the Air Force, figures that the casualties in a surprise attack would certainly be "fantastic." The answer to this threat is not to be found exclusively in terms of Radar screens and fast fighters. Radar can pick up and track a plane and then lose it. Remember that the interceptors couldn't find those three big B-29's coming down from Maine today. I don't know what the final critique on this exercise will show. Maybe all three planes would have been shot down before they reached New York. Maybe our four fighters that made repeated passes at the bombers, would have taken heavy losses. These are questions that the experts can figure out. But one thing emerged clearly - the need for more volunteers for the Ground Observer Corps; civilians who are unpaid, willing to spend from four to six hours a week as spotters, or sky watchers. It has been decided that starting July 15 the spotting stations in 27 states on the northern edge of this country, along both coasts shall be manned on a 24-hour basis. There is a shortage of volunteers; and there appears to be a disposition to believe that pushing buttons, looking at Radar scopes, and the scientific marvels that have been built into these Jet interceptors have rendered obsolete the need for trained eyes and a telephone to report low-flying aircraft. I have flown much in military aircraft, but am no expert on this subject. But I can report that the men manning Radar on the ground, and the men flying these incredibly complicated Jets are entirely persuaded of the need for and the usefulness of the Ground Observer Corps. They are experts; they know both the potentials and the limitations of the instruments they work with. And they appear to be in agreement that, even in this age of ~~XXXXXXXXX~~ fantastic weapons and electronic devices beyond the understanding of the average man, we still need civilians equipped with field glasses and a telephone to help man the stockade.

~~Civilian defense should be everyone's concern and is everyone's business.~~

We are a nation of tremendous productive capacity, but as William Morris once said:"The strongest tower has not the highest wall. Think well of this when you sit safe at home." There is need of ground observers- civilians to keep watch over the skies. The danger may not be immediate, but it's true, as Seneca pointed out:"We usually dread least the danger nearest at hand."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

WEDNESDAY - JUNE 25, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The House voted today - tentatively - to end all wage and price controls at the end of July and kill consumer credit controls when the present law expires at midnight Monday. The vote on the move to terminate price and wage controls was 118 to 87. When Administration leaders discovered they could not control the voting, they postponed final action until tomorrow. As the House bill now stands, it would continue rent controls, the allocation of scarde materials and a request to the President to use the injunction provision of the Taft-Hartley law to end the steel strike.

That "request" was approved by a vote of 190 to 133. Most Republicans and almost all southern Democrats voted for it. The Senate has also made a similar "request" of the President.

There was no word on Mr. Truman's reaction today as the strike went through its 24th day. Phil Murray, the union president, has told the strikers: "The Taft-Hartley law does not manufacture steel."

Another strike that would have hurt the nation's defense has been called off. The C.I.O. auto workers have agreed to federal conciliation in Washington of their dispute at four North American Aviation plants that produce Sabre Jets.

In Korea today, our fighter-bombers attacked enemy supply lines.

General Van Fleet marked the second anniversary of the war by telling reporters: "We hope the Communists attack. We would pile him up on the barbed wire and maybe end the war." But - he said - he doesn't think the enemy has the stomach to fight another offensive.

The Pentagon says we suffered another 640 casualties last week - the total casualty list is now 110,611.

At Pusan, a member of a Korean secret society tried to assassinate South Korean President Syngman Rhee. He pulled the trigger only five feet from Rhee, but the cartridge did not fire. The man was seized by military police and bystanders.

The Russian news agency tonight made its first comment on the allied air attacks on North Korean hydro-electric projects. Tass, the Soviet news agency, says American planes have started, what it calls, "massive bombing of peaceful towns."

British Laborites today continued their attack on the American command for permitting the air raids on the Korean power plants. Former Prime Minister Atlee said the attacks "carried conditions of total war to Red China"; they endangered the chances of an armistice; they are a profound psychological mistake and not the first psychological mistake of the Korean war. Atlee says the new air blows are goin to cause misery and distress to hundreds of thousands of civilians who are not in the fighting at all.

Foreign Secretary Eden answered. He said he was "sorry" the British had been kept in the dark before the attacks were launched. He will deal with this later, but he made it clear "our allies have our full support, if the Communists find the attacks intolerable they can agree to a peaceful armistice. And Eden added that the attacks were made on "perfectly legitimate military targets." Minister of State, Selwyn Lloyd, just back from a visit to Washington, said he told State Department officials that it was a "matter of regret" that Britain had not been consulted before the attack.

Here in New York, at the United Nations, the Security Council decided to consider an American demand for an impartial investigation of Russia's germ warfare charges.

The President today vetoed the McCarran-Walter Immigration bill. He called it "fantastically discriminatory." He says the Bill holds that citizens with English or Irish names are better people than Americans with Italian, Greek, or Polish names. Mr. Truman said this bill would be a threat to our strength at home, and to our moral leadership for world peace. The President said the bill would be "insulting to a large number of our finer citizens, irritating to our allies abroad, and foreign to our purposes and ideals."

Senator McCarran, one of the main sponsors of the bill, calls the President's veto "one of the most un-American acts" he has witnessed in his public career. The Senator says the President had been advised to approve it by the State and Justice Departments.

The Justice Department said today that a Seattle, Washington, grand jury is going to investigate a "tip" that Owen Lattimore planned to leave this country for a visit to a Soviet satellite. Mr. Lattimore has denied any such plan.

In Denver today, Senator Lodge, campaign manager for General Eisenhower, made his first political prediction in 20 years. He told reporters Eisenhower will be nominated on the second or third ballot at Chicago. Lodge says Senator Taft "knows the jig is up" - suffered "great reversals" in the past few days.

Senator Taft said again today there are no major foreign policy differences between him and Eisenhower, except he wouldn't put foreign aid as high on the list of priorities as Eisenhower does, and he wouldn't spend as much money in Europe as Eisenhower would.

At Louisville today, the veteran golfer, Jim Tehr-ness-uh of Briarcliff Manor, New York, won the Professional Golf Association championship. He defeated Chick Harbert of Michigan on the 36th hole.

This reporter has spent most of today in an F-94 Jet, flying between Cape Cod and New York City. A 94 is a fast, two-place day and night interceptor, one of our primary defense weapons against enemy bombing attacks. The Air Force laid on a simulated bombing attack against New York City. One B-29 was flown from England, and over Maine it was joined by two others. This was a low-level operation, an effort to come in under the Radar screen, for the range of Radar is limited by the curvature of the earth, if attacking planes stay low enough, even the most modern Radar cannot trace them, pick them up and hold them on the screen. This morning, as the three bombers came down from Maine at 500 feet or less, F-86 Sabre Jets, (the kind we are using in Korea), were scrambled off fields in Maine, but they failed to find and intercept the three big bombers heading for New York.

When the alert was sounded at Otis Air Force base, on Cape Cod, four F-94's were airborne in less than five minutes. Two T-33 Jets equipped with cameras came along to film the operation. As soon as the 94's formed up - tucked in so tight that you could read the small print on the fuselage of the next plane - less than 20 feet separated their wingtips - they were taken over by a ground controller called Pinkerton. Pinkerton had us on the end of a string; told us when to change course, when to alter speed; kept pulling us in toward the three bombers coming down the coast. We had some trouble finding them. The air was full of code talk. But finally, we saw the sun bouncing off three big bombers, right where Pinkerton said they should be, dead ahead at twelve o'clock and low. The 94's talked a little amongst themselves, loosened up their formation, and the flight leader peeled off and went down to make the first pass. There is practicall no noise up there in a Jet; you are travelling too fast; the noise can't keep up. The attacks were made with cold guns, only the cameras working. Firing started at about twelve hundred feet and broke off at between four and five hundred When an F-94 pulls up, even as gently as they were doing it today, your vision blurs a little, and you feel that someone has placed a big piano, none too gently, on your shoulders. The stomach removes itself to somewhere in the region of the kneecaps. Five hundred feet at those speeds seems a very short distance. And occasionally the prop wash in a B-29 flips the Jet like a dry leaf in the autumn wind.

In this simulated raid one bomber was shot down before it reached the outskirts of New York, but the other two got through. We don't know what score will be claimed by the ack-ack gunners, who were tracking them all the time.

This was no "fancy Dan" exercise; it was designed to test both ground and air defences against enemy attack. The Air Force doesn't figure to knock down more than about 30 percent of an attacking force, and it reckons the Russians capable of launching an attack now. Thomas Finletter, the Secretary of the Air Force, figures that the casualties in a surprise attack would certainly be "fantastic." The answer to this threat is not to be found exclusively in terms of Radar screens and fast fighters. Radar can pick up and track a plane and then lose it. Remember that the interceptors couldn't find those three big B-29's coming down from Maine today. I don't know what the final critique on this exercise will show. Maybe all three planes would have been shot down before they reached New York. Maybe our four fighters that made repeated passes at the bombers would have taken heavy losses, These are questions that the experts can figure out. But one thing emerged clearly - the need for more volunteers for the Ground Observer Corps; civilians who are unpaid, willing to spend from four to six hours a week as spotters or sky watchers. It has been decided that starting July 15, the spotting stations in 27 states on the northern edge of this country and along both coasts shall be manned on a 24-hour basis. There is a shortage of volunteers; and there appears to be a disposition to believe that pushing buttons, looking at Radar scopes, and the scientific marvels that have been built into these Jet interceptors, have rendered obsolete the need for trained eyes and a telephone to report low-flying aircraft. I have flown much in military aircraft, but am no expert on this subject. But I can report that the men manning Radar on the ground, and the men flying these incredibly complicated Jets, are entirely persuaded of the need for and the usefulness of the Ground Observer Corps. They are experts; they know both the potentials and the limitations of the instruments they work wity. And they appear to be in agreement that, even in this age of fantastic weapons and electronic devices beyond the understanding of the average man, we still need civilians, equipped with field glasses and a telephone to help man the stockade.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: We are a nation of tremendous productive capacity, but as Williams Morris once said: "The strongest tower has not the highest wall. Think well of this when you sit safe at home." There is need of ground observers - civilians to keep watch over the skies. The danger may not be immediate, but it's true, as Seneca pointed out: "We usually dread least the danger nearest at hand."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Thursday - June 26, 1952

This is the news:

The House voted today to kill just about all price controls --BUT NOT WAGE CONTROLS at midnight Monday. The vote was 211 to 185..with a coalition of Republicans and Southern Democrats pushing the bill through. It provides that price controls in this country be continued only on goods that are rationed.. (nothing is rationed today), or on scarce materials that are allocated.. (such as steel, aluminum, copper and a few industrial chemicals.) The House also made these final decisions: most rent controls will end on September 30th, except in critical defense areas, and cities that specifically request federal controls. The house also voted to end controls on consumer credits..to make a majority of the members of the Wage Stabilization Board representatives of the public..to bar the board from considering wage controversys.. and to request the President to use the Taft-Hartley injunction in the steel strike. This bill now goes to a joint committee, with members of the Senate. The Senate had approved extending controls for eight months.

~~Presumably, a price Stabilizer [illegible] on this committee to resolve some of the measures billed by the House today. Mr. Arnall told reporters: "It is my opinion that Congress will yet enact a price stabilization law which will afford protection to the people [illegible]."~~

~~In today's House debate, the anti-Administration forces lost only one important vote..that was on a move to kill and wage and price controls. The house agreed to end price controls..wants to keep wage controls.~~

The House today also voted to over-ride the Presint's vote ..yesterday..of the McCarran-Walter immigration bill. The vote was 278 to 113.

The Army announced today that because of the steel strike, the delivery of some military equipment has been halted. (production of other goods would stop soon.) But a few hours later the Army said its figures were old.. "the situation has changed"..but we're not told what this means.

The President today told the armed forces, not to seek recruits among farm workers who have been deferred from the draft, because they are necessary for production. Mr. Truman made it clear that no one can prevent farm workers from volunteering. But he doesn't want them to be recruited, because he's alarmed by the fact that the farms have lost six million workers in the last four years. Mr. Truman today cancelled a scheduled news conference in Washington..too hot..temperature in the 90's.

Republican Senater Williams of Delaware charges that a 38-million dollar ta x case, against the estate of the late William Rhodes Davis, an oil broker, was settled for three cents on the dollar. Williams says the settlement was made, after former Democratic National Chairman Boyle became an attorney for the Davis estate.

James. E. Friel, a vice president of Seagrams Distillers Corporation, told a congressional committee today that he and his associates contributed 50-thousand dollars to the two political parties in the 1948 presidential campaign. He said the Democrats were given 30-thousand.. the Republicans 20-thousand..on the basis of "need."

In Kentucky, 75 rioting prisoners at the State Prison at Eddyville have been warned to release the guard they are holding as hstage. Warden Jess Buchanan says if the guard is not released BY NIGHTFALL "we're coming in after you [redacted] Eight convicts and one guard have been injured by gunfire.

On Formosa today, Major General William C. chase told a reporter that the defense of the island [redacted] is vital to our [redacted] security. And General Chase, the top American military advisor on Formosa, called for more planes and guns for the Chinese Nationalists--quickly. [redacted] the Chiang Kai [redacted] forces are to become...and [redacted] equipment.

On Korea today, our troops drove Chinese Communists from a hill on the western front. And at the truce talks, North Korean General Nam Il said our new screening of prisoners on Koje island means: "Your side is taking steps which threaten to expand the Korean war."

The White House said today that no foreign government was responsible for the President's decision to fire General MacArthur from his Far Eastern commands. A former British labor defense minister, Emmanual Shinwell, had charged in the Houze of Commons that it was pressure from the Labor government, which led to McArthur's recall.

And today, Secretary of State Acheson met with some 200 members of the British parliament in London. Reliable sources say he apologized for our failure to notify the British, before we made the recent attacks on North Korean hyrdo-electric plants. Mr. Acheson is said to have explained that we meant to tell the British .but got mixed-up.. and never did. The British reaction to our ~~[illegible]~~ air attacks in North Korea has stirred up considerable debate in the House of Commons and apparently quite some ~~worry~~ APPREHENSION in this country. Our chief European correspondent Howard K. Smith, who normally makes his headquarters in London, is now in New York. Howard, what do you make of the excitement?

(runs 4 mins.. ending; "The British appear from today's news to have won their point.")

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

June 26, 1952
7:45 to 8:00 p.m.

SMITH: Well Ed, a reporter coming from England is surprised to find Americans surprised that the British kicked up a row about the Yalu bombings in Korea. The fact that we were surprised at it reveals that we take a very flatterng view of our British friends. We know that in the United States a party out of power makes as much political capital as it can out of any embarrassment the administration in power suffers. But apparently we don't believe that the British do things like that. Well, like politicaly humanity everywhere else, the British do things like that and the Labor Party did it yesterday in the House of Commons. Winston Chmchill is in power in Britain. He got there and threw labor out by promising to bring many advantages to the British people - one big advantage he offered was that as a great and respected friend of Britain's greatest ally, he would improve relations with the United States. With Churchill in power, Britain's word would be more highly respected in Washington. All the petty frictions that occurred when labor ruled Britain, would be lubricated out of existence. Therefore, when Churchill had to admit that America had not even advised him about so important an event as the biggest raid of the war on the Red Chinese frontier planned at a time when Churchill's own Defense Minister was in Korea, seeking just such information, the British Prime Minister found himself, as they say, over a barrel and the opposition performed the rites customary in such cases. While the high volume of the clamor in Parliament was no doubt due to that, the human wish of one party to get the better of another, there's also no doubt that there wasmuch serious sincerity in the labor party's protest in the House of Commons. I don't refer to those who protested that the bombing of the power plants should not have been carried out at all. In a House of 600 members of Parliament, that group - the extreme left - headed by Aneurin Bevan - constitute at very best around 50 members, or one-twelfth of the House. I mean the other protest - the protest that in what should be a United Nations action, America did not seek the concurrence of her Allies. That protest, I'm sure, is supported by all 600 members of Parliament, though Conservatives couldn't say so in theCommons lest they add to their own Prime Minister's embarrassment. The argument of some American commentators here that the bombing was one more military action and that our Allies have given us a broad initiative of decision in military matters is open to a big objection. The objection is that the Yalu power plants have been a legitimate military objective all this year, but we have not bombed them - and for a political reason, that is - we thought that such action might make truce talks more difficult. Our decision to bomb them now, therefore, constitutes a change in political course. It may be a sensible change, but nonetheless it has political origins and therefore it would have been diplomatic and wise to consult the Allies. I have no doubt from what I know of British sentiments, that if we had asked we would have won the agreement of the party in power whether it had been under Churchill or Atlee. That argument has apparently now prevailed, for today in London - reports say - Secretary of State Acheson has expressed his apologies directly to British members of Parliament. Several plans are said to be under consideration for bringing Britain more directly into Korean war councils. At a moment about a year and a half ago when relations between the two countries were under strain for a rather similar case, a British wit coined the half-joking,half-bitter slogan - No annhilation with representation. The British appear, from today's news, to have won their point.

MURROW: That was Howard K. Smith, our chief European correspondent who flew in from London yesterday.....

trans. S. Spence

On the American political front.. Senator Taft's campaign headquarters has revised its estimate of delegates..now says the Senator will get 601 FIRST BALLOT votes..three short of ~~these~~ what's needed for nomination. And Senator Taft today charged that the "organization" of Governor Dewey is running the Eisenhower campaign.. launched a propaganda attack against him in New York. Taft also says that Pollster George Gallup is a "straight propagandist" for Eisenhower..has been for Eisenhower for eight months. Dr. Gallup calls the Taft charge "part of the standard ritual of electioneering." He says if his polls showed Taft in the lead the Eisenhower supporters would charge he was ~~anti~~ FOR-Taft.

General Eisenhower's headquarters says he will go to Chicago for the Republican convention..to continue meeting delegates.

~~Howard [redacted] stationed in London flew in tonit..~~

A day spent at General Eisenhowers headquarters here in Denver, produces one incontrovertible fact..(the temperature in downtown Denver is a delicious seventy four.).The General makes a speech at the Coliseum tonite,..Hollywood stars will be on hand to help entertain the crowd,/.Denver is the political capitol of the country right now,..Democratic candidates Kefauver,Harriman Russell and Kerr will all be here during the week end.v.all hoping to do something to influence the Colorado Democratic delegates,/.~~xxxx

In considering disputes and misunderstandings between nations and individuals it might be well to remember that Confucius said..."It is better to light one small candle than to Curse the Darkness..."..and Tacitus put it this way....
"Men credit most easily things which they do not understand, they believe most easily things which are obscure....People can be made to follow a line of action but they cannot be made to understand it....

good night and good luck...

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY - JUNE 26, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The House voted today to kill just about all price controls, (but not wage controlls), at midnight Monday. The vote was 211 to 185 with a coalition of Republicans and Southern Democrats pushing the Bill through. It provides that price controls in this country be continued only on goods that are rationed - (nothing is rationed today) - or on scarce materials that are allocated - (such as steel, aluminum, copper and a few industrial chemicals). The House also made these final decisions most rent controls will end on September 30th, except in critical defense areas and cities that specifically request federal controls. The house also voted to end controls on consumer credits, to make a majority of the members of the Wage Stabilization Board representatives of the public, to bar the Board from considering wage controversys, and to request the President to use the Taft-Hartley injunction in the steel strike. This Bill now goes to a joint committee with members of the Senate. The Senate had approved extending controls for eight months.

The House today also voted to over-ride the Presint's veto - yesterday - of the McCarran-Walter Immigration Bill. The vote was 278 to 113.

The Army announced today that because of the steel strike, the delivery of some military equipment has been halted - production of other goods would stop soon. But a few hours later, the Army said its figures were old - "The situation has changed" but we're not told what this means.

The President today told the armed forces not to seek recruits among farm workers who have been deferred from the fraft because they are necessary for production. Mr. Truman made it clear that no one can prevent farm workers from volunteering. But he doesn't want them to be recruited, because he's alarmed by the fact that the farms have lost six million workers in the last four years. Mr. Truman cancelled a scheduled news conference today in Washington....too hot...

temperature in the 90's.

Republican Senator Williams of Deleware charges that a 38-million dollar tax case against the estate of the late William Rhodes Davis, an oil broker, was settled for three cents on the dollar. Williams says the settlement was made after former Democratic National Chairman Boyle became an attorney for the Davis estate.

James E. Friel, a vice president of Seagrams Distillers Corporation, told a Congressional committee today that he and his associates contributed 50-thousand dollars to the two political parties in the 1948 presidential campaign. He said the Democrats were given 30-thousand, the Republicans 20-thousand, on the basis of "need".

In Kentucky, 75 rioting prisoners at the State Prison at Eddyville have been warned to release the guard they are holding as hostage. Warden Joss Buchanan says if the guard is not released by nightfall, "we're coming in after you." Eight convicts and one guard have been injured by gunfire.

On Formosa today, Major General William C. Chase told a reporter that the defense of the island is vital to our security. And General Chase, the top American military advisor on Formosa, called for more planes and guns for the Chinese Nationalists - quickly.

On Korea today, our troops drive Chinese Communists from a hill on the western front. And at the truce talks, North Korean General Nam Il said our new screening of prisoners on Koje Island means: "Your side is taking steps which threaten to expand the Korean War."

The White House said today that no foreign government was responsible for the President's decision to fire General MacArthur from his Far Eastern command. A former British Labor Defense Minister, Emmanuel Shinwell, had charged in the House of Commons that it was pressure from the Labor Government which led to MacArthur's recall.

And today, Secretary of State Acheson met with some 200 members of the British Parliament in London. Reliable sources say he apologized for our failure to notify the British before we made the recent attacks on North Korean hydro-electric plants. Mr. Acheson is said to have explained that we meant to tell the British but got mixed-up and never did. The British reaction to our air attacks in North Korea has stirred up considerable debate in the House of Commons and apparently quite some apprehension in this country. Our chief European correspondent, Howard K. Smith, who normally makes his headquarters in London, is now in New York. Howard, what do you make of the excitmemt?

SMITH: Well, Ed, a reporter coming from England is surprised to find Americans surprised that the British kicked up a row about the Yalu bombings in Korea. The fact that we were surprised at it reveals that we take a very flattering view of our British friends. We know that in the United States a party out of power makes as much political capital as it can out of any embarrassment the administration in power suffers. But apparently we don't believe that the British do things like that. Well, like political humanity everywhere else, the British do things like that and the Labor Party did it yesterday in the House of Commons. Winston Churchill is in power in Britain. He got there and threw Labor out by promising to bring many advantages to the British people; one big advantage he offered was that as a great and respected friend of Britain's greatest ally, he would improve relations with the United States; with Churchill in power, Britain's word would be more highly respected in Washington. All the petty frictions that occurred when Labor ruled Britain, would be lubricated out of existence. Therefore, when Churchill had to admit that America had not even advised him about so important an event as the biggest raid of the war on the Red Chinese frontier - planned at time when Churchill's own Defense Minister was in Korea, seeking just such information - the British Prime Minister found himself, as they say, over a barrel and the opposition performed the rites customary in such cases. While the high volume of the clamor in Parliament was no doubt due to that, the human wish of one party to get the better of another, there's also no doubt that there was much serious sincerity in the Labor Party's protest in the House of Commons. I don't refer to those who protested that the bombing of the power plants should not have been carried out at all. In a House of 600 members of Parliament, that group - the extreme left - headed by Aneurin Bevan - constitute at very best round 50 members, or one-twelfth of the House. I mean the other protest - the protest that in what should be a United Nations action, America did not seek the concurrence of her Allies. That protest, I'm sure, is supported by all 600 members of Parliament, though Conservatives couldn't say so in the Commons lest they add to their own Prime Minister's embarrassment. The argument of some American commentators here - that the bombing was one more military action and that our Allies have given us a broad initiative of decision in military matters is open to a big objection. The objection is that the Yalu power plants have been a legitimate military objective all this year, but we have not bombed them - and for a political reason, that is - we thought that such action might make truce talks more difficult. Our decision to bomb them now, therefore, constituted a change in political course. It may be a sensible change, but nonetheless, it has political origins and therefore it would have been diplomatic and wise to consult the Allies. I have no doubt from what I know of British sentiments, that if we had asked, we would have won the agreement of the party in power, whether it had been under Churchill or Atlee. That argument has apparently now prevailed, for today in London - reports say - Secretary of State Acheson has expressed his apologies directly to British members of Parliament. Several plans are said to be under consideration for bringing Britain more directly into Korean war councils. At a moment about a year and a half ago, when relations between the two countries were under strain for a rather similar case, a British wit coined the half-joking, half-bitter slogan - No annilation with representation. The British appear, from today's news, to have won their point.

MURROW: That was Howard K. Smith, our chief European correspondent who flew in from London yesterday.

On the American political front, Senator Taft's campaign headquarters has revised its estimate of delegates; now says the Senator will get 601 first-ballot votes, three short of what's needed for nomination. And Senator Taft today charged that the "organization" of Governor Dewey, is running the Eisenhower campaign - launched a propaganda attack against him in New York. Taft also says that Pollster, George Gallup, is a "straight propagandist" for Eisenhower - has been for Eisenhower for eight months. Dr. Gallup calls the Taft charge "part of the standard ritual of electioneering." He says if his polls showed Taft in the lead, the Eisenhower supporters would charge he was for Taft.

General Eisenhower's headquarters says he will go to Chicago for the Republican Convention to continue meeting delegates.

A day spent at General Eisenhower's headquarters here in Denver produces one incontrovertible fact; the temperature in downtown Denver is a delicio seventy-four. The General makes a speech at the Coliseum tonight. Hollywood stars will be on hand to help entertain the crowd. Denver is the political capitol of the country right now. Democratic candidate Kefauver, Harriman, Russell and Kerr will all be here during the week end - all hoping to do something to influence the Colorado Democratic delegates. The workers in the Eisenhower vineyard say they are more confident than they were a couple of weeks ago, but decline to be very specific about the reasons for the improvement in their candidates chances. This is the phase where the camps of both candidates must outdo each other in "quiet confidence." Both Taft and Eisenhower have seen an awfull lot of delegates, probably more than any previous candidates, but neither man has spoken publicly of any considerable number of converts. From here on, the strategy of both camps must be to claim all the market will bear, in the hope of convincing the doubtful that they had better jump now. These claims are traditional and perfectly safe, for the campaign managers making them can only be proved wrong once, and when that happens, all previous claims will be forgotten.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: In considering disputes and misunderstandings between nations and individuals, it might be well to remember that Confucius said: "It is better to light one small candle than to curse the Darkness." And Tacitus put it this way: "Men credit most easily things which they do not understand. They believe most easily things which are obscure. People can be made to follow a line of action, but they cannot be made to understand it."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Friday - June 27, 1952

This is the news:

Congress has made the McCarran-Walter immigration bill law..(over the President's veto.) Mr. Truman had called the bill "infamous"..unfair.. smacking of thought-control. Yesterday the House overrode the veto. And the Senate passed it again today, by just one vote over the necessary two-thirds majority. The Senate vote came after Senator McCarran, one of the sponsors accused the President of "unfounded and untrue" attacks on the bill. And Senator Lehman, New York Democrat, arguing with the Senate to uphold the veto, pleaded: "Don't make immigration a myth, by reducing it to a trickle."

House and Senate conferees are trying to agree on a new economics control bill. They have already decided to forget about the House decision to end price controls on all items that are not rationed, or not under allocation. They may accept the Senate version to keep controls until the end of next February.

The House today voted for a 100 per cent expansion of atomic energy facilities..even though it approved a little less than half the money the President requested. And two leaders in atomic energy, Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer and Chairman Dean of the atomic energy commission, called on the President today to report on what they called "great developments in atomic energy."

The Big Three Foreign Ministers, meeting in London, today agreed on the "substance" of the reply to Russia's request for a meeting on Germany. We'll meet under certain conditions..including safeguards that something will come out of such a conference.

The American, British and French foreign secretaries also agreed on the need for closer-cooperation and consultation in regard both to Korea and southeast Asia.

British Laborites want assurance of improved arrangements for British consultations about the war in Korea. And wheras yesterday an "informed source" said Secretary of State Acheson had apologized. (for not informing the British before the recent bombing of Korean hydro-electric plants). an "informed source" in Washington said today ACHESON did no such thing. A number of Republican Senators and Representatives say they are "disgusted..embarrassed..insulted and chagrined" by the idea of Acheson apologizing to the British.

The Chinese Communist radio says the recent AIR attacks near the Yalu mean that "all signs point to American intentions to extend the war and heighten war tensions in the Far East."

But General Clark, the United Nations commandr, says these attacks were a military action... based on established military policy.. and represents no change in that policy.

At the truce conference, allied delegates have again taken a three-day recess..despite enemy objections.

General Chenault, the founder of the Flying Tigers, told a reunion of his old group in Los Angeles, that the United States gave away advantages in China in what he called "a well-planned, well-executed action by the State Department."

The Ford Motor Company says it is shutting down all of its Ford assembly plants..and three of its four Lincoln-Mercury plants on Monday..because of a shortage of steel.

And the C,I,O, steelworkers say they have signed a contract with the Pittsburgh Steel Company..covering 10,500 union members in four plants. The union says its men will get a 12 and a half cent wage increase.. a modified union shop and other benefits. A union spokesman says this could be an important break in the steel strike.

The President today fired Robert Grant, a U.S. marshal for the southern district of Illinois, after Attorney General McGranery charged that Grant had been mixed up in "irregularities."

In Seattle, a federal grand jury has indicted Harry A. Jarvinen on two counts of giving false information that Owen Lattimore was planning a trip behind the iron curtain. The indictement charges that Jarvinen, who works for a Seattle travel agency, knowingly gave false information to the Central Intelligence Agency and the F.B.I.

Postmaster General Donaldson has asked the Interstate Commerce Commission for another general increase in PARCEL post rates..he didn't SAY just how much the rates should be raised.

~~[illegible]~~

Governor Warren of California was in Washington today. He said there's a danger THAT the Republican party MIGHT up over what he calls "rocks of bitterness." And the Governor told reporters that in the scramble for delegates to the Republican convention "many a humanitarian instinct is being driven underground.

Senator Taft said today that General Eisenhower is still pulling his punches in criticizing the Truman administration. Again he charged that Eisenhower is being led by the same forces that ran the last three Republican campaigns..and lost. In reference to Eisenhower's speech here in Denver last night, Taft said: "Its easy to denounce corruption..we all do that.. and will."

There was a rather unusual breakfast here in Denver this morning, General Eisenhower was host to some twenty five farmers from Colorado. They made little speeches to him...five to ten minutes in length...about irrigation, soil conservation, how the water should be made to walk rather than run down the hill. There was a short speech about the need for a balanced budget and economy in Government...the General listned attentively...most of the farmers wanted an end to controlls...they wanted less government interference...they spoke of the irrigation projects they had developed by private inniative...but with government loans. When this rather unusual briefing was finished, the General asked a few questions...thanked the farmers for helping educate him...said he found himself in general agreement with most of what they said and thought... He was inclined to be against controlls, but on the other hand, he had received a long telegram from Mr Bernard Baruch, spelling out for him the need for controlls across the board, in the present emergency...This reporter came away with the impression that Eisenhowers sympathy lay entirely with the twenty five farmers, but on the other hand, he was much impressed with Mr Baruchs argument in favour of all out controlls. The General regarded this breakfast session as both usefull and interesting. At one point he asked to be straightened out on the confusing business of farm PARITY price...sliding scale against flexible scale. One farmer asked...did you ever hear of anything sliding up?...Eisenhower Laughed and reckoned that was a good question,..After breakfast Eisenhower spent some time in his office, signing mail and talking to delegates... A few letters came in for signature bearing five stars and his inniatials on the letterhead,..He told his secretary to either re-do the letters, or cut those five stars off the top,..He wanted no military implication or significance tied into his political correspondence,.. Senator Lodge, the Eisenhower Campaign manager, said in Chicago today that General Eisenhower will be in Chicago on July fifth, but will not attend the convention untill after he is nominated — which Lodge thinks will occur on July nine or ten,..Lodge repeated earlier claims that Taft is exaggerating his strength and that recent Eisenhower gains will bring him the nomination on the second or third ballot,..But Lodge refused to indicate where these additional Eisenhower delegates would come from,.. Lodge denied charges that the Dewey crowd is running the Eisenhower Campaign,..says he is running it,....

Just before his Detroit speech Eisenhower announced that he was doing his own talking in his own way,..The ghost writers were shown the door...but they are quite obviously back,..the General is reading his speeches again,..and his speech here in Denver last night left many people with the impression that he didnt say very much,...The audience was almost capacity,..and it was a most friendly audience...eager and willing to cheer,..but most of the applause was perfunctory, APPARENTLY ..The General's speech writers have concluded that glittering generalities will do the trick in the pre convention period,..or rather, that's what his campaign managers have decided..//.and the general is, as he has said so often, in the hands of his friends,//.Eisenhower has now spoken with 558 delegates from thirty five states;..that still leaves more than six hundred to go, if he is to shake hands with all of them before the convention opens...He insists that he has not asked a single delegate how he's going to vote, nor has he asked one to vote for him..//There is an unusual quality about this political headquarters,...there is about it nothing of the smooth efficiency of the old Dewey machine;..none of the professional poise and attention to strategy of the present Taft organisation,..there is, in fact, considerable confusion, and a feeling that the music is being played by ear,//.The candidate is confused on many basic issues that confront the country...and, lest that be regarded as a partisan statement..he is the first to admit it,..//Senator Taft would probably be the second.)//Eisenhower has missed out on first hand knowledge of much of what has happenend in this country and hasn't HAD THE TIME OR developed the staff to brief him adequately...For example, he doesn't know any more about parity prices than Taft knows about how to estimate a TACTICAL military situation,. The General's friends have had trouble agreeing upon what he should do,..and he has some pretty definite ideas about what he won't do..//He has done well with the delegates he's seen; His aids think

...just how well, no one knows,..That will emerge about the second ballot at Chicago,..Between now and then, claims by rival campaign managers should probably be treated with the same reserve and skepticism which greeted a sentence that used to be uttered by a logging camp friend of mine, who was wont to say of a confusing situation,..."Everything was quiet, when in flew a dead duck."..

As the Republicam Convention comes ~~up, what the hoorsan~~ Means, partisans of all candidates might ponder the words of Thomas Fuller, "..there are two things a man should never be angry at, what he can help, and what he can not help." ..But perhaps that is not such good advice, for Finley Peter Dunne said, "..there are no friends at cards or politics." ..Whoever wins, Charles Churchill had it when he said, "..By different methods, different men excell."..

good nite and good luck

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY - JUNE 27, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

Congress has made the McCarran-Walter Immigration Bill law - over the President's veto. Mr. Truman had called the Bill "infamous...unfair...smacking of thought-control." Yesterday the House overrode the veto, and the Senate passed it again today by just one vote over the necessary two-thirds majority. The Senate vote came after Senator McCarran, one of the sponsors accused the President of "unfounded and untrue" attacks on the Bill. And Senator Lehman, New York Democrat, arguing with the Senate to uphold the veto pleaded: "Don't make immigration a myth by reducing it to a trickle."

House and Senate conferees are trying to agree on a new economics control bill. They have already decided to forget about the House decision to end price controls on all items that are not rationed, or not under allocation. They may accept the Senate version to keep controls until the end of next February.

The House today voted for a 100 per cent expansion of atomic energy facilities, even though it approved a little less than half the money the President requested. And two leaders in atomic energy, Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer and Chairman Dean of the Atomic Energy Commission. called on the President today to report on what they called "great developments in atomic energy."

The Big Three Foreign Ministers, meeting in London, today agreed on the "substance" of the reply to Russia's request for a meeting on Germany. We'll meet under certain conditions, including safeguards that something will come out of such a conference.

The American, British, and French foreign secretaries also agreed on the need for closer cooperation and consultation in regard both to Korea and southeast Asia.

British Laborites want assurance of "improved arrangements" for British consultations about the war in Korea, and whereas yesterday, an "informed source" said Secretary of State Acheson had apologized for not informing the British before the recent bombing of Korean hydro-electric plants, an "informed source" in Washington said today Acheson did no such thing. A number of Republican Senators and Representatives say they are "disgusted....embarrassed...insulted and chagrined" by the idea of Acheson apologizing to the British.

The Chinese Communist radio says the recent air attacks near the Yalu mean that "all signs point to American intentions to extend the war and heighten war tensions in the Far East."

But General Clark, the United Nations Commander, says these attacks were a military action, based on established military policy, and represent no change in that policy.

At the truce conference, allied delegates have again taken a three-day recess - despite enemy objections.

General Chenault, the founder of the Flying Tigers, told a reunion of his old group in Los Angeles, that the United States gave away advantages in China in what he called "a well-planned, well-executed action by the State Department."

The Ford Motor Company says it is shutting down all of its Ford assembly plants, and three of its four Lincoln-Mercury plants on Monday, because of a shortage of steel.

And the C.I.O. Steelworkers say they have signed a contract with the Pittsburgh Steel Company, covering 10,500 union members in four plants. The union says its men will get a 12 and a half cent wage increase, a modified union shop, and other benefits. A union spokesman says this could be an important break in the steel strike.

The President today fired Robert Grant, a U.S. Marshal for the southern district of Illinois after Attorney General McGranery charged that Grant had been mixed up in "irregularities."

In Seattle, a federal grand jury has indicted Harry A. Jarvinen on two counts of giving false information that Owen Lattimore was planning a trip behind the Iron Curtain. The indictement charges that Jarvinen, who works for a Seattle travel agency, knowingly gave false information to the Central Intelligence Agency and the F.B.I.

Postmaster General Donaldson has asked the Interstate Commerce Commission for another general increase in parcel post rates, He didn't say just how much the rates should be raised.

Governor Warren of California was in Washington today. He said there's a danger that the Republican Party might break up over what he calls "rocks of bitterness." And the Governor told reporters that in the scramble for delegates to the Republican Convention, "many a humanitarian instinct is being driven underground."

Senator Taft said today that General Eisenhower is still pulling his punches in criticizing the Truman Administration. Again he charged that Eisenhower is being led by the same forces that ran the last three Republican campaigns - and lost. In reference to Eisenhower's speech here in Denver last night, Taft said: "It's easy to denounce corruption....we all do that...and will."

There was a rather unusual breakfast here in Denver this morning; General Eisenhower was host to some twenty five farmers from Colorado. They made little speeches to him - five to ten minutes in length - about irrigation, soil conservation, how the water should be "made to walk rather than run down the hill." There was a short speech about the need for a balanced budget and economy in Government. The General listened attentively. Most of the farmers wanted an end to controlls; they wanted less government interference; they spoke of the irrigation projects they had developed by private ihnitiative - but with government loans. When this rather unusual briefing was finished, the General asked a few questions, thanked the farmers for helping educate him, said he found himself in general agreement with most of what they said and thought. He was inclined to be against controlls, but on the other hand, he had received a long telegram from Mr. Bernard Baruch, spelling out for him the need for controlls across the board in the present emergency. This reporter came away with the impression that Eisenhower's sympathy lay entirely with the twenty five farmers, but on the other hand, he was impressed with Mr. Baruch's agrument in favor of all-out controlls.

The General regarded this breakfast session as both usefull and interesting. At one point, he asked to be straightened out on the confusing business of farm-parity prices' sliding scale against flexible scale. One farmer asked: did you ever hear of anything sliding up? Eisenhower laughed and reckoned that was a good question. After breakfast, Eisenhower spent some time in his office, signing mail and talking to delegates. A few letters came in for signature bearing five stars and his initials on the letterhead. He told his secretary to either re-do the letters, or cut those five stars off the top; he wanted no military implication or significance tied into his political correspondence.

Senator Lodge, the Eisenhower Campaign manager, said in Chicago today that General Eisenhower will be in Chicago on July fifth, but will not attend the convention until after he is nominated - which Lodge thinks will occur on July nine or ten. Lodge repeated earlier claims that Taft is exaggerating his strength and that recent Eisenhower gains will bring him the nomination on the second or third ballot. But Lodge refused to indicate where these additional Eisenhower delegates would come from. Lodge denied charges that the Dewey crowd is running the Eisenhower Campaign; says he is running it.

Just before his Detroit speech, Eisenhower announced that he was doing his own talking in his own way. The ghost writers were shown the door - but they are quite obviously back. The General is reading his speeches again, and his speech here in Denver last night left many people with the impression that he didn't say very much. The audience was almost capacity, and it was a most friendly audience - eager and willing to cheer; but most of the applause was perfunctory. Apparently the General's speech writers have concluded that glittering generalities will do the trick in the pre-convention period, or rather, that's what his campaign managers have decided - and the General is, as he has said so often, in the hands of his friends. Eisenhower has now spoken with 558 delegates from thirty five states; that still leaves more than six hundred to go, if he is to shake hands with all of them before the convention opens. He insists that he has not asked a single delegate how he's going to vote, nor has he asked one to vote for him.

There is an unusual quality about this political headquarters. There is about it nothing of the smooth efficiency of the old Dewey machine; none of the professional poise and attention to strategy of the present Taft organization. There is, in fact, considerable confusion, and a feeling that the music is being played by ear. The candidate is confused on many basic issues that confront the country and, lest that be regarded as a partisan statement, he is the first to admit it. (Senator Taft would probably be the second.) Eisenhower has missed out on first hand acknowledge of much of what has happened in this country and hasn't had the time or developed the staff to brief him adequately. For example; he doesn't know any more about parity prices than Taft knows about how to estimate a tactical military situation. The General's friends have had trouble agreeing upon what he should do, and he has some pretty definite ideas about what he won't do. His aids think he has done well with the delegates he's seen; just how well, no one knows. That will emerge about the second ballot at Chicago. Between now and then, claims by rival campaign managers should probably be treated with the same reserve and skepticism which greeted a sentence that used to be uttered by a logging-camp friend of mine, who was wont to say of a confusing situation: "Everything was quiet, when in flew a dead duck."

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: As the Republican Convention nears, partisans of all candidates might ponder the words of Thomas Fuller: "There are two things a man should never be angry at - what he can help, and what he cannot help." But perhaps that is not such good advice, for Finley Peter Dunne said: "There are no friends at cards or politics." Whoever wins, Charles Churchill had it when he said: "By diffenent methods, differenct men excell."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Monday - June 30, 1952

This is the news:

The President has signed a bill extending wage and price controls for another ten months. All controls...including rent...would have ended at midnite tonite, if the President had refused to sign the bill. House Speaker Sam Rayburn, after talking to Mr. Truman, said the President was not happy about the legislation presented to him, but signed it, because "it was the only thing he could do." Mr. Truman wanted controls extended for another two years. Congress voted only a ten-month extension. The President will have more to say about the measure tomorrow.

If all goes well, Congressional leaders hope to adjourn on Saturday - on the eve of the Republican Convention, which begins next Monday.

Senator Taft arrived in Chicago today. He said he is willing to affect a compromise on the 38 contested Texas delegates. But he said to do this, both sides have to be "reasonable." Senator Carlson, of Kansas...an Eisenhower supporter...said the General is in "no mood to compromise."

The National Republican Committee will begin hearing arguments on contested seats tomorrow. In addition to the Texas dispute...which will come up last...the Committee will hear 34 cases, involving six states. As of this hour, television cameras and recording equipment will not be permitted -

My colleague, Dave Schoenbrun, telephoned a few minutes ago from Denver. He says General Eisenhower will leave for Chicago on Thursday...with speeches scheduled for Lincoln, Nebraska and Aimes, Iowa. He will arrive in Chicago at noon, Saturday.

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Monday, June 30, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 P.M.

MURROW: ... In Houston, Texas, the annual Governors' Conference is in its first day. Another colleague, Ed Morgan, is covering that meeting. Ed, what's the gossip in Houston?

MORGAN: Well, Ed, like Texas oil, the gossip is coming in gushers. We might try to bottle up a little of the Democratic brand first, though its value as a lubricant can't be guaranteed.

Interested governors seem to sense a smooth and powerful sound to a combination of cousins, Stevenson and Russell, as a potential Democratic ticket. Last April 16th, the Governor of Illinois, issued a 367-word statement saying, in essence, and with manifest sincerity, that he didn't want to run for President and that he was not then a candidate. This morning, Mr. Stevenson issued a similar statement but it was a 166-words shorter and it skirted the point in a smaller circle. He said he was not being coy or trying to pick up an opponent, and that he wouldn't participate in a draft. But, 'what if one came?' Well, he'd have to decide then.

This, as one Houston paper puts it, leaves Stevenson with his foot in the door.

There is an almost palpable air of compromise, Ed, among the Democratic governors, which is where Georgia's Senator Russell comes in, though not of his own volition, as possible Vice Presidential timber. For instance, Governor Dever, of Massachusetts, who will be the Democratic keynoter, had kind words for Russell, and many governors on both sides of the Mason-and-Dixon line have talked of the need for unity on the issue of civil rights.

It's suggested that the Stevenson-Russell team might provide the proper balance to avoid any possible Dixiecrat vote.

Most ofthe Republican governors here are making large and enthusiastic noises for General Eisenhower. Just a little while ago, Governor

Dewey, of New York, said that since his arrival last night he had learned from other governors, Republicans of course, that as many as 40 Taft votes would switch to the General on the second ballot. He spoke of the switch as being definite, but he didn't say who the governors were he talked to or where the switches might come.

And, indeed, a loyal Taft minority consisting of the governors of Utah, Idaho and North Dakota, insisted that this was just speculative talk and that the senator was still the strongest candidate.

Technically, of course, this 44th annual convention of governors isn't concerned with politics at all. They are struggling bravely through an agenda of tax problems, highway matters and highereducation curricula.

But when the first session was just about to convene officially this morning, a fuse blew out leaving the delegates in total darkness. A cynical observer remarked this was due to the super-charged political atmosphere. Another blamed it on the heavy weight of Texas hospitality. The visitors had been deluged with literally tons of gifts ranging from cowboy boots to brochures on the conference bound in unborn calfskin. Such is the opulence of Texas.

There's a constant round of conferences and sight-seeing, cocktail parties and pre-convention caucusing. And, that, Ed, is what the governors have been doing.

MURROW: That was Ed Morgan reporting from Houston, Texas.

(30)

despite the fact that Senator Taft, and Senator Lodge...speaking for Eisenhower...have indicted they have no objections.

The National Committee Chairman, Guy Gabrielson, says he is now polling Committee members, on how they feel about this matter. He also announced that General Mac Arthur's keynote speech is written, and has been checked by "responsible party leaders." There is no definite decision on whether Mac Arthur will deliver the speech in uniform.

INSERT

In Houston, Texas, the annual Governor's Conference is in its first day. Another colleague, Ed Morgan, is covering that meeting. ED, WHAT'S THE GOSSIP IN HOUSTON ?

RETURN CUE: And that's what the Governor's have been doing."

Senator Russell, campaigning for the Democratic Presidential nomination, tonight accussed Gael Sullivan, (Senator Keefauver's campaign manager)... of indulging in "gutter politics." Russell said that a recent statement by Sullivan, that Russell would take second place on a ticket with Governor Stevenson, is a "despicable campaign falsehood."

~~Secretary of State Dean Acheson was in Vienna [illegible] visit to Berlin. I'd like to discuss the implication of these two visits in a moment.~~

Three days of heavy rains have kept ground fighting in Korea to a minimum. And once again, there was no air action. The truce talks, which have been recessed for the past 3 days, will resume tonite. And South Korean President Syngman Rhee has told his Assembly, if it doesn't adopt his proposed Constititional amendments within the next couple of days, he will find means of dissolving the Assembly.

Chiang Kai Shek, in a cabled interview with U.S. News and World Report, urged an all-out bombing of China's war industries. He said he doubted the Communists could contain a revolt, which such attacks might inspire.

Egypt tonite is in the midst of its third cabinet change in five months. But details leading up to the change are being delayed by heavy censorship.

The State Department...despite recent Congressional disapproval of the St. Lawrence Seaway Project...has told the State of New York it can go ahead with negoiations to set up a preliminary power plant with Canada. The plant would be jointly financed by New York and Canada, and is expected to be completed within the next six years.

The Senate has approved funds to build the Air Force up to 143 wings within the next 3 years. (We now have approximately 90 wings.)

There were no new developments in the steel strike today, other than an official estimate that production is now 12 per cent of normal.

And here in New York, we had our first 13-alarm fire in five years. A converted trolley barn in Brooklyn caught fire. 6 tenements were destroyed...damage is estimated at more than a half million dollars...500 families had to be evacuated...and the watchman is reported missing.

Today, Secretary of State Acheson said in Vienna that American troops will remain in Austria until its independence is assured. He said that three of the four powers in Austria want to go home, indicating that the fourth, Russia, does not want to leave. The Western Powers have about twenty-five thousand troops in Austria, while the Russians have an estimated forty thousand.

Mr. Acheson's visit to Vienna is in the nature of a journey of good will in return for the recent visit of Austria's Chancellor Figl to Washington. But Alexander Kendrick cables me tonight that the Acheson visit is having an extremely disturbing effect on Austrian public opinion. The Communists are charging that the Acheson visit means that Austria will soon be rearmed and developed as an American military base; also that we are trying to arrange an agreement between Austria and Yugoslavia as part of the anti-Russian front in middle Europe. Kendrick reports that these charges are having a tremendous effect on the morale of the Austrian people who don't want to be involved in anything more serious than party politics, bank scandals, and the relative merits of Beethoven versus Bartok. In European history, foreign ministers visit in order to make deals, generally secret. Kendrick believes that the Acheson visit is creating more suspicion and fear than goodwill.

Today, the Western allies sent their ninth protest in five weeks to the Russians in Berlin. They accused the Russians of carrying out brutal, mass expulsions of Germans along the border between East and West Germany. Six highway frontier points have been closed; two railway lines between East and West Germany have been cut, and telephone communication between the two zones has been interrupted. The West claims that the Russians are trying to split Germany in two; prevent any communication between the two parts of the country.

In all this propaganda and counter-propaganda about Acheson's visit, and the tightening controls between East and West Germany, it may be that one of the most important developments of the week-end has been obscured. That event was the completion of the East German Canal, which by-passes West Berlin. Since last year the Communists have been laboring mightily, digging a new canal which connects the Oder and the Elbe Rivers, without touching West Berlin. It's about twenty-three miles long and was scooped out of the sandy and swampy soil at prodigous cost. This means that thousand-ton barges are now able to go around West Berlin without the possibility of interference or stoppage by the Western authorities. Since last year the Russians have been able to move their freight shipments by rail around the Western sector of Berlin. All this means that the Communists have trumped one of our main reprisal cards if they should decide to put the squeeze on Berlin with another blockade. Berlin lies a hundred miles deep in Communist-held territory; and the Communists can now by-pass the Western Sector by rail and by canal. The only conceivable justification for the completion of this 23-mile canal must be strategic and political. It tightens the Communist strangle-hold on Berlin, and makes it possible for them to cut the corridor leading to it again without themselves being in danger of having their own rail and barge traffic stopped at the West Berlin bottleneck. All this is no proof of Communist intentions, but they do not build canals twenty-three miles long, and very expensive, just for exercise. If they choose, they can now upon one pretext or another close the corridor leading to Berlin, leaving the Western powers without any effective means of economic retaliation. The completion of that canal is probably of more importance than Secretary Acheson's visit. He promised the West Berliners that we would regard an attack upon them as an attack upon us. But he didn't and couldn't say what we would do if they were confronted with slow economic strangulation.

Secretary of State Acheson's visits to Berlin and Vienna are designed primarily to reassure those who feel that the worst may be yet to come. Mr. Acheson doubtless knows well what Lord Chesterfield meant when he said "Fear, instead of avoiding danger, only invites it." He also knows that the Roman historian Livy was right when he observed:"The less there is of fear, the less there is of danger."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY - JUNE 30, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The President has signed a bill extending wage and price controls for another ten months. All controls, including rent, would have ended at midnite tonite, if the President had refused to sign the bill. House Speaker, Sam Rayburn, after talking to Mr. Truman, said the President was not happy about the legislation presented to him, but signed it, because "it was the only thing he could do." Mr. Truman wanted controls extended for another two years. Congress voted only a ten-month extension. The President will have more to say about the measure tomorrow. If all goes well, Congressional leaders hope to adjourn on Saturday - on the eve of the Republican Convention, which begins next Monday. Senator Taft arrived in Chicago today. He said he is willing to affect a compromise on the 38 contested Texas delegates. But he said to do this, both sides have to be "reasonable". Senator Carlson, of Kansas, an Eisenhower supporter, said the General is in "no mood to compromise." The National Republican Committee will begin hearing arguments on contested seats tomorrow. In addition to the Texas dispute, which will come up last, the Committee will hear 34 cases involving six states. As of this hour, television cameras and recording equipment will not be permitted - despite the fact that Senator Taft, and Senator Lodge, speaking for Eisenhower, have indicted they have no objections.

The National Committee Chairman, Guy Gabrielson, says he is now polling Committee members, on how they feel about this matter. He also announced that General MacArthur's keynote speech is written and has been checked by "responsible party leaders." There is no definite decision on whether MacArthur will deliver the speech in uniform.

My colleague, Dave Schoenbrun, telephoned a few minutes ago from Denver He says General Eisenhower will leave for Chicago on Thursday - with speeches scheduled for Lincoln, Nebraska and Aimes, Iowa. He will arrive in Chicago at noon, Saturday.

In Houston, Texas, the annual Governor's Conference is in its first day. Another colleague, Ed Morgan, is covering that meeting. Ed, what's the gossip in Houston?

MORGAN: Well, Ed, like Texas oil, the gossip is coming in gushers. We might try to bottle up a little of the Democratic brand first, though its value as a lubricant can't be guarenteed.

Interested governors seem to sense a smooth and powerful sound to a combination of cousins, Stevenson and Russell, as a potential Democratic ticket. Last April 16th, the Governor of Illinois, issued a 367-word statement saying, in essence, and with manifest sincerity, that he didn't want to run for President and that he was not then a candidate. This morning, Mr. Stevenson issued a similar statement but it was a 166-words shorter and it skirted thepoint in a smaller circle. He said he was not being coy or trying to pick up an opponent, and that he wouldn't participate in a draft. But, what if one came? Well, he'd have to decide then.

This, as one Houston paper puts it, leaves Stevenson with his foot in the door.

There is an almost palpable air of compromise, Ed, among the Democratic governors, which is where Georgia's Senator Russell comes in, though not of his own volution, as possible Vice Presidential timber. For instance, Governor Dever, of Massachusetts, who will be the Democratic key-noter, had kind words for Russell, and many governors on both sides of the Mason-and-Dixon line have talked of the need for unity on the issue of civil rights.

It's suggested that the Stevenson-Russell team might provide the proper balance to avoid any possible Dixiecrat vote.

Most of the Republican governors here are making large and enthusiastic noises for General Eisenhower. Just a little while ago, Governor Dewey, of New York, said that since his arrival last night, he had learned from other governors, Republicans of course, that as many as 40 Taft votes would switch to the General on the second ballot. He spoke of the switch as being definite, but he didn't say who the governors were he talked to or where the switches might come.

And, indeed, a loyal Taft minority consisting of the governors of Utah, Idaho, and North Dakota, insisted that this was just speculative talk and that the Senator was still the strongest candidate.

Technically, of course, this 44th annual convention of governors isn't concerned with politics at all. They are struggling bravely through an agenda of tax problems, highway matters and higher education curricula.

But when the first session was just about to convene officially this morning, a fuse blew out leaving the delegates in total darkness. A cynical observe remarked this was due to the super-charged political atmosphere. Another blamed it on the heavy weight of Texas hospitality. The visitors had been deluged with literally tons of gifts ranging from cowboy boots to brochures on the conference bound in unborn calfskin. Such is the opulence of Texas.

There's a constant round of conferences and sight-seeing, cocktail parties and pre-convention caucusing. And, that, Ed, is what the governors have been doing.

MURROW: That was Ed Morgan reporting from Houston, Texas

Senator Russell, campaigning for the Democratic Presidential nomination, tonight accused Gael Sullivan, (Senator Kefauver's campaign manager), of indulging in "gutter politics." Russell said that a recent statement by Sullivan that Russell would take second place on a ticket with Governor Stevenson is a "despicable campaign falsehood."

Three days of heavy rains have kept ground fighting in Korea to a minimum. And once again, there was no air action. The truce talks, which have been recessed for the past 3 days, will resume tonight. And South Korean President Syngman Rhee has told his Assembly, if it doesn't adopt his proposed Constitutional amendemtns within the next couple of days, he will find means of dissolving the Assembly.

Chiang Kai-Shek, in a cabled interview with U.S. News and World Report, urged an all-out bombing of China's war industries. He said he doubted the Communists could contain a revolt which such attacks might inspire. Egypt tonight is in the midst of its third cabinet change in five months. But details leading up to the change are being delayed by heavy censorship.

The State Department, despite recent Congressional disapproval of the St. Lawrence Seaway project, has told the State of New York it can go ahead with negotiations to set up a preliminary power plant with Canada. The plant would be jointly financed by New York and Canada, and is expected to be completed within the next six years.

The Senate has approved funds to build the Air Force up to 143 wings within the next 3 years. (We now have approximately 90 wings.) There were no new developments in the steel strike today, other than an official estimate that production is now 12 per cent of normal.

And here in New York, we had our first 13-alarm fire in five years. A converted trolley barn in Brooklyn caught fire. Eight tenements were destroyed; damage is estimated at more than a half million dollars; 500 families had to be evacuated and the watchman is reported missing.

Today Secretary of State Acheson said in Vienna that American troops will remain in Austria until its independence is assured. He said that three of the four powers in Austria want to go home, indicating that the fourth, Russia, does not want to leave. The Western Powers have about twenty-five thousand troops in Austria, while the Russians have an estimated forty thousand.

Mr. Acheson's visit to Vienna is in the nature of a jouney of good will, in return for the recent visit of Austria's Chancellor Figl to Washington. But Alexander Kendrick cables me tonight, that the Acheson visit is having an extremely disturbing effect on Austrian public opinion. The Communists are charging that the Acheson visit means that Austria will soon be rearmed and developed as an American military base; also that we are trying to arrange an agreement between Austria and Yugoslavia as part of the anti-Russian front in middle Europe. Kendrick reports that these charges are having a trememdous effect on the morale of the Austrian people, who don't want to be involved in anything more serious than party politics, bank scandals, and the relative merits of Beethoven versus Bartok. In European history, foreign ministers visit in order to make deals, generally secret. Kendrick believes that the Acheson visit is creating more suspicion and fear than goodwill.

Today, the Western Allies sent their ninth protest, in five weeks, to the Russians in Berlin. They accused the Russians of carrying out brutal, mass expulsions of Germans along the border between East and West Germany. Six highway frontier points have been closed, two railway lines between East and West Germany have been cut, and telephone communication between the two zones has been interrupted. The West claims that the Russians are trying to split Germany in two - prevent any communication between the two parts of the country.

In all this propaganda and counter-propaganda about Acheson's visit, and the tightening controls between East and West Germany, it may be that one of the most important developments of the week-end has been obscured. That event was the completion of the East German Canal, which by-passes West Berlin. Since last year the Communists have been laboring mightily digging a new canal which connects the Oder and the Elbe Rivers, without touching West Berlin. It's about twenty-three miles long and was scooped out of the sandy and swampy soil at prodigous cost. This means that thousand-ton barges are now able to go around West Berlin without the possibility of interference or stoppage by the Western authoritic Since last year the Russians have been able to move their freight shipments by rail around the Western sector of Berlin. All this means that the Communists have trumped one of our main reprisal cards, if they should decide to put the squeeze on Berlin with another blockade. Berlin lies a hundred miles deep in Communist-held territory, and the Communists can now by-pass the Western Sector by rail and by canal. The only conceivable justification for the completion of this 23-mile canal must be strategic and political. It tightens the Communist strangle-hold on Berlin, and makes it possible for them to cut the corridor leading to it - again without themselves being in danger of having their own rail and barge traffic stopped at the West Berlin bottleneck. All this is no proof of Communist intentions but they do not build canals twenty-three miles long, and very expensive, just for exercise. If they choose, they can now, upon one pretext or another, close the corridor leading to Berlin, leaving the Western powers without any effective means of economic retaliation. The completion of that canal is probably of more importance than Secretary Acheson's visit. He promised the West Berliners that we would regard an attack upon them as an attack upon us. But he didn't and couldn't say what we would do if they were confronted with slow economic strangulation.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: Secretary of State Acheson's visits to Berlin and Vienna are designed primarily to reassure those who feel that the worst may be yet to come. Mr. Acheson doubtless knows well what Lord Chesterfield meant when he said: "Fear, instead of avoiding danger, only invites it." He also knows that the Roman historian Livy was right when he observed: "The less there is of fear, the less there is of danger."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Tuesday - July 1, 1952

This is the news:

The Republican National Committee...meeting in Chicago...has heard arguments and ruled on the first of seven contested state delegations. It voted unanimously to seat 18 Florida delegates pledged to support Senator Taft for the Republican Presidential nomination next week. The other group (ALSO FAVORING TAFT) had been critical of what it termed the (FLORIDA STATE COMM.) "steam-roller tactics." The Committee met for less than half an hour...behind closed doors. The next contested case involves Georgia's 17 votes. Both sides in that dispute will be heard later tonite. Final disposition of these cases rests with the Credentials Committee...and then before the Convention itself.

Long before the National Committee got down to business, an argument developed over permission to allow television and radio coverage of these hearings. A little more than an hour ago the Committee, by a 60-40 vote, decided against radio and television reporting. (And we'll hear more about this in a moment.)

Senator Millikan of Colorado...a Taft supporter...has been named permanent Chairman of the Platform drafting Committee. He has appointed himself Chairman of the sub-committee writing the foreign policy plank. He said

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Tuesday, July 1, 1952
7:45 to 8:00 p.m.

MURROW: My colleague, Bill Downs, has been following developments in Chicago all through the day. Bill, how are you holding up?

DOWNS: Well Ed, I've just witnessed one of the strangest decisions since generations ago the Old South turned down Eli Whitney's Cotton Gin. The Republican National Committee, led by the old guard Taft organization, has just voted to ban all live radio reporting, all live television, all newsreels and motion pictures and all still photographers from being on hand when the committee decides the merits of the seventy-five disputed delegates which may decide the next GOP presidential candidate. The vote was sixty to forty against allowing live reporting of these events. We still will be doing the convention itself live, of course, but in a way today's vote was more than just a vote to keep us and our mikes and cameras out of the Republican National Committee act. You see, Senator Taft yesterday somewhat reversed himself in opposing live breadcasting from the National Committee sessions. He said it was O.K. with him if it was O.K. with the Committee, but Taft's political lieutenants had heard him the first time. At the same time, the Eisenhower organization came up plugging for the fullest possible coverage, but even the Eisenhower folks weren't particularly concerned until after the presidents of the major radio and television networks began pulling at the bit. However, on this evening's vote to exclude radio and TV, for the first time we saw the Taft machine go to work. This morning they appointed a committee to investigate the possibility of the networks pooling their facilities so as to cut down on the amount of equipment cluttering up the room. This was agreed upon. The investigating group went back to the National Committee and reported three to two in favor of allowing live broadcasts. At first it seemed as if the Taft machine had suffered a rebugg. However, then, the old guard big guns went to work. Representative Clarence

Brown of Ohio, who once managed an abortive Taft campaign made a pained speech. He was pained by the number of cameras needed - pained by the microphones - pained by cameramen and lights. Brown's main point was where will we stop - the next thing you know newspapers will be wanting to put in linotypes and printing presses to speed the news. He said his good friends in radio and television news are welcome to come in with their little pencils and notebooks and then go to the mikes and cameras and tell the people what happened. I almost felt ashamed to be using such a modern instrument as a ball point pen. Then Mason Owlett of Pennsylvania, another old guard Republican, got up to support Brown and although all through the debate all sides insisted that there was nothing to hide, Owlett spluttered "It's a very serious thing to make this a free-for-all show. It may do irreparable damage to the party." By this time the heavily pro-Taft National Committee had gotten the word in no unmistakable terms. There were unconcealed guffaws when GOP Chairman Guy Gabrielson, also a Taft man, read a telegram from Houston from New York's Governor Dewey - an Eisenhower man. Dewey said - allow the broadcasting. To ban it would do irreparable damage to the party. The same words used by Taft man Mason Owlett. You figure it out! Now back to Ed Murrow in New York.

trans.SSpence

he looks forward to a platform "on which all citizens who are opposed to the foul gang in power can stand and march to victory." (He anticipates no problems in framing such a platform.)

Harold Stassen, himself a candidate for the Republican nomination, arrived in Chicago today. He said he thinks there's a good chance of a deadlock. He told Millikain's Committee that unless it adopts a "liberal and humanitarian stand" on vital issues, the Republicans will have trouble winning in November. Senator Taft said he thought the Platform Committee would have no trouble writing a satisfactory program. He also said that the "hate-mongers who are injecting anti-semitism into the pre-convention maneuvers should be thrown out of the party."

My colleague, Bill Downs has been following developments in Chicago all through the day. Bill, [redacted] how are you holding up ?

RETURN CUE: NOW BACK TO ED MURROW IN N.Y.

In Houston, where the Governor's Conference is in session, Democrats were in the news again today. South Carolina's Governor Byrnes told newsmen that if the Democrats do not adopt a more conservative Civil Rights plank than they did in 1948, South Carolina might bolt the Convention along with other southern states.

President Truman issued a statement today on the wage and price control bill he signed last night. He said he doesn't like it, but had no alternative but to sign it. He described it as "the target of every favor-seeking lobby of special interests"...said its a watered-down version of what he asked for, represents a serious gamble with inflation...and noted that stripping the Wage Stabilization Board to advisory powers, opens a dangerous gap in our mobilization program.

The Senate, late today, approved a peace contract with Germany. There was six hours of debate before the voting. The vote was 77 to 5. The agreement says in effect that American troops now stationed in Germany are no longer to be regarded as occupation forces, but rather a part of the Nato force. The Senate also agreed to allow the Germans in the western zone to join indirectly in the Nato alliance.

Reports from Berlin tonight, indicate that the Communists in the Eastern Zone are setting up a "no-man's land" of trenches, to prevent people from their zone escaping into the western sector.

The United Nations Security Council, meeting in New York, has refused to invite North Korean or Communist China representatives to take part in any discussion of germ warfare charges in Korea. Russia immediately announced that it would veto any proposed inquiry into Communist charges of germ warfare by this country.

There was no significant ground action in Korea today. Rain and heavy clouds kept our planes out of the air, though a navy task force résumed its bombardment of the Korean east coast. Truce talks, which resumed last night, after a 3-day recess, will continue tonite.

In France, Jacques Duclos, who was arrested in the May 28th Communist demonstrations against General Ridgway's arrival in Paris, was realeased tonite. He was given "limited freedom" on the grounds that there was no evidence that he had actually committed an offense against the state.

The Army has unveiled its first new tank since the end of World War Two. It's called the Patton 48...a medium tank...and has the first single cast hull ever developed. The Army says its low silhouette design with no flat surfaces makes it an extremely difficult target.

The Weirton Steel Company which granted a 25-cent an hour "package" increase to non-striking workers appealed to the government today for a $5.~~00~~ 1/2 a ton price increase to cover additional expenses. But Price Stabilizer Ellis Arnall says that regardless of settling the strike, no company is ~~entitled~~ entitled to more than a $3 a ton price increase.

The Treasury Department reports a budget deficit of 4-billion dollars for the year ending June 30th./ This is less than half of the deficit President Truman anticipated./ Government spending, nonetheless, reached 66-billion dollars - the highest figure ever recorded in peacetime./

Edward R. Murrow

July 1, 1952

In Britain, the Labor Party has again failed to bring down the Conservative Government of Winston Churchill. It was a spirited debate. Mr. Churchill's government was under attack, because we failed to inform the British, in advance, of the air strikes against power plants near the Yalu River. Mr. Churchill accused his opposition of being "devoid alike of wisdom and prudence." He denounced their "wanton and reckless conduct, seeming to care nothing for the peace and freedom of the world, and the safety of this Island." Mr. Churchill's government announced that a senior British officer would soon be appointed as Deputy to General Mark Clark. Mr. Churchill quoted Acheson's statement to members of Parliament, when he told them "we wanted to consult you - we should have - and we recognize the error". He said nothing could be fairer than that.

Britain had considered asking for a representative at the Panmunjom truce talks, which so far had been handled exclusively by Americans. But the decision finally was not to ask for a British representative, because they felt that the negotiations were already being well handled. Churchill labeled General MacArthur's advance towards the Yalu, in November of 1950, as "the most serious mistake made in the Korean campaign - a fateful set-back to all the operations of the United Nations", and he asked the House of Commons to remember "the terrible cost that has been paid for their patience by the people of the United States." And he said there might come a time - "especially during a presidential election, when a sharp reaction of emotion, even of anger, might sweep large sections of the American people and any candidate who paid attention to it might gain considerable advantage". He said there were many Americans who thought China more important than Europe. "It would be a very great misfortune if that line of thought were to prevail - it might easily lead to the ruin of the whole European structure of defense, which is being built up with so much effort and sacrifice and would expose us all to the mortal danger of war and destruction."

Mr. Churchill won his vote of confidence 300 to 270 - a relatively comfortable majority. There have been some demands in ~~England~~ Britain even from Mr. Churchill's own supporters that he step down - is too old and has lost his grip, but he appears to have handled this debate with his old time skill.

The argument over permitting television and radio to cover the National Committee hearings in Chicago, basically resolves itself to Aristotle's conclusion that "all men desire by nature, to know." And whatever the motives behind the dispute, those concerned with the outcome, would do well to remember this observation by Ralph Waldo Emerson: "No anchor, no cable, no fences, avail to keep a fact a fact."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

TUESDAY - JULY 1, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Republican National Committee, meeting in Chicago, has heard arguments and ruled on the first of seven contested state delegations. It voted unanimously to seat 18 Florida delegates pledged to support Senator Taft for the Republican presidential nomination next week. The other group, also favoring Taft, had been critical of what it termed the Florida State Committee, "steamroller tactics." The Committee met for less than half an hour behind closed doors. The next contested case involves Georgia's 17 votes. Both sides in that dispute will be heard later tonight. Final disposition of these cases rests with the Credentials Committee, and then before the Convention itself.

Long before the National Committee got down to business, an argument developed over permission to allow television and radio coverage of these hearings. A little more than an hour ago the Committee, by a 60-40 vote, decided against radio and television reporting. (And we'll hear more about this in a moment.)

Senator Millikan of Colorado, a Taft supporter, has been named permanent Chairman of the Platform Drafting Committee. He has appointed himself Chairman of the Sub-Committee writing the foreign policy plank. He said he looks forward to a platform "on which all citizens, who are opposed to the foul gang in power, can stand and march to victory." (He anticipates no problems in framing such a platform.)

Harold Stassen, himself a candidate for the Republican nomination, arrived in Chicago today. He said he thinks there's a good chance of a deadlock. He told Millikain's committee that unless it adopts a "liberal and humanitarian stand" on vital issues, the Republicans will have trouble winning in November. Senator Taft said he thought the Platform Committee would haveno trouble writing a satisfactory program. He also said that the "hate-mongers who are injecting anti-semitism into the pre-convention maneuvers whould be thrown out of the party."

My colleague, Bill Downs has been following developments in Chicago all through the day. Bill, how are you holding up?

DOWNS: Well, Ed, I've just witnessed one of the strangest decisions since generations ago the Old South turned down Eli Whitney's Cotton Gin. The Republican National Committee, led by the old guard Taft organization, has just voted to ban all live radio reporting, all live television, all newsreels and motion pictures and all still photographers from being on hand when the committee decides the merits of the seventy-five disputed delegates which may decide the next GOP presidential candidate. The vote was sixty to forty against allowing live reporting of these events. We still will be doing the convention itself live, of course, but in a way, today's vote was more than just a vote to keep us and our mikes and cameras out of the Republican National Committee act. You see, Senator Taft yesterday somewhat reversed himself in opposing live broadcasting from the National Committee sessions. He said it was O.K. with him if it was O.K. with the Committee, but Taft's political lieutenants had heard him the first time. At the same time, the presidents of the major radio and television networks began pulling at the bit. However, on this evening's vote to exclude radio and TV, for the first time we saw the Taft machine go to work. This morning they appointed a committee to investigate the possibility of the networks pooling their facilities so as to cut down on the amount of equipment cluttering up the room. This was agreed upon. The investigating group went back to the National Committee and reported three to two in favor of allowing live broadcasts. At first, it seemed as if the Taft machine had suffered a rebuff. However, then, the old-guard big guns want to work. Representative Clarence Brown of Ohio, who once managed an obortive Taft campaign made a pained speech. He was pained by the number of cameras needed - pained by the microphones - pained by cameramen and lights. Brown's main point was where will we stop; the next thing you know, newspapers will be wanting to put in linotypes and printing presses to speed the news. He said his good friends in radio and television news are welcome to come in with their little pencils and notebooks and then go to the mikes and cameras and tell the people what happened. I almost felt ashamed to be using such a modern instrument as a ball point pen. Then Mason Owlett of Pennsylvania, another old-guard Republican, got up to support Brown and, although all through the debate all sides insisted that there was nothing to hid, Owlett spluttered: "It's a very serious thing to make this a free-for-all show. It may do irreparable damage to the Party." By this time the heavily pro-Taft National Committee had gotten the word in no unmistakable terms. There were unconcealed guffaws when GOP Chairman Guy Gabrielson, also a Taft man, read a telegram from Houston from New York's Governor Dewey - an Eisenhower man. Dewey said - allow the broadcasting; to ban it would do irreparable damage to the Party. The same words used by Taft man Mason Owlett. You figure it out! Now back to Ed Murrow in New York.

MURROW: In Houston, where the Governor's Conference is in session, Democrats were in the news again today. South Carolina's Governor Byrnes told newsmen that if the Democrats do not adopt a more conservative Civil Rights plank than they did in 1948, South Carolina might bolt the Convention along with other southern states.

President Truman issued a statement today on the Wage and Price Control Bill he signed last night. He said he doesn't like it, but had no alternative but to sign it. He described it as "the target of every favor-seeking lobby of special interests"; said it's a watered-down version of what he asked for - represents a serious gamble with inflation - and noted that stripping the Wage Stabilization Board to advisory powers opens a dangerous gap in our mobilization program.

The Senate, late today, approved a peace contract with Germany. There was six hours of debate before the voting. The vote was 77 to 5. The agreement says in effect that American troops now stationed in Germany are no longer to be regarded as occupation forces, but rather a part of the NATO force. The Senate also agreed to allow the Germans in the Western Zone to join indirectly in the NATO alliance.

Reports from Berlin tonight indicate that the Communists in the Eastern Zone are setting up a "no-man's land" of trenches to prevent people from their zone escaping into the western sector.

The United Nations Security Council, meeting in New York, has refused to invite North Korean or Communist China representatives to take part in any discussion of germ warfare charges in Korea. Russia immediately announced that it would veto any proposed inquiry into Communist charges of germ warfare in this country.

There was no significant ground action in Korea today. Rain and heavy clouds kept our planes out of the air, though a Navy Task Force resumed its bombardment of the Korean east coast. Truce talks, which resumed last night, after a 3-day recess. will continue tonight.

In France, Jacques Duclos, who was arrested in the May 28th Communist demonstrations against General Ridgway's arrival in Paris, was released tonight. He was given "limited freedom" on the grounds that there was no evidence that he had actually committed an offense against the state.

The Army has unveiled its first new tank since the end of World War Two. It's called the Patton 48 - a medium tank - and has the first single cast hull ever developed. The Army says its low silhouette design with no flat surfaces makes it an extremely difficult target.

The Weirton Steel Company, which granted a 25-cent an hour "package" increase to non-striking workers, appealed to the Government today for a $5.50-a-ton price increase to cover additional expenses. But Price Stabilizer, Ellis Arnall says, that regardless of settling the strike, no company is entitled to more than a $3-a-ton price increase.

The Treasury Department reports a budget deficit of 4-billion dollars for the year ending June 30th, This is less than half of the deficit President Truman anticipated. Government spending, nonetheless, reached 66-billion dollars

- the highest figure ever reached in peacetime.

In Britain, the Labor Party has again failed to bring down the Conservative Government of Winston Churchill. It was spirited debate. Mr. Churchill's government was under attack because we failed to inform the British in advance of the air strikes against power plants near the Yalu River. Mr. Churchill accused his opposition of being "devoid alike of wisdom and prudence." He denounced their "wanton and reckless conduct, seeming to care nothing for the peace and freedom of the world and the safety of this Island." Mr. Churchill's government announced that a senior British officer would soon be appointed as Deputy to General Mark Clark. Mr. Churchill quoted Acheson's statement to members of Parliament, when he told them "we wanted to consult you - we should have - and we recognize the error." He said nothing could be fairer than that.

Britain had considered asking for a representative at the Panmunjom truce talks, which so far had been handled exclusively by Americans. But the decision finally was not to ask for a British representative, because they felt that the negotiations were already being well handled. Churchill labeled General MacArthur's advance towards the Yalu, in November of 1950, as "the most serious mistake made in the Korean campaign - a fateful set-back to all the operations of the United Nations," and he asked the House of Commons to remember "the terrible cost that has been paid for their patience by the people of the United States." And he said that there might come a time, "especially during a presidential electio when a sharp reaction of emotion, even of anger, might sweep large sections of the American people, and any candidate who paid attention to, might gain considerable advantage." He said there were many Americans who thought China more important than Europe. "It would be a very great misfortune if that line of thought were to prevail; it might easily lead to the ruin of the whole European sacrifice and would expose us all to the mortal danger of war and destruction."

Mr. Churchill won his vote of confidence 300 to 270 - a relatively comfortable majority. There have been some demands in Britain, even from Mr.

Churchill's own supporters that he step down - is too old and has lost his grip; but he appears to have handled this debate with his old time skill.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: The argument over permitting television and radio to cover the National Committee hearings in Chicago, basically resolves itself to Aristotle's conclusion that "All men desire by nature to know." And whatever the motives behind the dispute, those concerned with the outcome, would do well to remember this observation by Ralph Waldo Emerson: "No anchor, no cable, no fences avail to keep a fact a fact."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Wednesday - July 2, 1952

This is the news:

The Republican National Committee continued hearing cases of contested delegates today. It seated 17 delegates, favoring Senator Taft, one delegate, who is supporting General Eisenhower. Newsmen were permitted to attend these sessions, but newsreel and television cameras, still photographers, and those with recording equipment were not allowed to enter the room. I'll have more to say about this matter, in a few minutes.

The Committee, after first agreeing to hear only four contests involving delegates-at-large from Georgia, changed its mind. It decided to rule on the two opposing, full 17-man delegations. The group supporting Eisenhower claimed it was the regular party organization in Georgia. But the National Committee, by a vote of 62 to 39, voted to seat the group supporting Taft. Harry Sommers, the National Committeeman from Georgia, refused to take part in the argument - though he is recognized as a member of the so-called "regulars", who were for Eisenhower. Immediately after the decision was made known, Eisenhower supporters claimed a "double cross by Sommers." Senator Lodge said this was more than "just a steamroller", and that public opinion won't stand for such "shennanigans." He said he will carry this, and other contested seats, to the credentials committee and the full convention.

Later in the day, the Committee agreed to seat one delegate from Kansas who favors General Eisenhower for the nomination. He was approved after showing that he was legally elected by a more than 8 to 1 majority. #

Twenty-three Republican Governors sent a telegram to Chicago. In it they urged the Committee not to allow contested delegates to vote on their own eligibility when the convention convenes. The governors said they were concerned that those supporting Taft and Eisenhower might let the situation get out of bounds.

The Republican Platform Committee had another full day of hearings and tomorrow the sub-committee on foreign policy will meet in closed session. John Foster Dulles, who is helping in the draft of the foreign policy plank said in its final version it will call for a "major departure in U.S. Foreign Policy." He didn't elaborate.

President Truman was in Arkansas on what he said was the first "whistle-stop" tour of the 1952 campaign. At the dedication of two power projects, the President said the south has made more progress under the New and Fair Deal administrations than any time in its history. He attacked the private power projects, the American Medical Association and the real estate lobbies. He described them as "reactionary lobbies"...representing "selfish interests"...who promote "lying slogans"...and yell "socialism every time the government tries to do something in the interests of the people."

A Senate Sub-Committee on Internal Security issued a report today. It recommended that the Justice Department look into perjury charges against Owen J. Lattimore, Johns Hopkins Professor and John P. Davies, Jr., a political adviser to our ~~occupation forces~~ high commissioner in Germany. The Committee contended that both men lied in previous testimony before Congressional Committees. In the case of Lattimore, the report said he was a knowing instrument of the Soviet conspiracy and that the Institute of Pacific Relations, of which Lattimore is a trustee, also served International Communist Interests. Davies said he denies this accustion. And Lattimore in a statement tonite said:"I have denied under oath any sympathy for or participation in Soviet activities. The new suggestions are untrue and are not supported by any credible evidence."

Senator McCarran, in a speech dealing with the Committee's report, said: "I am convinced that if it were not for the machinations of a small group in the Institute of Pacific Relations, China today would be free."

In the past week, we suffered 965 casualties in Korea - the largest single week's increase in the last 7 months. Our total casualties now stand at 111-thousand 576. At the same time we have killed, wounded or captured 12-thousand 416 of the enemy in the past month...the biggest total since January.

The Army has issued a draft call for 30-thousand in September. And with many service terms expiring, will have to draw on active units for overseas replacements - this means the regular army, active reserve and national guard. Minimum tours of duty in Europe are also being extended from 36 to 42 months.

Bernard Baruch, speaking in Norfolk Virginia today, said Congress and the Administration are playing politics in refusing to support an all-out war effort. He said the real danger is not militarism but civilian indecision. He resents efforts to reduce the military to secondary cizitenship. Mr. Baruch said:"I don't understand the argument that military men have less desire for peace or have narrower minds than civilians."

Communist police in the eastern zone of Berlin have arrested 3 American Catholic priests and a woman employee of a Catholic Welfare Organization in Germany. The party of four stopped their car along the border to take some pictures...the police entered the car and drove it across the border. ~~The group, all of them Americans,~~ All four are still being held by the Communists. We have demanded their immediate release.

In Korea, bad weather kept air action to a minimum again. There were no significant changes on the ground. General Van Fleet, our 8th Army Commander arrived in ~~Korea~~ Pusan for talks with South Korean President Syngman Rhee. The truce sessions resume tonight and Van Fleet told newsmen that if we had more air power...and struck heavier blows...he believes we could force the Communists into signing an armistice.

A special House Committee, looking into the ~~Katyn~~ Katyn Forest massacres of ~~1941~~ 1940, says there is no question that the Russians killed 15-thousand Poles. The Russians have denied this. The Committee noted a striking resemblance between this incident and what it described as the mass killing of American war prisoners in Korea. It recommended an appeal to the U.N. and an independent investigation of other possible massacres by the Russians.

The Air Force announced today that it has a new all-weather interceptor jet - the F-94-C...it's entirely armed with rockets...has a speed of more than 600 miles an hour...and has a tail parachute for landing on short air-strips.

Yesterday the Republican National Committee voted 60 to 40 to ban all television cameras, microphones, newsreel cameras - in fact all methods of reporting except pencil and paper from the hearings having to do with contested delegations. The committee is, ofcourse, soverign, and entitled to establish its own rules of proceedure and methods of reporting. In general, the Eisenhower supporters wanted the meetings wide open - fully reported by radio and television - it can be presumed that they took up this position not because of any great fondness for these new-fangled gadgets, but rather because they thought a full airing of the proceedings would advantage their candidate, General Eisenhower. Today no one seems to be very eager to accept the responsibility for throwing out microphones and cameras. Senator Taft said he didn't have a thing to do with it. Says he told Gabrielson, the chairman of the National Committee, that he'd abide by the committee's decision. Nevertheless, the Committee divided pretty much along Taft and Eisenhower lines, with the Taft supporters led by Clarence Brown voting to eliminate the modern instruments of communication. It was alleged that all those lights and cameras would make the proceedings appear like monkeys in a cage. This would seem to be well nigh impossible, because the camera or the microphone has not yet been invented that can transform statesman into monkeys, or monkeys into statesmen.

No one who has experienced the impartial scrutiny of lights and cameras will deny that the experience is somewhat upsetting - not altogether condusive to logical and disspasionate development of a line of arguement. The network's case would have been stronger had they gone to the National Committee originally, with the proposal that these hearings be covered on what is called in the trade a pool basis, that is, for one camera and one set of lights to service all networks desireing to carry the proceedings. This would have reduced the confusion, the number of cameras, technicians and the intensity of light required.

It would seem that certain people who want no part of this arguement about radio and television coverage are being involved in it. It was reported that former president, Herbert Hoover, had sent a telegram to the National Committee saying that absolute freedom of the press is the foundation stone of American liberty. Mr. Hoover's office in New York said no telegram had been sent. Carroll Reece, Southern campaign manager for Senator Taft said there ought to be an investigation into this hoax. It shows an evil motive on the part of someone, undoubtedly in the opposition camp. Now it isn't enough to be for or against Taft or Eisenhower - you must be for or against radio and television reporting.

And the line of limited logic now being developed in Chicago implies that if you favor radio and television coverage, then you support Eisenhower, and if you're against it you're a Taft man. If you just want to use these two instruments to report you're outside the door. Of course these hearings before the National committee, and later before the credentials committee are just the preliminary bouts - the main event will take place on the floor of the convention where we shall all be able to witness the final round.

There seems to be an impression current that this argument about radio and television reporting implies that there is something new and different in this situation...there isn't - it's happened repeatedly before. Full visual and oral reporting of the proceedings, step by step, might of course tend to persuade the citizen, be he democrat or republican, that he really doesn't have very much to say about the selection of his party's candidate. Political conventions viewed at close range seldom represent all that is noble and admirable in the democratic processes. I do not pretend to know what the public reaction would be if cameras and microphones were permitted to see, hear and transmit whatever they could pick up, but it would at least be interesting, and my guess would be that the public could stand it. Whether some of the politicians could survive it is another question. These artificial limitations could become ridiculous. For example, yesterday, Charles Hacker, Sergeant-at-arms of the Republican national committee, banned television cameras and still-picture men, from the huge international Amphitheater in Chicago. Said his order was designed to prevent the making of "premature" pictures of the convention site. Today, he lifted the ban. No reason given. Maybe something matured out there near the stockyards.

4

5

In the midst of the arguments over fuller coverage of the convention acitivities, these words by Charles Bradlaugh would seem appropriate: "Without free speech no search for truth is possible and no discovery of truth is useful. Better a thousand-fold abuse of free speech than denial of free speech. The abuse dies in a day, but the denial slays the life of the people and entombs the hope of the race."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

WEDNESDAY - JULY 2, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Republican National Committee continued hearing cases of contested delegates today. It seated 17 delegates - favoring Senator Taft, one delegate - who is supporting General Eisenhower. Newsmen were permitted to attend these sessions, but newsreel and television cameras, still photographers and those with recording equipment were not allowed to enter the room. I'll have more to say about this matter in a few minutes.

The Committee, after first agreeing to hear only four contests involving delegates-at-large from Georgia, changed its mind. It decided to rule on the two opposing full 17-man delegations. The group supporting Eisenhower claimed it was the regular party organization in Georgia. But the National Committee, by a vote of 62 to 39, voted to seat the group supporting Taft. Harry Soomers, the National Committeeman from Georgia, refused to take part in the argument - though he is recognized as a member of the socalled "regulars" who were for Eisenhower. Immediately after the decision was made known, Eisenhower supporters claimed a "double cross by Sommers." Senator Lodge said this was more than "just a steamroller", and that public opinion won't stand for such "shennanigans." He said he will carry this and other contested seats to the Credentials Committee and the full Convention.

Latter in the day, the Committee agreed to seat one delegate from Kansas, who favors General Eisenhower for the nomination. He was approved after showing that he was legally elected by a more than 8 to 1 majority. Twenty-three Republican Governors sent a telegram to Chicago. In it they urged the Committee not to allow contested delegates to vote on their own eligibility, when the Convention convenes. The governors said they were concerned that those supporting Taft and Eisenhower might let the situation get out of bounds.

The Republican Platform Committee had another full day of hearings, and tomorrow the sub-committee on foreign policy will meet in closed session. John Foster Dulles, who is helping in the draft of the foreign policy plank, said in its final version it will call for a "major departure in U. S. foreign policy." He didn't elaborate.

President Truman was in Arkansas on what he said was the first "whistle-stop" tour of the 1952 campaign. At the dedication of two power projects, the President said the South has made more progress under the New and Fair Deal Administrations, than any time in its history. He attacked the private power projects, the American Medical Association and the real estate lobbies. He described them as "reactionary lobbies", representing "selfish interests", who promote "lying slogans" and yell "socialism every time the Government tries to do something in the interests of the people."

A Senate Sub-Committee on Internal Security issued a report today. It recommended that the Justice Department look into perjury charges against Owen J. Lattimore, Johns Hopkins professor, and John P. Davies, Jr., a political adviser to our High Commissioner in Germany. The Committee contended that both men lied in previous testimony before Congressional Committees. In the case of Lattimore, the report said he was a knowing instrument of the Soviet conspiracy, and that the Institute of Pacific Relations, of which Lattimore is a trustee, also served International Communists Interests. Davies said he denies this accusation. And Lattimore in a statement tonight, said: "I have denied under oath any sympathy for or participation in Soviet activities. The new suggestions are untrue and are not supported by any credible evidence."

Senator McCarran, in a speech dealing with the Committee's report, said: "I am convinced, that, if it were not for the machinations of a small group in the Institute of Pacific Relations, China today would be free."

In the past week, we suffered 965 casualties in Korea - the largest single week's increase in the last 7 months. Our total casualties now stand at 111-thousand 576. At the same time we have killed, wounded or captured 12-thousand, 416 of the enemy in the past month - the biggest total since January.

The Army has issued a draft call for 30-thousand in September. And with many service terms expiring, will have to draw on active units for overseas replacements. This means the regular Army, Active Reserve and National Guard. Minimum tours of duty in Europe are also being extended from 36 to 42 months.

Bernard Baruch, speaking in Norfolk, Virginia, today said Congress and the Administration are playing politics in refusing to support an all-out war effort. He said the real danger is not militarism but civilian indecision. He resents efforts to reduce the military to secondary citizenship. Mr. Baruch said: "I don't understand the argument that military men have less desire for peace, or have narrower minds than civilians."

Communist police in the eastern zone of Berlin have arrested three American Catholic priests and a woman employee of a Catholic Welfare Organization in Germany. The party of four stopped their car along the border to take some pictures; the police entered the car and drive it across the border. All four are still being held by the Communists. We have demanded their immediate release.

In Korea, bad weather kept air action to a minimum again. There were no significant changes on the ground. General Van Fleet, our 8th Army Commander arrived in Pusan for talks with South Korean President, Syngman Rhee. The truce sessions resume tonight and Van Fleet told newsmen that if we had more air power, and struck heavier blows, he believes we could force the Communists into signing an armistice.

A special House Committee, looking into the Katyn Forest massacres of 1940, says there is no question that the Russians killed 15-thousand Poles. The Russians have denied this. The Committee noted a striking resemblance between this incident, and what it described as the mass killing of American war prisoners in Korea. It recommended an appeal to the U. N. and an independent investigation of other possible massacres by the Russians.

The Air Force announced today that it has a new all-weather interceptor jet - the F-94-C. It's entirely armed with rockets, has a speed of more than 600 miles an hour, and has a tail parachute for landing on short air-strips.

Yesterday the Republican National Committee voted 60 to 40 to ban all television cameras, microphones, newsreel cameras - in fact all methods of reporting except pencil and paper from the hearings having to do with contested delegations. The Committee is, of course, sovereign, and entitled to establish its own rules of proceedure and methods of reporting. In general, the Eisenhower supporters wanted the meetings wide open - fully reported by radio and television. It can be presumed that they took up this position not because of any great fondness for these new-fangled gadgets, but rather because they thought a full airing of the proceedings would advantage their candidate, General Eisenhower. Today no one seems to be very eager to accept the responsibilities for throwing out microphones and cameras. Senator Taft said he didn't have a thing to do with it. Says he told Gabrielson, the Chairman of the National Committee, that he'd abide by the committee's decision. Nevertheless, the Committee divided pretty much along Taft and Eisenhower lines, with the Taft supporters, led by Clarence Brown, voting to eliminate the modern instruments of communication. It was alleged that all those lights and cameras would make the proceedings appear like monkeys in a cage. This would seem to be well nigh impossible, because the camera or the microphone has not yet been invented that can transform statesmen into monkeys, or monkeys into statesmen.

No one who has experienced the impartial scrutiny of lights and cameras will deny that the experience is somewhat upsetting - not altogether condusive to logical and dispassionate development of a line of argument. The network's case would have been stronger had they gone to the National Committee originally, with the proposal that these hearings be covered on what is called in the trade "a pool basis", that is, for one camera and one set of lights to service all networks desiring to carry the proceedings. This would have reduced the confusion, the number of cameras and technicians and the intensity of light required.

It would seem that certain people who want no part of this argument about radio and television coverage are being involved in it. It was reported that former president, Herbert Hoover, had sent a telegram to the National Committee saying that absolute freedom of the press is the foundation stone of American liberty. Mr. Hoover's office in New York said no telegram had been sent. Carroll Reece, Southern campaign manager for Senator Taft said there ought to be an investigation into this hoax; it shows an evil motive on the part of someone, undoubtedly in the opposition camp. Now it isn't enough to be for or against Taft or Eisenhower; you must be for or against radio and television reporting. And the line of limited logic now being developed in Chicago implies that if you favor radio and television coverage, than you support Eisenhower, and if you're against it, you're a Taft man. If you just want to use these two instruments to report, you're outside the door. Of course, these hearings before the National Committee, and later before the Credentials Committee, are just the preliminary bouts: the main event will take place on the floor of the Convention where we shall all be able to witness the final round.

There seems to be an impression current that this argument about radio and televisinn reporting implies that there is something new and different in this situation. There isn't: - it's happened repeatedly before. Full visual and oral reporting of the proceedings, step by step, might of course tend to persuade the citizen, be he Democrat or Republican, that he really doesn't have very much to say about the selection of his Party's candidate. Political conventions, viewed at close range, seldom represent all that is noble and admirable in the democratic processes. I do not pretend to know what the public reaction would be if cameras and microphones were permitted to see, hear, and transmit whatever they could pick up, but it would at least be interesting, and my guess would be that the public could stand it. Whether some of the politicians could survive it is another question. These artificial limitations could become ridiculous. For example: yesterday, Charles Hacker, Sergeant-at-Arms of the Republican National Committee, banned television cameras and still-picture men from the huge International Amphitheater in Chicago. Said his order was designed to prevent the making of "premature" pictures of the Convention sight. Today, he lifted the ban. No reason given. Maybe something matured out there near the stockyards.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: In the midst of arguments over fuller coverage of the Convention activities, these words by Charles Bradlaugh would seem appropriate: "Without free speech, no search for truth is possible and no discovery of truth is useful. Better a thousand-fold abuse of free speech than denial of free speech. The abuse dies in a day, but the denial slays the life of the people and entombs the hope of the race."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Thursday - July 3, 1952

(1)

This is the news:

The Republican National Committee seated another contested delegation in favor of Senator Taft today. It gave the Senator 11 of Louisiana's 15 seats...gave General Eisenhower Two. Two other delegates, also favoring Taft, were not contested. John Wisdom, leader of the Eisenhower group, said the fight would be carried to the convention floor. He (DESCRIBED) this as a "day of infamy." OTHER EISENHOWER SUPPORTERS TERMED TODAY'S Committe RULING "A SECOND LOUISIANA PURCHASE." WITHIN the hour The committee gave EISenhower The 1 Contested MISSOURI Seat.

Taft won 4 contested seats this morning

General Eisenhower has left Denver by train for Chicago. At McCook, Nebraska, the General told a crowd that had gathered:" A little clique of politicians is trying to rig the convention by a ruthless ousting of delegates supporting him." He said he's convinced that such "iron curtain tactics will boomerang...that the majority of delegates will not allow back-room schemings to control the outcome."

Before leaving Denver, Eisenhower, in a farewell speech said he's going to make a fight of it in Chicago. He said the Republican Party can't go before the public and ask for its votes in November unless it comes into court with clean hands. The prestige and pride of the country are involved.

In Chicago, Senator Taft said that he hopes, when General Eisenhower "roars across the country", he will roar out against Truman and Acheson, as well as the Republicans. Taft also took issue with a statement by 23 Republican governors urging that contested delegations not be permitted to vote on other such disputes. The Senator said no moral issue is involved, it's strictly a parliamentary point. If the rules were changed, he said, it would encourage phony contests in every state.

The Chairman of the National Committee, Guy Gabrielson agreed. He said to change procedures now would be contrary to all customs and former rulings, ...would be like changing the rules in the middle of a ball game. But Eisenhower supporters say they'll fight for this point, when the convention opens on Monday.

Senator Millikan of Colorado, Chairman of the Foreign Policy sub-committee said complete agreement has been reached on a foreign policy plank. He's sure it will be acceptable to both sides.

The President, at a news conference today, said he regards the steel strike as a conspiracy against the public interest by the big producers of steel. Many companies, he said, are ready to settle with the union. But they're being prevented from doing so by pressure from others. Mr. Truman said in view of this he doesn't look at the strike as a labor dispute and feels that the situation doesn't call for his using the national emergency provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act. He urged a resumption of honest, collective bargaining.

Tonite, the CIO steelworkers said that the six major producers have refused to allow individual collective bargaining with the union. They claim bad faith on the part of the companies...a violation of the Taft-Hartley Law...and want the National Labor Relations Board to forbid a continuance of what they call "a conspiracy." No comment yet from the industry. But with the strike in its 32nd day, the government says the shortage of steel is beginning to slow down production of military equipment. And even if the strike ended tomorrow, we would still wind up with 3-million tons less steel than last year.

Earlier, the President released his yearly report on the U.N. He said it has made progress...has stopped Russian expansion...and demonstrated in Korea that conquest is mortally dangerous. He still hopes that Russia will take steps toward easing international tensions. Mr. Truman made a point of noting that the peace can not be won alone. He is confident that the people will reject those voices of despair who are urging us to "go-it-alone."

For the first time since the fall of 1950, Russia cast a veto at the United Nations Security Council. Jacob Malik voted against our proposal that an impartial inquiry by the Red Cross be made into communist charges that we're using germ warfare in Korea. Malik objected to the fact that the Communists were not asked to take part in the debate. We have asked the Council to pass a resolution condemning the spreading of false charges.

Those 3 American priests and a German Catholic Welfare Worker seized by the Communists on the Berlin border zone yesterday have been released. They were taken into custody while shooting pictures on a sightseeing trip. It's also been made known that 10 East Zone German policemen have crossed the border and asked for American protection. They say the police force is being organized in the Eastern Zone for civil war.

5

Senator Joe McCarthy appeared before a Rules sub-committee today to press his case for an investigation of Senator William Benton of Connecticut. The same Committee is considering Benton's demand that Mc Carthy be thrown out of the Senate. Speaking with Congressional immunity, McCarthy said that while Benton was in the State Department, he sheltered fellow-travelers, communists and complete dupes. He listed 7 as bad security risks, including William Stone - a State Department information officer, and Haldore Hanson, whom Mc Carthy described as Benton's special assistant. Stone said the charges are false, malicious and libelous. Both he and Hanson said they had been completely cleared by the government's Loyalty Board. McCarthy said Benton acted as a spearhead against anyone who tried to expose undercover communists in high government places. Benton will testify later.

At [redacted]

in [redacted]

cha[redacted].

In Korea, clearing skies allowed our bombers to get into action again. And there was some minor patrol action on the ground. [redacted]

6

no[redacted]

[redacted]. We've started transferring 56-hundred Chinese Communist prisoners from Koje, to Cheju Island, off the southern coast of Korea. And the truce talks have been suspended for 24-hours while we study new communist proposals on prisoner exchanges.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has ruled that gambler Frank Costello was within his rights when he refused to tell the Senate Crime Investigating Committee his personal net wealth. The Court, however, upheld contempt charges resulting from Costello's walkout. And the decision does not reverse Costello's 18-month prison sentence.

The [redacted].

My colleague, Bill Downs, has been roaming about Chicago all day. And with the Convention less than 4 days away, he's been subjected to all sorts of rumors. What are they saying, Bill ?

RETURN CUE: BUT WHAT'S MORE INTERSTING THAN GOSSIP

CBS RADIO DIVISION

EDWARD R. MURROW

Thursday, July 3, 1952
7:45-8:00 p.m.

MURROW: ..... My colleague, Bill Downs, has been roaming about Chicago all day and with the convention less than four days away he's been subjected to all sorts of rumors.

What are they saying, Bill?

DOWNS: Well, psychological warfare has moved into the Republican political arena, Ed, and the flood of rumor and counter-rumor is producing results that are almost psychopathic. Well, here at the GOP preliminaries in Chicago, there are two extremely persistent and totally unconfirmable rumors that are beginning to have their effect. The first rumor is a so-called MacArthur premise. This rumor goes something like this. Taft and Eisenhower are nowhere as near the magic six hundred and four winning delegates as their headquarters are reporting, that both men will deadlock on the first three ballots. Meanwhile the convention, already disturbed by the bitterness of the throat-cutting between the two camps, will have been inspired by a prairie-firing speech of keynoter, Douglas MacArthur. The GOP convention, looking for a vote-getting candidate for a symbol of Republican unity, will turn to the former Far East Commander on the fourth or fifth ballot and that is how, they say, Douglas MacArthur will become the Republican presidential nominee. Well, this is section "A" of the so-called MacArthur premise. Section "B" of the same rumor goes like this. The Taft-Eisenhower deadlock will be extremely close. Taft will see that he cannot win and to prevent his arch-enemy, Eisenhower, from getting the post, will suddenly propose MacArthur as the unity candidate and the Far East General will sweep in.

Well, the second persistent-type rumorhere could be called the neo-bull moose gambit. It goes something like this. The Taft machine will relentlessly bulldoze its way to victory, but in doing so will make so many young Republicans angry, alienate so much potential support from unhappy Democrats and disturbed Independents that the Party will split down the middle. This rumor, also completely unconfirmable, says that the defeated Liberals and disgusted southerners will bolt the Party and follow the example of Theodore Roosevelt's bull moosers in nineteen twelve and draft Eisenhower to lead them. Well, admittedly this is the weakest rumor in the category, but it was confirmed today that the southern delegates rejected by the GOP National Committee the past few days do plan to hold what they call a Dixie indignation meeting at the Blackstone Theatre on Saturday. Now, if the National Committee has its way and disqualifies the 38-man Eisenhower Texas delegation there are going to be about seventy very indignant Republicans to form a nucleus for such a movement, if they want to. But, as I say, it's all rumor, all unconfirmed, and all the most baseless gossip, but what's more interesting than gossip?

Ed.trans.-A.A.Cardiff (30)

That was Bill Downs "gossiping" from Chicago. What this country needs, what with the long Fourth of July weekend coming up, is a Will Rogers. Back in nineteen thirty-two he wrote: "This country is a thousand times bigger than any two men in it, or any two parties in it. These big politicians are too serious about themselves and their parties. This country has gotten where it is in spite of politics, and not by the aid of it. That we have carried such political bunk as we have and still survived, shows we are a super nation." And then Mr. Rogers urged a sort of moratorium on politics; one that many people might find agreeable on this Fourth of July weekend. Will Rogers wrote: "So you two boys just get the weight of the world off your shoulders and go fishing. Both of you claim you like to fish; now instead of calling each other names, till next Tuesday, why you can do everybody a big favor by going fishing. And you will be surprised that the old United States will keep right on running while you boys are sitting on the bank. Then come back next Wednesday and we will let you know which one is the lesser of the two evils to us." Mr. Rogers also had some advice that might be useful for the principle contenders in Chicago. "When the votes are counted let everybody, including the candidates, get into a good humor as quick as they got into a bad one. Both gangs have been bad sports. So see if at least one can't redeem themselves by offering no alibis, but cooperate with the winner. For no matter which one it is, the poor fellow is going to need it. The candidates are "high-type gentlemen" until the contest gets close, then the "brute" comes out in him; what starts out to be a nice fight, winds up in a street brawl. But it all comes under the heading of democracy"

The holiday weekend is approaching. Forty million cars will be crowding the highways...running up enough mileage to travel 200-thousand times around the world. There are bound to be accidents...but try to avoid the one you might be in. Don't take uncessary chances. For as Seneca pointed out long before anyone dreamed of the automobile:"We usually dread least the danger nearest at hand."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

THURSDAY - JULY 3, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Republican National Committee seated another contested delegation in favor of Senator Taft today. It gave the Senator 11 of Louisiana's 15 seats - gave General Eisenhower 2. Two other delegates, also favoring Taft, were not contested. John Wisdom, leader of the Eisenhower group said the fight would be carried to the Convention Floor. He described this as a "day of infamy." Other Eisenhower supporters termed today's Committee Ruling "a second Louisiana Puschase.' Within the hour, the Committee gave Eisenhower the one contested Missouri seat.

General Eisenhower has left Denver by train for Chicago. At McCook, Nebraska, the General told a crowd that had gathered: "A little clique of politicians is trying to rig the Convention by a ruthless ousting of delegates supporting him." He said he's convinced that such "Iron Curtain tactics will boomerang.... that the majority of delegates will not allow back-room schemihgs to control the outcome."

Before leaving Denver, Eisenhower, in a farewell speech, said he's going to make a fight of it in Chicago. He said the Republican Party can't go before the public and ask for its votes in November unless it comes into court with clean hands. The prestige and pride of the country are involved.

In Chicago, Senator Taft said that he hopes when General Eisenhower "roars across the country," he will roar out against Truman and Acheson, as well as the Republicans. Taft also took issue with a statement by 23 Republican governors urging that contested delegations not be permitted to vote on other such disputes. The Senator said no moral issue is involved; it's strictly a parliamentary point. If the rules were changed, he said, it would encourage phony contests in every state. The Chairman of the National Committee, Guy Gabrielson agreed. He said to change procedures now would be contrary to all customs and former rulings - would be like changing the rules in the middle of a ball game. But Eisenhower supporters say they'll fight for this point, when the Convention opens on Monday.

Senator Millikan of Colorado, Chairman of the Foreign Policy subcommittee said complete agreement has been reached on a foreign policy plank. He's sure it will be acceptable to both sides.

The President, at a news conference today, said he regards the steel strike as a conspiracy against the public interest by the big producers of steel. Many companies, he said, are ready to settle with the union. But they're being prevented from doing so by pressure from others. Mr. Truman said in view of this, he doesn't look at the strike as a labor dispute, and feels that the situation doesn't call for his using the national-emergency provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act. He urged a resumption of honest, collective bargaining.

Tonight the CIO Steelworkers said that the six major producers have refused to allow individual collective bargaining with the union. They claim bad faith on the part of the companies - a violation of the Taft-Hartley Law - and want the National Labor Relations Board to forbid a continuance of what they call "a conspiracy." No comment yet from the industry. But with the strike in its 32nd day, the Government says the shortage of steel is beginning to slow down production of military equipment. And even if the strike ended tomorrow, we would still wind up with 3-million tons less steel than last year.

Earlier, the President released his yearly report on the U.N. He said it has made progress, has stopped Russian expansion, and demonstrated in Korea that conquest is mortally dangerous. He still hopes that Russia will take steps toward easing international tensions. Mr. Truman made a point of noting that the peace can not be won alone. He is confident that the people will reject those voices of despair who are urging us to "go-it-alone."

For the first time since the fall of 1950, Russia cast a veto at the United Nations Security Council. Jacob Malik voted against our proposal that an impartial inquiry by the Red Cross be made into Communist charges that we're using germ warfare in Korea. Malik objected to the fact that the Communists were not asked to take part in the debate. We have asked the Council to pass a resolution condemning the spreading of false charges. Those 3 American priests and a German Catholic Welfare Worker seized by the Communists on the Berlin border zone yesterday, have been released. They were taken into custody while shooting pictures on a sightseeing trip. It's also been made known that 10 East Zone German policemen have crossed the border and asked for American protection. They say the police force is being organized in the Eastern Zone for civil war.

Senator Joe McCarthy appeared before a Rules sub-committee today to press his case for an investigation of Senator William Benton of Connecticut. The same Committee is considering Benton's demand that McCarthy be thrown out of the Senate. Speaking with Congressional immunity, McCarthy said that while Benton was in the State Department, he sheltered fellow-travelers, Communists and complete dupes. He listed 7 as bad security risks, including William Stone - a State Department information officer - and Haldore Hanson, whom McCarthy described as Benton's special assistant. Stone said the charges are false, malicious, and libelous. Both he and Hanson said they had been completely cleared by the government's Loyalty Board. McCarthy said Benton acted as a spearhead against anyone who tried to expose undercover Communists in high government places. Benton will testify later.

In Korea, clearing skies allowed our bombers to get into action again, and there was some minor patrol action on the ground. We've started transferring 56-hundred Chinese Communist prisoners from Koje to Cheju Island off the southern coast of Korea. And the truce talks have been suspended for 24-hours while we study new communist proposals on prisoner exchanges.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has ruled that gambler Frank Costello was within his rights when he refused to tell the Senate Crime Investigating Committee his personal net wealth. The Court, however, upheld contempt charges resulting from Costello's walkout. And the decision does not reverse Costello's 18-month prison sentence.

My colleague, Bill Downs, has been roaming about Chicago all day, and with the Convention less than 4 days away, he's been subjected to all sorts of rumors. What are they saying, Bill?

DOWNS: Well, psychological warfare has moved into the Republican political arena, Ed, and the flood of rumor and counter-rumor is producing results that are almost psychopathic. Well, here at the GOP preliminaries in Chicago, there are two extremely persistent and totally uncomfirmable rumors that are beginning to have their effect. The first rumor is a so-called MacArthur premise. This rumor goes something like this. Taft and Eisenhower are nowhere as near the magic six hundred and four winning delegates as their headquarters are reporting, that both men will deadlock on the first three ballots. Meanwhile, the Convention, already disturbed by the bitterness of the throat-cutting between the two camps, will have been inspired by a prairie-firing speech of keynoter, Douglas MacArthur. The GOP Convention, looking for a vote-getting candidate for a symbol of Republican unity, will turn to the former Far East Commander on the fourth or fifth ballot and that is how, they say, Douglas MacArthur will become the Republican presidential nominee. Well, this is section "A" of the so-called MacArthur premise. Section "B" of the same rumor goes like this. The Taft-Eisenhower deadlock will be extremely close. Taft will see that he cannot win, and to prevent his arch-enemy, Eisenhower, from getting the post, will suddenly propose MacArthur as the unity candidate and the Far East General will sweep in.

Well, the second persistent-type rumor here could be called the neo-bull moose gambit. It goes something like this. The Taft machine will relentlessly bulldoze its way to victory, but in doing so, will make so many young Republicans angry, alienate so much potential support from unhappy Democrats and disturbed Independents, that the Party will split down the middle. This rumor, also completely unconfirmable, says that the defeated Liberals and disgusted southerners will bolt the Party and follow the example of Theodore Roosevelt's bull moosers in nineteen twelve and draft Eisenhower to lead them. Well, admittedly this is the weakest rumor in the category, but it was confirmed to day that the southern delegates rejected by the GOP National Committee the past few days do plan to hold what they call a Dixie indignation meeting at the Blackstone Theatre on Saturday. Now, if the National Committee has its way and disqualifies the 38-man Eisenhower Texas delegation, there are going to be about seventy very indignant Republicans to form a nucleus for such a movement, if they want to. But, as I say, it's all rumor, all unconfirmed, and all the most baseless gossip; but what's more interesting than gossip?

MURROW: That was Bill Downs "gossiping" from Chicago. What this country needs, what with the long Fourth of July weekend doming up, is a Will Rogers. Back in nineteen thrity-two, he wrote: "This country is a thousand times bigger than any two men in it, or any two parties in it. These big politicians are too serious about themselves and their parties. This country has gotten where it is in spite of politics, and not by the aid of it. That we have carried such political bunk as we have and still survived, shows we are a super nation." And then Mr. Rogers urged a sort of moratorium on politics - one that many people might find agreeable on this Fourth of July weekend. Will Rogers wrote: "So you two boys just get the weight of the world off your shoulders and go fishing. Both of you claim you like to fish; now instead of calling each other names, till next Tuesday, why you can do everybody a big favor by going fishing. And you will be surprised what the old United States will keep right on running while you boys are sitting on the bank. Then come back next Wednesday and we will let you know which one is the lesser of the two evils to us." Mr. Rogers also had some advice that might be useful for the principle contenders in Chicago: "When the votes are counted, let everybody, including the candidates, get into a good humor as quick as they got into a bad one. Both gangs have been bad sports. So see if at least one can't redeem themselves by offering no alibis, but cooperate with the winner. For no matter which one it is, the poor fellow is going to need it.

"The candidates are 'high-type gentlemen' until the contest gets close, they the 'brute' comes out in him; what starts out to be a nice fight, winds up in a street brawl. But it all comes under the heading of democracy."

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: The holiday weekend is approaching. Forty million cars will be crowding the highways - running up enough mileage to travel 200-thousand times around the world. There are bound to be accidents, but try to avoid the one you might be in. Don't take unnecessary chances. For as Seneca pointed out long before anyone dreamed of the automobile: "We usually dread least the danger nearest at hand."

Good Night and Good Luck!

E. R. Murrow -
Friday, July 4, 1952

This is the news:

The Republican National Committee has heard arguments from both sides in the Texas dispute. 38 Convention seats are involved. The Committee will now meet in secret, to decide which delegates to recognize. In a few moments you will hear some ~~actual~~ recordings made during the hearing.

In advance of today's meeting, Senator Taft suggested a compromise: 22 delegates for himself, 16 for General Eisenhower. Taft said such an offer involved a loss to him, but that he was making the gesture in the interest of party unity. He said he felt the Texas fight was factional, and only a side issue.

But Sinclair Weeks, National Commiteeman from Massachussetts, and an Eisenhower supporter, termed Taft's proposal "deceptive"...a disregard of the rights of Republican voters in Texas. He said there is no legal or equitable basis for compromise.

Former President Herbert Hoover appealed to the Committee, in a telegram, to end the confusion "so detrimental to the election." He said he proposed that a group of eminent men, representing both sides, review the contested cases. But ~~that~~ while the Taft supporters appeared willing to accept the idea, Eisenhower supporters turned it down.

The General, on his way to Chicago by train, stopped at Boone, Iowa. He told a group that gathered there:" The Republican Party has a n opportunity to take off our backs 20 years of indecisive leadership by .22 calibre men in Washington. But, he said, the Republicans can't appeal to the country if their convention is marked by chicanery, dark rooms and smoke-screens. The struggle transcends personalities."

David Ingalls, campaign manager for Senator Taft answered:"The General's political masters are more interested in trying to smear Taft than they are in electing a Republican President."

~~Senator~~ Taft, who returned to Washington today, said he's been informed by sources he refused to name, that General Mac Arthur would take the Vice Presidency on a Taft ticket. He said that was not to be taken as an endorsement of Mac Arthur...there are others qualified to serve.

are in electing a Republican president."

Taft, who returned to Washington today, said he's been informed by sources he refused to name, that General MacArthur would take the Vice Presidency on a Taft ticket. He said that was not to be taken as an endorsement of MacArthur; there are others qualified.to serve.

A few days ago the Republican National Committee voted, sixty to forty, to ban all cameras and microphones from its meetings. Reporters with pencil and paper were admitted. One of the reasons advanced for this ban against these modern means of communication, was that their presence would turn the meetings into a spectacle where calm, reasoned judgement would be difficult if not impossible. We had a microphone in the Committee room today - without permission. So far as we know, no Committee member was aware of our unobrusive little microphone; there were no complaints. We merely tried to use our method of reporting. Here is Bill Downs, who listened to the argument over the Texas delegation, and who edited the recordings we made.

DOWNS: The atmosphere of the Republican National Committee hearings on the Texas dispute today was that of a courtroom, probably the most dignified of the hearings thus far because every Republican in the room knew that the nation was waiting to see what they would do. They did not know that CBS Radio was listening. The pro-Eisenhower faction spoke first with a skilled presentation and a parade of witnesses, telling of the pattern of operation of the pro-Taft faction, which, they charge, had stolen the Texas State convention. The main Eisenhower argument in Texas is that the voting throughout the State showed up, 11-1, for Ike, therefore, their delegation with thirty-three Eisenhower delegates and five Taft delegates should be seated by the National Committee. Mrs. Catherine Sewald, of Amarillo, Texas, also brought up another point and here is her voice as actually recorded in the National Committee hearing a few hours ago.

SEWALD: Ladies and gentlemen; this spring, along with hundreds of other young Texas Republicans, I wanted to make my voice heard against the Democratic Administration where it would count - in the precinct conventions. National publications and local newspapers had continually emphasized the importance of ordinary citizens participating in these precinct meetings. The opportunity seemed golden and in our inexperience and enthusiasm, we never visualized what was about to happen to us. In my precinct, I was unanimously elected delegate to the county convention. Sometime later, the Sewuefel (?) forces persuaded a man in my precinct to certify that he had held a convention, naming another person as delegate. Later, this man became frightened and told the County Clerk that he had not held a convention and that he wished to withdraw the returns that he had filed as they were illegal. This man's sworn statement is on file with the County Clerk.

The legal county convention was held at Amarillo and elected fourteen Eisenhower delegates to the State Convention, myself included. A few Seweufel (?) supporters stayed on and held a rump convention and named a slate of Seweufel (?) delegates to the State Convention. In our country, including all of the illegal rump conventions, there were approximately ninety-five votes cast for the Seweufel machine and over seven hundred for Eisenhower. We were hopeful that the judgement of people in higher authority would be fair and right, but in many ways, we were shocked at what happened. At four-thirty in the morning, they gave us five minutes to speak and then the axe. The delegate which had been originally selected by admitted fraudulent precinct conventions was seated in my place, and here is one very important point. If all these young people, who are so eager to take an active part in a genuine Texas Republican Party, and we really are, if we are denied that right to participate, where are we to turn? We were willing to forfeit the right to have any say in our State or local government. We want to work in and support our chosen party, the Republican Party. We want to help elect a Republican President. Won't you give us that chance?

DOWNS: The pro-Taft organization sent a battery of three lawyers to answer the charges of fraud. Generally, the Taft-Texans are arguing that they stole nothing, that the Eisenhower backers had won their majority at the polls by illegall luring Democrats into the precinct conventions, that it was a gigantic plot, too, by the Democrats to take over the Republican Party in Texas. Here was how lawyer Monty Appel (?), of Washington, described the issue when we recorded him in the public hearing a couple of hours ago.

APPEL: We have no disposition to try to evade the charges that have been repeatedly hurled upon us of fraud, fraudulence, stealing, theft, corruption. We intend to meet those charges and we intend to meet them squarely and to ask you to consider those charges in the light of the governing law and the facts of this situation, and any fair-minded consideration of this case must start with the fact that as of January 1, 1952, the State of Texas enacted a new election code. This code is a very comprehensive document, covering many, many pages, but we are concerned here with only two pertinent provisions.

The first pertinent provision is Section 220 and that provision vests in the State Executive Committee of each of the political parties the power to hear and determine contests between delegates to a state convention. That Section says that the delegates to a National Convention shall be elected by.....to the National Convention of a political party, shall be elected by the voters of said political party. This body, as I conceive it, is sitting in the nature of an appellate tribunal. This body is sitting in the nature of an appellate court, considering the question as to whether the decision of the lower court, which is the State Executive Committee, should be sustained or reversed or modified. If these men and women, who heard these contested cases, applied this rule in good faith, according to their best lights, and, if, in the application of that rule, gave consideration to the evidence and made an honest judgment, it seems to me that judgment should be affirmed.

DOWNS: The Republican National Committee, promises a quick decision on the Texas case, but no matter what its decision, for Taft or for Eisenhower, this is just the first round. It will be fought out again in the Credentials Committee and again on the floor of the Convention itself.

Now, back to Ed Murrow in New York.

A few days ago the Republican National comittee voted...sixty to forty..to ban all cameras and microphones from its meetings... Reporters with Pencil and Paper were admitted ...One of the reasons advanced for this ban against these modern means of communications was that their presence would turn the meetings into a spactacle where calm reasoned judgement would be difficult if not impossible. #..We had a microphone in the comittee room today...without permission.. #So far as we KNOW no comittee member was aware of our unobtrusive little microphone ...there were no complaints. #.we merely tried to use our method of reporting. #Here is Bill Downs who listned to the argument over the Texas delegation and who edited the recordings we made..... 45

NOW BACK TO ED MURROW IN N.Y.

That was Bill Downs reporting from Chicago, and presenting certain recorded excerpts from todays hearings before the Republican National Comittee, regarding the disputed Texas delegation. The hearings were open to reporters + the Public. ...We chose to ignore the ban against recordings. did not in any way interfere with orderly procedure...and are resonably confident we didnt misquote anyone.....

[redacted]

A Senate-House Conference Committee has agreed on a 46 and a half billion dollar military appropriation bill. It's 5-billion less than President Truman asked for, but the full request for the building of airplanes was met.

This Independence Day found the enemy in full force over the skies in Korea. We carried out a mass air attack against an (undisclosed) "major" military target, 7 miles from the Suiho power plant we hit 11 days ago. The Communists sent up 115 planes. We destroyed 12, probably another and damaged 6 more. Our losses were not reported. Heavy smoke was seen coming from the bombed area. On the ground we threw back 3 communist attacks along the western front. the truce talks resume tonite in secret session in the hope that this will make it easier for the Communists to modify their demands on prisoner-of-war exchanges. [redacted]

[redacted]

And with the July 4th holiday just under way, 108 deaths have been reported, including 90 on the highways. In England, Frank Sedgman of Australia won the men's singles tennis championship at Wimbeldon. [redacted] Florence Chadwick failed in her attempt to swim the 21 miles from Catalina Island to the California mainland.

+ to understate it considerably —

To put it mildly, there is an obvious difference of opinion surrounding the Texas dispute, its Reporting — The Greek philosopher Epictetus had some good advice for ALL CONCERNED: "When you have decided on doing something, never avoid being seen in the act, even though it is disapproved by some. If the thing is right, don't be afraid of those who incorrectly disapprove of it."

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

FRIDAY - JULY 4, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Republican National Committee has heard arguments from both sides in the Texas dispute. 38 Convention Seats are involved. The Committee will now meet in secret to decide whidh delegates to recognize. In a few moments, you will hear some recordings made during the hearing. In advance of today's meeting, Senator Taft suggested a compromise: 22 delegates for himself - 16 for General Eisenhower. Taft said such an offer involved a loss to him, but that he was making the gesture in the interest of Party unity. He said he felt the Texas fight was factional, and only a side issue.

But Sinclair Weeks, National Committeeman from Massachusetts, and an Eisenhower supporter, termed Taft's proposal "deceptive" - a disregard of the rights of Republican voters in Texas. He said there is no legal or equitable basis for compromise.

Former President Herbert Hoover appealed to the Committee in a telegram to end the confusion "so detrimental to the election." He said he proposed that a group of eminent men representing both sides review the contested cases. But while the Taft supporters appeared willing to accept the idea, Eisenhower supporters turned it down.

The General, on his way to Chicago by train, stopped at Boone, Iowa. He told a group that gathered there: "The Republican Party has an opportunity to take off our backs 20 years of indecisive leadership by 22-calibre men in Washington. But, he said, the Republicans can't appeal to the country if their Convention is marked by chicanery, dark rooms and smokescreens. The struggle transcends personalities."

David Ingalls, campaign manager for Senator Taft answered: "The General's political masters are more interested in trying to smear Taft than they are in electing a Republican president."

Taft, who returned to Washington today, said he's been informed by sources he refused to name, that General MacArthur would take the Vice Presidency on a Taft ticket. He said that was not to be taken as an endorsement of MacArthur; there are others qualified.to serve.

A few days ago the Republican National Committee voted, sixty to forty, to ban all cameras and microphones from its meetings. Reporters with pencil and paper were admitted. One of the reasons advanced for this ban against these modern means of communication, was that their presence would turn the meetings into a spectacle where calm, reasoned judgement would be difficult if not impossible. We had a microphone in the Committee room today - without permission. So far as we know, no Committee member was aware of our unobrusive little microphone; there were no complaints. We merely tried to use our method of reporting. Here is Bill Downs, who listened to the argument over the Texas delegation, and who edited the recordings we made.

DOWNS: The atmosphere of the Republican National Committee hearings on the Texas dispute today was that of a courtroom, probably the most dignified of the hearings thus far because every Republican in the room knew that the nation was waiting to see what they would do. They did not know that CBS Radio was listening. The pro-Eisenhower faction spoke first with a skilled presentation and a parade of witnesses, telling of the pattern of operation of the pro-Taft faction, which, they charge, had stolen the Texas State convention. The main Eisenhower argument in Texas is that the voting throughout the State showed up, 11-1, for Ike, therefore, their delegation with thirty-three Eisenhower delegates and five Taft delegates should be seated by the National Committee. Mrs. Catherine Sewald, of Amarillo, Texas, also brought up another point and here is her voice as actually recorded in the National Committee hearing a few hours ago.

SEWALD: Ladies and gentlemen; this spring, along with hundreds of other young Texas Republicans, I wanted to make my voice heard against the Democratic

Administration where it would count - in the precinct conventions. National publications and local newspapers had continually emphasized the importance of ordinary citizens participating in these precinct meetings. The opportunity seemed golden and in our inexperience and enthusiasm, we never visualized what was about to happen to us. In my precinct, I was unanimously elected delegate to the county convention. Sometime later, the Sewuefel (?) forces persuaded a man in my precinct to certify that he had held a convention, naming another person as delegate. Later, this man became frightened and told the County Clerk that he had not held a convention and that he wished to withdraw the returns that he had filed as they were illegal. This man's sworn statement is on file with the County Clerk.

The legal county convention was held at Amarillo and elected fourteen Eisenhower delegates to the State Convention, myself included. A few Seweufel (?) supporters stayed on and held a rump convention and named a slate of Seweufel (?) delegates to the State Convention. In our country, including all of the illegal rump conventions, there were approximately ninety-five votes cast for the Seweufel machine and over seven hundred for Eisenhower. We were hopeful that the judgement of people in higher authority would be fair and right, but in many ways, we were shocked at what happened. At four-thirty in the morning, they gave us five minutes to speak and then the axe. The delegate which had been originally selected by admitted fraudulent precinct conventions was seated in my place, and here is one very important point. If all these young people, who are so eager to take an active part in a genuine Texas Republican Party, and we really are, if we are denied that right to participate, where are we to turn? We were willing to forfeit the right to have any say in our State or local government. We want to work in and support our chosen party, the Republican Party. We want to help elect a Republican President. Won't you give us that chance?

DOWNS: The pro-Taft organization sent a battery of three lawyers to answer the charges of fraud. Generally, the Taft-Texans are arguing that they stole nothing, that the Eisenhower backers had won their majority at the polls by illegall luring Democrats into the precinct conventions, that it was a gigantic plot, too, by the Democrats to take over the Republican Party in Texas. Here was how lawyer Monty Appel (?), of Washington, described the issue when we recorded him in the public hearing a couple of hours ago.

APPEL: We have no disposition to try to evade the charges that have been repeatedly hurled upon us of fraud, fraudulence, stealing, theft, corruption. We intend to meet those charges and we intend to meet them squarely and to ask you to consider those charges in the light of the governing law and the facts of this situation, and any fair-minded consideration of this case must start with the fact that as of January 1, 1952, the State of Texas enacted a new election code. This code is a very comprehensive document, covering many, many pages, but we are concerned here with only two pertinent provisions.

The first pertinent provision is Section 220 and that provision vests in the State Executive Committee of each of the political parties the power to hear and determine contests between delegates to a state convention. That Section says that the delegates to a National Convention shall be elected by.....to the National Convention of a political party, shall be elected by the voters of said political party. This body, as I conceive it, is sitting in the nature of an appellate tribunal. This body is sitting in the nature of an appellate court, considering the question as to whether the decision of the lower court, which is the State Executive Committee, should be sustained or reversed or modified. If these men and women, who heard these contested cases, applied this rule in good faith, according to their best lights, and, if, in the application of that rule, gave consideration to the evidence and made an honest judgment, it seems to me that judgment should be affirmed.

DOWNS: The Republican National Committee, promises a quick decision on the Texas case, but no matter what its decision, for Taft or for Eisenhower, this is just the first round. It will be fought out again in the Credentials Committee and again on the floor of the Convention itself.

Now, back to Ed Murrow in New York.

MURROW: That was Bill Downs reporting from Chicago and presenting certain recorded excerpts from today's hearings before the Republican National Committee regarding the disputed Texas delegation. The hearings were open to reporters and the public. We chose to ignore the ban against recordings, did not in any way interfere with orderly procedure, and are reasonably confident we didn't misquote anyone.

A Senate-House Conference Committee has agreed on a 46-and-a-half-billion dollar military appropriation bill. It's 5-billion less than President Truman asked for, but the full request for the building of airplanes was met.

This Independence Day found the enemy in full force over the skies in Korea. We carried out a mass air attack against an undisclosed "major" military target 7 miles from the Suiho power plant we hit 11 days ago. The Communists sent up 115 planes. We destroyed 12, probably another, and damaged 6 more. Our losses were not reported. Heavy smoke was seen coming from the bombed area. On the ground we threw back 3 Communist attacks along the western front. The truce talks resume tonight in secret session in the hope that this will make it easier for the Communists to modify their demands on prisoner-of-war exchanges.

And with the July 4th holiday just under way, 108 deaths have been reported, including 90 on the highways. In England, Frank Sedgman of Australia won the men's singles tennis championship at Wimpeldon. Florence Chadwick failed in her attempt to swim the 21 miles from Catalina Island to the California mainland.

This is Ed Murrow. I'll be back in a moment with the "Word For Today." Now, here is Bob Dixon.

BOB DIXON: COMMERCIAL

MURROW: To put it mildly, and to understand it considerably, there is an obvious difference of opinion surrounding the Texas dispute and its reporting.

The Greek philosopher Epictetus had some good advice for all concerned: "When you have decided on doing something, never avoid being seen in the act, even though it is disapproved by some. If the thing is right, don't be afraid of those who incorrectly disapprove of it."

Good Night and Good Luck!

Murrow

Mon. July 7,

This is the news:

The Republican Convention decided today that 68 contested delegates may not vote on seating their own or any other ~~contested~~ disputed delagtes. This affects delegates from Texas...Georgia...and Louisiana. It was a victory for supporters of General Eisenhower who introduced what they called a "fair play" amendment to the convention rules. This first session here in Chicago was an hour late in starting...due to last minute efforts to compromise the arguments which have been going on for more than a week. The vote on adopting the amendment to the rules was 548 to 658. That's a margin of 110 votes. Political aides of Senator Taft admitted in advance that they would probably lose their battle to keep the old rule..whereby contested delegates could vote on everything once their own seats were affirmed. Senator Lodge, the leader of the Eisenhower campaigm, interpreted today's vote to mean that Eisenhower will be nominated on the third ballot. [redacted]

And General Eisenhower quickly issued a statement saying the victory of his forces today is "heartening news" to millions of Americans.. He said it means that next November the Republicans will deserve to win."

Governor Dewey.. an Eisenhower supporter.. called on the Taft forces to "surrender".

But Tom Coleman of Wisconsin..the Taft convention floor manager.. said today's vote was not a test of strength..had nothing to do with the final outcome.

Neither General Eisenhower nor Senator Taft was in this convention ampitheater today. Both candidates consulted with Governor Warren of California. After each meeting it was announced that there had been no talks of votes or delegates. Senator Taft is still predicting victory..now says he will get 607...8... or 9 votes (he needs 604 to win.) General Eisenhower told reporters today that "seomebody said we didn't need Korea..that was a great error".. a reference to Secretary of State Acheson.

The convention is now in recess..resumes in an hour and a half when General Mac Arthur makes the keynoting address. The General is now in Chicago..arrived by plane.. in a civilian suit. Former President Hoover is also here. He has urged the delegates to reach their decisions "without vituperation."

John Foster Dulles says both Taft and Eisenhower have approved the foreign policy plank he helped draw up. Its not been made public yet, but is said to include a stand against isolationism.. a pledge of support for foreign aid to secure collective security..support for the United Nations.. and an attack on the Administration's policy of "containing" Communism.

Governor Mc Keldin of Maryland announced today that he's been asked to make the speech nominating General Eisenhower. He's accepted and will release his state's 24 delegates which had been pledged to him. Governor McKeldin says 22 of the votes will go to Eisenhower..two to Taft.

The events here in Chicago were big news around most of the world today. In indo China the Republican convention received equal attention in Hanoi's top newspaper with a local story...120 degree heat... a 20-year record.

In Korea today, the Communists launched a heavy artillery attack against our positions on some sectors of the western front/ And the truce negotiaors met again.. a year to the day after it was first decided by allied and enemy negotiators to start the negotiations at Kahsung. This latest meeting was the fifth held in secret. An allied spokesman describes it as "business-like."

Air Force officials told the President today that the Chinese are still building up their air strength in North Korea... but there is no indication that they are going to attack.

The Russians notified us that we must get out of our embassy in Moscow..which we have occupied for 18 years. The Russians say they need the building as part of their plan to expand Moscow University. They say they'll furnish us with another embassy headquarters.

The Danish government today turned over a new tanker to the Soviet government..despite American protests.

In Washington, the Congress adjourned tonight..two days later..after reaching agreement on two money bills.

The Navy says the new atomic-powered submarine it is building will be able to go as far and as fast on one pound of atomic fuel as an ordinary submarine could travel on two and a half million pounds of coal.

Phil Murray, the leader of the striking C.I.O. steelworkers, said today that the steel industry is misrepresenting its fight against the union's demand for a union shop clause in a new contract. Murray says the industry has already agreed to the union shop clause in contracts with their mine workers and railroad men they employ.

And Vice President Barkley, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, said today he expcts to be nominated and elected. The 74-year old Veep told reporters:"If there is anyone in this country who can outsrtip me in fighting for the Democratic party, and good government, let him step up and complain of my age and let others keep silent."

The Republican Convention got off to a late start...due to last minute efforts to work out a compromise, on the disputed delegates issue,...there was no kind of compromise,..~~and~~ ~~zz~~ ~~anything~~ After the usual formalities, things sort of "exploded",..members of the same state delegations were shouting at each other,.. Chairman Guy Gabrielson had made the usual appal for unity and harmony and all round good fellowship,..but it was all in short supply.. Senator Bricker of Ohio,..a Taft man, moved that the rules of the past two conventions should apply to this one,.. Governor Art Langley of Washington, an Eisenhower supporter, offered a substitute...that sixty eight contested delegate. (.those who had received less than two thirds support from the National Comm)..should not be allowed to vote on their own, or other contests, untill the Credentials CoMittee, and perhaps the whole convention ~~x~~ had reached a decision.. Then Clarence Brown of Ohio proposed an amendment to Langleys substitute,...and the speechmaking began.. an hour to each side...In general, the Taft men argued that the old rules were good enough,...there was no need for a change,..the Party had worked under them for most of its .life,..THEY SAID, Men like Dewey who want a change had always found the old rules allright in the past,..it would be unfair to fail to seat the delegates untill they had been proved guilty of something,.. The Eisenhower supporters argued that the party had to go to the country with clean hands,..everything should be done in the open. There were sixty-eight delegates in question; the Brown amendment insisted that seven, all from Louisana, should be seated at onee. It was a busy day for the parlimentarian, and there will be some delegates boning up on their Roberts Rules of Order tonite. In General, it seemed that the Eisenhower supporters were the more vocal. After more than an hour of speaking and shouting, Senator Bricker, who made the original motion, rose to speak. He made an impassioned appeal to the Eisenhower supporters; he wanted just those seven delegates from Loisiana seated, and he would accept the Langley proposal on the other sixty-one; agree that they couldnt vote till the dispute is settled. But the Eisenhower men, lead by Lodge, Herter and Driscoll of New Jersey, werent having any compromise. They were confident they had the votes to win, and this was the first test of strength; they were determined to go all the way. and they won by 110 votes. Some Eisenhower enthusiasts hoped for a bigger margin, but the result was just about what the realists expected. The Taft men claim this wasnt a real defeat, not even a rebuff, while the Eisenhower men, of course, claim a great triumph. The root of the matter lies somewhere in between. There were a considerable number of delegates who regarded this as a matter of principle. who voted to support the Eisenhower position, but who wont support him for the nomination. Eisenhowers high command took a considerable risk for, if they had lost this one, their chances of stopping Taft would have been badly bent,.....

Probably the one thing that was proved here today was that this Convention is being played for keeps,..There is no graciousness and nothing gentle about the bitterness that is building up here,..At past conventions, there hasn't been this much shouting, cheering and jeering untill the day or night of the nomination,..
The real significance of this decision today wasn't so much a setback for the ~~Taf~~ Taft forces on the floor. Three of the delegates involved would have been members of the important Credentials Comittee;..now they wont be able to serve..They were all Taft men,..This means that Comittee is now cut from fifty-three to fifty, and the Eisenhower men figure this may give them a fighting chance to seat some of the Southern delegates favourable to the General,..But if they loose in the Credentials Comitttee, as they did in the National Comittee, they will then take the fight back to the floor, ~~xxxxxx~~..There was a plan at one time to cross-question delegates individually in a sort of grand courtroom scene,..but the plan now is to contest entire delegations,...

The supporters of Eisenhower will use this day's work for all its worth..try to convince doubters that this proves their man is in,..But there is a lot of battling ahead,..Even after today's vote, its to be doubted that either camp knows within fifty votes what strength they will develop on the first ballot...Today stormy, unruly and bitter session was merely a prelude;..both sides are saying they have just begun to fight....

One of the best comments of the day came from a movie cameraman who yelled to his colleague in the upper stands:..Hey, Johnson, give a couple shots...general views of this confusion..../.Thomas E Dewey, attending his first convention as a delegate, sat four seats off the aisle, trying to be nonchalant, reading a paper part of the time.../.There were about four hundred cops inside this amphitheater, and the way things are going, they may be needed.../.The two Texas delegations sat side by side without even an empty chair seperating them...During some of the long pauses in the rules battle, the fifty-piece band played "Night and Day.", and someone remarked that it could have been worse; they might have played... "I'll be with you always"...The speechmaking today wasn't of a universally high order,..but for convention stuff, it was brief...and there wasn't much arm waving. Everyone seemed to feel this was right serious business, even if it was only the first day.....A youngster led a goat around, with a GOP banner on its back..reading:..Be kind to animals and me too.. Some of the delegates remarked:..if that wasn't a goat it could be a dark horse,..It could be, too;..Anything can happen here in the next few days....

Tonite, General Mac Arthur will deliver the Keynote Speech. I'm reminded of Will Roger's comment on Simeon Fess, the Republican keynoter in 1928. Rogers said:" It was an impromptu address that he had been working on for six months. But after all, a Keynote Speech is really press notices of the Republican Party written by its own members." of course that's equally true for the Democrats.

Good Nite and Good Luck!

EDWARD R. MURROW WITH THE NEWS
THE CBS RADIO NETWORK

MONDAY - JULY 7, 1952
7:45 - 8:00 PM EST

This is the news:

The Republican Convention decided today that 68 contested delegates may not vote on seating their own or any other disputed delegates. This affects delegates from Texas, Georgia and Louisiana. It was a victory for supporters of General Eisenhower who introduced what they called a "fair play" amendment to the Convention rules. This first session here in Chicago was an hour late in starting, due to last minute efforts to compromise the arguments which have been going on for more than a week. The vote on adopting the amendment to the rules was 548 to 658. That's a margin of 110 votes. Political aides of Senator Taft admitted in advance that they would probably lose their battle to keep the old rule, whereby contested delegates could vote on everything once their own seats were affirmed. Senator Lodge, the leader of the Eisenhower campaign, interpreted today's vote to mean that Eisenhower will be nominated on the third ballot. And General Eisenhower quickly issued a statement saying the victory of his forces today is "heartening news" to millions of Americans. He said it means that next November the Republicans will deserve to win."

Governor Dewey, an Eisenhower supporter, called on the Taft forces to "surrender". But Tom Coleman of Wisconsin, the Taft Convention floor manager, said today's vote was not a test of strength - had nothing to do with the final outcome.

Neither General Eisenhower nor Senator Taft was in this convention amphitheater today. Both candidates consulted with Governor Warren of California. After each meeting it was announced that there had been no talks of votes or delegates. Senator Taft is still predicting victory; now says he will get 607 - 8 or 9 votes. (He needs 604 to win.) General Eisenhower told reporters today that "somebody said we didn't need Korea; that was a great error" - a reference to Secretary of State Acheson.

The Convention is now in recess; resumes in an hour and a half when General MacArthur makes the keynoting address. The General is now in Chicago - arrived by plane - in a civilian suit. Former President Hoover is also here. He has urged the delegates to reach their decisions "without vituperation."

John Foster Dulles says both Taft and Eisenhower have approved the foreign policy plank he helped draw up. It's not been made public yet, but is said to include a stand against isolationism, a pledge of support for foreign aid to secure collective security, support for the United Nations, and an attack on the Administration's policy of "containing" Communism.

Governor McKeldin of Maryland announced today that he's been asked to make the speech nominating General Eisenhower. He's accepted and will release his state's 24 delegates, which had been pledged to him. Governor McKeldin says 22 of the votes will go to Eisenhower - two to Taft.

The events here in Chicago were big news around most of the world today. In Indo-China the Republican Convention received equal attention in Hanoi's top newspaper with a local story - 120-degree heat - a 20-year record.

In Korea today, the Communists launched a heavy artillery attack against our position on some sectors of the western front. And the truce negotiator met again, a year to the day after it was first decided by allied and enemy negotiators to start the negotiations at Kahsung. This latest meeting was the fifth held in secret. An allied spokesman described it as "business-like."

Air Force officials told the President today that the Chinese are still building up their air strength in North Korea, but there is no indication that they are going to attack.

The Russians notified us that we must get out of our embassy in Moscow, which we have occupied for 18 years. The Russians say they need the building as part of their plan to expand Moscow University. They say they'll furnish us with another embassy headquarters.

The Danish Government today turned over a new tanker to the Soviet Government - despite American protests.

In Washington, the Congress adjourned tonight - two days late - after reaching agreement on two money bills.

The Navy says the new atomic-powered submarine it is building will be able to go as far and as fast on one pound of atomic fuel as an ordinary submarine could travel on two and a half million pounds of coal.

Phil Murray, the leader of the striking CIO Steelworkers said today that the steel industry is misrepresenting its fight against the union's demand for a union-shop clause in a new contract. Murray says the industry has already agreed to the union shop clause in contracts with their mine workers and railroad men they employ.

And Vice President Barkley, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, said today he expects to be nominated and elected. The 74-year old Veep told reporters: "If there is anyone in this country who can outstrip me in fighting for the Democratic Party and good government, let him step up and complain of my age and let others keep silent."

The Republican Convention got off to a late start due to last minute efforts to work out a compromise on the disputed delegates issue. There was no kind of compromise. After the usual formalities, things sort of "exploded"; members of the same state delegations were shouting at each other. Chairman Guy Gabrielson had made the usual appeal for unity and harmony and all round good fellowship, but it was all in short supply. Senator Bricker of Ohio, a Taft man, moved that the rules of the past two conventions should apply to this one. Governor Art Langley of Washington, an Eisenhower supporter, offered a substitute - that sixty-eight contested delegates, (those who had received less than two thirds support from the National Committee), should not be allowed to vote on their own, or other contests, untill the Credentials Committee, and perhaps the whole Convention had reached a decision. Then Clarence Brown of Ohio proposed an amendment

Langley's substitute, and the speechmaking began - an hour to each side. In general, the Taft men argued that the old rules were good enough; there was no need for a change; the Party had worked under them for most of its life. They said men like Dewey who want a change had always found the old rules all right in the past; it would be unfair to fail to seat the delegate untill they had been proved guilty of something. The Eisenhower supporters argued that the Party had to go to the country with clean hands; everything should be done in the open. There were sixty-eight delegates in question; the Brown Amendment insisted that seven, all from Louisiana, should be seated at once. It was a busy day for the parlimentarian, and there will be some delegates boning up on their Robert's Rules of Order tonight. In general, it seemed that the Eisenhower supporters were the more vocal. After more than an hour of speaking and shouting, Senator Bricker, who made the original motion, rose to speak. He made an impassioned appeal to the Eisenhower supporters; he wanted just those seven delegates from Louisiana seated, and he would accept the Langley proposal on the other sixty one; agreed that they couldn't vote till the dispute is settled. But the Eisenhower men, lead by Lodge, Herter and Driscoll of New Jersey, weren't having any compromise. They were confident they had the votes to win, and this was the first test of strength; they were determined to go all the way - and they won by 110 votes. Some Eisenhower enthusiasts hoped for a bigger margin, but the result was just about what the realists expected. The Taft men claim this wasn't a real defeat - not even a rebuff, while the Eisenhower men, of course, claim a great triumph. The root of the matter lies somewhere in between. There were a considerable number of delegates who regarded this as a matter of principle - who voted to support the Eisenhower position, but who won't support him for the nomination. Eisenhower's high command took a considerable risk for, if they had lost this one, their chances of stopping Taft would have been badly bent, about the bitterness that is building up here. At past conventions, there hasn't been this much shouting, cheering and jeering untill the day or night of the nomination. The real significance of this decision today wasn't so much a setback for the Taft forces on the floor. Three of the delegates involved would have been members of the important Credentials Committee; now they won't be able to serve. They were all Taft men. This means that Committee is now cut from fifty three to fifty, and the Eisenhower men figure this may give them a fighting chance to seat some of the southern delegates favourable to the General. But if they loose in the Credentials Committee, as they did in the National Committee, they will then take the fight back to the floor. There was a plan at one time to cross question delegates individually in a sort of grand courtroom scene, but the plan now is to contest entire delegations.

Probably the one thing that was proved here today was that this Convention is being played for keeps. There is no graciousness and nothing gentle

The supporters of Eisenhower will use this day's work for all it's worth - try to convince doubters that this proves their man is in. But there is a lot of battling ahead. Even after today's vote, it's to be doubted that either camp knows within fifty votes what strength they will develop on the first ballot. Today's stormy, unruly and bitter session was merely a prelude; both sides are saying they have just begun to fight.

